Call upon Brn. Brackett or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

The Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, Wis., six miles S. W. of Brodhead, on the land of Br. Atwood, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1. Tents will be put up on Saturday, the day before the meeting. Tent poles, straw and hay to be had on the ground. We expect several of our Wisconsin ministers present. Among them we hope to meet Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Thomson, Geo. Howard, and several others. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, and provided they will notify me by letter three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there, teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground, except those who come on the first Saturday, who will find teams there without writing. Those coming from Prairie du Chien way will change cars at Milton junction, reaching Brodhead at 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. Those coming from the north on the Northwestern R. R. will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead at the same hour as by the other route.

This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. WM. SHELDON.

MINNESOTA.

The Minnesota State Tent will be pitched at, or near, Armstrong Station, for the purpose of holding our Q. M., Sept. 6, and onward. We invite all our friends to come, and as many as can do so to bring bedding and provision, and to come fully prepared to work for the Master.

GEO. W. MILLER.

The St. Paul District Q. M. will be held with the Independence church near Armstrong's station in Wright Co., Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continue over Sunday. We shall expect to see delegates from every church in the district, and that they will bring with them their collections for the Mission Fund.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Mingar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

ARKANSAS.

I would say to the Elders and brethren in Arkansas, that it will not be practicable for me to visit them in September, as was hoped. Br. John S. Lawver, of Cobden, Ill., has arranged to come with me, and we shall start about the first of November. We will meet you in Conference Nov. 20, and continue over the Sabbath. We shall then visit Red River District, and elsewhere, as doors may open. J. V. HIMES.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Also there will be a Grove Meeting in Beaver Co., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may arrange, to commence eve. of Aug. 30, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a Grove Meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Sycoming Co., commencing eve. of Sept. 5, and continue about a week.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited. J. T. ONGLEY.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church. GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

A special Time Conference will be held on the Life and Union campground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18, 1872, to continue over Lord's day.

The object of this meeting will be to earnestly investigate the prophecies bearing on the time of the coming of Christ, and deliverence of the people of God; the justification of the sanctuary; and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence of Christ's immediate coming; and to take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ.

Let such as can, bring their provision; but such as cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally.

(Signed.) GEO. W. BROWN, S. W. BISHOP, CHARLES C. BARKER, CALEB THOMSON, L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9 Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 76 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address commun[illegible] to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $35. tf

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable [illegible] will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(n30m3) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

FRUIT FARM
FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable locality. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCullock, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWVER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT, FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.—NO. 5. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 3, 1872. WHOLE NO. 436.

Advent Christian Times.

The Seventh-day Sabbath Not Obligatory.

Few have ever given much serious thought to the Sabbath question, so far, at least, as the comparative claims of the first and seventh day are concerned. Admitting, as is most commonly done, that the Mosaic decalogue, as given to the Jews, is still obligatory, many find themselves easily confounded by zealous Sabbatarians for not keeping, according to the commandments, the seventh day. Without going at length into the subject, I propose to throw out a few thoughts that may help to a better understanding of the question.

And, first, I believe, we are to regard the keeping of the seventh-day Sabbath, as purely a Jewish institution as was the Passover or the feast of Tabernacles. There is no lack of Scripture proof that its observance was given directly to the Jews as a people. God says of Israel: "Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness. And I gave them my statutes, and showed them my judgments, which, if a man do, he shall even live in them. Moreover, also, I gave them my Sabbath to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that do sanctify them." (Eze. 20: 10–12. See, also, Ex. 31: 12–18.)

Now, if the Sabbath were an old institution, always in force, how could it be said at this period to be given as a sign—a sign between God and Israel? And how could he specify that, as the very time in which it was given, if it had been given at the creation? These Scriptures manifestly show that here was the time and place, and the Jews were the people with whom it was first instituted.

As to the creation Sabbath, God sanctified it—or set it apart—for himself; "for in it he rested from all his works." There is no trace of its ever having been kept, or that the existence of such a Sabbath had ever been made known among men, prior to the time of Moses, by whom the fact is recorded. In the wilderness God made it known, and gave it to Israel for a sign to be kept in "their generations, for a perpetual covenant," by which no more is meant than by "perpetual incense," or a "perpetual meat offering."

That the manna was given six days, and withheld on the Sabbath, before we come to Sinai, is no proof whatever that the Sabbath was an old institution already established; for it was under special direction from God to Moses that the people be instructed to gather manna, "a certain rate every day," and on the "sixth day" to gather "twice as much as they gathered daily" (Ex. 16: 4, 5); for the Lord had given them the Sabbath (v. 29) "to prove them whether they would walk in his law or no." (v. 4.) Even the rulers of the congregation themselves had to have this thing explained to them. (vv. 22, 23.) And many still failing to comprehend it, had it again repeated to them in a manner showing that they had no previous knowledge of it at that time. (vv. 27–29.) It was manifestly to them a new thing, and given preparatory to its final ratification in the covenant upon the mount.

That "the Sabbath was made for man," does not necessarily imply that it was made for man in every age. Circumcision was instituted for man, and for all men during the dispensation to which it belonged. And during that dispensation its observance was as essential to every man who would serve and obey God, as was the keeping of the Sabbath. Both were Jewish ordinances, limited by the dispensation to which they belonged; imposed till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made, and both alike were done away in Christ.

The law and the gospel are set forth as two distinct covenants. In his illustration St. Paul says: "These are the "two covenants;" the "one from Mount Sinia," by which we must understand that he means the law; and the other "Jerusalem, which is above," clearly indicating the gospel. (Gal. 4: 21–26.) Again he says: "If the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." (Heb. 8: 7.) Showing that the one is to supersede the other. For "behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah. Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt." (Heb. 8: 8, 9.) Moses was the mediator of the old covenant, and Christ of the new. (Heb. 9: 15, 19, 20.) And as Christ superseded Moses, so the new covenant displaced the old. "He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second." (Heb. 10: 9.) A change we have in the covenants, a change also in the priesthood, and there is made of necessity a change also of the law. (Heb. 7: 12.) The new covenant came, just as do revised statutes, or a new constitution, to supersede the old. And whatever in the old is not incorporated into the new, ceases to be binding by the very law of limitation. Why are not circumcision and the sacrifices of the Levitical law not obligatory? Simply because they are done away in Christ. Connected as they were with a covenant that has passed away, and failing to be incorporated into the new, they have ceased longer to be binding.

Now these facts are generally admitted. It is admitted that we are not now living under the first or Mosaic covenant, but under the new or second covenant, of which Christ is the mediator. The first is past, and the second established.

But right here the claim is made that the decalogue is no part whatever of the first covenant, but that it stands by itself alone, still in full force; and hence that the seventh-day Sabbath, being a part of it, is still obligatory. St. Paul tells us that this first covenant, now done away in Christ, was the covenant God made with the fathers when he took them by the hand and led them out of Egypt; the very same covenant, he assures us, that was given from Mount Sinai. (Heb. 8: 9, and Gal. 4: 24.) Now was the covenant then given, the ceremonial or Levitical law—"the law of commandments"—or was it clearly and positively the decalogue itself? We should let the Bible decide this point.

Moses, in rehearsing the ten commandments, says, by way of introduction: "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us; even us, who are all alive here this day. The Lord talked with you face to face in the Mount, out of the midst of the fire." (Deut. 5: 2–4.) He then proceeds to repeat this covenant which God, he says, made with them; and he gives nothing more nor less than the ten commandments. And in closing he says: "These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount, out of the midst of the fire of the cloud and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more. And he wrote them in the tables of stone, and delivered them unto me." (v. 22.) Here, then, we have the decalogue given as the covenant—as the covenant distinct from anything else. He gives the covenant—which is the decalogue—and says that God "added no more." Is not this testimony clear and positive as to what the covenant was? Could anything be more positive? Again, Moses says: "And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire; ye heard the voice of his words.... and he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone." (Deut. 4: 12, 13; Ex. 34: 27, 28.) Here again the ten commandments written by the finger of God upon the two tables of stone, and declared to be the covenant which God made with Israel in the wilderness. God made this covenant with the people; not by proxy, but personally "face to face," giving it all the solemnities and formalities of a covenant, distinct from the ceremonial law which was afterward communicated through Moses to the children of Israel.

It is further clear that the ceremonial law was not the covenant, from the fact that St. Paul speaks of it as separate therefrom, though belonging to it. "Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary." (Heb. 9: 1.) These "ordinances of divine service" included the entire sacrificial or ceremonial services of the law. Still they were not the covenant, but appended to it. And "there were also the candlestick, and the table, and the shewbread, and the golden censor, and the ark of the covenant, and the two tables of stone." (vv. 2: 3, 4.) Yet none, nor all of them, was the covenant. The covenant was that which was written upon the two tables," even the ten commandments."

It is objected that a "covenant does not consist in commandments, but in the agreement of two parties." But an agreement shows that something is agreed upon. And this something, when agreed upon, constitutes the covenant. In the case before us the agreement is touching the ten commandments. God says to the people by Moses, "Now, therefore, if ye will obey my voice and keep my covenant, then shall ye be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people." (Ex. 19: 5.) They give answer, "All that the Lord hath spoken we will do." (v. 8.) That is, they agree to obey his voice, and to keep his covenant. Preparatory to their hearing his voice and receiving his covenant, they are commanded to sanctify themselves, to wash their clothes, and to be ready against the third day; for the Lord will come down in the sight of all the people upon Mount Sinai." (vv. 10, 11.) And then, out of the fire and of the thick darkness, they hear his voice declaring unto them "his covenant," even ten commandments." (Deut. 4: 13.) The contract or agreement on the part of the people is, "All that the Lord hath spoken we will do." On God's part it is, "I am the Lord THY GOD," and ye shall be to me a "peculiar treasure." The basis of this agreement is the decalogue, and as such constitutes the covenant. We thus have the "parties," the "agreement," and the "covenant."

Can there be any mistake, any flaw in this evidence? God made but this one covenant with Israel in the wilderness; and he made it upon the mount, and the decalogue over and over is declared to be that covenant. It was made personally, "face to face" with the people, giving it all the forms and solemnities of a covenant, unlike anything before or after it. It is properly called the Mosaic or Jewish covenant—the "first" or "old" covenant, which God gave to the "new" or gospel covenant. It "was our school-master to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But [illegible] that faith has come we are no longer under a school-master;" we are under no law but a law to Christ.

The old covenant with all its connected rites and ceremonies being abolished, nothing remains obligatory, that does not grow out of our new covenant relation. In this "new covenant" we nowhere find the keeping of the seventh day Sabbath enjoined; while all the other precepts of the decalogue, over and over are plainly and positively enforced. It requires supreme love to God, and prohibits idolatry and profanity. It inculcates the duty of honoring parents, while murder, adultery and theft, with all lying and covetousness, are repeatedly interdicted. But nowhere can one lay his finger upon a solitary text requiring the keeping of the fourth commandment. This very fact, ends its further obligation.

The grand principle is laid down in the new covenant, that "love is the fulfilling of the law." That is, that no man under it, can truly love God and his neighbor and not at the same time fulfill all that is now required. Not because one who thus loves will do anything, when commanded, but because he will naturally do the very things that are commanded, irrespective of their being required.

Why then, it may be asked, should any law be given? "By the law is the knowledge of sin." Knowing this, says the apostle, "that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners," a man truly loving God and his neighbor, would keep every point of the decalogue—but just this seventh-day Sabbath—as fully as if no decalogue existed, as with it. This did Abraham and many others before that distinct law was given that made the Jews a distinct people. But without a special statute, love would fail to meet this seventh day requirement. For we could love God and love our neighbor just as fervently while working on the seventh day as we could while working during any of the other six.

St. Paul, so far from teaching the observance of the day, does by repeated warnings show it no longer obligatory, but calculated, like other Jewish ordinances that were done away, to draw the disciples back to Judaism. To the Galatians he says, "ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." (Gal. 4: 10, 11.) First in the "observance of days" stands the Jewish Sabbath. Had Paul been a Sabbatarian would he not have discriminated in its favor? That no such discrimination was to be made he assures us by saying, "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike." (Rom. 14: 5.) He then proceeds to justify this liberty, which he could not do were the seventh-day Sabbath still obligatory. Again he says, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of any holy day, or of the new moon or of the Sabbath days." (Col. 2: 16.) There is no escaping the fact that this text sets entirely aside the obligation of the Jewish Sabbath. "Let no man judge you," implies that we are at liberty to set aside or disregard entirely the use of meats, the keeping of holy days, new moons and Sabbath days. The claim that the Jews had other Sabbaths than the seventh, does not break the force of the text; for the expression includes all sabbaths, one as well as another. But days are in italics, leaving the simple expression, "the Sabbath;" which expression in the Bible universally indicates the seventh day.

But once more. If the seventh-day Sabbath were still obligatory, how shall we account, not only that its observance is never enjoined, but that no warning should ever be uttered against so great a sin, as its violation. Other sins in catalogues are arrayed before us repeatedly, and men are warned, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 6: 9, 10; Gal. 5: 20, 21.) But here is a sin, according to Sabbatarians, of both very common occurrence and great enormity, and one to which Gentile converts would be peculiarly liable and need both warning and instruction, and yet it never is so much as once mentioned. Now if this be "the mark of the beast," as some have urged, and if none who do not keep the seventh-day Sabbath can enter the kingdom, how could St. John have failed to add to his list this "mark," and taught us that not only "the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars," but also that all Sabbath-breakers, "shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death."

But how shall this view be harmonized with the words of Christ and Paul. "I am not come to destroy the law," but "to fulfill." "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea we establish the law." The law was neither "destroyed" or made "void," but established or confirmed by the gospel as being of God, inas-

[CONTINUED ON PAGE 37.]

Poetry.

The One Talent.

In a napkin smooth and white,
Hidden from all mortal sight,
My one talent lies to-night.

One poor talent—nothing more!
All the years that have gone o'er
Have not added to the store.

Some will double what they hold,
Others add to it ten-fold,
And pay back the shining gold.

Would that I had toiled like them!
All my sloth I now condemn;
Guilty fears my soul o'erwhelm.

Lord, O teach me what to do!
Make me faithful, make me true,
And the sacred trust renew.

Help me, ere too late it be,
Something yet to do for thee,
Thou who hast done all for me.

—Teacher's Treasury.

Beyond This Troubled Sea.

[TUNE—When you and I were young.]

We are out on the Sea of Life, my Lord,
Where death's dark waters frown;
And beneath its restless tide, my Lord,
Our fallen race have gone.

CHORUS.

But there's life from the dead in thee, my Lord;
'Tis promised in thy word,
And a home for the weary saint, my Lord,
When earth shall be restored.
Then we'll sing of that joyous day, my Lord,
Earth's promised jubilee;
When the ransomed shall reign with Thee, my Lord,
Beyond this troubled sea.

When the breakers are thick'ning fast, my Lord,
Thy word shall be our guide;
And when tempests surround our bark, my Lord,
In Thee we'll still confide.

For there's life from the dead, &c.

We are waiting for thy return, my Lord;
To be from sin made free,
And to join in redemption's song, my Lord,
Beyond this troubled sea.

For there's life from the dead, &c.

B. C. SIMONDS.

Christ Our High Priest and Our Sin-Offering.

We have seen in our last that the Messiah was the true high priest after the order of Melchizedec as well as of the Aaronic, and was, therefore, foreshadowed by both; the former represented the boundless duration of the priesthood, the latter by his entering once a year into the most holy place its sacrificial character. But while Aaron had to make atonement for himself as well as for the people, and had to repeat the act of atonement every year, our Divine high priest performed it but once and this for all coming days, and need not to make atonement for himself, being without sin, the atonement he made was, therefore, wholly for the people. But Messiah was not only the eternal high priest but also our ever effective sin-offering, the blood of which is ever visible before the eye of Jehovah and never loses its atoning value and power. He is ever the true Caporeth, the mercy seat which at all times covers the sins and transgressions of those who, by faith, apply it to themselves.

We have already considered some resemblance betwen the types and the anti-type of the order of priests, but for a better understanding by our readers we will present some more; for it is an important subject which has been and still is contested not only by Jews but also by many who bear the sacred name of Christian.

1. Like Aaron, Christ was woman born, being one of the nation of the Hebrews whose father was the faithful friend of God, Abraham. But how much higher was Christ than any other of his people? Of whom, or to whom was it ever said; "Thou art my son, to-day have I begotten thee?"

2. Aaron and all who succeeded him in the office had to be without blemish, none with a defect on his body was admissible to the service of God, high wisdom and knowledge was a necessary qualification of the high priest, for he had to be the highest judge in all matters of divine law. Christ was without blemish in his body, and his wisdom was higher than any mortal ever possessed, for the fulness of the Godhead dwelt in him. "We must have" says the apostle, "a high priest, holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners and made higher than (the inmates of) heaven." (Heb. 7: 26.) The high priest was to be an impartial mediator between God and man, his love and compassion for the feeble race from whom he sprung, should not lead him to degenerate the least from the dignity of the most high God, nor should his zeal for that dignity prevent him from the utmost care and efforts for his flock in working for their reconciliation and salvation. Such a high priest was our divine Messiah, our Emanuel; he was zealous for the honor of his Father. It was he "whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his (God's righteousness for the remission of sins" etc., etc. (Rom. 3: 25.) And, indeed, he glorified him (God) on the earth, and performed the work which he had given him. See John 4: 17. At the same time he was full of compassion towards his brethren according to the flesh, so much so that he wept over Jerusalem, suffered almost all suffering which frail humanity is subject to and finally a most shameful death.

3. Next is the calling to the office, God expressly commanded Moses to take his brother Aaron and consecrate him for the special inner service in the tabernacle. Without such special appointment no man could have dared to approach the sanctuary and assume the high office of one whose station was between the holy one and sinful man without incurring instant death, as the case indeed was with Corah and his associates. Jesus Messiah also did not assume the office of high priest without authority or special appointment from his Father in heaven. He was called to the office, "So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest, but he that said unto him 'thou art my son, to-day have I begotten thee,' said in another place, 'Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedec.'" (Heb. 5: 5, 6.) These two testimonials from the writings of David were referred to by the apostle in order to answer the objection of the Hebrews of his days, that Jesus who was acknowledged as a descendant of David and not of Aaron could not be a priest of the most high; and ancient Rabbies admitted this truth and applied these passages to the Messiah whom they still expected to come.

The apostle also proves the great pre-eminence value of the priesthood of the Messiah to that of Aaron. That of the Messiah was confirmed by an oath, and gave in him, the royal high priest, the great hope of an ever effective reconciliation and re-union with God, the fruit of which is the resurrection unto life and immortality. In the seventh chapter of the epistle to the Hebrews the apostle gives a detailed explanation of the great excellency of the priesthood of the Messiah, before that of Aaron, and at the same time arrives at the conclusion that with the re-institution of the priesthood after the order of Melchizedec the Aaronic order must cease, together with the Levitical law in all its branches. For the law as well as the atonement of the Aaronic priesthood proved insufficient to purify the heart and to effect a full reconciliation which should last for life and lead to a free approach unto, and never to be severed union with God. This chapter is of exceeding great importance for every one who wishes to have a full knowledge of God's plan of salvation.

4. The vestments of Aaron are typical, not of the vestments of Messiah with which he was dressed, but with his moral character which fitted him, to be the everlasting high priest. We shall mention a few only, as a full description of every one of them would require more space than can be allowed in a magazine of twenty-four pages.

A. The frontlet or diadem of gold which Aaron wore on his forehead and upon which was engraved; "Holy unto the Lord," typical of the royal high priest upon his throne, himself most holy and the source of all holiness.

B. The names of the twelve tribes of Israel upon the breast-plate of Aaron as also upon the two stones in the Ephod upon his shoulders, foreshadowed the love of the Divine high priest towards all of his children, and the burden of his sins which he takes upon his shoulders to make them free, and by both of which he so cements them to himself that no power in heaven or on earth can separate them or take them out of his hand.

C. The Urim and Tumim by which the counsel of Jehovah was made known by the inquiring priest, and the names of which signify light and uprightness or justice, and which were lost in the early days of Israel's national life represented the true high priest, Jesus the Messiah as the only exponent of the counsel of his Father and the light that shineth into the world of darkness. Also the light of wisdom and his righteousness which he displayed during his life on the earth, and which he will show again in a far greater degree at his coming again in power and great glory.

D. The beautiful girdle of exceedingly fine workmanship, woven in gold, purple, blue and scarlet, was an emblem of that which was said of the Messiah: "Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins and faithfulness the girdle of his reins." (Is. 11: 5.)

E. Sweet and pleasant was the sound of the golden bells which skirted the robe of Aaron; but sweeter still was the sound of the voice of Jesus when he addressed the multitudes which followed him, for "he spake as no man ever spake." Blessed is he who listens to the sweet voice of the gospel, who opens not only his ears but also his heart to the gracious invitation: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." (Mat. 11: 28.)

F. The initiation. When Aaron and his sons were initiated into the priesthood they were placed before the entrance of the tabernacle, washed in water, clothed with the official robes and anointed with precious ointment. Even so Jesus, the Messiah, before he entered upon his public life he was baptised by his forerunner, John—himself a priest of the Aaronic order—washed in water in the presence of a great multitude, anointed with the Holy Ghost and clothed with Divine authority. The washing of his flesh in water was not, as in the case of Aaron and his successors on account of uncleanness, for there was nothing that ever defiled his flesh, but as he said unto John, "it behooves me to fulfill all righteousness," that is to say; my initiation must be like that which was a type of me.

Our divine Messiah performed all the duties of the Aaronic high priest in a higher, spiritual character. It was the duty of Aaron and his successors, not only to offer gifts and sacrifices for the people upon the altar of brass, to burn incense upon that of gold, but also to pray for the people, to bless and to instruct them in the law of God, to superintend the service of the priests and Levites in the tabernacle, to cause the trumpet to be blown on certain occasions and to give his decision in case of doubt between clean and unclean. Our divine high priest offered himself a sin-offering and his life as a gift for the people upon the altar of God's righteousness and justice, the order of which was more acceptable than all gifts, sacrifices and incense offered up by the priests from Aaron down to Caiphas. The curtain of the most holy was rent in twain, the temple destroyed, the Aaronic priesthood abolished, the shadow has vanished at the appearance of the reality, the true high priest is now blessing the people; he intercedes for them, he is their instructor in divine wisdom laid down in the New Testament Scriptures in comparing it with the gospel messages of Moses and the prophets and the psalms. Our divine high priest will cause the trump of God to be blown at his coming down from heaven to assume the government of the world as the King of kings, to raise the sainted dead and change the living ones to life and immortality.—Nathaniel.

Sit Down For Jesus.

The parting injunction of the lamented Tyng—"Stand up for Jesus"—uttered as he stood upon the margin of the dark river, is held as a sacred treasure in the Christian household. It has been quoted times innumerable, upon occasions various—in the pulpit, in the prayer-circle, in the newspaper, almost everywhere. We love the brief and pungent words, freighted, as they are, with so much of meaning and of feeling. As they have proved a rallying-cry to the Christian host in the past, so may they continue in the future.

But, conversely, may not a thought be submitted? Does not evil arise from too much standing—from "standing up" too long and too frequently? Not long since, in listening to a long-drawn-out pulpit effort, in which there was much "beating of the air" and of the Bible, but with no indications of milk for babes or of strong meat for men, and with little appearance of thought, save of failure, upon the part both of speaker and hearers, we secretly wished that some one would whisper in the ear of the good brother—"Sit down for Jesus." And we have no doubt that the Savior would have been more efficiently and acceptably served thus than by a further compliance with the Tyng injunction.

When, in the prayer-meeting, Br. A. "stands up," and for the space of thirty minutes bewails his "coldness, and indifference, and ingratitude, and want of faith, and doubts of acceptance, and the distance at which he lives from the Savior;" or, when Br. B. repeats, for the hundredth time, the "exhortation and experience" that even the children have "gotten by heart;" or, when Br. C. indulges in his accustomed criticisms of and animadversions upon the "brethren and sisters that don't come to the prayer-meeting," and himself gives expression to no fresh and sparkling gems of Christian experience; or, when sister C. "breaks forth into singing" the longest hymn that she can find, and in a tone unknown to all the world beside, the thought will come, and struggle for utterance, "Sit down for Jesus."

It is a marvelously difficult matter, at times, to determine precisely how long one should "stand up for Jesus;" but the rule may may be accepted as of universal application, and the fact as of unquestioned force that, "when the hopper is empty, the grist is ground;" in which case it is always safe to "Sit down for Jesus."—H. A. G. in Standard.

Emerson and Confucius.

When Mr. Emerson, the sage of Concord, in a recent discourse, alluded to the sage of China, Confucius, as foreshadowing the ethics of the sacred books of Christians, he was not as careful in his chronology as becomes a philosopher. A correspondent well versed in Oriental lore, writes to us:

"In my study of Confucius, in China, I found in his writings the precept, 'What yourself like not, give not to others.' The word I translate 'give,' may perhaps bear to be rendered do; but if I am not greatly mistaken, this is not its common meaning, which is best expressed by our word, bestow. The precept, then, dwindles down to a prohibition of a mean hypocrisy in giving.

In all my reading of his works, and my intercourse with Chinese teachers and other students of the Chinese language and literature, I never saw or heard of anything in his writings more nearly resembling our Christian 'golden rule,' than this. Doubtless some one, who wanted to extol Confucius, published the statement that Confucius, long before Christ, gave 'the golden rule' to the world. But I am confident it is a false statement. It is time that its currency was stopped. I call on Mr. Emerson, and every one that assumes to teach, to refrain from using it, unless they can prove it true. Let them give us the Chinese words, with reference to the place where they are found, and a literal translation of them; and then we shall be instructed. They might better go back to the writings of Moses, near 1,500 years before Christ, for something like this precept. He wrote, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' (Lev. 19: 18.)

Instead of being 'inspired' as a religious teacher, Confucius only claimed to teach morality and economy—for the individual, the family, and the State. When inquired of respecting the gods, he said—'we do not yet know men, how can we know gods?' And of death, probably meaning a future state, he said, 'We do not yet know life, how can we know death?'"

This rises an interesting question, and we have not a doubt as to the result that will follow its investigation. The germ of the gospel ethics is in the Pentateuch, and no Chinese sage had no hand in that.—N. Y. Observer.

The Power of Goodness.

Did you never see a person whose coming into a room was like the bringing of a lamp there? Did you never see a person whose mere presence made the whole room shine, as it were? You cannot analyze nor understand the power which such a person exerts on you. It is not intellectual. It is a mysterious influence which emanates from him, so to speak. There are persons the mention of whose names awakens in you feelings which nothing else does. Their lives are so radiant, so genial, so kind, so pleasure-bearing, that you instinctively feel, in their presence, that they do you good. It seems to you wholesome to breathe the atmosphere where they are. Their influence seems to you like the perfume of flowers in a garden. There are persons who are so genial, so gentle, so forth-putting in the direction of purity, and gentleness, and love, that you have not the slightest doubt of their being Christians. Have you never known persons of whom you have said, "I do not want any other definition of a Christian than that which I see in him?" He is an orphan who, having lived forty years, cannot lay his finger on any one and say, "He gives me my idea of goodness." Blessed be God, I know a great many.

The Month of Earthquakes.

The month of April, 1872, will long be remembered, and will occupy an important position in geological history as the month of earthquakes and volcanoes. The series of disturbances in question commenced on March 26, with an earthquake at Independence, Inoy County, California, and lasted for five hours, during which time the earth was never for a moment perfectly quiet, and every few moments heavy shocks of a few seconds duration were occuring. In all there were more than fifty heavy shocks. During the disturbance flashes of light were seen to issue from the Black Rock, a volcano of the Sierra Nevada range, about fourteen miles distant.

On April 3 the terrible earthquake of Antioch laid that ancient city in ruins. In this commotion the earth was disturbed over a considerable extent, the shocks being severely felt from Aleppo to Orfa, beyond the Euphrates, and occurring at intervals for more than a week.

On April 14 and 15 violent shocks of earthquake were felt at Accra, on the gold coast of Africa, and these were attended by a hurricane which wrecked nearly every vessel in the harbor of Zanzibar.

April 24 Vesuvius again burst her bonds, and became more active than at any time since the eruption that overwhelmed Herculaneum and Pompeii.

Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, four out of the five great divisions of the globe, showing serious disturbance of their surface at almost the same time. It is as if mother earth were shaking the finger of admonition at those who deny the old geological doctrines, and advance the hypothesis that the globe is not fluid in its interior, but is solid through and through.—Scribner's Monthly, August, 1872.

Old Peter Cartwright was often much annoyed at a sister, more noisy than pious, who would go off on a high key at every opportunity. At an animated class-meeting, one day, she broke out with, "If I had one more feather in the wing of my faith, I could fly away and be with the Savior." "Stick in the feather, O Lord! and let her go," fervently responded Br. Cartwright.

All.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise [all] the dead?" (Acts 26: 8. "For as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15: 22.) "Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the [wicked or rest of the] dead?" (1 Cor. 15: 12.) "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." (Acts 24: 15.) "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto a resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto a resurrection of damnation." (Jno. 5: 28, 29.) "And many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, some to shame and everlasting contempt." (Dan. 12: 2.) "But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterward, they that are Christ's at his coming." (1 Cor. 15: 23.) "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years; but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection; blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." (Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6.) "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, the number of whom is as the sands of the sea; and the sea gave up the dead which was in it, and death and hell [grave] delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged, every man according to their works, and death and hell were cast into the lake of fire; this is the second death; and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 7, 8, 13-15.) "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life." (Jno. 6: 48.) "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life [everlasting], but the wrath of God abideth on him."—(Jno. 3: 36.)

Who for one moment can think, in the face of all this testimony from the Holy Spirit, that God will not raise all the dead—yes, the wicked and the good? It was certainly not only the righteous that died in Adam; it was all, good and bad, both just and unjust; all in the graves shall hear and come forth. They certainly will then be alive when they hear and come forth. "All" certainly means not one of any class omitted. Awake to shame and everlasting contempt (Dan. 12: 2) means the wicked dead; for the righteous never awake to shame. The righteous only live and reign with Christ; and the "rest" [wicked] live not again till the thousand years are finished, implies that they [wicked] will live then; for if they did not rise, how could they suffer the second death, which is only for the wicked? (Rev. 20: 4.)

And think it not incredible that every human being that ever breathed the breath of life will be raised, to be judged and rewarded according to their works. The righteous will have eternal life, whilst the wicked will be burned up root and branch (Mal. 4: 1); they shall be as the "fat of lambs," shall "consume, into smoke shall they consume away" (Ps. 37: 20); "yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." (Ps. 37: 10. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth." (Ps. 37: 9.) "But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, the transgressor shall be rooted out of it." (Prov. 2: 22.) "And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts." (Mal. 4: 3.)

If they have no resurrection, how are all the above texts to be fulfilled? It is true they shall not see life eternal, as it is equally true that as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

Rev. 3 : 18.

I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed.

The representation which Scripture uniformly gives of our state by nature is, that we are "poor, and naked, and blind, and miserable;" and it is this lost condition that makes us the fit subjects of the mercy of the Gospel, which provides for us the spiritual blessings figuratively represented in the text.

I. These words direct us to the fullness of Christ for the supply of all our wants; and two things are here particularly named: 1. "Gold tried in the fire, that is, rich and abundant grace, which is as pure gold, that stands the trial of the fire, without danger of being destroyed or diminished. But this grace is tried—and "tried in the fire:" and here we may remark that our graces are to be tried, (1) By the word of God. So it is said of Joseph, "the word of the Lord tried him;" and this is the great touchstone to which all our graces should continually be brought. (2) The providences of God will try our graces, whether they be pure gold or not. Prosperity will try us. If the heart be lifted up with pride, if we are unthankful, avaricious, churlish, these are bad signs, and shew that we have much dross to lose; but if prosperity makes us thankful, humble, benevolent, then is our gold pure gold. But adversity is the great furnace to try our graces. When afflictions render us meek, patient, thankful, then is our gold properly refined.

(2) "White raiment that thou mayest be clothed." The white raiment, we are told in this same book, is "the righteousness of the saints," which, in the first instance, implies the imputed righteousness of Christ, which is to and "upon all them that believe;" and farther, those "garments of sanctification," and of righteousness, which the Holy Spirit prepares for all believers.

II. We are counselled to buy these blessings; by which we are not to understand that any merit of ours can purchase them; but as the prophet Isaiah says, "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat—without money and without price." The idea is, that we must part with all to obtain the free blessings of the gospel salvation. The New Testament inculcates self-denial, and many sacrifices must be made by real Christians. The true disciples of Christ must take up their cross to follow him. Yet all the blessings of the gospel are free as the air we breathe, or the light by which we see.—Sel. by M. M. Maxwell.

The Gospel our Law.

I. The law given on Mount Sinai is repeatedly called the "first testament" (Heb. 9: 15, 18, 20); the first covenant (Heb. 8: 7, 9, 13; 9: 1). The dispensation of the gospel is repeatedly called the "new testament," "the new covenant," "better covenant," "second covenant," etc., (Heb. 9: 15; 2 Cor. 3: 6; Heb. 7: 22; 12: 24; 8: 6.)

II. This first covenant or testament is declared to have been imperfect, faulty (Heb. 8: 7, 8), and therefore to be superceded—done away (2 Cor. 3: 11; Heb. 7: 18, 19; 8: 13.)

III. But the ten commandments are themselves the old testament, the old or first covenant. Not simply a part, but the main part, the foundation upon which all the law and the prophets hang, the gist of the Old Testament, the identical first covenant that, with all its appurtenances, was to be done away and superceded by the new, as will appear from the following Scriptures:

(a.) The ten commandants were directly called "his covenant," "the words of the covenant," etc. (Deut. 4: 13; Ex. 34: 28.)

(b.) They were written on two tables of stone, (Deut. 5: 22; 10. 34), engraven upon the stone, (Ex. 32: 16), and the stones thus written upon were called "the tables of testimony," "the tables of the covenant" (Ex. 31: 18; Heb. 9: 4.)

(c.) The tables of stone thus engraved with the ten commandants were put into the golden ark and that ark, because of the presence of these tables of the covenant, was called the "ark of the covenant." (Heb. 4: 4.)

Now, with these positive statements of scripture in view, please turn again and read 2 Cor. 3: 7-11: "but if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stone was glorious," &c..... Will any one venture to assert that this does not mean positively and unmistakably the ten commandants? And will they venture to assert that v. 11 does not just as positively declare they are done away?

The same truth is taught us typically in Gal. 4: 24-30, and very plainly in Heb. 12: 18-27; and if any doubt a reference to the giving of the ten commandments in verses 18-21, let him read Ex. 19: 16-20, and 20: 18-20.

When, therefore, God himself declares so plainly that the ten commandments are his covenant with the children of Israel—his first covenant, his old will and testament—and that the old is superceded by the new because it was faulty, and repeats this assertion in so many ways and with such a degree of minuteness as to leave no possible chance of mistake, I cannot for one, see how the conclusion is to be avoided that the fourth commandant, and every other one of the ten, are not of binding force now unless they are found in the New Testament. Instead, then, of "of carrying the idea that the spirit is substituted for the letter," I mean to be understood as above stated, that neither the letter nor the spirit of the ten commandants are binding upon us now any farther than they are found incorporated in the New Testament. As found there they are binding both in their letter and their spirit.—M. T. L. in Standard.

Ruskin says: An educated man ought to know these things: first, where he is—that is to say, what kind of a world he has got into; how large it is, what kind of creatures live in it, and how; what it is made of, and what may be made of it. Secondly, where is he going—that is to say, what chances or reports there are of any other world beside this; what seems to be the nature of that other world. Thirdly, what he had best do under the circumstances; what are the present state and wants of mankind; what are the readiest means in his power of attaining happiness and diffusing it. The man who knows these things, and who has his will so subdued that he is ready to do what he knows he ought, is an educated man; and the man who knows them not, is uneducated, although he could talk all the tongues of Babel.

The Christian Life.

Yesterday.

It was ours once, and we improved or misimproved it. We crowded it full of good or evil, and made it a blessing or a curse. But such as it was, it has gone from us. Not one hour, not one minute, can ever be recalled. It is numbered with the returnless past, and its work cannot be undone. No river of tears can erase its record; no ocean of water can wash away its errors. To-day I may improve; to-morrow I may [illegible]; but yesterday is not mi[illegible], but, like a shining icicle, it melted in my hands. Like a cloud it rolled away and left me standing on to-day, to feel how little I had gained or lost.

Reader, thy present will soon be changed to past—to-morrow will be yesterday—and thus life will slip away, and time will become eternity. Attend, therefore, to the voice of heavenly wisdom, and know that to-day is the day of grace, but to-morrow there may be for thee no time or opportunity for seeking the favor of God. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."

A Tenth for the Lord.

BY BLIND HOHANNES, THE "WALKING CONCORDANCE."

A lady has preserved the following notes of a sermon which she heard from this blind preacher (of the American Missions in Turkey), who was called, from his knowledge of Scripture, the "Walking Concordance."

The preacher commenced his discourse by repeating that striking passage in Malachi, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me; but ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings," &c. He then told us that he proposed to show from the word of God that the giving of a tenth to the Lord was a primitive institution, attended with great benefits and blessings to the givers, and perpetuated and enforced under the new dispensation no less than the old.

"Open your Bibles at the 14th chapter of Genesis, and let some one read the 18th and 20th verses." Bibles were instantly opened all over the house, and the passage read, in clear tones, by one of the congregation. "Abraham gave tithes to Melchizedec," said the preacher, "more than 400 years before the giving of the law to Moses; Abraham, the father of the faithful, whose children the Jews gloried in being; Abraham, whom even Moslems honor and call the blessed."

"Now turn to the 28th chapter and read the 20th, 21st, and 22d verses." Jacob's vow was read, concluding with the words, "And of all that thou shalt give me, I will surely give the tenth to thee." He then rapidly drew the contrast between Jacob's going to Padanaram—alone, and in utter destitution—and the return, with his flocks, and herds, and camels, men servants, and maid servants. "And now," he said, "open at the 27th of Leviticus, and read the 30th verse. 'And all the tithe of the land is the Lord's'—nine-tenths for yourselves, but one-tenth is holy unto the Lord. Open at numbers 18, and read the 20th, 21st, 26th, 28th and 29th verses." Hohannes then said, the Levites who ministered in the house of the Lord, were to have no part or inheritance in the land, for the tithes of the people were to be their inheritance; and of these tithes, they were to offer a tenth to the Lord, "even of all the best thereof!" "Read Deut. 14: 22; and 26: 12. See the abundant provision made, not only for the Levites, but also for the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow. Read also 2 Chron. 31: 4, 10, where the people are described as obeying the command of God, and bringing in abundantly of the increase of the land. And the chief priest answered King Hezekiah, when he questioned him concerning the heaps—'since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the Lord, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty; for the Lord hath blessed his people, and that which is left is this great store.' Now read Nehemiah 13: 10th, 13th and 14th verses. Mark the contrast! The people no longer gave tithes; the house of the Lord was desecrated, and the Levites had forsaken their sacred office, and 'fled, every one to his own FIELD!'

"And now," said the preacher, "we will turn to the new dispensation. Open at the 23d of Matthew and read the 23d verse: 'These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone,' are our blessed Savior's words to the Scribes and Pharisees. Ye do well to pay tithes; it is your duty; but ye ought also to do judgment, mercy, and faith. Now turn to Luke 11: 42, 'Woe unto you Pharisees, for ye tithe ....all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.' Read Luke 3: 7-12. 'Bring forth fruits worthy of repentance,'" repeated the preacher. "John the Baptist was a connecting link between the Jewish and the Gospel dispensations, and he spake as he was moved by the Spirit of God, 'Now also is the axe laid at the root of the tree.' What tree? It was nothing less than the tree—the root—of self and selfishness! What this good fruit is, he tells us in the 11th verse; "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat (food), let him do likewise.' Where now remains the tenth?" he exclaimed. "Under the new dispensation, not one-tenth merely, but one-HALF is required!" (At this announcement there was an evident sensation in the audience; many a face lighted up with a smile, as the electric current shot through the assembly.)

The preacher continued. "Read now the 6th of Luke, 38th verse: 'Give and it shall be given unto you' —the wherewithal to give! Shut your hand and your heart and you shut the windows of heaven; you keep back the blessing of God. See what Christ says in Luke 12: 33. 'Sell that ye have and give alms,' &c., which means, consider yourselves as stewards of God's grace on the earth; seeking your inheritance in the world to come. You are to set light store by your earthly possessions, and lay up treasure in heaven. "Now read Luke 14: 33." Slowly and solemnly the preacher repeated the words of the Master, "'So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not ALL that he hath, he CANNOT be my disciple!' 'Ah! my brethren," he said, it is not merely a tenth, or even a half of our worldly possessions that Christ claims, it is our ALL! Think upon the meaning of those words. It is thus he speaks to you: If you wish to be my disciple you must count the cost! You cannot serve two masters. You must give up everything that the children of this world seek after. You must hold yourselves aloof from your earthly possessions (the Armenian version of the text quoted from Luke 14: 33), holding to them loosely, setting your affections on things above. Your comfort, pleasure, honor, ease, yea, your very life, you must esteem as nothing in comparison with my service! And in thus losing all you will find ALL, and that forever.

"Open your Bibles at Matthew 19: 29, and Mark 10: 29, and read the glorious promise to those who truly 'forsake all' for Christ and his cause. See," exclaimed Hohannes, "how rich the reward! A hundred-fold in this life, and life everlasting beside! Now open at Luke 18, read from the 2d to the 10th verse. Note the words of Zaccheus: 'The half of my goods I give to the poor;' and mark the answer of our Savior. But what, say you, is salvation to be bought with money? We all know that it is 'without money, without price.' Why then this blessing upon Zaccheus? "Because," answered one of the congregation, "the giving was the fruit of his faith!" "Yes," rejoined the preacher, "Zaccheus brought forth fruit worthy of true repentance, and immediately received the promised blessing.

The Bible Class.

Herod, "That Fox."

Herod (called the Great), was the Father of the Herod (called Antipas) designated by Christ as "that fox," in Lk. 13: 31-32, by Cleopatra of Jerusalem, his fifth wife. Eusebius says he had ten wives. He was a man of blood from the beginning. He killed his second wife. He executed his two children of whom she was the mother, and five days before his own death he caused his eldest son Antipater, to be put to death: and just before his death, which was horrible in the extreme, he ordered the principal Jews of the nation to be shut up and guarded in the Hippodrome, with orders that after his death, and just before it was made public, these Jews should be slain—his avowed reason being that there might thus be mourning throughout the land at his funeral! The order was not executed.

Herod Antipas appears to have inherited, in a mitigated form, the depravity of his father. He lived in incest with the wife of his brother, Herod Philip, the latter being alive; and he beheaded John the Baptist in a freak of pleasure. It is alleged that, knowing the wish of his father to slay the infant Jesus, he plotted the death of the man Christ, through fear that he was about to set up a royal kingdom; that he devised cunningly, not openly,—operating through others to compass the death of our Lord; but the latter being aware of his purposes, escaped his devices. Hence Christ calls him 'that Fox;' but his time being at hand, he seeks no longer to avoid the toils of his enemy, but he sends him a defiant message, foreshadowing his own death.

We find a little later, from Lk. 23: 7, &c., that Pilate sends Christ, under an accusation made by the Jews, to this same Herod; and that the latter, wishing to shift the responsibility of his death, arrays him in kingly garments, by way of mockery, and returns him to Pilate. He is at Jerusalem, at the Crucifixion, conniving at the death of our Lord; but, with his craftiness and cunning, puts others forward to do the work of murder! He was, about A. D. 41, banished to Lyons, and there died.—Cor. N. Y. Observer.

All.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise [all] the dead?" (Acts 26: 8. "For as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15: 22.) "Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the [wicked or rest of the] dead?" (1 Cor. 15: 12.) "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." (Acts 24: 15.) "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto a resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto a resurrection of damnation." (Jno. 5: 28, 29.) "And many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, some to shame and everlasting contempt." (Dan. 12: 2.) "But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterward, they that are Christ's at his coming." (1 Cor. 15: 23.) "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years; but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection; blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." (Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6.) "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, the number of whom is as the sands of the sea; and the sea gave up the dead which was in it, and death and hell [grave] delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged, every man according to their works, and death and hell were cast into the lake of fire; this is the second death; and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 7, 8, 13-15.) "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life." (Jno. 6: 48.) "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life [everlasting], but the wrath of God abideth on him."—(Jno. 3: 36.)

Who for one moment can think, in the face of all this testimony from the Holy Spirit, that God will not raise all the dead—yes, the wicked and the good? It was certainly not only the righteous that died in Adam; it was all, good and bad, both just and unjust; all in the graves shall hear and come forth. They certainly will then be alive when they hear and come forth. "All" certainly means not one of any class omitted. Awake to shame and everlasting contempt (Dan. 12: 2) means the wicked dead; for the righteous never awake to shame. The righteous only live and reign with Christ; and the "rest" [wicked] live not again till the thousand years are finished, implies that they [wicked] will live then; for if they did not rise, how could they suffer the second death, which is only for the wicked? (Rev. 20: 4.)

And think it not incredible that every human being that ever breathed the breath of life will be raised, to be judged and rewarded according to their works. The righteous will have eternal life, whilst the wicked will be burned up root and branch (Mal. 4: 1); they shall be as the "fat of lambs," shall "consume, into smoke shall they consume away" (Ps. 37: 20); "yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." (Ps. 37: 10. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth." (Ps. 37: 9.) "But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, the transgressor shall be rooted out of it." (Prov. 2: 22.) "And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts." (Mal. 4: 3.)

If they have no resurrection, how are all the above texts to be fulfilled? It is true they shall not see life eternal, as it is equally true that as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

Rev. 3 : 18.

I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed.

The representation which Scripture uniformly gives of our state by nature is, that we are "poor, and naked, and blind, and miserable;" and it is this lost condition that makes us the fit subjects of the mercy of the Gospel, which provides for us the spiritual blessings figuratively represented in the text.

1. These words direct us to the fullness of Christ for the supply of all our wants; and two things are here particularly named: 1. "Gold tried in the fire, that is, rich and abundant grace, which is as pure gold, that stands the trial of the fire, without danger of being destroyed or diminished. But this grace is tried—and "tried in the fire:" and here we may remark that our graces are to be tried, (1) By the word of God. So it is said of Joseph, "the word of the Lord tried him;" and this is the great touchstone to which all our graces should continually be brought. (2) The providences of God will try our graces, whether they be pure gold or not. Prosperity will try us. If the heart be lifted up with pride, if we are unthankful, avaricious, churlish, these are bad signs, and shew that we have much dross to lose; but if prosperity makes us thankful, humble, benevolent, then is our gold pure gold. But adversity is the great furnace to try our graces. When afflictions render us meek, patient, thankful, then is our gold properly refined.

(2) "White raiment that thou mayest be clothed." The white raiment, we are told in this same book, is "the righteousness of the saints," which, in the first instance, implies the imputed righteousness of Christ, which is to and "upon all them that believe;" and farther, those "garments of sanctification," and of righteousness, which the Holy Spirit prepares for all believers.

II. We are counselled to buy these blessings; by which we are not to understand that any merit of ours can purchase them; but as the prophet Isaiah says, "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat—without money and without price." The idea is, that we must part with all to obtain the free blessings of the gospel salvation. The New Testament inculcates self-denial, and many sacrifices must be made by real Christians. The true disciples of Christ must take up their cross to follow him. Yet all the blessings of the gospel are free as the air we breathe, or the light by which we see.—Sel. by M. M. Maxwell.

The Gospel our Law.

I. The law given on Mount Sinai is repeatedly called the "first testament" (Heb. 9: 15, 18, 20); the first covenant (Heb. 8: 7, 9, 13; 9: 1). The dispensation of the gospel is repeatedly called the "new testament," "the new covenant," "better covenant," "second covenant," etc., (Heb. 9 : 15; 2 Cor. 3: 6; Heb. 7 : 22; 12 : 24; 8 : 6.)

II. This first covenant or testament is declared to have been imperfect, faulty (Heb. 8: 7, 8), and therefore to be superceded—done away (2 Cor. 3: 11; Heb. 7 : 18, 19; 8: 13.)

III. But the ten commandments are themselves the old testament, the old or first covenant. Not simply a part, but the main part, the foundation upon which all the law and the prophets hang, the gist of the Old Testament, the identical first covenant that, with all its appurtenances, was to be done away and superceded by the new, as will appear f[illegible] the following Scriptures:

(a.) The ten commandants were directly called "his covenant," "the words of the covenant," etc. (Deut. 4: 13; Ex. 34 : 28.)

(b.) They were written on two tables of stone, (Deut. 5: 22; 10. 34), engraven upon the stone, (Ex. 32: 16), and the stones thus written upon were called "the tables of testimony," "the tables of the covenant" (Ex. 31: 18; Heb. 9 : 4.)

(c.) The tables of stone thus engraved with the ten commandants were put into the golden ark and that ark, because of the presence of these tables of the covenant, was called the "ark of the covenant." (Heb. 4 : 4.)

Now, with these positive statements of scripture in view, please turn again and read 2 Cor. 3 : 7-11: "but if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stone was glorious," &c..... Will any one venture to assert that this does not mean positively and unmistakably the ten commandants? And will they venture to assert that v. 11 does not just as positively declare they are done away?

The same truth is taught us typically in Gal. 4 : 24-30, and very plainly in Heb. 12: 18-27; and if any doubt a reference to the giving of the ten commandments in verses 18-21, let him read Ex. 19: 16-20, and 20: 18-20.

When, therefore, God himself declares so plainly that the ten commandments are his covenant with the children of Israel—his first covenant, his old will and testament—and that the old is superceded by the new because it was faulty, and repeats this assertion in so many ways and with such a degree of minuteness as to leave no possible chance of mistake, I cannot for one, see how the conclusion is to be avoided that the fourth commandant, and every other one of the ten, are not of binding force now unless they are found in the New Testament. Instead, then, of "of carrying the idea that the spirit is substituted for the letter," I mean to be understood as above stated, that neither the letter nor the spirit of the ten commandants are binding upon us now any farther than they are found incorporated in the New Testament. As found there they are binding both in their letter and their spirit.—M. T. L. in Standard.

Ruskin says: An educated man ought to know these things: first, where he is—that is to say, what kind of a world he has got into; how large it is, what kind of creatures live in it, and how; what it is made of, and what may be made of it. Secondly, where is he going—that is to say, what chances or reports there are of any other world beside this; what seems to be the nature of that other world. Thirdly, what he had best do under the circumstances; what are the present state and wants of mankind; what are the readiest means in his power of attaining happiness and diffusing it. The man who knows these things, and who has his will so subdued that he is ready to do what he knows he ought, is an educated man; and the man who knows them not, is uneducated, although he could talk all the tongues of Babel.

The Christian Life.

Yesterday.

It was ours once, and we improved or misimproved it. We crowded it full of good or evil, and made it a blessing or a curse. But such as it was, it has gone from us. Not one hour, not one minute, can ever be recalled. It is numbered with the returnless past, and its work cannot be undone. No river of tears can erase its record; no ocean of water can wash away its errors. To-day I may improve; to-morrow I may[illegible] [illegible]; but yesterday is not mi[illegible], but, like a shining icicle, it melted in my hands. Like a cloud it rolled away and left me standing on to-day, to feel how little I had gained or lost.

Reader, thy present will soon be changed to past—to-morrow will be yesterday—and thus life will slip away, and time will become eternity. Attend, therefore, to the voice of heavenly wisdom, and know that to-day is the day of grace, but to-morrow there may be for thee no time or opportunity for seeking the favor of God. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."

A Tenth for the Lord.

BY BLIND HOHANNES, THE "WALKING CONCORDANCE."

A lady has preserved the following notes of a sermon which she heard from this blind preacher (of the American Missions in Turkey), who was called, from his knowledge of Scripture, the "Walking Concordance."

The preacher commenced his discourse by repeating that striking passage in Malachi, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me; but ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings," &c. He then told us that he proposed to show from the word of God that the giving of a tenth to the Lord was a primitive institution, attended with great benefits and blessings to the givers, and perpetuated and enforced under the new dispensation no less than the old.

"Open your Bibles at the 14th chapter of Genesis, and let some one read the 18th and 20th verses." Bibles were instantly opened all over the house, and the passage read, in clear tones, by one of the congregation. "Abraham gave tithes to Melchizedec," said the preacher, "more than 400 years before the giving of the law to Moses; Abraham, the father of the faithful, whose children the Jews gloried in being; Abraham, whom even Moslems honor and call the blessed."

"Now turn to the 28th chapter and read the 20th, 21st, and 22d verses." Jacob's vow was read, concluding with the words, "And of all that thou shalt give me, I will surely give the tenth to thee." He then rapidly drew the contrast between Jacob's going to Padan-aram—alone, and in utter destitution—and the return, with his flocks, and herds, and camels, men servants, and maid servants. "And now," he said, "open at the 27th of Leviticus, and read the 30th verse. 'And all the tithe of the land is the Lord's'—nine-tenths for yourselves, but one-tenth is holy unto the Lord. Open at numbers 18, and read the 20th, 21st, 26th, 28th and 29th verses." Hohannes then said, the Levites who ministered in the house of the Lord, were to have no part or inheritance in the land, for the tithes of the people were to be their inheritance; and of these tithes, they were to offer a tenth to the Lord, "even of all the best thereof!" "Read Deut. 14: 22; and 26: 12. See the abundant provision made, not only for the Levites, but also for the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow. Read also 2 Chron. 31 : 4, 10, where the people are described as obeying the command of God, and bringing in abundantly of the increase of the land. And the chief priest answered King Hezekiah, when he questioned him concerning the heaps—'since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the Lord, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty; for the Lord hath blessed his people, and that which is left is this great store.' Now read Nehemiah 13: 10th, 13th and 14th verses. Mark the contrast! The people no longer gave tithes; the house of the Lord was desecrated, and the Levites had forsaken their sacred office, and 'fled, every one to his own FIELD!'

"And now," said the preacher, "we will turn to the new dispensation. Open at the 23d of Matthew and read the 23d verse: 'These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone,' are our blessed Savior's words to the Scribes and Pharisees. Ye do well to pay tithes; it is your duty; but ye ought also to do judgment, mercy, and faith. Now turn to Luke 11: 42, 'Woe unto you Pharisees, for ye tithe ....all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.' Read Luke 3: 7-12. 'Bring forth fruits worthy of repentance,'" repeated the preacher. "John the Baptist was a connecting link between the Jewish and the Gospel dispensations, and he spake as he was moved by the Spirit of God, 'Now also is the axe laid at the root of the tree.' What tree? It was nothing less than the tree—the root—of self and selfishness! What this good fruit is, he tells us in the 11th verse; "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat (food), let him do likewise.' Where now remains the tenth?" he exclaimed. "Under the new dispensation, 'not one-tenth merely, but one-HALF is required!" (At this announcement there was an evident sensation in the audience; many a face lighted up with a smile, as the electric current shot through the assembly.)

The preacher continued. "Read now the 6th of Luke, 38th verse: 'Give and it shall be given unto you' —the wherewithal to give! Shut your hand and your heart and you shut the windows of heaven; you keep back the blessing of God. See what Christ says in Luke 12 : 33. 'Sell that ye have and give alms,' &c., which means, consider yourselves as stewards of God's grace on the earth; seeking your inheritance in the world to come. You are to set light store by your earthly possessions, and lay up treasure in heaven. "Now read Luke 14: 33." Slowly and solemnly the preacher repeated the words of the Master, "'So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not ALL that he hath, he CANNOT be my disciple!' 'Ah! my brethren," he said, it is not merely a tenth, or even a half of our worldly possessions that Christ claims, it is our ALL! Think upon the meaning of those words. It is thus he speaks to you: If you wish to be my disciple you must count the cost! You cannot serve two masters. You must give up everything that the children of this world seek after. You must hold yourselves aloof from your earthly possessions (the Armenian version of the text quoted from Luke 14 : 33), holding to them loosely, setting your affections on things above. Your comfort, pleasure, honor, ease, yea, your very life, you must esteem as nothing in comparison with my service! And in thus losing all you will find ALL, and that forever.

"Open your Bibles at Matthew 19: 29, and Mark 10: 29, and read the glorious promise to those who truly 'forsake all' for Christ and his cause. See," exclaimed Hohannes, "how rich the reward! A hundred-fold in this life, and life everlasting beside! Now open at Luke 18, read from the 2d to the 10th verse. Note the words of Zaccheus: 'The half of my goods I give to the poor;' and mark the answer of our Savior. But what, say you, is salvation to be bought with money? We all know that it is 'without money, without price.' Why then this blessing upon Zaccheus? "Because," answered one of the congregation, "the giving was the fruit of his faith!" "Yes," rejoined the preacher, "Zaccheus brought forth fruit worthy of true repentance, and immediately received the promised blessing.

The Bible Class.

Herod, "That Fox."

Herod (called the Great), was the Father of the Herod (called Antipas) designated by Christ as "that fox," in Lk. 13: 31-32, by Cleopatra of Jerusalem, his fifth wife. Eusebius says he had ten wives. He was a man of blood from the beginning. He killed his second wife. He executed his two children of whom she was the mother, and five days before his own death he caused his eldest son Antipater, to be put to death: and just before his death, which was horrible in the extreme, he ordered the principal Jews of the nation to be shut up and guarded in the Hippodrome, with orders that after his death, and just before it was made public, these Jews should be slain—his avowed reason being that there might thus be mourning throughout the land at his funeral! The order was not executed.

Herod Antipas appears to have inherited, in a mitigated form, the deprav[illegible] of his father. He lived in incest wi[illegible] wife of his brother, Herod Philip, the latter being alive; and he beheaded John the Baptist in a freak of pleasure. It is alleged that, knowing the wish of his father to slay the infant Jesus, he plotted the death of the man Christ, through fear that he was about to set up a royal kingdom: that he devised cunningly, not openly,—operating through others to compass the death of our Lord; but the latter being aware of his purposes, escaped his devices. Hence Christ calls him 'that Fox;' but his time being at hand, he seeks no longer to avoid the toils of his enemy, but he sends him a defiant message, foreshadowing his own death.

We find a little later, from Lk. 2: 7, &c., that Pilate sends Christ, under an accusation made by the Jews, to this same Herod; and that the latter, wishing to shift the responsibility of his death, arrays him in kingly garments, by way of mockery, and returns him to Pilate. He is at Jerusalem, at the Crucifixion, conniving at the death of our Lord; but, with his craftiness and cunning, puts others forward to do the work of murder! He was, about A. D. 41, banished to Lyons, and there died.—Cor. N. Y. Observer.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 3, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

ELDER HASTINGS, from Boston, is expected to be at the Amboy campmeeting. Those who have read his writings on the Lord's coming, the resurrection, judgment, the state of the dead, and immortality, will want to see and hear him. The notice of him in our letter from the Springfield campmeeting is true to the life. It will be both a privilege and blessing to hear him. Let all come who can.

WE truly sympathize with Elder R. R. York, in his late affliction by the loss of his oldest son, Charles. He was their chief earthly dependence, and was taken from them under the most trying circumstances, by that terrible scourge the small pox. They could not see, or minister to him in life, or pay the usual tribute to him in death. How very sad to be separated in this way. The Lord comfort our brother and family in this trying hour. They all have the blessed hope and of seeing Charles in the resurrection.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR

SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

KANSAS.

Beginning at Columbus, in Southern Kansas, Sept. 19, and continue till Oct. 4, as Brn. Munson, Sanford and Dunbar may arrange. The tent will be ready for use about that time.

MISSOURI.

I will be in Brookfield, Mo. (on the Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R.), Sabbath Oct. 6, and through the week. I will be glad to see Br. Miller, and any other friends in the vicinity of Brookfield, as I shall have only the week to spend in the State now.

Shall return to Chicago Oct. 14, for duties there, and spend the balance of the month as I may have calls.

ARKANSAS.

Early in November, with Eld. Lawver, I shall go to Arkansas. We shall go from Cobden, Egypt, on horseback, and preach as we go, reaching Batesville about the middle of the month, and attend the Advent Conference the 20th. After this we shall spend a short time in preaching in such places as open to us.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour. God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors. JOSHUA V. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

SPRINGFIELD.

One of the first things missed by those who have frequented this camp-ground at its annual gatherings is the morning Love Feast at the grand stand. And its influence as a unifying power is quite lost. The preaching is now the only service common to the whole camp. The sanctification meeting and gatherings in various tents for conference, prayer or preaching, give a diversity of interest that is essential to the success of the campmeeting; but there should be one love-feast for the whole camp.

The meeting this year is good, very good, the best I have attended here. The preaching is better than usual. The style of speaking is generally earnest, and the topics well chosen and appropriate. The manner of the speakers impresses one with a sense of settled conviction rather than fiery zeal. The current is strong and deep, rather than rapid and turbulent. Several preachers have touched the subject of sanctification, presenting clear Bible views, rather than the mystical, or perhaps I should say mystified ideas pressed by a few. I think Adventists generally will not be moved from the position so ably defined by Elds. Carpenter and Couch. I find an impression upon not a few judicious minds that "sanctification" is getting to be a "hobby." And by "hobby" I understand a subject that has become a pet, to be introduced or pressed with pertinacity and continuity, without regard to "time or judgment," both which, the wise man says, should be "discerned." Br. Fassett's late letter is generally approved.

The Advent, Judgment, Kingdom and Inheritance have been set forth with incontrovertible arguments. Their definite time has not as yet been presented. In conversation I find many more who wish the arguments upon definite time to be true, than have any faith that they are so. There are more believers in 1872 without a "definite time argument" than in '73 with it. But the time-believers are quite in earnest, and propose a campmeeting here in September. I wish I could attend it. Without pronouncing upon the merits of the argument, I must say that so far as I have been able to develop opinions, a new "time movement" is quite an impossibility; not that brethren are unwilling to believe, but they find it impossible to do so. They are willing to consider, but cannot forget that they have been mistaken once, or more than that, when the understanding could discover no flaw in the argument; so that positiveness of conviction is no guaranty of freedom from error. But most seem ready to candidly listen to what sincere men, like Br. Cunningham, have to say, and hope the event is at least as near as he and others think, if not nearer. So far as argument is concerned, '75 rather than '73 is the point indicated by decisive prophetic periods.

One of the most prominent figures in the foreground of the meeting is Br. Peyton G. Bowman, from South Carolina. Some may be glad to know that he has never been (as was reported) dubbed a D. D. He is Doctor of Divinity by a higher title than a college faculty can confer, and has already effected something in the way of healing diseased theology by skillful administration of Bible cordials. Some patients persistently refuse to be made whole; but others rejoice that they are rid of unhealthful errors.

Br. Bowman does not need the "D. D." Some men, no doubt, gain a meretricious importance by wearing "semilunar fardels," but he is not of that sort. He stands fully six feet in hight, and straight as an arrow, more active and quick in movement than most men of twenty-five, a face with the Southern bronze, black hair, but thickly frosted by the encroaching gray, a Roman nose, a black eagle eye that is quick without being restless, piercing and resolute, yet kind, a voice like a lion, and a fervid eloquence, as if his lips had been touched by a "live coal from off the altar." He is doctrinally sound, and practically keen. He says little about the faults of former generations, except by way of enforcing a point, but strikes at the tap roots of now prevailing sins. Yet he does this in a way that might be a model for many a minister; he shows that one may be strong without being rough, severe without rancor.

As I write, H. L. Hastings is taking the stand, another powerful man; and the Lord seems to favor him with the opportunities for exhibition of his peculiar gifts. As he rises, you see a tall, you would almost say a long man, the effect of his natural hight being increased by his flowing coat, his long hair and longer and heavier beard. His head slightly bald, makes the naturally high forehead appear still higher. The hair and complexion are light, and behind his glasses are half-hidden a pair of eyes that are full of meaning or as inscrutable as a blank page, just as the owner may elect. He walks, stands, or lounges, in a way that makes you fear, at first, that his joints are all loose, and there is danger that he might fall to pieces, but you soon see he is safe, and will hold both himself and his audience together. He has various oddities of manner and expression which leave one in doubt whether they are natural or affected: but be this as it may, they insure a strong personality. There is no danger that he will ever be mistaken for any other man. "None but himself can be his parallel."

As he commenced his sermon, black clouds began to roll up, and the distant thunder muttered threateningly. A heavy rain seemed imminent, but he commenced his work as if he had received an assurance from on high that the storm should not interfere with the services. And when, after he was well under way with his subject, there came a clap of thunder that rolled and reverbrated with unusual power and length, he waited until his drowned voice could again be heard, reverently repeated the passage—"The thunder of his power who can understand," and then continued his subject with imperturbable straight-forwardness. A few drops of rain that sent a portion of his audience flying to their tents, gave opportunity to point a moral, as he called attention to the fact that human anxiety to save ribbons, flowers and clothes so far exceeded the interest to save the soul. These points cannot be put on paper; but I have said enough to give my readers an idea of at least one of the peculiar powers of the man: he has the faculty of appropriating every incident that arises and working it into his discourse, so as to fasten rather than distract attention from the main subject. He is a master-workman in his own way, and his sermon comforted and established many hearts in the faith that the Son of man is a Divine Redeemer. (To be continued.)

WM. L. HIMES.

Those who go wrong from excess of zeal cannot indeed be approved, but must nevertheless be loved.—Bacon.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

SOUTHERN IOWA.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13. Br. Corbitt, whose hospitalities I had enjoyed, took me from Bethlehem to Russell Station, ten miles on the B. & M. Road, from where I came to Frederick, where I was cordially welcomed by Brn. Rankin and Farnsworth. Br. F. keeps the public house. We have these two Advent families only, here now, but they are workers, and we shall have more. The town is new, having a few hundred inhabitants only. The Baptists have offered their chapel to us. They are the most numerous of any sect here, and indeed there is no other of any account. My theme was the Advent. When God fulfills a prophecy we know whether he means a literal or a spiritual thing. And as all the prophecies relating to the first advent were fulfilled in a literal sense, then we have a rule for the fulfillment of those prophecies relating to the second coming of Jesus. There can be no mistake, or room for doubt. It must be literal. And so, when we are asked for the promise of Jesus' coming, we point to the prophecies that declare he will come, Is. 26: 9, for one.

A devout Papist present, said after meeting, I had not quoted the Scriptures right. For instead of the Savior's saying on the cross, "My God! My God! why hast thou forsaken me," he cried, "O Mary! why hast thou forsaken me!" It was the "Virgin Mary," he said, to whom Jesus cried when he was dying on the cross. I think one Romish writer gives this idea in a perversion of Ps. 22: 1. And so in the Papal church they have some educated fools, and some uneducated ones to follow them. Speaking of Christ going to hell at death, he said he did not go there till after his resurrection. Then he went into hell and delivered its inhabitants, after which he came out himself, or "was not left in hell." But enough of this. I had in my audience a mixture of Catholics and Protestants, Jews and infidels, all well behaved, and giving me the best attention, and for once, at least, they heard a Bible sermon.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 14. This a. m. I visited the coal mines in company with Br. Rankin. In this part of Monroe Co., in the vicinity of Frederick, there are numerous coal mines. In the Bluffs, and on either side of the creeks, plenty of coal is found. They dig from ten to one hundred and fifty feet deep. The veins run from two and a half to three and a half feet in thickness. The coal is of good quality, making a very hot fire, on account of the sulphur it contains.

We went into a mine with the miners on the North Branch of Avery's Creek, about three miles from Frederick, and saw their operations. I choose to live above ground. But these miners like it. They had done nothing else all their life. Well, every man for his business. They get for coal about six cents a bushel at the mine, and this pays well, and they deserve all they get.

Br. Gibson, who stopped over a day at Seymour, to attend a funeral, arrived this p. m. and is now helping in the work here.

We had the largest audience to-night they ever had in this place, who listened with breathless attention to our exposition of the vision of Dan. 2: 31–34. I traced the prophecy and history of the world in harmony, down to the present day, in which it was seen that all was fulfilled except the last event, the smiting of the image on the feet, which brings the kingdom "that shall not be destroyed."

Br. Gibson followed in eloquent remarks, in which the congregation took a deep interest. The truth is taking deep hold on some hearts.

THURSDAY, Aug. 15. Had an interesting conversation with the Dunkard preacher. He is evidently a good man, but holds strictly to the views of his sect, and looks no further. He contended for trine-immersion, once in the name of the Father, once in the name of the Son, and once in the name of the Holy Spirit. And the act of immersion must be with the face downward. I told him that baptism was a type of a burial; and that we bury the dead but once, and then never with the face down.

I also had a conversation with a seventh-day Sabbath keeper. He made everything rest on keeping the Jewish Sabbath, which the Jews never kept, neither those who profess to keep it now. But they keep it with their own modifications, and then call it the Sabbath of the Lord. They are misled on this subject. A meeting at night closed our services here. We hope our brethren here have received help by these meetings.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16. At an early hour we came to Fairfield, arriving at 8 a. m. I said to the agent at the Junction—How soon can we go to Wilton Junction? "Well sir, you will have to wait till 5 p. m., nine hours." Well, "let patience have her perfect work." We can wait.

I turned to the Bible, and the first passage that my eye caught was the story of Shimei's insulting behavior toward David. (2 Sam. 15: 5–9.)

We have in this case a development of envy and hate on the part of a very mean and heartless man. He was an adherent of the house of Saul, which had fallen, and cherished a spirit of hate toward David, who had succeeded his master in the kingdom of Israel. David had prospered greatly, which was a grief to the house of Saul, and Shimei partook of the family envy against the king of Israel. And so, he watched his opportunity for revenge. Absalom became a traitor. Ahithophel, king David's special and familiar friend, joined the ungrateful and rebellious son in his treason, and "lifted up his heel against" his master. He was a man of great influence in Israel, and "his counsel in those days was as if a man inquired at the oracle of God." He gave his influence to help the rebellious Absalom, so that he succeeded in driving his father from the throne, and from Jerusalem. He went out by the ascent of Mount Olivet, going up and weeping, with his head covered and barefoot, with his friends also weeping. In his flight he came to Bahurim. Here in distress, and fleeing from an ungrateful and wicked son, and in a condition that called for the sympathy and pity of all men, a man of the family of the house of Saul came out to meet David, cursing as he came, and cast stones at him and his servants. David was surrounded by his mighty men. And so Shimei said: "Come out, come out, thou bloody man, thou man of Belial. The Lord hath returned upon thee all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned; and the Lord hath delivered the kingdom into the hands of Absalom thy son. Behold thou art taken in thy mischief because thou art a bloody man."

Such is the spirit of envy and jealousy. Poor David, wounded in heart and deeply distressed with the conduct of an ungrateful son, and the perfidy of a familiar friend, fleeing for his life, is met by one who held an old grudge, who vents his spleen upon the royal sufferer, to add to his already unsupportable affliction. Such is human nature.

At this treatment of his master, Abishai, a friend of the king, exclaimed, "Why should this dead dog curse my lord, the king? let me go over I pray thee and take off his head." Here is another feature of human nature.

David replies: "What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah: so let him curse because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David. Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so? And

David said, Behold my son which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life; how much more may this Benjamite do it. Let him alone; let him curse, for the Lord hath bidden him. It may be that the Lord will look on mine affliction and that the Lord will requite me good for this day's cursing.'

Still Shimei followed on, along the hill side, over against him, and cursed as he went, and threw stones and dust upon him. How strong, how relentless, is the passion of envy or hate? And how it takes advantage of the meekness and misfortunes of its victims. The king of Israel is for the moment powerless, and in the hands of rebels, and so his enemies curse. But how changed the scene on the fall of Absalom, and the return of David to power. On his return in triumph over the Jordan, Shimei the Benjamite, with his thousands of friends hastened to meet the king and join with the king's friends to bring him back to Jerusalem. And when the king and his family had been safely ferried over Jordan, Shimei fell down before the king and said, "Let not my Lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou remember that which thy servant did perversely the day that my lord, the king, went out of Jerusalem, that the king should take it to his heart, for hy servant doth know I have sinned, herefore behold I am come the first this day of all the house of Joseph to go down to meet my lord the king."

What a change in this bitter foe? When David was oppressed he came ut into the cross ways to help on the affliction. Now David is in triumph, nd Shimei repents and asks forgiveness and his life, which he had forfeited.

Abishai, standing by, had no faith n Shimei's confession, and demanded hat he should be put to death. David eplied that no man should be put to eath that day in Israel. And the ing swore unto Shimei, "Thou shalt ot die." How noble and generous in he king to forgive and spare this enemy. It is Godlike to forgive.

All have their enemies and they may e expected to take advantage of our eakness, or misfortunes, to crush or estroy us. We should be on our uard, and amid the provocations, and eanness of those who seek to injure we should be patient and forgiving. od will deliver, though familiar iends with bitter hate combine, yet eir counsel shall be brought to aught. Let us trust in God. He is e shield and buckler of all who trust him.

We left Fairfield at 5 p. m. It is an d town of some three thousand inhabitants, surrounded with a rich farming interest. Rather a dull place, but could get no facts about religious or her matters of interest.

THE ERRORS OF THE AGE.

[Third Article.]

But this line of error goes farther an the expulsion of the divine from e word of God. There is the transference of this to the creature, the fying of man, the robbing of God order to enrich and magnify man. Ye shall not surely die" was Satan's sidious commencement of the rejecon of the divine element from what od has spoken; his second step was e promised transference of the dine to the human, "ye shall be as ds, knowing good and evil." As an ripens in iniquity, and as the rors we have dwelt upon unfold emselves, this daring transference— is fullblown impiety of anti-Christ— e last and worst form of man's infility will exhibit itself, both in the urch and in the world, consummag the evils of the perilous times of ich the apostle has given us so aplling a picture.

Transfer the divine element to crean at large, you have pantheism; to ages of brass or stone, you have idolatry; to the priest or the church, you have Romanism; to forms and rites and sacraments, and you have tractarianism; to the visible things of the senses, and you have materialism; to the invisibilities of disembodied spirits, and you have spiritualism; to the intellect, and you have rationalism; to the fancy, and you have pictorialism to the feelings, and you have religious sentimentism; transfer it to me ply as man, and you have the la[illegible] form of anti-Christ—the dethronization of the divine, the enthronization of the human, the rejection of the God-man and the exaltation of a man into his place as the only Messiah of the race, the world's only Redeemer and King.

Most subtle is the error that would have us deal without religious truth as a mere bundle of abstractions or ideas or speculations, of which every man is at liberty to form his own opinion. The essence of the Bible, the Alpha and Omega of revelation, is not truth alone, nor religion alone, but Christianity, a Christianity which is not presented to us merely as the communication of doctrines, but as the settlement of the great personal question between the sinner and God, the solution of the difficulty which law and conscience necessarily raise as to righteousness and grace.

And what is Christianity? Not metaphysics, not mysticism, not a compilation of guesses at truth. It is the history of the seed of the woman—that seed the Word made flesh; the Word made flesh the revelation of the invisible Jehovah, the representative of the eternal God, the medium of communication between the Creator and the creature, between earth and heaven.

And of this Christianity what is the essential characteristic, the indispensable feature from first to last? Is it incarnation or blood shedding? [That is, the pouring out of the soul or life, unto death.—ED. TIMES.] Is it the cradle or the cross? Is it the scene at Bethlehem or at Golgotha? Assuredly the latter! "Eli, Eli, Lama Sabachthani" is no mere outcry of suffering nature, the cross is no mere scene of human martyrdom, and the great sepulcher is no mere Hebrew tomb. It is only through blood shedding that conscience is purged; it is only at the cross that the sinner can meet with God; it is the cross that knits heaven and earth together; it is the cross that bears up the collapsing universe; it is the pierced hand that holds the golden scepter; it is at Calvary that we find the open gate of paradise regained, and the gospel is good news to the sinner of liberty to enter in. Let men with the newly sharpened axes of rationalism do their utmost to hew down that cross, it will stand in spite of them. Let them apply their ecclesiastical paint-brush, and daub it all over with the most approved of mediæval pigments to cover its nakedness, its glory will shine through all. Let them scoff at the legal transference of the sinner's guilt to a divine substitute and of that surety's righteousness to the sinner, as a Lutheran delusion or a Puritan fiction, that mutual transference, that wondrous exchange will be found to be wrapped up with Christianity itself. Let those who, like Cain of old, shrink from the touch of sacrificial blood and mock the "religion of the shambles," purge their consciences with the idea of God's universal fatherhood, and try to wash their robes and make them white in something else than the blood of the Lamb; to us, as to the saints of other days, there is but one purging of the conscience, one security for pardon, one way of access, one bond of reconciliation, one healing of our wounds—the death of him on whom the chastisement of our peace was laid; and one everlasting song "unto him who loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood."

When we speak of error or of truth, we speak of an idea, an abstraction. But the Bible does not deal in mere ideas. It has an orbit of its own, a region of its own, a world of its own —very different from that into which the wisdom of men ever enters—an orbit of which God's throne is in the center, a world of reality a region of personality, in which the distant becomes the near, the invisible the visible, and the shadowy the substantial and the palpable. In the Bible we look the living God in the face; and he fixes his gaze on us. Divine revelation, as developed in Christianity, is not the elucidation of certain unpractical or impersonal questions; but the adjustment of all that is personal between us and God, so that we shall know, of a certainty, that in believing we are forgiven all our iniquities. Christianity is not the mere improvement of natural religion, nor the removal of certain heathen misrepresentations as to the character of God; but the settlement of the great controversy between us and God, the re-adjustment of our relationship to him, upon a basis and in a way which not merely secures future reconciliation for us, but gives us the present assurance of it, with all the peace, and the liberty, and the holiness which that assurance brings.

It is round the Christ of God that all truth revolves; and hence all error connected either with his person or his work must be perilous. The revelation of the Christ begins at the beginning, and sweeps round a vast circle. It takes up the whole question between the sinner and God, and gives judgment upon every part of it. It condemns man, and justifies God. It pronounces authoritatively, both as to the way of life, and the way of death. It does not accept earnestness as a substitute for truth, nor a justification or extenuation of error. It does not show man how to lay the foundation of the great settlement for eternity, it lays the foundation and presents us with everything on God's side as finished. It begins by announcing what God has done, before it says one word of what man is to do; it shows us God as the doer and the giver—man as the receiver, setting aside unsparingly every religion and every doctrine which would make man either in whole or in part his own savior; or which would make worship or service a thing of proxy, and shift the personality and the responsibility of the great transaction between the soul and God, to a priest, or a minister, or a church, or a ceremony, or a sacrament or a creed.

Thus it is that, through the belief of God's testimony to the great propitiation, we are not only justified, but we know, we are assured, that we are; and thus it is that, through the simple reception of the glad tidings, all the gladness which they contain is transferred to us. Believing, we rejoice; we are saved; we have everlasting life.

The revelation of the Christ embraces in it the revelation of the church in him, as his temple, his body, his bride; his present witness on earth, and the watcher for his return in glory. This Church, even on earth, is no mere association of men holding certain opinions, no mere corporation favored with certain privileges, but a body chosen and called out of a world of darkness. Its legislation is divine, not human; its laws are not its own ideas of expediency and order, but the commandants of its Head. The essence of its constitution is not socialism, nor republicanism nor despotism, nor anarchy; but an unearthly organization founded on entire subjection to its heavenly Head; an organization working itself out in order, unity, growth, fruitfulness, love, and zeal. Its ministers are not philosophers, nor lecturers, nor theorists, nor humorists, nor orators, nor priests; but messengers of God's free love, expositors of the Word, and shepherds of the flock, and executors of government and discipline. Its membets are not politicians, not lovers of pleasure, nor worshipers of gold, nor men who are trying to make the best of both worlds; but men alive from the dead, through the power of the Holy Spirit, possessors of a heavenly peace, bearers of the cross, yet heirs of a kingdom, strangers upon the earth, yet citizens of the New Jerusalem, which cometh down from God out of heaven.

All the errors of the age we cannot hope to shun; yet many more we might be delivered from, did we trust more to the Heavenly Teacher and his heavenly teaching; for surely the promise is to us, "He will guide you into all truth.... Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and know all things." Let us learn each truth directly from the Master's lips, so shall it be vital and productive; otherwise we shall be the possessors but of a second-hand, and therefore a second-rate religion—a reflected religion, with all the coldness of moonshine, but none of the warmth of the glorious sun; a timid and shriveled piety that does no mighty deeds, and speaks no words of power—that will not even stand the tear and wear of life, far less brave the brunt of battle, or compete for the martyr's crown.

It is truth that makes us free, for all error is bondage. If, then, you would be free men, grasp the truth, tenaciously, bravely, calmly; bind it round you as a girdle, treasure it in your heart of hearts. "Buy the truth and sell it not;" that is, get it, at any cost, part with it never. Error is sin, for which every man shall give an account to God; and sin is no mere mischance or misfortune that claims pity only, but not condemnation nor punishment; else what means the fiery law; what means the cross of the sinbearer; what means the great white throne; what means the everlasting fire? (See Jude 7; 2 Pet. 2: 6; 2 Thes. 1: 8–10.) "Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth," remembering your high calling, as witnesses for the truth and the True One. Let neither your words nor your lives give any uncertain sound. Every man to whom the Bible comes is responsible for believing all the truth which that revelation proclaims, and for rejecting all the error which it condemns. Cleave, then, to the Word of the living God; and sit, as teachable disciples, at the feet of him who has said learn of me. So shall you be led into all truth and delivered from all error. Otherwise, how shall you stand, either now or in the evil day? How shall you hope to win the victory, or receive the recompense to him that overcometh? We once saw a painting—the representation of the last struggle of an ancient king. He and three of his pursuers are on horseback, engaged hand to hand in deadly battle. Even with such odds, he looks a man, for stature and strength and sinew, fitted to win the day. But the shield which he holds in his left hand is broken; the sword which he grasps so firmly in his right, is snapped in two, and his helmet has fallen from his head. With half a sword, with a splintered shield, without a helmet—how can he, old warrior as he is, win the field? What can he do but die? Let us in our great battle of life remember this, and if we would overcome, let us take the whole armor of God—the shield, the breastplate, the helmet, and the sword. So shall we fight: so shall we be more than conquerors; and the God of peace shall bruise Satan under our feet shortly.

The day of error will not always last. The day of truth is coming. For we know that though in the last days perilous times shall come; yet beyond these there is the splendor of the most glorious day that ever dawned upon the earth; for he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. He that testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.—London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy.

The Seventh-day Sabbath not Obligatory.

[Continued from First Page.]

much as it fully accomplished its design. "Wherefore serveth the law?" The answer shows that it did fully serve the end for which God designed it. "It was added because of transgression till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." (Gal. 3: 19.) "It was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." But now Christ being come, "we are no longer under a schoolmaster. (vv. 24, 25.) Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." (Rom. 10: 4.) So also the special design of the Sabbath was fulfilled. It was given to literal Israel "for a sign" between them in their generations to prove them, whether they would obey his voice."

But under the "new covenant," no such sign or testing of the law. "If ye love me," says Christ, "keep my commandments." "If a man love me he will keep my words." And his commands consist not like those of the Mosaic decalogue in outward obedience, but in a loving heart; one which accepts of Christ and follows him. And they "are written not on tables of stone, but on the fleshly tables of the heart," according to the covenant. (2 Cor. 3: 3. Heb. 8: 10.)

But is there no Sabbath obligatory? Is there no sweet day of worship to loving hearts; no blessed rest to weary ones? Most certainly there is And one above all others that should be dear to every lover of Christ. A day commemorative of man's only hope of a future life—the sure harbinger of that "rest" that remaineth to the "people of God." It is a day which love imposes, and love only measures the fulness and extent of its observance. We turn then from Sinai to Calvary; from the "mount that burned with fire," to "Jesus the mediator of the new Covenant;" from the law of sin and death, to him who is the resurrection and the life.

The law had its appointed day of cessation from labor, but it gave no rest to the soul. It required perfect obedience, but imparted no asserting grace, and "made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better hope did, by the which we draw nigh unto God." There is nothing to attract us to Sinai, with its blackness and darkness and tempest; and so terrible was the sight that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake. Let then its day of holy time with the covenant to which it belonged pass away. We turn to a "better covenant;" we turn to its garden with its morning of brightness to lost men. Faith, love and hope draw us here, where an open sepulcher, with angel voices and glad disciples all proclaim "The Lord is risen indeed." This is the Lord's day, let us be glad and rejoice in it. And as we love him who here "brought life and immortality to light," let us proclaim him, honor him, and show our love for him in keeping "The Lord's day" sacred to his praise.

L. C. COLLINS.

The Times.

AT HOME.

-- It is said the Jews in this country are scarce of Rabbis. There are over two hundred synagogues, and only eight Rabbis who preach to Jewish congregations in the English language, with no young men in training to be their successors. Their theological school, Maimonides College, at Philadelphia, is very poorly sustained. This looks as if the American Hebrews were backsliding.

-- The intense heat in Southern Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri during the first part of last week has been unprecedented. Reports from the South state that the heat there has been exceedingly oppressive; many people have been prostrated by it, and deaths are alarmingly numerous. In St. Louis alone, during the past week, there have been forty eight deaths from sunstroke. In Memphis there were many fatal cases.

-- For the time being the Mississippi River seems to be giving up its leadership in boiler explosions and other marine disasters to the Atlantic Ocean. A few days ago the loss of the steamer Perseveranza, off the coast of Portugal, was announced, involving in the wreck about thirty lives. This was followed by the burning of the English mail steamer George Stephenson. Then comes the terrible loss of life by the sinking of the Metis, in Long Island Sound. This in turn, is supplemented by the loss of the Bienville, burned at sea, by which over thirty lives were lost, and one or two minor disasters.

ABROAD.

-- Belfast, at last accounts, was quiet, the large reinforcements of troops that were sent there being ordered to return home.

-- Advices from Bombay announce that the cholera has appeared in the valley of the Ashmen, and is raging with great violence.

-- China and Japan seem about to declare war against each other, in consequence of some disagreement on the part of the latter.

-- Letters from Cartegena, New Granada, state that the yellow fever is epidemic there, and the American Consul refuses to give clear bills of health to vessels, and prohibits American sailors from landing, and has taken other steps to prevent the contagion being sent to this country.

PIO NONO'S SUPPOSED SUCCESSOR.

-- The Cardinal whose name the Italian papers say is most prominently associated in ecclesiastical circles at Rome with the succession to the Papal chair is Anton Maria Panebianco, a monk of the Franciscan Order of the Little Conventionals. Born at Terranova, Sicily, August 14, 1808, he became successively Cardinal Priest, Grand Penitenciary, and a member of the Episcopal Examining Commission in Holy Theology. In September, 1861, the Pope appointed him to the Consistory. There lived in the fifth decade of the present century, at Rome, a young girl, Catherine de Lezze, widely known for her prophecies and miracles. Among the prophecies, which enjoyed a high repute, was one to the effect that the next Pope would be a Franciscan. This prediction made a profound impression on the mind of Pius the Ninth, and when told that there was in the twelve Apostles' Convent of the Little Conventionals, a monk called brother Anton Maria Panebianco (white head), he believed to recognize in him his future successor. The name unquestionably implied "the host." Brother Anton Maria Panebianco fully participates in this belief. He has a mysterious foreboding that he will some day be Pope, and is becoming more convinced of it than ever. Since his admission to the Consistory, he has taken Sixtus V for his model. He constantly pores over that Pontiff's memoirs, and has removed to the cell which his prototype used to occupy when still a Franciscan monk. One day, when perfectly absorbed in identifying himself with his ideal, he heard a knock at the door of his cell, and received the news of his having been made a Cardinal. But Brother Anton Maria Panebianco was not in the least surprised; he had confidently expected it. According to all appearances, he is a fanatical admirer of the Jesuits, and on terms of the most intimate friendship with their General, Father Beck. At the same time he never expresses himself frankly, has no confidents, trusts no one, but waits for the day of his transfiguration. He appears always lost in contemplation, silent, abstract, mysterious, resembling a sphinx in a monk's gown. He praises the syllabus and defends the infallibility abasque consensu Ecclesiæ with all his extraordinary theological erudition. His eminence Panebianco promises to make a most uncompromising Pope. Two men firmly believe that this is pre-ordained—he himself and Pio Nono Mystical, like Savanarola, Panebianco is the slave of a medieval Utopism, which may persuade him to resurrect the thirteenth century, and his mind is absorbed by a plan for the reorganization of the church. As a member of the next liberal order, he might become the founder of a new era in the church; but as Pope he will preach a general crusade against Italy. The Society of Jesus, which has no sympathy with mysticism, looks upon him with apprehension, not being certain whether he is to be considered a friend or foe.—Inter-Ocean.

Communications.

An Advent Baptist Church.

We have had our church meeting, and elected messengers to the Association. Our brethren who oppose us mustered all their forces, but were defeated, and the church sends three Advent preachers to the Association, with a statement of our faith, endorsed by the church. I do not know what the Association will do with the brethren who claim to be church, and have sent a so-called "soul-sleeping" letter; but I do pray that God may give utterance to his ministers, and we all be true to our charge and faith, that we may be ready when Jesus comes. I do long for that event, that we may enter into our rest, where there shall be no more death. This world is full of sorrows and persecutions; but in that world will be peace and love. I feel like weeping when I look around and see those that did walk with me, but now do so no more; and in place of love we have prejudice, and persecution, and hatred. The Lord help us to bear the cross to the end.

MACOUPIN Co., Ill. S. F. RICE.

Baptism.

I was born and raised among sprinklers; I attended their sermons and Sunday Schools; saw them rantise their children; heard their arguments for it, and heard scarcely any others, until about fifteen years old. Yet from my earliest recollections I grew up a believer in immersion. My view was formed mainly from the account of Christ's baptism by John, which, to my young mind, seemed so simple and plain that every argument by my teacher to show it was sprinkling seemed ridiculous, and served but to confirm me in immersion. And since, I trust, I have grown in the knowledge of the truth, I have discovered its significance in figuring forth both the foundation and culmination of our hope. It has become to me one of the most beautiful and lovely services of God's house. And in it we, with the Apostle, can show our faith by our works, and by it show in a figure "the operation of God;" in the past in raising up our head, as the pledge of "the operation of God," to be manifested in raising up the body, the church, at his appearing, when we shall walk no more by faith, but see him as he is, and be like him. O. D. G.

The Voice of Prophecy.

If prophecy points to this period as the time of Christ's return, the dissolution of the world, it certainly should receive attention from all. This has been the study of many able scholars, and they all agree that nothing seems more clear than the near coming of the Son of Man. "Behold I come quickly," is the declaration of the Savior himself. And how can it be that man should doubt his word? How is it that they will turn a deaf ear to his voice? Oh, the darkness and blindness of the human mind!

We are everywhere in the Bible commanded to hear the voice of God. And the apostle says: "We have a sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place." And in another place he says: "For prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Consequently the voice of prophecy is the voice of the Holy Spirit.

And shall we, my friends, be justified in neglecting this voice? The ancient Israelites were cut off because they refused to obey God. How much more mercy can we expect if we do the same? E. T.

It is better to have no opinion at all of the gods than a degrading one. —Bacon.

Politics.

I wish especially to commend an editorial headed "Political Morals," a few weeks since. There is great danger, in the midst of the wild excitement of the present political whirlpool, of our being driven into it, which to me would seem to be a very unwise course, for the spirit of politics is as antagonistic to the spirit of true religion, as water is to fire. They cannot occupy the same space. As one comes in the other goes out. Why should the children of the soon coming king be excited over who is to be President? Our only interest in such matters should be like Paul's, to pray that whoever does rule may so arrange matters "that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." Beyond this our interest should be absorbed in, and our "contentions" be "for the faith once delivered to the saints." If we enter into this with the true spirit of devotion and consecration, it will occupy all our time, talents and means. We shall have no time, neither any disposition to dabble in the muddy water of politics. "Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God," which is now emphatically "nigh at hand," yea "even at the doors." Soon all popes, presidents, kings, princes, and other rulers on earth, will have to give way; for "he whose right it is to reign," will soon be here. Others have no right to reign. Let us, then, not be accessory to their usurpations, but, rather, protest against them. O. D. GIBSON.

Choice Scripture Quotations.

LOVE.

"God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "God commendeth his love toward us in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." And Jesus says: "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends, and ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. These things, I command you, that ye love one another. And Paul prayed "that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye being rooted and graunded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God." "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." "Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us." "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother, abideth in death." But "who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress, or persecution, or famine, or weakness, or peril, or reward? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus or Lord." Therefore, "unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father, to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen." J. R. C.

How We See.

A few days ago I got hold of a Methodist Sunday School book, entitled Busy Hands and Patient Hearts, and in it I found the following in regard to how a person sees:

So you would like to know how people see, said the physician, kindly taking a seat, and standing the boy between his knees. Well, even the wisest men hardly know that. There is much that can never be explained about it; but listen, and I will try and tell you a little of this gift of sight. Now, first of all, if you had a hundred eyes, and no soul, you would not see at all. The eye is the little window for the soul; but the soul does not look through the eye as through a pair of spectacles, for two reasons: one is, that the eye is not transparent; and another, that the soul does not see, but feel. But now, if the soul wants to feel anything, it must have that thing near to it. How could the soul feel a wood or a river which is a mile off, and a thousand times as large as the man himself? It would be purely impossible. So, then, the eye must take a picture of the things which the soul is to see, and bring it so near that the soul can feel it....

But, now, how does the soul feel the picture which the eye has faithfully taken around? Why, as insects, and snails, and oysters have feelers, which they put out to try what is before them, so the soul has its feelers, which look like very fine threads springing from the brain, and which are called nerves. Two such feelers come out of the brain, reach up to the mirrors (the lenses) of the eye, gently feel the picture there, and carry it to the soul; but how they do this nobody can tell.

The above comprehensive (?) explanation as to how a person sees, shows to what absurd positions "immortal soulism" drives one. Now, the idea of an "immortal soul" having "feelers" like an "oyster," or a "snail," is really amusing as well as ridiculous. No wonder there is so much confusion and error in the world in regard to the nature of man, when such stuff is given the children of our land to read. The writer of the above "orthodox" composition says that the soul does not "see," but "feel." Other orthodox writers say that the soul "sees" and "feels" both. How is this? Can some orthodox friend explain?

Finally, how does a horse see? B.

Good Manners.

A Christian minister ought to be a gentleman in his manners, a man of refinement and culture, not a ruffian or a boor. He ought to be somewhat acquainted with Chesterfield as well as his Bible.

If he had to appear at the palace and at the table of one of the greatest sovereigns of Europe, with what industry would he make preparation for the event. He would try to understand the usages of the society surrounding the royal family, that when ushered into it he might be able to acquit himself with credit.

But what is all this compared to the august presence of the King of kings and Lord of lords, who shall ere long come to reign over the earth escorted by an innumerable multitude of angels? The splendor of his throne and kingdom will surpass that of all the kingdoms of the present world combined.

In view of the grandeur and glory of the event and the pure and elevated society which shall surround the King eternal, how important it is that every Christian should try to attain a higher state of intellectual, moral, and social culture.

In view of the future and eternal association of the Christian with the good and the great of all ages, how does it look in a minister of the gospel to sit down to a table and disregard every rule of propriety and decency by eating out of every dish on the table with his knife and fork and leaving his own plate nearly empty and almost unsoiled? First his knife and then his fork are carried from his mouth to the jellies, preserves, fruits, and every other dish from which he can extract a mouthful!

Such disgusting and indecent behavior at a dinner table is but little better than spitting in the victuals. The writer of this regards such rudeness as an insult to the company, and the men who are guilty of it deserve to be ordered from the table. Who wants everything on a table defiled by the saliva of one of the party?

I have often in my ministerial travels witnessed this filthy practice, alternated with making use of the fork as a tooth pick! For the sake of the cause we advocate, and the respectability of our ministry and brethren, let them reform socially as well as morally, and make themselves acquainted with the habits and customs of good society.

OBSERVER.

Politeness.

One of the English infidels was so struck with the politeness and good feeling manifested in St. Paul's writings, that he affirmed that if St. Paul had said that he himself had ever performed a miracle, he would believe it, because he deemed St. Paul too much of a gentleman to tell an untruth. Whatever we may think of this remark, we cannot but be struck with the power which politeness has over the infidel. And as this infidel is not an exception, it may be well to show some few of the advantages of being polite.

It is Scriptural. If St. Paul taught politeness by his example, so did he in his writings. He tells us, "In honor we must prefer one another." Here is the great secret of politeness; namely forgetfulness of self. In another place he says, "Be courteous;" in other words, be polite.

It makes friends. Nothing so wins upon strangers as true politeness. A little attention, shown in a stage or in the cars, or at a public table, costs us very little. But what an effect it has upon the person to whom the attention is shown! The pleased look, the grateful smile, shows us we have gained a friend.

It increases our usefulness. One reason why some ministers and good Christian people have no more influence, is on account of their sour faces and forbidding countenance. They look as if they said, "Keep away from me." But if they allow the vulgar to approach within reach of their majestic presence, there is a pompous manner or way they have, which prevents the hearts of others going out to them, and thus influence over such people is lost.

It gives success. Let any man who has goods to sell, or office to attain, be kind and polite; no sham—like that put on by the politicians—and his goods are sold, and office is reached, ten times sooner than by the man who looks mad, and cuts you up as he cuts off his calicoes and clothes.

Politeness, of all things earthly, costs the least, but its power is tremendous. The influence of a genuinely polite man in the sphere in which he moves is wonderful.

PUNCTUATE.—Were it possible, the most fearful consequences might hinge upon imperfect punctuation. Not only have lawsuits turned upon the story of a witness, but upon the tail of a comma. Even one's salvation seems in the case below to be suspended upon the slender thread of an omitted pause. Elder —— wrote: "I will preach at —— church next Sabbath. Subject: All who do not believe will be damned at 8 o'clock precisely." As the Elder held his hearers long after "8 o'clock," and both orthodox and skeptics passed unharmed from the house, it is likely that a comma was intended after the word "damned," in the notice.

Berridge's Advice to a Young Minister.

"When you open your commission begin with laying open the innumerable corruptions of the hearts of your audience. Moses will lend you a knife which may be often whetted at his grindstone. Lay open the universal sinfulness of men's natures, the darkness of the mind, the frowardness of the will, the fretfulness of the temper and the earthliness and sensuality of the affections. Speak of the evil of sin in its nature, its rebellion against God as our sovereign, ingratitude to God as our lawgiver, and contempt both of his authority and love. Declare the evil of sin in its effects, bringing all our sickness pains and snares—all the evils we feel, and all the evils we fear. Lay open the spirituality of the law and its extent, reaching to every thought, word, and action, and declaring every transgression, whether by omission or commission, deserving of death. Declare man's utter helplessness to change his nature or make his peace. When your hearers are deeply affected by these things, which is often seen by the hanging down of their heads, then preach Christ. Lay open the Savior's almighty power to soften the hard heart, and give it repentance, to bring pardon to the broken heart, a spirit of prayer to the prayerless heart, holiness to the filthy heart, and faith to the unbelieving heart. Let them know that all the treasures of grace are lodged in Jesus Christ for the use of the poor, needy sinner, and that he is full of love as well as power; turns no beggar from his gate, but receives all comers kindly; loves to bless them, and bestows all his blessings free. Here you must wave the gospel flag, and magnify the Savior supremely. Speak it with a full mouth, that his blood can wash away the foulest stains, and his grace subdue the stoutest corruptions. Entreat the people to seek his grace, to seek it directly, to seek it diligently, to seek it constantly; and acquaint them that all who thus seek shall assuredly find the 'salvation of God.'"

"Occupy," "Occupy."

If you are a student of prophecy I entreat you never let it be said that prophetical study prevents practical diligence. If you do believe that the day is really approaching, then labor actively to provoke others unto love and good works. If you do believe that the night is far spent, be doubly diligent to cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light. Never was there a greater mistake than to fancy the doctrine of the personal return of Christ is calculated to paralyze Christian diligence. Surely there can be no greater spur to the servant's activity than the expectation of his master's return.

This is the way to attain a healthy state of the soul. There is nothing like the exercise of our graces for promoting our spiritual vigor. Alas! there are not a few of God's saints who complain that they want spiritual comfort in their religion, while the fault is altogether in themselves. "Occupy," "occupy," I would say to such persons. Lay yourselves out more heartily for the glory of God, and then uncomfortable feelings will soon vanish away.

This is the way to do good to the children of the world. Nothing under God has such an effect on unconverted people as the sight of a real, thorough-going, live Christian. There are thousands who will not come to hear the Gospel, and do not know the meaning of justification by faith, who yet can understand an uncompromising, holy, consistent walk with God. "Occupy," "occupy," I say again, if you want to do good.

This is the way to promote meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light. There will be no idleness in the ngdom of Christ. The saints and gels shall there wait on their Lord th unwearied activity, and serve him ay and night. It is a fine saying o arnard that Jacob in his vision me angels ascending and some ending, but none standing Occupy," "occupy," I say again, u would be thoroughly trained for ur glorious home.

O, brethren believers, it would be ell indeed if we did but see clearly ow much it is for our interest and ppiness to occupy every farthing of r Lord's money, to live very near to od.

So living we shall find great joy in r work, great comfort in our trials, reat doors of usefulness in the world, reat consolation in our sicknesses, reat hope in our death, leave great idences behind us when we are uried, have great confidence in the ay of Christ's return, and receive a reat crown in the day of reward.—ev. J. C. Ryle.

Scandal.

It is a curious reflection to make, but robably a just one, that scandal ourishes all the more because scandal-mongers receive no gain for their proceedings. Many other crimes are at-ained by personal gain; and what is ained often furnishes the means of letection and of punishment. If, by merciful provision of nature, it was rranged that a portion of the character taken away by scandal should at-ach itself to those who invent or propogate the scandal, the world, like the irds in the fable, would be very ready o fly upon the scandal-mongers and leprive those daws of the plumes thus ained. But in the present state of ffairs, these lovers and propagators of candal do not gain the smallest shred f honor or reputation by their scan-lal-mongering, and consequently they eel much less shame and meet with nuch less reproof, as their evil sayings re attended by no personal advantage. It is only very nice and sensitive con-ciences that enable their owners to uffer remorse when they have heed-essly invented or furthered scandal.—Good Words.

Who Keeps the Sabbath?

This is a question that well deserves ur consideration, because it is mak-ng, or rather some persons are making noise about it. If the Jewish Sab-bath is to be kept by Christians, I would like to know where the people re who keep it; for I have never known even one man. I know that there is a sect who claim to keep it, and are making a great noise about keeping it. Saturday, or the seventh day of the week, was to be kept by the Jews, but they did not keep it, although they pretended to do so. Now let us look at the facts. In the Decalogue there are ten commandments, eight of which are negative, and two positive; i. e., the fourth and fifth, and surely if there is any difference in commands, a positive one is the strongest. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

What are we to do in order to keep the Sabbath holy? The Bible alone can answer this question; it is not left to Jew or Gentile to guess at, or to keep it according to his notion of propriety, but there are positive instructions given how it is to be kept, and also the penalty for not keeping it. But first let us look at the penalty. (Ex. 31: 14.) "Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death." (Ex. 35: 2.) "Whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death." This fixes the penalty beyond dispute, and the manner of putting to death is by stoning. (Deut. 17: 2, 8.)

Now let us see what is to be done, and what is not to be done on the Sabbath. First: "Whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death." (Ex. 31: 15.) Again, (Ex. 19: 28.) "And the Lord s'd unto Moses, how long refuse ye to een my commandments and my laws? S, for the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day." Here there can be no mistake; every man must stay within his tent on the Sabbath. But again, (Lev. 23: 3), "Six days shall work be done; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of rest, a holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein; it is the Sabbath day of the Lord in all your dwellings." Again (Ex. 16: 23), "And he said unto them, this is that which the Lord hath said. To-morrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord; bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe, and that which remaineth over, lay up for you to be kept until the morning." No cooking on the Sabbath. Do our Sabbatarian brethren cook on the Sabbath? Again (Ex. 35: 3), "Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the Sabbath day." Do you kindle fire on the Sabbath? But once more (Ex. 12: 16), "And in the first day there shall be a holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be a holy convocation to you; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat; that only may be done of you." Do our Sabbatarians do nothing on the Sabbath but sit in the house and eat cold victuals, and chew tobacco? For they cannot smoke, because they would have to light a match.—Sel.

A's Opinion of B.

One day our Lord "spake a parable to them that trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others." A large audience that! It is a way we all have, more or less.

A exclaims, "Did you ever see anybody so stingy as B? I could easier give away five dollars than he could five cents."

B says, "If I had as much money as A has, I know I would make a more sensible use of it."

C remarks, "What a shabby-looking piece D is! I am thankful I have more taste than she has."

D sighs, "What a vain creature poor C is! I should feel guilty to spend so much time on dress as she does."

E exclaims, "What an awkward gawky F is! I bless my stars I have some idea how to carry myself in society."

E sneers, "E is nothing but a lady's man. I suppose girls are just silly enough to like such a monkey, but I thank heaven I have a little sense, whatever they think of me."

Schoolboy G says, "What a dunce that H is! I should be ashamed to make such a fool of myself in class as he does."

H thinks, "Before I would be such a digger as G is! I like to enjoy something as I go along."

J whispers, "I should think K would feel like a liar—such outrageous exaggeration! I would sooner cut my hand off than misrepresent so."

K congratulates himself he isn't such a blunt blurter as his friend J.

L is thankful she was never left to be so indifferent to religion as M is.

M thinks if she was a church member she would try to show a better spirit than L.

N does not see how O can be so gay when she is on the way to hell.

O does not see how N can be so somber if she thinks she is on the road to heaven.

P thanks God he isn't such a bigot as Q.

Q offers equally hearty thanks he isn't so miserably loose in his notions as P.

R thinks it is dreadful to see how S lets her children run over her. She would just like to give them one good shaking all around.

S pities R's poor boys to be held in every minute with bit and bridle. She would just like to get hold of them for one day, and give them a good romp with her children.

T would rather be as poor as he is than drive such hard bargains as U does.

U thinks T is a fool to be so slack in his business. Why, if he had had those same chances he would have made a fortune long ago.

V thinks W had better be just before he is generous; if he were to give away, with so many debts on his shoulders, he would feel that he was stealing from his creditors.

W really does not understand how any one can be so hard-hearted as V.

X is thankful he isn't a blasphemer like Y, and

Y rejoices that whatever he is, he is not a hypocrite like X.

"Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth."—Jenny Bradford, in Congregationalist.

Our Young Folks.

In the Lighthouse.

The lighthouse I am going to tell you about stood on a heap of rocks nearly a dozen miles from the nearest land. Sometimes just showing above the sea like porpoises, but oftener quite buried by the billows that boiled over them. In very fine weather the top of the lighthouse rocks was above water, and the keepers could ramble about in the little space round the foot of the lighthouse, taking care not to tumble off, just as if they had been walking on a table. They could fish then for the cod and haddock, and lobsters that might sometimes be found in the cranny-creeks through which the fierce cross currents generally rattled about loose big blocks of rock as you might rattle about mere marbles; or they could take a shot at a seal, a gull, a gannet, or a puffin. But for the most part, the wild waves roared over the foundation of the lighthouse, sending their spray in a curve over its lantern; sometimes surging up bodily scores of feet, and threatening to stave in its windows, in spite of the stout storm shutters and the double glass. Weltering waters, flying foam, rain, hail, snow, seabirds, hurried along like scraps of white paper; a rare ship struggling hard in its distress to give as wide a birth as possible to the dreadful rocks, the shooting gleam and trembling glimmer of their warning light—these, sometimes for weeks together, were the only outside sights which the lighthouse-keeper beheld during the dark day and the darker howling night. They were as cut off from any other human creatures as if they had been planted on a burnt-out volcano in the moon.

When the two keepers, of whom I am about to write, first went to the lighthouse, they were very friendly together. By day they fished, and shot, and cooked, and ate, and drank, and scrubbed, and scoured, and burnished in perfect harmony. At night they cheerfully relieved each other in their turn-and-turn-about four-hours' waches. It was exceptionably fine weather. For a whole week a day did not dawn on which they could not see the land; they had a visit from a party of pleasure-takers; white sails flecked the unwontedly blue sea in unusual abundance. Every day at low tide the causeway leading to the landing-place could be seen, and the keepers could descend, backwards like bears, the metal ladder, fastened to the solid granite basement of the lighthouse, which led from their "front door" to their "playground." They were new to each other, and so each had a fresh listener to his old yarns, and fresh yarns to listen to. They did not feel imprisoned; and when worse weather came, so long as it was not bad enough to threaten to keep them on the rock beyond their time, they still continued friends. For out-at-sea lighthouses nowadays four keepers are employed, who shift in turn, so that there are always three on the rock and one on the land, but at this lighthouse two men went on duty at the same time for a spell of six weeks. But seven weeks, eight weeks, passed, and Jackson and Graham were still confined to the rock. The winds howled ceaselessly, the wild waters roared on without a moment's lull, dashing against the lighthouse as if they were determined, though it was founded on a rock, and itself made of thousands of tons of rock cunningly cemented and clamped together with metal, to sweep it before them in ruin. Massive as it was, it sometimes seemed to give a little shiver, as if it feared secretly that its enemies might possibly prevail. Day in the lighthouse was almost drearier than the night, for at night the flashing star at the top of the tower cheered and warmed the blackness, but not a blink of sunlight could be seen throughout the whole of the grey, wild day, and yet the storm-shutters had always to be kept closed. The ninth, the tenth week, passed, and Jackson and Graham were no longer friends. Each snapped when the other called him to take his watch at night. "You have waked me too soon," each said, and each would have liked to add, "I must slumber again." By day they snarled at each other when they were obliged to be together, and when they were not they sulked in different rooms; taking the trouble to climb up ever so many ladders, on the wrong side, so to speak, in order to get as far as possible out of each other's way. They had nearly a dozen floors between them to choose from, and when a snug bedroom and a cozy sitting-room were included among these, it certainly did seem very absurd that one man should go and growl to himself in the coal cellar and the other in the oil-scented lantern—not only very absurd, but also very wicked. Still, something worse was to come. When fourteen weeks had gone by, and the lighthouse keepers were still utterly cut off from the land, these two men, instead of doing their best to cheer each other, grew to hate the sight of each other's faces, the sound of each other's voices, even the very creak of each other's boots. Jackson wished that he could get rid of Graham, and Graham had the same wish about Jackson. It seems strange, dosen't it? but when people, who do not belong to one another, are compelled to keep one another's company exclusively day after day, they are almost sure, after a time, to begin to dislike one another, unless they put great command on themselves and try very hard to be cheerful and polite. Of course it is very sad, as very silly, that people should behave so, but so they do behave; and now you will understand how it was that Jackson and Graham felt towards each other as they did.

And even worse still came. The winds and waters still rushed, ever raving, past the lighthouse that defied them proudly in spite of its secret shiver. Nearly four months had gone by, and still the keepers had no communication with the shore. Provisions were wasting away, and each kept a jealous eye on the other to see that he did not take more than his share. Dark thoughts began to flit through their minds. Each wished that he could get rid of the other anyhow, and each, knowing that he wished this, took secret precautions that he might not be got rid of anyhow. When both were awake, they watched each other furtively, but with a ceaseless ferocious vigilance, out of the corners of their eyes. Each, before he went to sleep, barricaded himself in his bed. The weather showed no signs of abatement. "How long could things go on as they were going?" each of the silent savage men began to ask himself, and to excuse himself for the wicked answer he silently gave himself by saying silently that he was only thinking of doing to the other what the other was thinking of doing to him.

Though the two keepers had come to hate each other so, neither neglected his lighthouse duties. Jackson one day saw the ragged, straggling vanguard of a great army of mist galloping in from windward, and went on the balcony to make sure that the fog-bell was not too rusty to do its duty. He was almost carried off his feet by the wind, and as he clung to the iron rails, some evil being whispered, and yet so as to be heard in the midst of all the rushing roar—"Call up Graham to help you, and then—you can swear the wind did it, and you'll have food enough left to last till you're relieved, and you'll be able to do your duty all the same, because if you rest all day, you'll be able to watch all night." Jackson was struggling back to the doorway in obedience to this wicked whisper, when the wind dashed two blown-away land birds at his feet. In another instant they would have been blown out to sea again, had not Jackson, though he was thinking of treacherously murdering his comrade, instinctively caught them in his hat. As he did so, he noticed that one covered the other with its wings. They were little teachers. Jackson's heart gave a wince, as if it had been stabbed; and with the birds in his hands, he went down to Graham, and confessed the evil thoughts that he had had, and Graham confessed the evil thoughts that he had had; and then the men clutched hands and vowed that, whatever might happen, each would be true to the other.

All day long the fog-bell tolled, and all night long too, as the reconciled keepers sat together watching the flashing light which the dense mist blurred. But an hour or two after dawn the mist rolled away, and the sunshine sparkled brightly on the still swollen but subsiding waters. The wind had gone down, and before noon the little yawl with their "relief" had arrived. Before evening Jackson and Graham had landed, taking with them the little teachers. They took charge of them turn-and-turn about in their cottages, and—still continuing mates—carried them back to the lighthouse in joint charge when they returned to their home in the wild sea. The birds sang there as merrily as on shore, and the men blessed the peacemakers.—Good Words for the Young.

Advertisements.

A NEW BOOK.

BY L. C. COLLINS.

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE

FAITH OF ST. PAUL

NEITHER

SADDUCEEAN

NOR

PHARISAIC,

BUT

HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.

What did the Pharisees believe?

What did the Sadducees teach?

The pure theology—the ancient faith.

The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.

The true doctrine of a future life set forth!

Patriarchs expected it.

Prophets looked for it.

Jesus Christ demonstrated it.

Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.

Dead men are not alive.

Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?

What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.

Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.

Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 3, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.

Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.

Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.

Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.

Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.

N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,

WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope: but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

P. O. Address.

S. W. Thurber, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Quarterly—The Chart.

If brethren who have written on these subjects will be patient, we hope to report progress in these two works ere long.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

To my Friends.

I would like to correspond with some friends who would like to invest $250 or more at Norwood Park, thereby conferring a personal favor on me, and at the same time securing a good investment for themselves. Address: WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Sumner's (C. A.) remarkable address on short hand writing has been laid upon our table in pamphlet form. It is the finest thing on the subject yet given to the public. An extensive interest in making phonography a branch of popular education has been stirred up in San Francisco by the treatise.

Copies for sale at this office. Price 15c.

Elgin Watches.

D. W. Whittle, Esq., National Watch Company.

Dear Sir: I have now carried one of your watches over a year. It has proved to be a perfect time-keeper—so far as a watch can be called perfect. I have commended your watches to all with confidence.

Truly yours,

Chicago, Aug. 23, 1872. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is rule 1, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

A. G. WILLIAMS. Where is your former P. O. address?

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A Robinson A Armour F Miller J Smith J Skees G W Bolt J G Brent J W Thompson N A Hitchcock E A Boynton C M Richmond J H May W Branch C Palmer M Chapman N H Payton W H J Kerr J Rinehart D O Hink C H Case P L Fry Dr Nafe H M Benson T T Halstead A Anderson M Kelly G W Barnes M Patterson J Lutrell A G Williamson W Hobbs S Doe N Field W Irwin H Landon N W Spencer A F Degger W Lindsey N Runquist J T Ongley J H Giltner S C Wellcome W Blake L C Collins N G Niece D C Day P W Hough N P Hall J F Randolph J Wood A Creasey J Horney T Howell J C Rowden G B Hudson M V Johnson D B Rogers L C Collins J Workman A Perkins G Loomis F A Childs A Sanford M McCullock C A Sumner C H Leverton J B Henderson J B Scott J Richards J S Hastings O D Gibson S J Adamson N C Miller W M Rhoads H Roach H Hunter J G Rogers W R Sparling G E Lee N J Sade G Wright S Coppernall D Q Kent Inez G W Miller M A Whitney W A Munroe C C Marston J M Seybold J Hall S C Ketchum A Crandall G Storr E Temple G T Adams J W Said.

Obituary.

FOULKS.—Died, in Corry, Pa., Aug. 30, 1872, Emily Jane, daughter of Peter V. and Esther E. Foulks; aged 4 years, 6 months and 12 days.

VAN VELZER.—Died, at Shabbona Grove, DeKalb Co Ill., Aug 19, 1872, Alice, daughter of Madison and Eunice Van Velzer; aged 2 months.

Services by the writer, from Rom. 6: 23.

N. W. SPENCER.

BOSTWICK.—Died, in Niles, Mich., on Saturday eve, Aug. 24, 1872, of Consumption, Palmer Bronson Bostwick (formerly an employe of this office): aged 26 years and 3 months.

HURLBUT.—Died, suddenly, Aug. 16, 1872, Sr. Flora A., wife of Rollin M. Hurlbut: in the 28th year of her age.

Exemplary in life, and ardent in Christian devotion, Sr. H. was highly esteemed by all her acquaintances. Buried in the same "narrow house" was the infant of the deceased mother; and as we beheld it calmly sleeping upon her bosom, the scene was truly touching. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8. N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Notices, Etc.

Special Notice—Minnesota.

Notice is hereby given to the friends coming to the Q. M. held at Lombard and Winegar's Mill (Sept. 13) by railroad, to stop at Ottawa, where teams will be in readiness to convey them to the place of meeting.

GEO. W. MILLER.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

No Reduction of Fare to Amboy.

In reply to inquiries concerning reduced fare on the Railroads to Amboy Campmeeting, I would say that I have used my best endeavors to secure a reduction, but have not obtained it. The Superintendents of the roads tell me they have agreed among themselves not to give special rates to our meeting this year.

Still, let none stay away that can come, for I think you will be well repaid for the expense.

FRANK BURR.

Notice.

I propose going to Minnesota soon, and shall be happy to serve any churches on or near my route that desire a call from me. I expect to attend the Amboy Campmeeting. My route will be by the Michigan Central to Chicago; Galena Division thence to Fulton, and then by steamboat to St. Paul. Write me at Laingsburg, Mich., until Aug. 25; then to Chicago, Room 7, 25 West Lake St., or to Amboy.

WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

Afton, 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., Sabbath Sep. 1.

Beemerville, 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sep. 8.

Johnson's S. H. 3 p. m., same day.

C. W. SMITH.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobart, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

The committee would say to all coming to the Campmeeting at Manchester, that there will be an eating stand on the ground, where warm meals, or provisions, can be had at reasonable rates.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for 25 cents. The ground is five blocks northwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings, and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reifsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

P. S., The Campmeeting at Charles City will be continued another week.

Eld. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present before the close to help preach the word.

Brethren, make a sacrifice, and come to the meeting. M. A. NEWCOMB, Sec'y.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

I will hold a public discussion in Greenfield, Adair Co., commencing Oct. 9, and continue as long as may seem necessary. Subject—The Nature and Future Rewards and Punishments of Man. My opponent, Eld. Isrel Mershon, of the M. E. Church of St. Charles, is said to be the best disputant they have. May the truth triumph. D. S. CLARK.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa, and N. W. Missouri Annual Conference and Campmeeting will be held, as last year, with the Nodaway Church at "Chase's Grove," eight miles north of Clarinda, Page Co., Iowa, commencing, Friday, Sep. 5. Let there be a large attendance from all our churches and quarterly meetings. Come prepared to camp. Bring tents if you can, or come with your covered wagons: any way, only come. Let none of our ministers stay away. We have none too many, and can ill afford to spare even one. Let the quarterly meeting clerks come prepared with written reports from their respective districts.

Cannot brethren S. K. Gibson, and N. C. Miller, arrange to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren. D. O. HINK, Pres.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20. and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m, Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

The Southern Wisconsin Campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, Wis., six miles S. W. of Brodhead, on the land of Br. Atwood, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1. Tents will be put up on Saturday, the day before the meeting. Tent poles, straw and hay to be had on the ground. We expect several of our Wisconsin ministers present. Among them we hope to meet Brn. P. W. Hough, N. A. Hitchcock, Geo. Thomson, Geo. Howard, and several others. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, and provided they will notify me by letter three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there, teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground, except those who come on the first Saturday, who will find teams there without writing. Those coming from Prairie du Chien way will change cars at Milton junction, reaching Brodhead at 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. Those coming from the north on the Northwestern R. R. will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead at the same hour as by the other route.

This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. WM. SHELDON.

MINNESOTA.

The Minnesota State Tent will be pitched at, or near, Armstrong Station, for the purpose of holding our Q. M., Sept. 6, and onward. We invite all our friends to come, and as many as can do so to bring bedding and provision, and to come fully prepared to work for the Master.

GEO. W. MILLER.

The St. Paul District Q. M. will be held with the Independence church near Armstrong's station in Wright Co., Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continue over Sunday. We shall expect to see delegates from every church in the district, and that they will bring with them their collections for the Mission Fund.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Mingar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

ARKANSAS.

I would say to the Elders and brethren in Arkansas, that it will not be practicable for me to visit them in September, as was hoped. Br. John S. Lawyer, of Cobden, Ill., has arranged to come with me, and we shall start about the first of November. We will meet you in Conference Nov. 20, and continue over the Sabbath. We shall then visit Red River District, and elsewhere, as doors may open. J. V. HIMES.

MICHIGAN.

The first Q. M. of the Eastern District will be held with the A. C. church in Almont, Lapeer Co., commencing Thusday, Oct. 3, at 2 p. m. and continue over Sunday. We extend to the friends a cordial invitation, and hope for a full attendance of men and women imbued with the Good Spirit. We expect to have our chapel ready for use on this occasion. J. H. PATON.

OHIO.

There will be a Grove meeting at Montpelier, Williams Co., commencing Sept. 19, and continue over the Sabbath. Br. Babcock will preach the word. G. W. ENGLISH.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Also there will be a Grove Meeting in Beaver Co., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may arrange, to commence eve. of Aug. 30, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a Grove Meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Lycoming Co., commencing eve. of Sept. 5, and continue about a week.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited. J. T. ONGLEY.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church. GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

A special Time Conference will be held on the Life and Union campground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 13, 1872, to continue over Lord's day.

The object of this meeting will be to earnestly investigate the prophecies bearing on the time of the coming of Christ, and deliverence of the people of God; the justification of the sanctuary; and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence of Christ's immediate coming; and to take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ.

Let such as can, bring their provision; but such as cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally.

(Signed.) GEO. W. BROWN, S. W. BISHOP, CHARLES C. BARKER, CALEB THOMSON, L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address WM. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.

Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.

Nature and Destiny of Man.

Destruction of the Wicked.

Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,

1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOOKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting: any child can use it. (2. It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(n30m3) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

FRUIT FARM

FOR SALE!

Consisting of ONE HUNDRED and TEN ACRES, fenced into twelve fields. Large and commodious farm house, with good cistern; barn and cistern, good out buildings, large three-story shop and tool-house—first story for making cider and vinegar, second story tool-room, third story box manufactory.

Seven Tenant Houses. Three Running Soft Water Springs. Eighty Acres in Fruit, and Mostly in Bearing.

Thirty-three Hundred Apple Trees; Thirty-six Hundred Peach Trees; Three Hundred Pear Trees. A lot of Cherries, Apricots, Nectarines, Mulberries, &c., &c.

Five Acres Strawberries; Three Acres Raspberries. Peach Nursery of 25,000 Stocks. Thirty Acres in Corn.

House is surrounded with a beautiful lot of Evergreens, with a large flower garden. Close to meeting houses and school house. Climate delightful. Trees loaded with peaches and apples. Near two Railroads—the Illinois Central on the East side, and the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad on the West side.

20 ACRES of the Best of TIMBER.

Will sell for one hundred dollars per acre—part cash, part time; or exchange for other real estate in suitable localities. I will also sell or trade teams, wagons, stock and tools, if parties want them.

Refer to Eld. F. Burr, or Eld. J. V. Himes, of Chicago, or Eld. W. McCullock, New Rutland, Ill.

Address: W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.; or J. S. LAWYER, Cobden, Union Co. Ill.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 6. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 10, 1872. WHOLE NO. 437.

Advent Christian Times.

THE INTERMEDIATE STATE.

In 1 Cor. 15: 32 Paul, alluding to the fact that he chose to risk his life rather than apostatize, thus argues: "If after the manner of men I have fought with the beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die." The logical force of this text may be ignored, but it cannot be evaded. Though put in the form of a question it is a direct assertion. He could risk his life rather than deny his faith, because that faith included the resurrection. But if he was mistaken in this, and the dead do not rise, then the Epicurean philosophy—"Let us eat and drink," or make the most of this life; "for to-morrow we die," and this is the final end of our sentient being—this, says Paul, "if the dead rise not" is as good doctrine as any. For the passage is eliptical, and with the elipsis supplied would read: "If after the manner of men I have fought with the beasts at Ephesus what advantageth it me if the dead rise not? [If the dead do not rise, then] let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die." In short, death is a fatal disaster unless there is to be a resurrection.

Now if man survives death as a ghost, to dwell in the presence of his Maker forever, though dissolution might be a calamity, it would not be a mortal stroke. But Paul represents death without resurrection as an irreparable misfortune. Hence man does not survive natural death, and will have no future life except by a resurrection.

This reasoning is confirmed by Paul in a preceding passage (vv. 17–19) by assertions even more absolute than the above: "If the dead rise not Christ is not raised.

"If Christ is not raised your faith is vain.

"Then they also who have fallen asleep in Christ are perished;" or, better rendered, "They also who fell asleep in Christ, PERISHED" [when they died.] The word 'perished' is here, obviously, used in its literal sense: for the apostle adds—"If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable;" assuming that if there is no resurrection there is no future life in which hope may be indulged. But our future life is assured by the fact that "now is Christ risen from the dead."

These explicit statements of the doctrine of no future life without a resurrection are in full accord with the entire testimony of Scripture. The few apparently conflicting passages conflict in appearance only, not in reality. Such are the story of the malefactor, Paul's desire to 'depart' (?), absent from the body. Now whatever theology may do, the Bible never "blows hot and cold" upon any subject. From Genesis to Revelation it represents death as a dire calamity, and in such terms that it is impossible to grant the now popular exegesis of the above passages without charging the inspired writers with most absurd inconsistencies.

In Phil. 1: 23 immaterialists do not hesitate to affirm that 'depart' is the equivalent of death. Now every scholar knows that the words in which Paul's wish is expressed are in the original an intense superlative; so that if 'to depart' is to die, then to die is the most desirable event one can conceive. Yet in this same letter Paul spoke of E[illegible]ditus' recovery from an appar[illegible]rtal disease as a signal bles[illegible]t to the church only, but to Ep[illegible]oditus himself! "God had mercy on him!" Pray tell us what sort of mercy that is which remands us from a better to a worse state of existence! Which dashes to the ground the cup filled to the brim with infinite felicity just as one's lips are open to quaff it! (ch. 2: 27.) Elsewhere Paul characterizes death as our longest-lived, and therefore worst enemy. (1 Cor. 15.) And of his own narrow escape at one time he not only says "God delivered him," but expresses a trust that God "will yet deliver" from death. He says: "We despaired of life; but we had the sentence of death in ourselves that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God who raiseth the dead: who delivered us from so great a death." Is it not akin to blasphemy to make the inspired apostle call death in one place the greatest possible blessing, and in another speak of being delivered from death.

That the doctrine of the conscious intermediate state is exceedingly acceptable to man is proved by the fact that it has nearly or quite crowded the doctrine of the second advent and the resurrection out of sight. Not less than one verse in twenty-five in the N. T. alludes directly or indirectly to the advent and revival of the dead; while, allowing all immaterialists can claim, the intermediate state is but barely alluded to there. But now the passage of the soul to heaven or Paradise is the prime source of comfort to the bereaved, while the advent and resurrection are ignored. But, as we have remarked, when Paul was called to administer to the bereaved he never once offers the thought that the dead are now alive, but instead presents the hope that they will live again. "I would not," he says, "have you to be ignorant concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not as others who have no hope." This is in allusion to the opinion of the masses in that day, that death was an eternal sleep. The multitude believed that man perished in death. Never could Paul hope for a better opportunity to state the dogma of natural immortality: but he ignores it utterly. An inexplicable fact, if the dogma be true.

"For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." So in Heb. 13: 20 we read "the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ." He adds: "We which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not precede them which are asleep." The incongruity of ideas here, if immaterialism be true, is intensely ludicrous. According to that system Paul has elsewhere taught that the saints all go to Christ immediately at death. How absurd then for him to gravely assure the living saints that they will not precede—go to Christ before those who have already gone to him! He falls into no such absurdity. The sleepers in Jesus are in "the dust of the earth." "The dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." The popular theory is that we go to be with the Lord by death. Paul's doctrine is that we shall go to meet him at the resurrection. Paul is undoubtedly right.

Immaterialism has made much of the assertion that the immortality of the soul (they confess it is not directly asserted) is assumed or taken for granted in the Scriptures. This is as exactly opposed to the truth as a proposition possibly can be throughout the Scriptures, where not directly asserted man's absolute mortality is assumed or taken for granted. On no other hypothesis can we reconcile the Scriptures. Our good deeds are to be recompensed at the resurrection of the just. (Lk. 14: 14.) When the Son of man comes, then he rewards every man. (Mat. 16: 27.) We have an incorruptible inheritance, but it will not be revealed until the last time. (1 Pet. 1: 4, 5.) We shall see Jesus as he is, not at death, but when "he shall appear." (1 Jno. 3: 2.) There is a crown of glory, but it is bestowed "when the chief Shepherd shall appear." (1 Pet. 5: 4.) So Paul anticipates his crown, and the coronation day of all saints at Jesus' "appearing and kingdom." (2 Tim. 4: 1–8.) Then he expected to meet his converts again. (1 Thes. 2: 19.)

These and a hundred other N. T. texts, are in exact accord with the O. T., which represents death as the cessation of conscious being. The dead are all "asleep." And says David, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness" (Ps. 17), which as we have seen (1 Jno. 3) is at Christ's second coming. Says the Psalmist, "I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being." (Ps. 146: 2.) Immaterialists affirm that his conscious being will never be suspended; but the Psalmist says: "In death there is no remembrance of thee: in sheol who shall give thee thanks." (Ps. 6: 5.) And what is true of saints is equally true of sinners: they are "silent in sheol" (Ps. 31: 17) whatever tradition may assert to the contrary.

We are warned not to put our trust in the prince, because "his breath [ruach, spirit as in Eccl. 12: 7] goeth forth; he returneth to his earth: in that very day his thoughts perish." True, some say 'thoughts' here means plans; that it is the schemes that perish and not the intelligent being who conceives them. But this is not true. The schemes of dead men are being carried out all about us: but, as Paul says, the princes themselves have "come to naught." (1 Cor. 2: 6.) They no longer have an intelligent being. And we have a prince's witness that we are right. Hezekiah says: "sheol [i. e. those in sheol] cannot praise thee: death cannot celebrate thee." (Is. 38: 18.) Only the living can do this. For "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down to silence" (Ps. 115: 17), in "the land of forgetfulness." (81: 10–12.)

Job entertained this doctrine: "Man lieth down and riseth not: till the heavens be no more they shall not awake or be raised out of their sleep. Oh! that thou wouldst hide me in sheol"—where he would wait all the days of his appointed time. "If I wait, sheol is my house.... when our rest together is in the dust." (ch. 17: 13.) True, he was a "pastoral barbarian." But it has ever been a principle with God to reveal his truths to the simple-hearted; and the wise with their traditions are thus confounded, as Paul says. This 'barbarian' had a clear head and a definite hope. He expected to sleep in sheol until his change came by a resurrection. "If a man die, shall HE live again?"

We have direct statements concerning the place or state of the dead—called sheol—in two classes of writings—inspired and uninspired. The latter affirm that in it spirits have every degree of consciousness from that of "a dreamy repose" up to exceedingly wakeful activity. This is the teaching of tradition. There are a few passages of inspired Scripture in which sheol occurs which could be harmonized with tradition if there were no other allusions to the subject. But the Bible speaks directly on that point, as we have seen, and, unfortunately for tradition, denies just what tradition affirms. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in sheol." (Eccl. 9: 10.) Could a statement be more explicit? More than this, the language is addressed to the intelligent, conscious being. To say, as some do, that Solomon gravely asserted that the body without intelligence when alive should be without it when dead, is to dethrone him from his seat as "the wisest man." Others say the passage means the dead have no more knowledge of this world, or the way of salvation. But the preacher cuts off all special pleading and justifies them who take him at his word. In vv. 5 and 6 he says: "The living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything; neither have they any more a record, for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished: neither have they any more a portion forever in anything that is done under the sun." "Under the sun," is frequently used by Solomon, and always with reference to the present order of things. Unless there is something beyond this world—a new world and a new life by a quickening, a resurrection, or a being again, they are perished forever.

But there is a resurrection. "Now is Christ risen from the dead." The hope, then, of the dead, is not that they are already alive, but that they shall "live again."

"Ye Shall Die in Your Sins."

Do you remember the story in the Acts of the Apostles of the young man who sat in the third loft while Paul was preaching? It could not have been a dull sermon, I should think: but Paul preached till midnight. That was rather long. You do not allow me such liberal time. And when Paul preached on, Eutychus went to sleep, until he fell from the third loft, and was taken up dead. It is true that Paul prayed, and he was restored to life by miracle; but I have known many a Eutychus fall dead under the word, but he was never known to live again. I do not mean that I have known many to go to sleep in the house of God, and fall from the third loft; but this, that they have heard the word, and heard the word, till they have been put into sleep of the deepest kind, and at last preached into hell. If we by our preaching do not wake you, we rock your cradles, and make you more insensible every time we warn you. The most startling preaching in a certain time ceases to arouse the hearers. You know the great boiler factories over here in Southwark. I am told that when a man goes inside the boiler to hold the hammer, when they are fixing rivets, the sound of the copper deafens him so that he cannot bear it, it is so horrible; but after he has been a certain number of months in that employment, he hardly notices the hammering; he does not care about it. It is just so under the word. People go to sleep under that which was once like a thunderbolt to them. As the blacksmith's dog will lie under the anvil, where the sparks fly into his face and yet go to sleep, so will many sinners sleep while the sparks of damnation fly into their faces. Horrible that it should be so. It would need an earthquake and a hurricane to move some of you stolid ones. I wish they would stir you; but even such terrors would be of no avail, only the trumpet which will arouse the dead will ever waken you. Oh, dear hearers remember that to perish under the gospel ministry is to perish with a vengeance. If I must be lost, let it be as a Zulu Kaffir, or as a Red Indian, who has never listened to the truth; but it is dreadful to go down to the pit with this as an aggravation! "You knew your duty, but you did it not; you heard the warning but you would not receive it; the medicine was put to your lip, but you preferred to be diseased; the bread was placed before you, and the living water, but you would not take them. Your blood be on your own heads." Oh, may this never be said of any of us! May we never sleep under the word as do others, lest we die in our sins; and, as I told you the other Sunday night, I think that is one of the most dreadful words in the Bible where Christ said twice, one time after another—"If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." To die on a dunghill, or in a ditch, or on a rack, or on the gallows, is nothing compared with this—to die in your sins! to die in your sins! And yet this will be your lot if you continue much longer to sleep, as do others.—Spurgeon.

The story is told of a good deacon who thought it tended to increase a a minister's faith and to make him more spiritual to keep him on a small salary. We have known other people who maintained the same opinion. But we never found any body who thought it equally good for himself. Is it because the brethren have so much more grace than ministers that it is so much safer for them to give themselves to money making?

At the recent anniversary of the Oneida Baptist Association, a visiting clergyman, old enough to be gray, but with raven locks and beard, offered several resolutions touching questions of reform, and Dr. Patton, of Utica, said he saw no objection to the adoption of the resolutions, but he wished the one on the use of tobacco might be followed by one deprecating the use of hair-dye. The reformer stood speechless.

Poetry.

Abide With Me.

"Abide with me—fast falls the eventide,
The darkness thickens, Lord, with me abide;
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, oh, abide with me.

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day,
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
Change and decay in all around I see,
O thou who changest not, abide with me.

Not a brief glance I beg, a passing word,
But as thou dwelt with thy disciples, Lord;
Familiar, condescending, patient free,
Come not to sojourn, but abide with me.

Thou on my head in early youth did smile,
And though rebellious and perverse meanwhile,
Thou hast not left me oft as I left thee;
On to life's close, O Lord, abide with me.

I need thy presence every passing hour;
What but thy grace can foil the tempter's power?
Who like thyself my guide and stay can be?
Through cloud and sunshine, oh, abide with me.

Reveal thyself before my closing eyes,
Shine through death's gloom, and point me to the skies;
Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;
In life, in death, O, Lord, abide with me."

—May this be thy daily prayer, Christian; and then if he be with thee, who or what can harm me?

The Throne of David.

"Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever." (Heb. 1: 8.)

When sin entered this fair world, bringing its blight of desolation and ruin to the guilty pair and their offspring, in love and mercy to fallen man the Almighty enters, of his own free will, into covenant on his part for a restitution—a redemption, and proposes in that redemption and restitution to bring about and cause to exist such a state of affairs as shall please him, and be in harmony with his character. He covenants to produce a Redeemer who shall bruise the serpent's head. In hope and anticipation of this, Abel offers his lamb, and God's people present their bloody sacrifices on the altar of faith.

Again, he meets Abraham, and enters into covenant, promising unto the faithful ones a restituted earth, a heavenly country, a new heavens and earth, as their everlasting home.

Finally, he sends his prophet to Israel's king, to David, and makes known to him the perpetuity of his house and throne in that glorious heavenly land, where the death blight is gone forever, and immortality alone is found.

The subject of the restitution of David's throne and kingdom is vastly interesting to the human race, inasmuch as it is an embodiment of one of the three great promises of the gospel of God. It is intimately connected with the promise of eternal life; so much so that the apostle Paul offers it as a conclusive argument of the immortal resurrection of Christ, saying—"And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure mercies of David." (Acts 13: 34.) This seems to be a strange argument to prove the incorruptibility of Christ in his resurrection; nevertheless it is doubtless one of the strongest that could be offered. Let us investigate the record and note the connection. Turning to the 89th Psalm we read—"I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever;....for I have said Mercy shall be built up forever;....I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant. Thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations." Here everlasting mercy is coupled with the perpetuity of the seed of David and his throne. The convenant and oath here referred to may be found recorded in 2 Sam. 7: 12, 13. Farther on in the Psalm we find the covenant repeated in strong language. "My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven....My covenant will I not break, nor altar the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me." (vv. 28, 29, 34, 36.)

We see by these quotations the intimate connection of the "sure mercies of David" with eternal life: for as the seed and throne of David are to be perpetuated forever, he who has the sure or everlasting mercy here promised must of necessity be immortal. But Christ is the one here meant by the "seed;" and so Paul wrote to Timothy: "Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel." (2 Tim. 2: 8.) Also in writing his epistle to the Romans he says the gospel of God is "concerning Jesus Christ our Lord which was made of the seed of David." (Rom. 1: 3.) So also his lineage and genealogy are traced back by both Matthew and Luke to David.

But lest the perpetuity of the throne of David may be yet considered limited in time, the previous quotations being based on the term 'forever' for duration, which term is more frequently limited than otherwise, let us quote one or two passages which cannot be ambiguous. In Isaiah's prophecy we read: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder; ....of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." (ch. 9: 6, 7.) Also we have the words of the angel to Mary saying: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David;....and of his kingdom there shall be no end." (Lk. 1: 32, 33.) Here we see the perpetuity of the throne is eternal, it having "no end." Therefore the "seed" who shall occupy it must be made immortal, and thus be also without end of life.

DAVID'S THRONE IN HISTORY.

David succeeded Saul on the throne of Israel, being the chosen of God to establish Israel in peace. After the covenant is made with him concerning the eternal condition of his seed and throne, David "fell on sleep and saw corruption." "For David is not ascended into the heavens." (Acts 2: 34.) The city of David, the stronghold of Zion, had been taken from the Jebusites, and there David's throne was established: but the king whose strong arm had conquered all his foes and brought peace to Israel must now fall a victim to death. His voice which had so often tuned its notes to Israel's sweetest psalms is hushed in death. He has not gone up on high, but "is both dead and buried." (Acts 2: 29.) And thus he sleeps, waiting the sounding of the trump which shall awake the dead.

Solomon takes his place as ruler of Israel, and the kingdom passes on. Solomon passes away in death and his sons succeed him, but they are sinful rulers. Iniquity ripens fast until at last the crisis comes. Zedekiah sits upon the throne ruling perversely, when Ezekiel, sent by the Lord, thunders forth this prophetic word in his ears: "And thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God: Remove the diadem, and take off the crown:....I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." (Ezek. 21: 25–27.)

Mark! he does not say it shall be overturned forever; but "until" a certain event; and that event is the coming of "him whose right it is," and that is only Christ; for he never forfeited it by disobedience as did Solomon and his successors. Christ has fulfilled all the conditions of the covenant as given in the 89th Psalm, and he is the only one of all David's seed of whom this can be said.

The words of the prophet were fulfilled. The diadem was removed, the crown was taken off, and Zedekiah taken captive by the king of Babylon, left the throne to be continually vacant or "no more" until the King of kings shall come and claim it as his own.

The prophet Micah, seeing the iniquity of the priests and judges in Jerusalem, speaks of the condition of the city during its desolation on this wise: "Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest." (Mic. 3: 12.) Three facts are mentioned here, viz: the plowing of Mt. Zion as a field—the desolation of Jerusalem as a city—and Mt. Moriah where the temple stood, should be a place of idolatrous worship. Surely the occurrence of these events would not aid in the restitution of David's throne, but rather add to its desolation. While these things exist, certainly the throne of empire can never find its seat in Zion. But the Psalmist says: "The Lord hath chosen Zion: he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest forever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it. There will I make the horn of David to bud." (Ps. 132: 13, 14, 17.) Therefore it is quite evident that a change must come, from desolation and ruin to grandeur and glory. Has it come? We may go to-day and stand on that sacred spot within the walls of the "city of the Great King," and we still behold its ruin. Zion is still a field for the plowman's toil, while he annually rears his barley and rye. The city still presents its ruins of ancient walls and palaces to show its glory has departed, while on Moriah's mount, where stood the temple with its shechinal glory and the altar fires of God's ancient people, stands the Mosque of Omar with its domes and minerets glistening in the sun, an idolatrous shrine for the worship of the False Prophet.

Why should this be so now? How long must Jerusalem be thus desolate? When will its glory return and its desolation be ended? Hear the words of the Great Teacher: 'Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." (Lk. 21: 24.) Here is the word "until" again, marking a limit for the treading down, but that limit is only the closing of Gentile times or dominion, and closes with the same scenes that terminate the "until" in Ezekiel's prophecy, viz: the coming of him whose right it is to rule and reign. In harmony with this the early Christians promulgated the doctrine of Jerusalem's desolation until the end of Gentile rule. Julian, the apostate emperor of Rome, conceived the idea of restoring the Mosaic form of worship in Jerusalem, and thus proving Jesus a false prophet and impostor. Accordingly, in the year 363 he issued a call to all the Jews in his empire to assemble in their holy city and restore its former grandeur. The work commenced gloriously, but was suddenly relinquished, as historians relate, because of "horrible balls of fire, breaking out near the foundations, with frequent and reiterated attacks, which rendered the place from time to time inaccessible to the scorched and blasted workmen." (Student's Gibbon, p. 171.) Thus God's sacred word has been fulfilled, in spite of the efforts of kings and emperors to overthrow it, and bring it to naught.

On six different occasions has an apostate church sought to wrest the holy city from the Saracenic rule, and make it no more a desolation: but each crusade has been a signal failure, and the reason of Jerusalem's desolation to-day is simply because the "until" that alone can be the limit of the "treading down" has not yet transpired, and will not while Jesus remains above; "whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3: 21.)

DAVID'S THRONE RESTORED.

Thus far we have seen that for more than two thousand years the throne of David has been overturned, and yet God, who will not lie, has sworn that it shall be restored, and perpetuated eternally. We find the royal "seed," Christ, has been raised from the dead to immortality, but he does not yet occupy the throne of David. Instead of this we see him far away from earth, sitting on the right hand of God, according to the invitation given—"Sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool." (Acts 2: 34.) Here another "until" marks a limitation of the time of his occupying the Almighty's throne. Therefore he cannot be occupying the throne of David now, as some teach, for he is to leave the throne he now occupies: but his occupancy on David's throne is to have "no end."

He says, himself, also: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcome, and am set down with my fath- in his throne." (Rev. 3: 21.) We see by this that he is not yet occupying his own throne, which is the throne of David. He refers to the time of his taking his own throne in one of his discourses, saying: "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." (Mat. 25: 31.) Then all the periods limited by the word "until," the overturning, the treading down, the sitting above, shall expire, and he shall come to claim his throne.

Three things are to be noticed in this connection, viz: the people, the throne, and the territory. The people are the "house of Jacob." Jacob was a "supplanter" (Gen. 27: 36), and his name is used for Christ in Ps. 24: 6, and elsewhere. Jacob supplanted Esau, whose name, as Edom, signifies earthy; and in allegory, Esau is the temporal kingdom of mortal Israel, to be supplanted by Christ, the Jacob who inherits the blessing, and becomes the father of the house of Jacob, "whose house are we." (Heb. 3: 6.) Christ does not propose to reign over the house of Esau, or mortal Israel, but "as a son over his own huose, whose house are we." (Heb. 3: 6.)

"All Israel shall be saved;" but "they are not all Israel who are of Israel," but "in Isaac shall thy seed be called:" and in another place it is written: "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." (Gal. 4: 28.) When the King comes he will speak and the dead shall hear his voice, and "his people shall be willing in the day of his power," and those sleeping in the dust of the earth shall awake and put on their beautiful garments of immortality, and ascend to meet their glorious King. All God's people changed to immortality will be glorified Israel, subject to Christ in his kingdom.

Then comes the glory of Zion and Jerusalem so long desolate and trodden down in the dust. "When the Lord shall build up Zion he shall appear in his glory." (Ps. 102: 16.) Then "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." (Is. 35: 10.) Again: "Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eye shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed." (Is. 33: 20.) Thus will the Lord remember Zion as he has said, for the New Jerusalem shall come down in all its glory, and the "city of the Great King," "the tabernacle of God," shall be established forever, and the throne of David shall no more be fallen; for, says the prophet, "in that day I will raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof." (Amos 9: 11.) The apostle James declares this prophecy to be for the purpose of saving "all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord." (Acts 15: 17.) How beautiful does Isaiah speak of the coming glory of Zion in the fortieth, sixtieth, sixty-first, and sixty-second chapters of his prophecy.

Then shall the earth be renewed, purged from sin and pollution by the fires of judgment, and shall come forth a new earth, glorified and eternal, with Jesus sitting on the throne of David—

"There all ages to abide."

while the eternally redeemed shall praise Zion's king forever and ever.

A groaning earth awaits the coming of her King. A groaning church await with longing hearts the glorious blissful day when her Deliverer shall appear—

"And place her enthroned at his side,
In glory that never shall end."

But "the Lord shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath." (Ps. 110: 5.) The Gentile nations shall be swept away like the chaff of the summer thrashing-floor, forever gone, but the eternal kingdom shall never pass away. Let the glory come, let Zion be redeemed! is the cry of the saints: for unless the throne of David be restored, God's people have no hope that can ever be realized. Take away the restitution of David's throne in the future, and you take away the future glory, and kingdom, and salvation of God's people. But the word is pledged. God has sworn to accomplish it. "The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." (Is. 9: 7.) Yes, the glory shall come. Gethsemane's groans and darkness shall pass away. Calvary shall no longer be a "place of skulls." Zion shall shine with the glorious light of the New Jerusalem, the city of our God.

"Hallelujah again,
Hallelujah amen!
Shout! for the work of redemption is done."

Without Descent.

HEBREWS (COMMON VERSION), 7: 3.

"Without descent" is a translation of the Greek word, agenealogetos, but not the happiest rendering. Without a genealogy, I take to be the true rendering. It is not only grammatically true, but it is also historically true. The world contains no genealogy of this great man, Melchisedec. Not so of the kings and chief priests of the Jews. Each of these had a genealogy written and carefully preserved. But no record having been made of the descent of Melchisedec, he was without one. Not that he had descended from nobody. For, in that case, he must have been a direct creation of God. Melchisedec was a Canaanite, and not being in geneological connection with the sacerdotal families of the Jews, there was no register of his descent.

After the appointment of the first priests among the Jews, the office was hereditary. A man became a priest, all other things concurring, because his father was a priest. In consequence of this hereditary nature of the priest's office, a correct genealogy was kept, as in all other cases of hereditary offices.

Melchisedec was a specially called priest without reference to his precedent or succedent relatives; and in this respect he was a type of Christ, who sprang from a tribe of which Moses spoke nothing concerning a priesthood; and therefore it was not important that a genealogy should be kept. He had not his genealogy from them; v. 6.

FATHERLESS.

This same person is said to be fatherless, or without a father. There are two senses in which this word can be taken. 1. As spoken of a man; and 2. As spoken of an officer. As a human being he had a father. But as an officer he was the first priest in his family, and as really without an official parent as was Adam without a natural parent. Now, it was as an officer that the Apostle here spoke of him. In proof of this see ch. 6: 20, where he says that Jesus was constituted a chief-priest into the eternity, according to, not the genealogy of, but according to the order of, Melchisedec.

Again, ch. 7: 1, he says, "this Melchisedec" was "King of Salem," and a "priest of the most high God," and he officiated as a priest when he "blessed" that eminent patriarch—Abraham, the father of all believers, circumcised or uncircumcised. To him, as God's priest, the patriarch gave "the tenth part of all."

The Apostle next defines his official name, Melchisedec, which signifies "King of righteousness." This was not his patronymic. His paternal and maternal names, and his ancestry are lost; his official title preserved. Historically, then, he is not only without a father, but he is also,

MOTHERLESS.

He was "first, on one side, King of righteousness, and then, on the other side, king of Salem, which is, king of peace." He was not named after a father, on the one side, nor for a mother, on the other. His name was entirely official—not parental. All we know of him is as an officer—nothing as a man, merely. To us he has, therefore,

NEITHER A BEGINNING OF DAYS;

The time of his birth is nowhere recorded. But, more particularly, and contexturally, the commencement of his reign, or beginning of his days as king; and the commencement of his priesthood, or beginning of his days as a priest, are both without a record, and consequently, to us, they can have no beginning. The days of a king, and the days of a priest, always mean their official days. When these days become a matter of reference, and their commencement cannot be ascertained, they are, historically, without a beginning. So also in relation to their termination. He had

NEITHER AN END OF LIFE.

The end of a man's life is the time of death—the end of a king's life is the conclusion of his reign—the end of a priests life is the termination of his priesthood. The time of Melchisedec's death—the end of his reign—and the termination of his priesthood, are all unknown. In his history there is no end to them.

The first we hear of him is as a king and a priest—the last we hear of him is as a king and a priest. The sacred historian introduces him reigning as a king, and officiating as priest. He leaves him in the same conditions. He gives him neither father nor mother, nor a genealogy—neither a beginning of days, nor an end of life—but leaves him abiding a priest continually. So Paul found him in history, and so he presents him to us in a type—an apposite anticipatory representation of our blessed King, and our glorious chief-priest. Being made a resemblance for the Son of God, he remains a priest into the uninterrupted, or continuous history which God has given us of him.

All that Moses knew of Melchisedec was by revelation from God; for he lived about four hundred years after this priest. The very reason why God did not give Moses the name of his father and mother—his genealogy—the beginning of his days, and the end of his life, is because he intended him for a resemblance of the Son of God, whose priesthood was as available with respect to sins committed before, as it is in relation to sins committed since his death.

This unbegun and unfinished history—this royal and sacerdotal period—without an alpha or an omega, fitly represents our royal priest who was a lamb slain from the foundation of the world, and who now lives to make intercession for us.

He was an extraordinary personage, raised up for an extraordinary purpose. He was the first king whom God ever crowned—the first priest whom he ever consecrated. His royal authority contemplated two results, and his royal title had two significations. The two results were righteousness and peace, of both of which he was king—"king of righteousness and king of peace." To him the unborn Levi—who had historic parents, a genealogy, the beginning of priestly days and end of sacerdotal life—to him this Levi, with whom the Levitical priesthood commenced, offered patrimonial tythes while yet "in the loins of his father," Abraham.

As Melchisedec received not his priesthood by inheritance from his father, so Jesus was not constituted a priest according to a law of a fleshly commandment, but according to the ability of an endless life.

This righteous and peaceful king and priest was a suitable type of our chief-priest who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from the sinners and made higher than the heavens.

The uncommenced and unterminated royal and sacerdotal history of Melchisedec fitly represented our ever-continuing priest with his changeless priesthood. His sacrifice was so perfect, and he was so pure, that he needed not to offer continual sacrifices. "By one offering he was perfected forever the sanctified." He entered once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption. He has not entered into holy places made by human hands—the mere types of the true, or real holy place—but into heaven itself, to appear now in the presence of God for us. There he is attired in robes of light—the glory he had with his Father before the world was—the raiment of his transfiguration—the costume which he put on at the time of his ascension, when he wrapped himself in a cloud of glory and passed beyond the regions of our atmosphere, to take his seat at the right hand of the Majesty on high. Before him all the principalities and the powers in the heavenly regions bend in profound respect and holy admiration. He wears the mitre—he holds the sceptre. He is our Priest and our King—our antitypical Melchisedec—our Priest of the Most High God—our king of righteousness and peace! To him every knee shall bend, whether of celestials, terrestials, or infernals; and every tongue shall acknowledge his universal lordship in order to the glory of God the Father. So may it be.—Sel.

Religious Excitement.

This sudden turning of these men in the sight of the apostles' miracles, and in the sight of the history of these seven sons of Sceva; this sudden revival in which there were so many converted who gave evidence of their reformation, was the work of a luminous hour, an hour of excitement, as some would say, perhaps of great precipitation. There are many men in this world who are afraid of excitement when it is an excitement that tends upward. It is very seldom that I have seen a man who was afraid of excitement when it was an excitement in the direction of pleasure. I hear very few cautions on the subject. I seldom see men who are afraid of excitement on that subject of money. Ho! let it be known that stocks are depressed so that one who has the means can go in and buy and make his tens or hundreds or thousands of dollars in a few days, and men spring, and rush, and are wild, and almost beside themselves with excitement; but I do not see men under such circumstances holding each other back, and saying, "Beware of excitement." I never see men who are afraid of the excitement of getting rich suddenly. With respect to all those things which go to the bettering of your physical condition, men believe in enthusiasms, "strike while the iron is hot." There are all manner of maxims and cautions against delay where there is a chance for gain in material things. But when it comes to religious life; when an old hoary sinner who has defied the Gospel and the Spirit of God for years and years, is caught in the paroxysms of a revival of religion, and begins to manifest excitement in all manner of ways, men say to him, "Now my friend, do not go too fast. Look out, or you will be carried away by excitement." As if he were in any danger on that side of his nature! The man walks along the edge of a precipice, and nobody says a word; but when he walks by the side of a cliff, men say, "Don't tumble up; beware—beware!" When a man is excited in worldliness, nobody cautions him; but when a man is excited in the direction of more conscience, more love, more self-denial, more purity, more godliness, peopld take hold of him, and say, "Don't—don't—DON'T! That is dangerous excitement!" As if men were in any danger of being over-pious or good! As if that were the besetting sin to which men are addicted!

I tell you, men will never escape from their thraldom if they do not take heed both to their strong hours and to their weak hours. There are given to almost everybody luminous hours. We go on for weeks, sometimes for months, and perhaps even for years, without having any such hours, and then, we do not know why, and without having prepared ourselves for it, on the going down of the sun at the close of some summer day, as we sit, while the crickets and the grasshoppers chirp, and the evening birds sing, a strange, softening influence all at once comes over us, and we enter upon a new train of thought, and look over our lives. We think of what we were, of what we have become, and of what our tendencies are. We measure the world by a new standard. The heavens draw near to us. For the time being our grasp on lower things is loosened, and we are drawn upward. We feel all the impulses of a better manhood in us. We lay out the path of the future for ourselves with almost prophetic care. Those are great hours.—Henry Ward Beecher.

"The Nations Around."

Under this title an English author has given us a very readable book, containing much information respecting the countries and peoples with which the Jews were brought into contact during different periods of their history from the call of Abraham to the Captivity. It is a convenient and useful compendium of facts bearing upon the history of ancient Chaldea, Egypt, Phenicia, Assyria and Babylon, that have been brought to light by recent researches. It furnishes much interesting information respecting the civilizations and religions with which the peculiar people were brought into contact, and which left traces of their influence opon the Jewish character and institutions. But the work is chiefly valuable for the light which it throws upon many of the more obscure parts of the Old Testament history. In reading it one is oppressed more than ever with the weight of the historical evidence of the authenticity and credibility of the Hebrew Scriptures. Their often minute agreement with the records but lately deciphered on Egyptian monuments or Assyrian cylinders, and with bass-reliefs which after long centureis have just seen the light of day, as felt to be a powerful confirmation of the accuracy of the sacred writings.

The vividness, too, which is often thus imparted to the scenes and events of a remote and unfamiliar past is a great gain to the Biblical student. Thus we see in the sculptured records of Rameses III., the successor of the Pharaoh of the Exodus, a pictoral representation of the state of Palestine just before its conquest by Joshua; its "fenced cities," with "high walls, gates and bars," such as are described in Deuteronomy, and its armies coming out to oppose the Egytian king "with chariots and horses very many." On the same tablets we find inscriptions showing that the independent tribes of Canaan were under petty kings, such as went forth to fight Israel at the waters of Merom.

A singular coincidence between sacred and profane history occurs in the description, given both by Moses and Joshua, of the cause of the panic fears of the Canaanites. The "hornet," which was sent before the Israelites to drive out the original inhabitants of the land, which is understood by Knobel, Keil and most recent interpreters as referring in a figurative way to the terror and consternation which preceded the advance of the Israelites after their first great victory, it would now appear was the Egyptian king, the hieroglyphic sign of whose title as king of the Lower country was a hornet. The last of the many incursions which Palestine suffered from Egypt until the invasion of Shishak, in the time of Rehoboam, of which any mention is found on Egyptian monuments, occurred during the Israelites' forty years' wandering in the desert. The power of the Canaanitish tribes seems thus to have been broken preparatory to the entrance of the Jews into their territory under Joshua.

Simliar illustrations of the harmony between the ancient records of neigboring nations and the Bible abound, especially in the instance of Nineveh and Babylon. The investigations of science and history are contributing valuable materials to the structure of the external evidences of Revelation.

This volume, which is one of Macmillan's "Sunday Library," and one of the best of the series, is a worthy companion of Rawlinson's "Historical Evidences," and a valuable addition to our works on Biblical literature.—D. F. L. in Watchman and Reflector.

Waiting to be Asked.

Here is a young man who has been seven years in a churchgoing city—himself a churchgoer—and says this is the first time any Christian man has spoken to him about his soul. What does he mean? There are churches in that city, there are young men's Christian associations, to which every young man is again and again and in many ways welcomed. There are ministers who every Sunday are honestly and earnestly trying to point out to their hearers the way of life. Every word spoken was intended for these young men. They had, moreover, the Bible and all the institutions of a Christian city. Every avenue to the Kingdom of Heaven was as wide open to them as the clergy and the church could open it. No elder of the church can tell them how to bhcome a Christian any better than they can themselves. The Bible is his source of information, and a New Testament can be bought anywhere for twenty-five cents. Instead of censuring the neglect of the churches, I censure the egotism of the young men. It was not that no Christian had spoken to them about their souls, but that do one had taken notice of their special personality. No one had flattered their vanity by addressing them as Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown. They would not not join the church untill they had been invited to tea.—Gail Hamilton, in the Independent.

A French journal reports the discovery of a book of theological discussions written by some of the early monks, upon such questions as these: "What was the shape of the wings of the Archangel Gabriel?" "Did Pilate use soap when he washed his hands?" "How much wine did they drink at the marriage in Cana?" "Are there any angels with baritone voices?" "Could Christ have changed himself into a devil or into a pumpkin?" "If a priest should be interrupted during the baptism at a moment when about to pronounce the name of the child, and should pronounce 'Sapristi,' should the child bear through life the name of Sapristi, and is the baptism valid?"

It is said that the discussion of these different questions fills three volumes of five hundred pages each. We record the discovery as an evidence that the tone of theological discussion has not been much changed in these latter ages. Most of the topics now agitating sectarian churches are of little more value to the cause of truereligion than the whimsical propositions of the old monks.—N. Y. Tribune.

Advertisements.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

A NEW BOOK.

———:0:———

BY L. C. COLLINS.

——:0:——

A book you will want to read yourself.

A book you will want your neighbors to read.

A book that will silence opposers.

A book that will help those seeking light.

A book that will confirm those who have received the truth.

THE

FAITH OF ST. PAUL

NEITHER

SADDUCEEAN

NOR

PHARISAIC,

BUT

HEBREW.

The title indicates the scope of the work.

Paul not a Pharisee in Doctrine.

What did the Pharisees believe?

What did the Sadducees teach?

The pure theology—the ancient faith.

The Resurrection the hope of Israel from the earliest times.

The true doctrine of a future life set forth!

Patriarchs expected it.

Prophets looked for it.

Jesus Christ demonstrated it.

Apostles proclaimed it as the only hope—Jesus and the Resurrection.

Dead men are not alive.

Shall we follow fables, or the Scriptures?

What the Scriptures say about rewards, and when they are to be given.

Supposed objections to the true Hebrew faith examined.

Opposing arguments confuted.

☞ This new work by Br. Collins is now ready. Fifty-two pages.

PRICE—TEN CENTS.

Published at the office of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

—o—

Send for a copy at once; read it; and then set it at work as a missionary, by lending, or sending it to some one who will read.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 10, 1878.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON of GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

AUTHORITIES will differ. Br. Braden says the angels taught man to sow and reap. The New York Herald says "the Lord himself" gave Adam these first lessons. We think the minister, in this case, might learn of the secular journal.

'THE very Reverand Dr. Storrs' is a Romanist clergyman of New York. A little while ago he preached upon death. In it we find the following remark: 'When man was first created the body was immortal as well as the soul: but by sin death came into the world. Death is, therefore, the wages of sin.' We only quote the passage to ask, If an immortal body—a mere instrument—became mortal in consequence of sin, why could not the actually sinning soul itself have become mortal, too? One might think this priest was preparing the way with his congregation for the introduction of the correct doctrine of the human soul.

WE sometimes receive requests to write upon certain points in "the next paper," or in a private letter, in order to convey information in season for the next Sabbath School or Bible class. It is usually the case that the topics referred to are treated at large in some of our publications, while it often happens that we have not time to write for THE TIMES, much less in a private communication, the desired commentary. All questions sent in good faith are preserved for consideration and as suggestive of topics for remarks, but in some cases the answers are necessarily delayed. But do not neglect our suggestion that a book or tract may be your readiest source of information, especially if you are in haste for an answer.

THE Springfield Republican of Aug. 26 says: 'On Saturday Wm. L. Himes, of Chicago, preached on the prophecy of the Lord's coming. His sermon, on the whole, was rather denominational.' Here is the judgment of an outsider, that to talk about the Second Advent is denominational. Though quite all denominations claim to believe the doctrine of a literal, second Advent of Christ, it seems that none of them present it with sufficient force or frequency to prevent such conclusion as the above. We dare say that should the Republican read the New Testament and find a verse in every thirty or so referring to the Advent it would pronounce that volume 'rather denominational!' No doubt. We have long looked upon it as a thoroughly Adventist document.

IN the language of common life men often speak more truly than they think. Of a late catastrophe the New York Herald says: 'The loss of life through the Metis disaster has now been figured down to forty eight souls.' Then it was the 'souls' that lost life, was it not? But the Herald says further—'One hundred and seven persons were saved,' and 'twenty-two bodies have been recovered, and this would be twenty-six yet buried in the deep.'

This fashion of using soul, person and body as interchangeable terms has both Biblical and classical precedent, however harshly it may grate upon immaterialist ears. We remember that one orthodox journal desires authors to be more careful in using the term 'soul,' lest looseness in that direction might lessen the weight of the theological sense of the word. There is danger in that direction. Many an immaterialist's faith would be shaken if he would but just read the passages in the Bible which contain the words soul.

THE GREAT UNDER-CLASS.

The Plymoth Pulpit of Aug. 31, contains a sermon on "Spiritual hunger." (Mat. 5: 9.) After speaking of those who hunger for good he says:

But there are those who are living in a state in which they have no tendency to grow or aspire, by a voluntary addiction to vulgar tastes and pleasures. They think either along the level of their original position, or upon a declining plane. There seems to be aroused in them as yet no ideal of anything that is better than that which the senses can bring to them, or can enjoy when it is brought. These are bad men. Not that there may not be in them transient gleams of things good; but the average tendency of such men is animal. They infest society. They are constantly liable to be made enemies of society. Their whole status will be determined, not so much by their inward voluntary condition as by outward circumstances. They may be merely complying with what they think to be necessary to their welfare. They may be kept, by the fear of the law, by the surrounding public sentiment, and by various other influences, within bounds, so that they do not break over into vices and crimes. They are, however, the stuff out of which criminals and vicious men are made. They have tendencies which have caused many strong men to break down, and go into places where wickedness resorts, and crime is esteemed.

One can hardly think of such men and not be discouraged, unless he thinks of God, too. One hardly knows what to do with this great under-class—especially when it takes statistics, and runs out along the line of life into other nations and other times, and sees how large a section of the human family have lived very near to this condition: and how great a number of them came into it by the force of organic, hereditary influences; and came into it, also, under circumstances which afforded them very little external help. To be sure, there is a glimmer of light thrown on such men, where the apostle says, that those who are without the law, or outside of any illumination, shall be judged without the law, having the law written in their hearts; that is, all men shall be judged according to what they have, and not according to what they have not; and the judgment shall be very lenient upon infelicitous dispositions, and dispositions left with so little culture. But even the lowest form of judgment, under such circumstances, becomes oppressive to the imagination and to the thought. Where shall it stop? Where shall it be executed? What is the character of that realm which has such a criminal population in excess, and with so little institutional or other force to redeem it? What shall we do with the truths that glitter on the very top of the gospel—the truth of the Fatherhood of God? What shall we do with the thought of God in the Gospel, which is interpreted to us by that very experience to which the whole soul of man is brought? Taking those inspirations that we derive from revelations which are made to us in Scripture, and then taking our experiences, what shall we infer? I do not undertake to say what the inferences shall be. I say simply this—that there is a reason for sadness and for profound melancholy in the contemplation of the facts of human life, which exists nowhere else.

—What about the conversion of the world with this large class? Will the race change so as to lead all to hunger for righteousness? If not, then the Adventists are right that the world will not be converted,—only the few in the narrow way, while the many will perish. (Matt. 7: 13. 14.)

Exposition of 2 Pet. 3: 1-18.

The danger apprehended from the seeming delay of Christ's coming was not altogether on account of the taunt of the scoffer; but, also, from the speculative ingenuity of the expositor, wresting the word of God, so as to suit the exigency of the case. Hence, Peter cautions believers against yielding this expectation of Christ's coming, and to "count that the long-suffering of our Lord is salvation;" that is, that the delay was so arranged and determined in accordance with unmistakable foreknowledge of the times necessary for the salvation of the Gentile complement. The delay includes the whole of this dispensation. Paul had written to them to the same effect (Heb. 10: 35–39; 11: 39, 40 and 12: 26–29), as also, in all his epistles, speaking of these things, in which are some hard things to be understood. (Rom. 11: 25–36; 1 Cor. 15: 20–28; 2 Cor. 4: 17, 18; 5: 1–10; Phil. 3: 20, 21; Col. 3: 1–4; 1 Thes. 4: 13–18; 5: 1–10; 2 Thes. 1: 6–10; 2: 1–3.) Difficulties are met in the interpretation of prophecy, and in those relating to the second coming of Christ as well as others." These difficulties arise not so much from any ambiguity in the subject, as from a superficial acquaintance with it, and from slowness of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. (Is. 29: 11–13.) The unlearned—such as are not thoroughly instructed in the Scriptures, though filled with classic lore; and the unstable—such as were not steadfast in the faith, though firm in speculative opinions; would be most affected by the scoffer's taunt, and the most likely to resort to questionable modes of exegesis to obviate the difficulty. As teachers they would wrest the Scriptures to carry their point, though it should involve their own destruction and the peril of others.

The Greek word translated wrest signifies to force confession by torture, and, applied to the Scriptures, to pervert their meaning by erroneous construction. This has often been done, especially in relation to the coming of Christ, and events connected therewith. While the eye of the church, in the first three centuries of the Christian era was fixed on this expected event, "the influence of truth was very powerfully strengthened, and the most salutary effects on the faith and practice of Christians were produced." But when, under Constantine, the church attained a condition of external tranquility and worldly prosperity, the coming of Christ, with many, lost its phase of nearness, and the doctrines associated with it, were, by the Platonists, who entered the church, "first treated as a profound allegory, then as a doubtful and useless opinion, and were at length rejected as absurd and fanatical." Thus the truth was overborne, and the way prepared for the Platonic philosophy to corrupt the Christian faith. The Platonic philosophers became Christian doctors. "Origen was the head of this speculative tribe. This great man, enchanted by the charms of the Platonic philosophy, set it up as the test of all religion, and imagined that the reasons of each doctrine were to be found in that favorite philosophy, and their nature and extent to be determined by it. Having entertained a notion that it was extremely difficult, if not impossible, to defend everything contained in the sacred writings from the cavils of heretics and infidels so long as they were explained literally, according to the real import of the terms, he had recourse to the fecundity of a lively imagination, and maintained that they were to be interpreted in the same allegorical manner in which the Platonists explained the history of the gods. In consequence of this pernicious rule of interpretation he alleged that the words of Scripture were, in many places, absolutely void of sense; and that though in others there were, indeed, certain notions conveyed under the outward terms, according to their literal force and import, yet it was not in these that the true meanings of the sacred writers were to be sought, but in a mysterious and hidden sense arising from the nature of the things themselves." Mosheim Ec. His. pub. by John J. Harrod, Balt. 1833, pp. 65, 66. I will not follow further this description, though much more is said of his "chimerical method of explaining the Scriptures," by which he "opened a secure retreat for all sorts of errors that a wild and irregular imagination could bring forth." He had a host of followers in the third and succeeding centuries; "nor could the few who explained the sacred writings with judgment and true spirit of criticism, oppose, with success, the torrent of allegory that was overflowing the church." In this, scholastic theology had its origin; of which Usher says, "The church has been more or less involved in this pestilential fog from the days of Origen until now, and we fear that for the most part will continue in it until Christ comes."

Any one, not "wilfully ignorant," can easily perceive that these learned doctors of the Platonic school, answer to the unlearned and unstabled of whom Peter speaks; and that their manner of explaining Scripture is to wrest it from its obvious and grammatical import, and force upon it a meaning to suit themselves, so that they substantiate the word of God with their own fancies. Renouncing the faith of the apostles and the first Christians in relation to the personal coming of Christ, and the dominancy of grace in the hearts and lives of Christians, his spiritual reign, which becoming general, would constitute the millennium. And some maintained that the millennium had already come by the overthrow of paganism and the political ascendancy of Christianity under Constantine. And by this dogma the true faith was generally overborne. This dogma, also, with some variation relating to the millennium, is still prevalent. The millennium being now expected to follow the conversion of the world by missionary and other appliances of the gospel.

But inasmuch as this spiritualizing system could not do away with the doctrine of the personal coming of Christ altogether, they wrested it from its aspect of nearness, and arbitrarily placed it at the remotest possible period, to which they also assign a general judgment of mankind, and an utter conflagration of the universe. And they wrest the new heavens and the new earth from its aspect as the restitution of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began; and assign them the character of an entirely new creation after the utter destruction of the present.

Now Peter aims to fortify believers not only against the scoffers at Scripture, but, also, against the wresters of Scripture. He says, "Ye, therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." These wresters or false teachers were not innocent men. Peter calls them wicked. Errors in doctrine lead to errors in practice. But generally a corrupt and worldly mind is a hotbed in which the seeds of error vegetate, and grow up into "damnable heresies." (See description of false teachers, ch. 2.) The danger from the corruption of truth was greater than from the denial of truth. Many could withstand the taunt of the scoffer, who would be led away with the error of the sophist. The caution of the apostle was greatly needed; "seeing ye know these things before, beware;" but the caution was at last disregarded. The sophists carried the day; and through the dark ages which followed, scarce a vestige can be traced of the faith in the second coming of Christ, and the restitution of all things at his appearing. Still, the danger is not yet past, though we have the Scriptures as our only rule of faith and practice; for there are scoffers now, as well as formerly, reiterating the taunt, "Where is the promise of his coming?" and there are sophists still who wrest the Scriptures from their obvious and grammatical import. The caution is needed. Let us give heed to it, and so keep our hearts and minds in the love of God, and in patient waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Then shall we "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever. Amen."—J. G. Wilson, in Methodist Recorder.

Ignorance is not so bad as error; the former is a blank sheet on which we may write; but the latter is a scribbled one from which we must first erase. Ignorance is content to stand still; but although error moves, it goes in the wrong direction.

The Twofold "Come!"

"And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." (Rev. 22: 17.)

[We have pleasure in publishing the following from a hearer's notes of a sermon preached upwards of thirty years ago by the eminent evangelist of the Highlands, the Rev. Dr. Macdonald of Ferintosh. The pulpit gifts of this remarkable man, who was honored in his day to do a great work, were somewhat similar to those of Whitfield. He was an accurate theologian, and the basis of his discourses was almost always laid in an exposition of his text and in a statement of Bible doctrine, which he then enforced with woundrously varied power of application and fervor of appeal, to his hearers' hearts and consciences. He preached with ease both in Gælic and in English, but most eloqently and affectionately in the former. Like Whitfield's, his sermons needed to be heard. As they appear in print, men may wonder wherein lay the secret of their power. Their great power, however, is an historical fact; and the following notes will convey an idea at least of their Scriptural character and judiciousness.]

On a cursory reading of this passage one would be apt to suppose that it is one of the many invitations of the gospel to sinners to come to Christ, and that the whole verse is intended to convey the same idea under so many different figures; but on examining it more closely you will clearly see that two distinct ideas run through the verse.

"The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come." Some commentators are of opinion that even these clauses are invitations to sinners; but I rather think from the context, and from the connec- of this verse, that they are expressions of longing for the second coming of Christ. In the sixth verse it is said, "The Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the saying of the prophecy of this book." In the twelfth verse: "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." In the twentieth: "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly." What follows is certainly the language of the Church: "Amen, even so come, Lord Jesus." And in the passage before us, "I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. And the Spirit and the bride say, Come." "The Spirit"—the Holy Ghost, and "the bride"—the Lamb's wife, unite in desiring the coming of Christ. "And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come." The style is now changed; the "say" is dropped; this is evidently not addressed to Christ—"And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

It is proposed, by the help of divine grace, to treat of these clauses separately in order.

"The Spirit and the bride say, Come." I shall not now speak of this desire for Christ's coming as proceeding from the Holy Ghost as God—but as he dwells in the church, as he applies to her the redemption of Christ, as he sanctifies and purifies her, and as he is the author of all her holy desires. It is thus, I apprehend, that the Spirit is here said to desire the coming of Christ. "The bride says, Come," Christ is the head of the church, and she longs for the coming of her Lord. It is her desire that Christ should appear to judge the world in righteousness. Not that she desires to hasten the coming of the Lord before the appointed time; but she knows that he shall certainly come, and by the Spirit that dwells in her she expresses her desire that he should come. I do not know that the church apart from the Spirit can long for the coming of Christ; but the Spirit and the bride unite in saying, Come. Do you desire the coming of Christ? Are you in a situation to desire it? Have you come to Christ as the way, the truth, and the life? And has he in consequence been made of God unto you wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption? It is only in proportion as this is the case that you can long for Christ's second coming.

Why does the church long for the second coming of Christ? I shall mention only three reasons. (1) Because it will bring to her a great accession of happiness and glory. She shall then be made completely happy; she shall be freed from every distress; she shall be delivered from sin, which was her greatest burden whilst here,—from temptation,—from persecution,—from affliction of every kind. "God himself shall wipe away all tears from her eyes;" and if it is true—and it is true, for God has said it—that "at his right hand there is fulness of joy, and pleasures for evermore," she shall then be perfectly happy, for she shall be "forever with the Lord." She shall also receive a great accession of glory, for "when Christ shall appear, then shall she also appear with him in glory;" she "shall be like him, for she shall see him as he is;" her body shall be made "like unto his glorious body;" she "shall be presented before God without spot or wrinkle or any such thing," and she "shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

(2) She longs for the coming of Christ that he may remove certain seeming impossibles and impracticables that seem to stand in the way of the manifestation of God's justice. There are several seeming contradictions in the dispensations of Providence. The wicked often flourishes like a green bay-tree, and from his prosperous circumstances conclude that he is a peculiar favorite of heaven, and that the righteous are objects of its displeasure. Joseph languishes in a prison, while wicked Pharaoh sways the sceptre of Egypt. Daniel is cast into a den of lions, while Darius lodges in a palace. And why is it so? "Because God hath appointed a day in which he shall judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained;" and the church desires the coming of that day when all shall stand before the judgment-seat of Christ, that he may render to every man according to his works.

(3) The church longs for the coming of Christ that he may receive an accession of glory and honor. Of course we here speak of his manifested glory; his essential glory is beyond the comprehension of any created being, and is incapable of increase. But Christ "shall appear in glory with all his holy angels." His glory shall appear so as to convince deists, atheists, and all of his proper divinity. He shall convince all his enemies of his infinite power, and of the infinite measure of grace, condescension, and love, that is laid up in him; and of the madness of having rejected him.

How does the Church express this desire? It is the language of her faith; she believes the promise that Christ shall certainly come, and therefore she prays for its accomplishment. It is the language of her desire. She desires that Christ should appear in glory to destroy his enemies, and gather his people to himself, that where he is, there they may be also. It is the language of her patience and expectation. She patiently waits, looking and longing for the coming of the Lord.

And let him that heareth say, Come." Every one that hears the gospel is called on to say, Come. Every one that hears; there is no exception. I call on you here present—not as an assembly or as a congregation, but as individuals. It is a command of God, and you cannot disobey without trampling on the authority of God. But let me beseech you to remember that you must first be placed in a moral condition to wish for it. You must accept of Christ as he is freely offered in the gospel, and devote yourself to him, soul, body, and spirit, to be his forever. This is what I apprehend is implied in the sacred espousals of Christ and the church.

But to go on with the second clause of the verse: "And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Many persons explain this passage as an invitation to sinners to come to Christ. I think, however—but I say it with diffidence—that it is rather addressed to those who have hungered and thirsted after righteousness, and who have already willed to come to Christ. Let him that is athirst, him that is willing, him that has a relish for the water of life, come and drink eternally of the pure rivers of these pleasures without money and without price. And none shall be found willing but they who have been made willing in a day of power. But though the former explanation of this passage is cast out, yet throughout the Scriptures there are so many invitations to sinners expressed in similar language, that we are justified in using this one in the same way. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money: come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." And though in its primary meaning it may be addressed to the church, yet it may also include an invitation to sinners; and as we know that none shall ever thirst after righteousness but those who have first accepted the offers of the gospel—that none shall will to take the water of life but these, who have been made willing—we cannot separate one invitation from the other.

"Let him," then, "that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Whosoever thirsts. Every one thirsts after something. All thirst after happiness. Some thirst after riches; some after honors and distinctions; some thirst after criminal pleasures; some feel the thirst of an awakened conscience earnestly seeking relief—for "a wounded spirit who can bear?"—some thirst after righteousness. So you see there are different kinds of thirst; but whatever your thirst is—though it be thirst after riches—after the honors and pleasures of this world—come to Christ and in him you shall be satisfied. If you have the thirst of a wounded conscience, come to him. Oh! are there any such here whose inquiry is, "what shall we do to be saved?" Come without money and without price, remembering that it is not doubts, nor fears, nor repentance that can procure our acceptance; and, "whosoever thus cometh to him he will in no wise cast out."

Do not say, as if it were an excuse, that you are not willing. God will never force you to take the water of life; he will not constrain you to drink against your will; he deals with you as with a rational creature; If you do not come willingly you will never come. But do you still excuse yourself by saying, "I am not willing to come." O, then consider that your unwillingness is your guilt! Say, "I am guilty in that I am not willing;" and if you thus consider your guilt, I am persuaded that it will lead to exercises that will be profitable. But remember that God is able to make you willing. Look up then to him, that he may make you willing in a day of power.

All are invited to come to Christ—rich and poor, young and old; there is here no distinction. The invitation is addressed to all. It is addressed to aged,—to you, though you have all your life thirsted after the pleasures of this world—though you have rejec[illegible] this invitation, you are now invited to come—now, at the eleventh hour, whilst you are still within the limits of the place of hope. O, reject not this invitation! the sands of life are fast running out! the shadows of the evening are coming on apace! you stand on the brink of the eternal world! O, eternity is too long to spend in a place of torment! O, then, come now to Christ and he will receive you to his love, to his favor, and to his arms!

This invitation is addressed to the young. You thirst after youthful honors and distinctions,—you thirst after hopes that will never be realized. O come to Christ and you shall have all your desires satisfied. Come, and take the waters of life, and they shall be in you a well of water springing up to everlasting life. And remember that death may overtake you. The young die as well as the old; Jordan overflows its banks in summer as well as in winter. O come now to Christ and be assured that they who seek him early shall find him!

Whosoever will, let him come. Fear not to exhaust the river of the water of life. It still flows as freely as ever and shall continue to flow till the last sinner be saved.

And may the people of God have their loins girt and their lamps burning —looking and longing for the coming of their Lord!—British Messenger.

"Perilous Times."

Discourse by Eld. O. R. Fassett at the Advent Conventicle—The "Good Time Coming" Song Repudiated—The Judgment of the Great Day at Hand—The "Times" to Grow Worse and Worse—Sound Doctrine not to be Endured by Popular Preachers or Audiences—A Bold Challenge of the Prevailing Orthodox Theology.

Under how many administrations the little, old-fashioned, wood-box style chapel on Mission street, near Fifth, has passed, we would not undertake to say or speculate; certainly six or seven different denominations have occupied the edifice and beat up the double echoes which every spoken word begets within its four very straight walls. Within the last year it came into the tenancy of a denomination known as the Second Adventists, among whom Eld. Miles Grant is a leader in camp-meeting fervor and magnetism, and Eld. O. R. Fassett, a "big gun" in dogmatic theology. While our brethren of the various local corps were going after strange and renowned gods in the firmament of preachers, we determined to visit this assembly of the

SECOND ADVENT SAINTS,

And make a note of the proceedings. Accordingly, at quarter to eleven last Sunday morning we stumbled up the steps of the sanctuary (there is no other word which expresses the manner in which all persons, unaccustomed to the abrupt entrance by short shelves makes his entrance), and sided along the narrow vestibule to an inner door. When we entered the chapel there were about twenty persons present, engaged in a prayer or "conference" meeting. The chapel is furnished with pine board seats, with backs, uncushioned, and painted in the simplest mourning color. By the time the services proper commenced there were perhaps a hundred persons assembled, most of whom give evidence of affiliation with the society.

THE PREACHER

Is a short, rather stoutish built man, inclined to gray hairs, apparently about fifty years of age. He has a solemn, reverent, and yet very pleasing countenance; and his voice, in its usual tones, is peculiarly soft and persuasive. He looks like a thoroughly sincere and earnest man, and the pulpit language and manner confirmed the first impression.

After the usual preliminary exercises, in which the

SOON COMING OF CHRIST

To this earth was recognized as a tenet of faith and hope, the Elder (O. R. Fassett) named his text from a small, convenient Bible—which he laid on top of a huge, cumburous desk volume which some unwise generosity has probably heaped upon the damask of this chapel, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." (2 Tim. 3:1.) And the Elder read on to the sixth verse. He said the common and siren song was, "good times coming." Good men sang that song, and almost all men dwelt in the sentiment of the song. What said the word? The theology of a millennium before the judgment was

THE POPULAR THEOLOGY.

Not so taught the word. And the Elder quoted at length to sustain his denial and assertion, neither the Scriptures, nor the Apostolic fathers, nor the great Reformers taught such a doctrine as the popular divines proclaimed. (In a parenthetical tone and manner the Elder, about this point, suggested that popular Divinity must be very sick; there were so many Doctors in it.) The prophecies showed that we were in the "Last Days, and the characteristics of the time" emphasized the word of prophecy—"the sure word of prophecy," to which we are to take heed as to a light in a dark place.

THE TIME HAD COME

When men "will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they keep to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned into fables." On this characteristic the burden of the discourse was said. The unsound doctrine was specially declared to be the assertion that men are by nature immortal, that an immaterial part of man, which is claimed to be the real man, is conscious when the body is dead; and that man hereafter, as an immaterial entity, eternally exists beyond the bounds of time and space. The Elder

LIFTED UP HIS VOICE

In these paragraphs and "went for the heathen" doctrines of "immortal-soulism;" quoting the Scripture with great fluency, and pointing it with comments that were undeniably pungent. He said that popular divines interpreted Scripture not by Scripture, but by Plato; they were educated in the dead languages by the constant study of the Grecian and Roman heathen authors. And they were "heaped"—a heap of them (an Eastern expression)—tickling the fancies of

AUDIENCES COMPOSED OF BACKSLIDERS,

Who had "itching ears," for "fables." The sound doctrine of the mortality of man gave place to the first lie of the devil to our first parents: "Thou shalt not surely die." The Elder then dwelt upon the characteristics named in vv. 2–5 of the chapter from which the text was taken: "For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemous, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof." On all these

SUBDIVISIONS OF SIN,

He dwelt with illustrations; sometimes eloquently, always with force of instance and exhortation. He concluded with urging his hearers to seek and hold fast "sound doctrine;" the necessity for a risen Savior, and a resurrection of the body at his second coming; the need of thorough repentance and a godly life to escape utter extermination of being when Christ comes in the clouds of heaven to renew the earth—an event which the Elder again and again affirmed could not be far distant.—San Francisco Post, Aug. 10.

It is Your Loss.

The father of a family had occasion to look over some workmen who were building a house for him. After the work was far advanced, he found one of the men lighting his pipe among the dry, light, inflammable shavings which were strewn about in all directions. He indignantly reproved him, saying, "If my house is burned down by these sparks, the blame will rest on you." Pausing and thinking over what he had said, he added, with a sigh, "The blame will be yours, but the loss will be mine, for you cannot repay." The thought sank into the proprietor's heart; he saw the risk was too great; he went away and insured the house.

You may have cause to blame Christians. But if you stumble over their coldness—stumble so as to fall—what comfort will it afford you that you could blame the church for its lukewarmness? To blame them, even when they are blameworthy, will not save you when you are lost.

Let it be confessed there is not such ardent faith in the church as to awaken a slumberer—the church deserves blame, but the loss is yours. Your soul's life is too much exposed. Hide it in a place of safety; hide it "with Christ in God."—Sel.

INSINCERITY.—We hear much of martyrs and confessors—of those who were slain by the sword or consumed in the fire; but we know little of that still larger number who, by the mere threat of persecution, have been driven into an outward abandonment of their real opinions, and who, thus forced into an apostasy the heart abhors, have passed the remainder of their lives in the practice of a constant and humiliating hypocrisy. It is this which is the real curse of religious persecution. —Buckle.

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " The Boston Globe thinks 'the wars of the future' 'will excel in extent, misery and atrocity, those of the past, for they will be social wars.'

" " " The Oxford edition of Gibbon contains 3,860 pages, which chronicle an average of nine thousand deaths by violence per page —more than 30,000,000 in all.

" " " There are now in the jail in the District of Columbia nine persons charged with murder, eight of whom have been imprisoned within the past two months. Five of the murders were by the pistol and two by the knife, the remaining case being that of a colored woman, who, knife in hand, chased a man about a steamboat, swearing she would kill him. Thus frightened he jumped among the machinery, where he was killed.

ABROAD.

" " " Spain, the Boston Globe thinks, is going 'distracted.' Its people are all by the ears. There are no less than thirteen political parties, striving for the mastery.

" " " The victims of the Persian famine in Teheran alone were 100,000 men, women and children; and it is thought not less than three millions perished in all, throughout the country.

" " " Metz is dying of inanition. The French are moving away; the Germans decline to come in to fill their places. A Holland journal says, "The reason for this is the universal opinion that in the next inevitable war with France, Metz will have to stand a siege."

" " " Egypt is lighting afresh the flames of war, by an attack upon Abyssinia. Conquest is evidently the Pasha's intention. Why should he not enlarge his borders at the expense of his neighbors as well as England, or Germany or Russia?

" " " The Pope is quarreling with his right arm—that is Cardinal Antonelli. The latter insists the Pope is doomed unless a different policy toward Italy is adopted. One opinion is that the Papacy is doomed any way, and even the great Cardinal cannot save it.

" " " We have been hearing of the progress made by Japan in civilization. Just now she is testifying her relationship to the great family of nations by picking a quarrel with one of her neighbors. War with the Coreans, and the Chinese as allies of Corea, is threatened. Civilized foreigners feel very anxious to prevent the threatened hostilities, lest they should interfere with their trade! Most laudable motive. A bit ago all the world was at peace. Is a new war era upon us?

" " " The meeting of the emperors of Germany, Austria and Russia last week excites wide-spread interest, and many are the speculations as to the purposes of these rulers. One thing we may be sure of; they intend to strengthen themselves, and at the same time, if possible, in some way outwit each other. Let them plot and counterplot. Their time is short at the longest. "A king shall yet rule in righteousness" on this fair globe, and his dominion shall be "under the whole heaven."

" " " The late French war is esteemed one of the wonders of the age. Twelve times the amount asked for was offered. Germany alone offered to loan her late enemy more than she wished to borrow. It is a financial miracle, and may well engage the attention of the Emperors. It shows them that France is only a defeated, not a crushed nation. With an able ruler in place of the flabby Bonaparte the late war might have resulted quite differently from what it did. Undoubtedly the French do not intend to pay the indemnity of the next conflict.

" " " The accounts by mail of the Belfast (Ireland) riots exceed in horror the hints afforded by cable. Another crime in the name of religion; for it appears the riot was directly the fruit of the feelings fostered by the Orange society, a professedly Protestant institution. Such associations can be spared. When Protestantism assails Popery with Papistical weapons, it partakes of the same spirit of anti-christ, and is no improvement upon the error it seeks to overthrow. The spectacle of a city in a state of siege, with pillaged houses, streets barricaded, hospitals overflowing with wounded men, with here and there the more ghastly victims of lawlessness, all in the name of religion, is indeed a terrible picture for the nineteenth century. Would we might reasonably hope the scenes of New York in '63, Paris and Belfast in '72 would not be repeated, even in our own day. We fear they may be.

Communications.

Garbling.

Scripture quotations are often mangled. Words and ideas, are left out, [illegible] others are put in, notwithstanding the solemn caution of both Testaments. ([illegible]. 30: 6; Rev. 22: 18)

[illegible]iel's 'spirit grieved in its sheath' [illegible]een often referred to of late. [illegible]e is no such passage. Daniel (7: [illegible] says, "I, Daniel, was grieved in [illegible] spirit, in the midst of my body, [or sheath.]" If "in" here means inside of, we have Daniel inside of his spirit, and his spirit inside of the center of his body! Truly, they say 'the Lord saith, and the Lord hath not sent them.' See Ezek. 13: 6, 7, 22.

2 Thes, 1: 9, referring to the destiny of the wicked, is repeated thus: "Who shall be banished from the presence of the Lord," instead of "be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord;" and Mat. 25: 40 is given, "These shall go away into everlasting banishment," instead of "everlasting punishment." This banishment from the presence of the Lord must be "beyond the bounds of time and space," and out of existence, into annihilation; some see this, and say "from the favorable presence."

Instances might be multiplied to show the need of a revision of what we may call the popular version of the Scriptures. A. ARMOUR.

Truth, Stated Indirectly.

The United Presbyterians sing only the Psalms in the worship of God. As they cannot sing the inspired Hebrew, nor yet the prose version, they have been singing a metre version, made by Rous, of Cromwell's time. That being now considered somewhat uncouth, a new metre version has been prepared, and is recommended by their General Assembly. Some in the church have objected to the new version, and the Rev. J. F. Hutchinson replies in the Christian Instructor, of a late date. In the course of his article he writes thus:

"Third Psalm, S. M., verse 1, 'How many say of me,' instead of 'many say of my soul.' They [the objectors] say 'leaving out as of no moment the words 'my soul.' [After referring to the difficulties of metre, he says] The next best thing was to take a phrase conveying the same meaning. The Hebrew for soul is nephesh rendered life Gen. 9: 4; 35: 18; Lev. 17: 11, and many other places. It was David's life the foes were after; that is, David himself. And Shemei cursed, and Ahithophel gave counsel on the supposition that 'the Lord had taken the kingdom from him'—had forsaken him, and David, or his life, would fall an easy prey into their hands. Would not the singer get the same idea in the verse [from "me,"] that the reader would in the prose? [from my soul; or in the Hebrew from nephesh.] Besides, the English construction would require it, instead of him, in the last line, if soul were retained."

The above requires no comment. The Rev. Br. seems to be very clear on the meaning of soul; notice his references, Gen. 9: 4, "Flesh with the soul thereof shall ye not eat." Lev. 17: 11, "The soul of the flesh is in the blood." Gen. 35: 18, does not, however, give life as the rendering of nephesh, but it ought to: "As her life was in departing, for she died,"—not her life or soul, which, we are told, requires it as its pronoun, but she, Rachel, died, when her life departed. A. A.

I would not give much for your religion unless it can be seen. Lamps do not talk, but they do shine. A lighthouse sounds no drum, it beats no gong, and yet far over the waters its friendly spark is seen by the mariner. So let your actions shine out your religion. Let the main sermon of your life be illustrated by your conduct, and it shall not fail to be illustrious.

Literal Fire.

"I do not teach that the wicked in the intermediate state are enduring literal fire. I distinctly warned my readers against this fallacy"...."Now Peter does say that God cast down the angels who sinned into Tartarus," and that the inhabitance of Sodom are with them. Dare he deny this?"—C. B. in Ninth Letter.

Where in Peter is the account of Sodomites being in Tartarus? Peter does not say they went any where but "into ashes." Now if ashes is Tartarus, then they are there, otherwise the above assertion is not true.

Oh! you materialists are always seeing through material glasses. That was their bodies. Their spirits were what went into Tartarus.'

Ah! indeed! Do your glasses magnify that much, that you can see spirit in this case? If so, they beat ours sure. But then we are not permitted to use any other glasses than those that Peter has furnished us. This, undoubtedly, accounts for the reason why we do not see anything but 'ashes.' But Jude's account would seemingly favor the above views more than Peter's. He says they "are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." An example is an exhibition before hand as a specimen of what is to follow. Well, was this example a specimen of literal fire. Yes, for it turned them "into ashes." Was it "eternal fire?" Yes, for it came down out of heaven from God who inhabiteth eternity. But is it not burning yet? No, for the spot where it wrought its "vengeance" is now the bed of the Dead Sea. Jude like Peter, discovers to us material fire, operating on material men in setting forth a specimen or example of what God will do to all others who shall live ungodly.

Then inasmuch as Peter nor Jude speak of other fire than that which turns them "into ashes," the "fallacy" is in teaching an intermediate state punishment, and not whether it is by literal fire or figurative. In that case you have to supply immaterial spirits an immaterial Tartarus to confine them in, immaterial fire to burn them, and of course immaterial suffering, to exercise them. But then it would not be a long job, seeing they are all immaterial; for nothing can be supplied from nothing very readily.

But as God's Bible does not deal with such non-entities, neither should we. O. D. GIBSON.

Do You Read Your Bible?

"The Bible is a much neglected book. Not, of course, that it is not read, by the clergy especially, with diligence. What is asserted is, that the labor generally expended upon it bears no manner of proportion to its importance. How few are able even to decipher the language in which the Old Testament is written! How few take pains to retain their familiarity (if ever they were familiar) with the original idiom of the New!"

These opening words of a treatise on the Pastoral Office, intended primarily for students, or for "ministers of the word," may also bear a meaning for all members of a Protestant Church? The one apology that a Protestant has for his existence, is the Bible. Why do not Protestants read their Bible more, and know it better than they do? Is it because a superficial acquaintance with the English version is sufficient? How then does it happen that so many errors and fallacies are spreading everywhere, not one of which has the slightest ground to stand on in the face of the Word of God? What Bunyan quaintly said of the Christian's one offensive weapon, is true still. "Let me see thy sword;" and when he had looked thereon awhile, he said, "Ha! it is a right Jerusalem blade. Let a man have one of these blades, with a hand to wield it, and skill to use it, and he may venture upon an angel with it. He need not fear its holding, if he can but tell how to lay on. Its edge will never blunt. It will cut flesh, and bones, and soul, and spirit, and all."

Why do we neglect to practise the use of the only weapon that we have? Is it because we think the "edge has blunted," not seriously, but just a little here and there? Have the truth of Bible history, the scientific accuracy of the Author, the inspiration of the Scripture itself (and not of the scribes merely) been a little shaken after all? Not in the very least. Even the numbers of the Old Testament, which so many have been weak enough to surrender, are not yet convicted of a single mistake. We are glad to see that one man of science has been found to give an open challenge to that most unfounded but oft-repeated assertion, that the numbers of the Old Testament were represented in ancient Hebrew MSS. by alphabetic signs, and have thus become corrupt. Has anyone ever yet seen a Hebrew MS. containing these alphabetic signs for numbers? In all Hebrew Bibles now in use, the numbers are given in words at full length. There is no proof that they were ever written in any other way. Not one jot or tittle of the book has been displaced hitherto. To the comments of believers and of unbelievers, it makes one reply—it abides. It outlives the generations of its enimies. They die and their thoughts perish. The words of the book remain. The edge of the sword is not even chipped. Why do we not read the Bible more?

Is it because the age is unscientific; because discovery and inquiry have ceased to interest mankind? There never was so much discovery, or so much inquiry, before. The stores of nature are being ransacked; the secrets of the earth, and air, and sea are being rapidly disclosed. Will close comparison and induction teach us nothing of the words of Holy Scripture that we do not already know? If the details of the Bible are the work of the Author of Nature, there is so much to be learned from his words as from his works. Why is this kind of inductive study so disregarded? And why are those who have the most important business of life entrusted to them so often suffered to know less about their business than any other business men in this busy age? How is it that in so many country places a clergyman may close his Greek Testament altogether, know absolutely nothing of his Hebrew Bible, buy his sermons, and yet no remark is made? If the Church is disestablished will not these men be the first to suffer? And what will become of the congregation to whom they minister? And yet, who can complain?

But let us look to ourselves. Some of our readers may be disposed to ask, "What is the meaning of this unusual severity upon our ignorance? We do read our Bibles, and know them fairly well." Be it so. A thorough knowledge of the Bible is so uncommon, that the man who possesses it will certainly be found out before long. The thing is very easily tested; and, as we said before, we do not question the diligence of many persons in reading the Bible in a certain sort of way. But too often, when it is read, there is no real study. No method is observed in reading. Many have no idea that there is any particular method in the book. It is treated as a collection of texts and stories, the only arrangement or order being confined to the several chapters, and verses, and books. The common habit of proving doctrines by isolated texts, flung together as they occur to memory, is an illustration of this. The Old Testament and the New Testament are treated as distinct things, on different platforms. Few have any notion that the two are one organic whole, that every word of the Old Testament has the same sort of authority for a Christian as the New. We know of one young men's Bible-class in the country where there is an objection to reading the Old Testament at all. But if the details of the Bible are the work of God, there must be as much method and order in them as in Nature. The analysis may be as minute, and the discoveries as great in one case as in the other. The whole must be pervaded by beautiful, subtle, interesting principles, and laws. How few persons have any such notion of the Bible! By many it is treated as only a good deal better than very good religious book. Its humanity is so palpable, that its Divinity not percieved. Men fail to see, that if it is of God in any special sense, it must bear the same character as the rest of his works. Here, also, as in Nature, every detail must be subject to law, and full of God. The Bible differs from all other books, not in degree only, but in kind. For this reason the manner of Bible study must be unique, not as now, in carelessness, but in careful and curious observation. It is not creditable to us that in Bible discovery we are so far behind. New subjects are continually introduced into our schools and colleges, where even the English Bible is scarcely read. The original language of the greater part of it is about as well known in general as that of the Koran. If the Bible is what Protestants once took it for, is it reasonable to neglect it as we do.

But take the simple question of reading. Reader, a newspaper is before you. Either you have leisure to read it, or else you are wasting your time. We adopt the more charitable view. You have time to read this paper. What portion of your Bible have you read to-day, in any language? Have you spent half-an-hour upon either the Old or the New Testament? If you have, you probably know why this article was written. Or, can you find time for this newspaper, but none for the Word of God.

Is it that we do not love the Bible? If we knew it better, we should love it more. It is the only book on earth which is really satisfactory. Heart and mind and soul and strength, may here expand to the full. The result of other books and other studies, its weariness, without any absolute end. The more opinions we meet with, the less do we feel that we certainly know. Here we find—not opinions, but reality, and sympathy, and life. "I hate thoughts," said the Psalmist (alluding to those manifold opinions, between which there may be halting), "I hate thoughts but thy Law do I love." —C. H. Waller in Rock.

The Time of Christ's Second Coming.

[Second Article.]

Is there anything in the teachings of Christ, which would lead to the conclusion that the church will be on the lookout without the knowledge of definite time, when he shall be revealed?

Yes, that fact is taught in the parable we are considering.

"While the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept; and at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom: go ye out to meet him." The very language itself forbids the idea of the church (or virgins) making the cry; for in the cry is revealed a fact, with which they were not before conversant, and that fact was the time but so near at hand, that no improvement can be made on the part of the unprepared. Yes. Then, in the fulfillment, whoever is not ready "when once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door," will be left out to perish. (Lk. 13: 25.) What is the meaning of the "shutting to the door, in the passage quoted? It must have reference to the position the Savior occupies as Interceptor and Mediator; and that he is to vacate that position at some time, in which the destiny of man will be sealed, and no improvement will be made thereafter. In other words, it is after the invitation to the wedding has been duly given, and the time of its celebration arrived, those who are not ready for the marriage are too late to get ready. May we all see to it that we are fully qualified to enter the marriage before it is forever too late.

[illegible] shall prevent his coming upon [illegible] knowing the time? No, [illegible]! How will watching destr[illegible] the effect of a thief's work? You first know that he exists. (2) You know he intends to come upon you. (3) You are advised of his approach by signs given. (4) You are on the watch and his plans are as perfectly thwarted by such a position as they could be, had you known in addition to the rest, just when he was coming. A readiness for his coming, with watchfulness, is the plan, and all is as secure without knowledge of the time as it possibly could be with it.

The prophecies of Daniel are productive of light and knowledge relative to the great event of the Lord's coming. The grand outlines of the world's history are beautifully delineated, and the rise and fall of kingdoms are in their characters, and chronological order plainly set forth. The grand burden of those prophecies was to give an impregnable defense to the church against any who should deny the inspiration of the Scriptures; also to guard against the already developed errors of spiritualizing the words of God, so as to claim the kingdom of God as established spiritually, before the time marked out by God should have arrived.

A third object, and by no means an insignificant one, was to place in the hands of the church a knowledge of their proximity to the end of the world, or the coming judgment.

Certain divisions of the fourth, or Roman kingdom, were plainly pointed out, which should be succeeded by a persecuting power which should bring a fearful tri[illegible]ation upon the church of God, or [illegible] saints of the most High." Jesus gra[illegible] that fact, and places it in the foreground of his prophecy on the signs of his coming, in Mat. 24, and declares that immediately succeeding that tribulation should follow the darkness of the sun and moon, and falling of the stars &c., and he seals his prophecy with a simple illustration, drawn from the fig tree putting forth leaves on the approach of summer, and assures us that likewise these signs are to evidence his coming at hand, and yet, withal, he leaves his church on the watchtower, looking for the event, from the passing of the signs, not knowing the time when it should burst forth.

A word relative to Bible chronology. Many have been the pencil marks of faithful men in the past, trying to decipher the problem of our world's chronology; and although each has pursued the task with vigor and interest, very varied have been the results produced. Why this seeming difficulty, if the matter is all of God, and so very easy of understanding? With the round numbers of recent chronological productions before us we seem to see numerous chances for slight mistakes, which, when put together, could very easily make a very different number than 6,000 years from creation to A. D. 1873. For instance, Adam lived 130 years and begat a son, and called his name Seth. Seth lived 105 years and begat Enos, and so on through a long catalogue. This same manner of recording characterizes Gen. 5 and 11.

Now does any one conclude that Adam was just 130 years old to a day, when he begat Seth, and that on his birthday Seth was born? and that this principle was rigidly carried out in the case of Seth begetting Enos, and so on through the whole catalogue of names? But, says the objector to this criticism, "If some of them lack a few months, others will overrun, as God was quite able to arrange it so that the sum total would be right."

No one will doubt God's ability to arrange his own matters to perfection; but this may be a matter that God had nothing to do with directly; and if he had taken the matter in hand I do not think he would have left any such loose ends as the idea that an overrunning in the age of one man above the age claimed for him, would be compensated by another man not being so old as he claimed him to be: thus causing the necessity of two errors to form the foundation of one truth, if it be a truth.

I grant the idea that a man might be said to be 130 years old, if he was 130 years and six months old, but it would be positively false to call a man 130 years old that was only 129 years and six months old.

A chronological argument that is made a corner stone in a definite time message, should have a more reliable basis than the above facts disclose, but persons who are ever on the poise of hope and fear, are as liable to grasp one straw as another.

Another short turn in chronological reckoning, may be seen in the era of Abraham's journey into Canaan. Notwithstanding the obscurity of this link in the chronological chain, as concerns the evidence in the Old Testament, we are invited to swallow the unwarranted conclusion that a casual remark from Stephen (Acts 7: 4) viz. "when his father was dead he removed him into this land wherein ye now dwell," (meaning the land of Canaan) could have no other meaning than that immediately upon the death of his father he started out. Had he have gone out in one or five years after the death of his father, the words of Stephen would have been as really true, as to conclude he went in one week after. Consider, that the burden of Stephen's remarks relative to Abraham were by no means the chronology of the world or even to establish the time when Abraham came out, but to convince his hearers that the covenant made to Abraham was to be fulfilled in his seed and that seed was the Just One whom they had slain. (v. 52.)

No man will fail to see the truth of these remarks that will take the trouble to read the whole of this chapter.

The claim "that this is God's chronology, and therefore is right," has but a shadow for its foundation. What is Bible chronology? It is simply and only the natural observance of events and incidental occurrences, recorded in history, not for the purpose of placing in the hands of after ages an unbroken chain of chronological data, and by no means of a character to require inspiration to adjust. The spirit of inspiration need not necessarily be employed any more in recording the age of Abraham of old, than Abraham Lincoln of modern times. The knowledge of a few facts and dates is the necessary qualifications to write a record of the genealogy of any person, family or tribe, and to call such a work God's chronology, is to give an unwarranted authority for the purpose of gaining in the name of the author what is lacking in facts recorded.

If the above criticisms are valid, there are numerous chances for mistakes in recent chronological productions. That decided accuracy is not attainable in Bible chronology must be apparent to every candid mind. (To be concluded.)

WRITE your name, by kindness, love, and mercy, on the hearts of the people you come in contact with, and you will never be forgotten.

FAITH is the ladder on which the believer is constantly mounting to ascend into the heavenly Canaan, from thence to bring down clusters of delicious grapes, to refresh him in his wilderness journey.

If a bee stings you, will you go to the hive and destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? If you receive a trifling injury, don't be anxious to avenge it; let it drop. It is wisdom to say little respecting the injuries you have received.

Correspondence.

From West St. Paul.

In your issue of Aug. 6 I read with much interest the request to "Pray for the paper." Many a time has a silent prayer gone forth for the success of the paper, and that all interested in its publication might be abundantly blessed and strengthened. But coupled with this petition was another, that the good Lord would open a way for me to pay for it. Oh! how my heart has yearned for the means to help the precious cause. And when still no way opened, but rather darker grew the prospect, then I prayed again that these light afflictions might prove to me a means of grace, purifying and rendering me more fit to meet the Master. THE TIMES is the only paper I have to read. Have lost all relish for secular papers—don't take any stock in politics, which simply means low personalities and very unprofitable teachings. Stock in the "New Jerusalem" is going to pay better. Praise God. I feel to rejoice in the midst of these trials that he gave me something better than the perishing things of this world when he opened my eyes to this truth, and caused me to understand when I say, "Thy Kingdom come!" When I read over in every paper the rich bill of fare you spread out before your readers, and at so cheap a rate, I feel like some hungry urchin who gazes wistfully through the pastry cook's window at the tempting viands, but with an empty pocket. "Good Tidings," "Bible Triumphant," Collins on "Paul's Faith;" "Paul's Desire," by beloved Br. Fassett, &c. Well, I have my Bible Concordance, and with these my time is profitably used in garnering up precious truths. Yet those tracts which contain the wisdom and experience of our ripest scholars are great and needed auxiliaries in building us up in the truth, and enabling us the more readily and ably to exhibit it and defend it against the flood of error that inundates the land.

From Nova Scotia.

The cry of Jesus' soon coming to earth was made among us in the times of Father Miller, but as soon as persecution arose, some fell back, and have since refused to examine this question to know the cause of our mistakes then. For the last twenty years the life and death question has been preached among us. At first scarce any would give it a hearing, but now in most villages and towns quite a number can be called together to hear on this subject and Christ's speedy coming. Many as yet refuse to receive these truths because of their being unpopular. In fact but few comparatively have had a fair opportunity as yet to learn the truth of these things. The cause of Adventism is often sadly misrepresented, both in the press and pulpit. The clergy feel loth to allow that they are preaching fables when they teach that man inherits immortality, and that a thousand years of peace intervenes between this and Christ's coming.

For the last seven years my time has wholly been given for the furtherance of the cause of truth in this Province, and though I have had much to discourage me in my labors, I am indeed thankful that I have been willing to engage in so noble a work, for I now see to my great joy scores who were once bitterly opposed to us and God's word rejoicing in the truth.

We have just finished a series of conference meetings of the Advent body of this Province. Seven ministers were present, and quite a number came from abroad to celebrate this annual feast. A good feeling pervaded in all our meetings. We felt they were a success.

The subject of tract distribution was taken into consideration. Some manifested by their gifts that they were interested in this work. The brethren spoke favorably of Whitmore's Immortality, and thought it should be extensively circulated in this Province, and here I would say, Br. Himes, if you can furnish me with one hundred and fifty copies of this work by the first of September you would oblige me. The one hundred copies I got last fall are all out, doing their work.

NELSON H. REED.

From Edward Orr, Jackson Co. Minn.

A few of us here are contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. I have given away what tracts I had to all who would read them, and I could do so with more. We are few in numbers as yet, but I do trust in the truth that it will prevail, and believe that the day of its final victory is at hand. Already heathen dogmas are trembling to their center. This old doctrine of the Bible lately revived is revolutionizing the religious world. People are thinking, and reading the Bible for themselves, and coming out of the mist of error into the light of the blessed "glad tidings" of life only in Christ, who is "the resurrection and the life." Blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection, on whom the second death hath no power.

From C. Rima, Cresco, Iowa.

We are scattered now, brethren and sisters, all over the land, but I expect we shall soon be gathered in one great and glorious band, where our Life-giver, who brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, will be with us. I am thankful for what is being done in Howard Co. The ice of superstition is broken. Last Sunday a church of thirteen believers was organized at Vernon Springs, to which others will be shortly added.

Br. Wm. Chapman, once a Baptist preacher, and who preached at the Springs four years, gave his farewell discourse to his church early in June, and came out an Adventist, and has joined our Conference. Several of his former members came with him, and others seem to be under conviction.

I have arranged to give my whole time to the ministry of the word, as opportunity may open to proclaim the gospel.

From S. W. Thurber, Sparta, Wis.

I am not lost among the Bluffs or in the rubbish of this world. No, your old friend and brother is still in the narrow way that leads to the kingdom, expecting soon to see the King in his beauty, and the land that is or was once afar off, but now near, even at the door. Oh! what a blessed hope is ours, who live in these last days. The perilous times have come, according to the Scriptures, showing us the end of the world is near. We will bear with them with Christian fortitude, and when the Savior comes we shall be delivered from them all, like Enoch of old be translated without tasting death. Glory to God. It is soul-reviving. Then those loved ones will come with him—John and Edwin, I am sure they will be there. Oh! what a meeting then. The fathers that have wept over the graves of loved ones, and have said, "All these things are against me!" meet in that world of glory (far better than the kingdom of Egypt or the land of Goshen), where the redeemed of the Lord will be forever blest. Yes, I must say glory! and write it, too. I am glad that we are so near home. Dear brother, you and I have got our record nearly made up. I think of your labors of love, and the trials you have gone through, and how God has sustained you. It is wonderful in my mind that you live. But God is able to keep you unto the end.

From Sr. A. E. Rathbun, Broughton, Ill.

I believe with all my mind that the glorious Master stands just at the door, and it behooves us who love his coming, and have the last warning message to a doomed race, to unite as one man, and in solid phalanx meet the great tidal wave of sin, corruption, pride and worldliness which is sweeping over the world with terrible power; and submerging and dragging down to perdition millions in its overwhelming sweep. Oh, if we but had the voice of the thunder to startle and awaken to action the myriads who with strange madness slumber on the brink of fearful ruin! Let us arise, unitedly laying aside these things which divide us, get our whole being aglow with the all prevailing love of God, and girded with the strength of Jehovah, upborne by the arm of Omnipotence, the whole glorious armor of light tightly buckled on, the powerful sword of the Spirit unsheathed and brightly burnished, let us, I repeat, make a mighty effort for the salvation of the perishing, and the spread of Bible truth.

God owns no idlers in his vineyard. If we expect to gain entrance into the glorious golden hereafter, the shadowless, sinless, painless, deathless clime, where immortality clothes all things with the beautiful and joyous vigor of endless life, we must toil for it; bend every energy of our being to the work. The world, the flesh, and the devil we have to contend against. What is most dangerous to us is, that often they are apparent friends, and have robed themselves in garments of light and enticing beauty. If we do not watch unto prayer, the shining habiliments will deceive us; the entrancing music and rare witching beauty lure us down to perdition. Oh! be faithful in watching, fighting and prayer, always obedient to the call of every duty. Your pathway cannot be so rugged as Calvary, your cup not so bitter as its agony.

When each night's shadows fall about me, I feel my work is finished until now. The cause is onward, here. Truth is prevailing in spite of opposition. The band is staunch and true in its living. Four were added not very long since. Others are awaiting baptism. A number have seen the light on that question through my instrumentality. The F. W. Baptists reaped a rich harvest from the work here last winter. The Methodists have also gathered a few. It makes me tremble when I see people turn their backs on the truth. In my weakness I am doing what I can. Congregations are large and very attentive. A general reformation has been wrought in some neighhoods; but much remains to be done. Pray for me.

From Amos Sanford, Columbus, Kan.

Next to the "Editor's Journal," the Correspondence Department of THE TIMES is the most interesting to me. It must be a regular love-feast to the scattered ones who are "waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Allow me to suggest that it would be much better to give the Post Office address of the writers, so that we may have an opportunity of speaking "often one to another" through the mails, without troubling THE TIMES to print it. For instance, I felt like writing a word of cheer and encouragement to "S. F. Rice, a Baptist minister, Macoupin Co., Ill.," whose interesting letter appeared in THE TIMES Aug. 20, but I could not do so, because his Postoffice was not given.

Brethren and sisters, we may be strangers to each other in the flesh, but we are one in spirit, and well acquainted through Christ. Let us write to each other words of comfort, "for our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for our Savior."

Not long since I received a letter from a dear Christian sister, whom I have never seen, in which she said:

"No external circumstances of fame or prosperity can bring happiness, or even a tolerable imitation of that article. It is only that 'peace which floweth like a river' that can make our hearts glad. There is only one hope that cannot die; only one master that is never unreasonable; only one being that never breaks his promise; only one bank that never fails; only one home that death can never break up; only one treasure that knows no corruption; only one crown that will never fade. Let us then strive for the things eternal, and our reward will be sure."

I could not refrain from reading the letter to one of our brethren who came into my office, and as soon as I had finished, he said: "I would like to have her come here and preach." It seemed to do him as much good as it did me. Thus we can see that kind words, which cost us nothing, thrown into the great ocean of life, set the little rippling waves in motion, which for aught we know, may extend from shore to shore.

A part of our Mission tent has arrived, and we are waiting for the remainder from Chicago before starting out in the fall campaign. Quite a lively interest is manifested here in the Advent doctrine. I lose no opportunity of putting in a word for the truth. The question—What is death? was brought before the Sunday-school last Sunday, and variously answered. I gave Webster's primary definition, and seven Bible definitions, but none of them suited the immaterialists, who still insist that the death of the wicked will be eternal life in misery. They seem determined to make it appear that the serpent told the truth to mother Eve when he said, "Thou shalt not surely die."

The Bero church is alive and in good working order. A few of us here attended one of their prayer-meetings recently, and had a very pleasant time indeed. The young members spoke fluently and intelligently of the coming kingdom and "that blessed hope." They are all determined that Br. Himes shall preach for them when he comes, and I concede their right to claim his services in preference to us here. We all hope and pray that some young minister may come here and enter upon the work in this section.

From S. C. Wellcome, St. Charles, Minn.

Our State Campmeeting was one of the best we have had. Preaching brethren present—Brn. Miller, Collins, Thurber, Raymond, Ramer, Wellcome, and Sr. Dubey, and Br. and Sr. Cobb, F. W. Baptists. The preaching was with power and demonstration of the Spirit, the gospel trumpet was blown in earnest tones, giving a certain sound, proclaiming the kingdom near, the signs being fulfilled, the present truth essential for this generation, an earnest and entire consecration to God, a living faith, and holy lives, as a preparation for the coming of Jesus, as God's people are to be a pure people, waiting and watching, ready to receive their coming King. The prayer and conference meetings were seasons of deep interest; God's Spirit seemed to pervade the entire encampment, while songs of victory and shouts of praise ascended to him who saves the repentant sinner and returning prodigal. About twenty souls were converted and reclaimed, and God's people all led to seek for a deeper work of grace, and seemed drawn especially near to God, receiving the fulness of a Savior's love. Everything went on harmoniously. A heavenly union was felt among all God's people, that made it pleasant to be there. Some of our people came from fifty to seventy miles with their teams, and seemed to go away well repaid for their trouble. We hope they will keep the fire burning upon the altar of their hearts, and let the light shine in their several neighborhoods.

We had quite an accession to our number of preachers in the person of Br. Chapman, an able Baptist preacher who had been tried and condemned for heresy in Iowa. He is well known to some of our brethren as an earnest, faithful laborer in the vineyard. He has of late been led to embrace the glorious truths connected with the approaching reign of our Savior. He was gladly received by us, and goes back to his field of labor, near Cresco. God bless his labors, and give him grace to endure persecution. Truly light is spreading.

Br. Cheatham and companion, who have for years made great sacrifices for the cause of Christ, and who own the beautiful grove where the meeting was held, were made glad not only by the conversion of neighbors, but also of two lovely daughters, making some seventeen of the family connection in the neighborhood who now rejoice in the blessed hope, including the aged grandmother of eighty-four years, well known as a "mother in Israel."

I had the privilege of burying thirteen happy souls with Christ in baptism—three of whom had been educated as Catholics. Others will go forward soon. Praise God who giveth the victory over sin to all that trust in his name. Many were enlightened in regard to our views, and in fact the light is shining throughout all this region of country. Br. and Sr. Cobb took hold with us in our meetings in earnest, and we hope and trust they are beholding "new things out of God's law," and will yet be enabled to take a bold stand proclaim the last message to a dying world.

Since campmeeting I have made another tour west 150 miles. Baptised two believers; visited and preached at Lemond, near Owatonna, Freedom, Medo, Shelbyville and Kasota. I found the brethren and sisters waiting, watching, praying, and as a result, living and letting their light shine. Occasionally an opposer rises up and fights the truth, misrepresenting our views and misconstruing the Bible. But intelligent people are learning that they have a right to read God's word for themselves, and are weary of following the traditions of men. Therefore, we have no fears for God's cause, but earnestly pray, "God speed the truth!"

The greatest obstacle I have yet found to the speed of truth is an occasional professed believer in the Advent doctrine, bigoted in their views, inconsistent in their lives, harping constantly on some particular points of doctrine, until their neighbors all get sick of it, and will not come out to hear. They profess to know more than their teachers, and like the dog in the manger, neither eat themselves or let any one else. God pity such, and open their eyes and their hearts. Oh! for a powerful revival of God's work. An entire consecration is what we need.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 10, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope: but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

P. O Address.

S. W. Thurber, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Quarterly—The Chart.

If brethren who have written on these subjects will be patient, we hope to report progress in these two works ere long.

Damon, Temple & Co.,

Keep a large and fine assortment of Gent's Neck Wear, Linen and Paper Collars and Cuffs, Jewelry, Etc., at Nos. 111 & 113 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and 87 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

To my Friends.

I would like to correspond with some friends who would like to invest $250 or more at Norwood Park, thereby conferring a personal favor on me, and at the same time securing a good investment for themselves. Address: WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Sumner's (C. A.) remarkable address on short hand writing has been laid upon our table in pamphlet form. It is the finest thing on the subject yet given to the public. An extensive interest in making phonography a branch of popular education has been stirred up in San Francisco by the treatise.

Copies for sale at this office. Price 15c.

Elgin Watches.

D. W. Whittle, Esq., National Watch Company.

Dear Sir: I have now carried one of your watches over a year. It has proved to be a perfect time-keeper—so far as a watch can be called perfect. I have commended your watches to all with confidence.

Truly yours,

Chicago, Aug. 23, 1872. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No. 373 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post paid, for 30c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

SOUTH NORWALK. A brother from this place encloses $1 for THE TIMES, and orders a copy of "Faith of St. Paul," but neglects to give his name. Who is it?....P. VOS. Letter received; but it contains no money.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

P L Newberry M Pitt A Hunt G Wedgewood G P Rowell & Co J T Ongley E Miller M Prouty F C Kelly R P Hoge D C Williams E Kelley S W Davis F Bramnik A S Butters A Sanford S S C Wellcome C C Marston J R Carroll R C Brown W Good P Vos L Narmore S K Gibson W Weeks D Mathewson J Munson B F Wise E H Burington S M Hayden R H McCortney E Stephens O Stebbins G L Teeple W J Masters W H Brandebury B F Ware M Briggs G C Cowell W A Pryor W H Jennings S P Whitney S K Gibson J T Ongley C F Sweet A Odell Rounds L O Sawin P Hitchcock M D Peavy W E Brown W H Cummings R V Phillips F H Kenney N Ellis W I Himes G A Sumner W Baird E Bee G W Montgomery M E Brown S Abby J M Byler Q P Henderson E C Andrus G M DeLong C M Davis W G Houtze R J Arnot M McCulloch E Nordlind J M Bowling C L Ives S B Withington C W Sargent L Searce C H Sowin F O Cose J Wallan J F Wilber G Storrs J Carver I C Wellcome J L Madill W A Younglove J Miller.

Tract Fund.

Mary Briggs, 40c.

Marriages.

FAIRFIELD—MOORE.—In Ioala, Warren Co. Ill., Sept. 4, 1872, by Eld. M. McCulloch, Mr. Davis Fairfield and Miss Susan E. Moore.

Obituary.

CUMMINS.—Died, Sept. 1 (the place was not given), Murray, infant son of Erwin and Emeline Cummins: aged 1 year.

Services by the writer. R. P. HOGE.

Notices, Etc.

Special Notice—Minnesota.

Notice is hereby given to the friends coming to the Q. M. held at Lombard and Winegar's Mill (Sept. 13) by railroad, to stop at Ottawa, where teams will be in readiness to convey them to the place of meeting.

GEO. W. MILLER.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

No Reduction of Fare to Amboy.

In reply to inquiries concerning reduced fare on the Railroads to Amboy Campmeeting, I would say that I have used my best endeavors to secure a reduction, but have not obtained it. The Superintendents of the roads tell me they have agreed among themselves not to give special rates to our meeting this year.

Still, let none stay away that can come, for I think you will be well repaid for the expense

FRANK BURR.

Notice.

I propose going to Minnesota soon, and shall be happy to serve any churches on or near my route that desire a call from me. I expect to attend the Amboy Campmeeting. My route will be by the Michigan Central to Chicago; Galena Division thence to Fulton, and then by steamboat to St. Paul. Write me at Laingsburg, Mich., until Aug. 25; then to Chicago, Room 7, 25 West Lake St., or to Amboy.

WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.

2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.

3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR

SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

KANSAS.

Beginning at Columbus, in Southern Kansas, Sept. 19, and continue till Oct. 4, as Brn. Munson, Sanford and Dunbar may arrange. The tent will be ready for use about that time.

MISSOURI.

I will be in Brookfield, Mo. (on the Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R.), Sabbath Oct. 6, and through the week. I will be glad to see Br. Miller, and any other friends in the vicinity of Brookfield, as I shall have only the week to spend in the State now.

Shall return to Chicago Oct. 14, for duties there, and spend the balance of the month as I may have calls.

ARKANSAS.

Early in November, with Eld. Lawver, I shall go to Arkansas. We shall go from Cobden, Egypt, on horseback, and preach as we go, reaching Batesville about the middle of the month, and attend the Advent Conference the 20th. After this we shall spend a short time in preaching in such places as open to us.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour, God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors. JOSHUA V. HIMES,

25 West Lake St., Chicago.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I expect to hold a debate with D. W. Hull, of Hobert, Ind., at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872, to continue several days, with two sessions each day, on the following proposition:

Resolved, That modern Spiritualism is a Satanic delusion. C. C. MARSTON.

The Annual State Campmeeting for Illinois will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., commencing Saturday, Sept. 7, and continuing over two Sabbaths, on the "old camp ground," one-half mile east of town. Preaching brethren from other States are expected to be present. There will be a boarding tent and ample provisions for all who desire to board. Also a stand where supplies can be had for those who wish to board themselves. Lumber for tents will be supplied on the ground; also hay and grain for horses.

We hope to see a general rally from all parts of the State at this meeting. Come brethren and sisters, and let us spend a week in the tented grove for the Lord and his glorious cause. Let no one stay away on account of a little sacrifice. Come with your hearts full of the Holy Spirit, not to feast and a time of recreation, but to work for the blessed Master, and may God give us a gracious and glorious meeting.

Those coming on the C. B. & Q. R. R. will change cars at Mendota for Amboy. Those coming on the C. & N. W. R. W. will change at Dixon. We hope to get a reduction of fare, of which due notice will be given.

Let all bring family tents and bedding that can.

Campmeeting Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, S. B. Mabey, L. H. Davis, W. McCullock, F. Burr, D. B. Clark.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RAYBURN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Udina, 7.30 p. m. Sept. 22.
Coral, 7.30 p. m. Sept. 29.

E. H. BURINGTON.

INDIANA.

The Indiana Tabernacle will be pitched at Delphi, Carroll Co., Sept. 12, and remain for an indefinite time. E. C. ANDRUS.

A Q. M. of the Northern Conference District will be held at Union Mills, commencing Oct. 11, at 2 p. m. and continue several days. A general attendance of ministers and brethren is solicited.

E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

I will preach at the Potato Creek church house Sept. 28, eve., and over Sunday.

Stingley S. H. Oct. 5, eve., and over Sunday.

E. C. ANDRUS.

IOWA.

The third Campmeeting of the Iowa A. C. Conference will be held at Manchester, commencing Friday eve. Sept. 6, and continuing over the second Sunday. All are cordially invited from north, south, east and west. Come all who love the Lord's appearing. Come with hearts burning with the love of God and our fellowmen.

The camp-ground is located one mile and a quarter N. W. of the business part of the town. There will be teams at the depot on the arrival of the morning and evening trains, the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th, to convey all who come to the meeting.

Hay, straw, and tent-poles will be furnished free on the ground. Grain for teams, at cost. There will be a stand for the sale of necessary provisions.

Those who attend had better come prepared to take care of themselves. Bring plenty of bedding. Remember that a few yards of sheeting will make you a tent, and will be just as good for family use afterwards. Bring your tent and be ready to keep house at once. Let those who live near by, also arrange to stay on the ground during the meeting. Come early. Make a sacrifice if need be.

Brn. Isaac Adrian and S. W. Thurber are expected. Br. C. C. Marston has been invited.

The Annual Meeting of the Conference will be held in connection with the Campmeeting, commencing Thursday morning. Let each church be represented by delegates, early upon the ground. Read the Constitution, and be governed accordingly.

The committee would say to all coming to the Campmeeting at Manchester, that there will be an eating stand on the ground, where warm meals, or provisions, can be had at reasonable rates.

In behalf of the Committee. F. H. KENNY.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves.

Hay will be furnished free for teams; also, straw and poles for tents. There will be no grocery or boarding house on the ground, which is only five minutes walk from good stores and taverns, where meals can be had for 25 cents. The ground is five blocks northwest of the public square, and south of the McGregor Railroad track, and half a mile west of the depot. Don't fail to bring bedding. The big tent can be used for lodgings, and if the weather is wet there are barns close by. Prospect is good, and great interest to hear. Pray for the meeting.

Write when you will come, and we will meet you.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. Callamecy, Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Reffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

P. S. The Campmeeting at Charles City will be continued another week.

Eld. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present before the close to help preach the word.

Brethren, make a sacrifice, and come to the meeting. M. A. NEWCOMB, Sec'y.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The third annual session of the A. C. Conference of Iowa will be held in connection with the campmeeting at Manchester, in Sept. next; Conference to be called on Thursday, the 12th. Let all the brethren and sisters be sure to be present at the commencement. We are to do business for our blessed Master; and the King's business requires haste and promptness.

H. H. JAMES, Sec'y.

I will hold a public discussion in Greenfield, Adair Co., commencing Oct. 9, and continue as long as may seem necessary. Subject—The Nature and Future Rewards and Punishments of Man. My opponent, Eld. Isrel Mershon, of the M. E. Church of St. Charles, is said to be the best disputant they have. May the truth triumph. D. S. CLARK.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20. and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Cross Plains, 11 a. m, Sunday June 16. Sabbath School at 10 a. m.

Mifflin, 3 p. m. in Town Hall, (or Grove if the weather is favorable), same day.

Wingville, 3 p. m. June 23.

Will fill these appointments once in two weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Ross, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

Q. M. for the Ottawa District will meet at Lombard and Winegar's mill, about seven miles east from Ottawa, Thursday eve. Sept. 12, and continue over Sunday. We expect a general rally of all in the district. The times demand of us especial efforts to keep the standard of truth, with its banner, "Thy Kingdom come," before the people.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

At Fitzsimmons S. H. Sat. eve. Sept. 14, and over Sunday, as the brethren may arrange.

At Freedom, Waseca Co., Converse S. H. Sept. 17, 7.30 p. m.

Medo, Goodwin S. H. Sept. 18, 7.30 p. m.

At Shelby, Blue Earth Co., in a grove near Brown S. H., at a Basket Meeting, Sept. 22, 10.30 a. m., and 2 p. m. at Brown S. H.

At Kasota, Lasuer Co., at a Basket Meeting on the old camp ground, Sept. 24, at 10.30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Expect to baptise. S. C. WELLCOME.

MICHIGAN.

The first Q. M. of the Eastern District will be held with the A. C. church in Almont, Lapeer Co., commencing Thusday, Oct. 3, at 2 p. m. and continue over Sunday. We extend to the friends a cordial invitation, and hope for a full attendance of men and women imbued with the Good Spirit. We expect to have our chapel ready for use on this occasion. J. H. PATON.

OHIO.

There will be a Grove meeting at Montpelier, Williams Co., commencing Sept. 19, and continue over the Sabbath. Br. Babcock will preach the word. G. W. ENGLISH.

KANSAS.

At Columbus, Cherokee Co., commencing at 2 p. m. on Thursday, Oct. 3, will be held a series of meetings by Elds. J. V. Himes, H. J. Munson, and other preaching brethren. Ample arrangements will be made by the Columbus church for the accommodation of brethren and sisters from abroad. AMOS SANFORD, Sec'y.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Sutton's Corners, Crawford Co., Sept. 22.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Also a Grove Meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Br. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing eve. Sept. 12, to continue about a week. Elds. C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (Lord willing) will attend to preach the word, at the above meetings. All are invited. J. T. ONGLEY.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church. GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

A special Time Conference will be held on the Life and Union campground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18, 1872, to continue over Lord's day.

The object of this meeting will be to earnestly investigate the prophecies bearing on the time of the coming of Christ, and deliverance of the people of God; the justification of the sanctuary; and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence of Christ's immediate coming; and to take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ.

Let such as can, bring their provision; but such as cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally.

(Signed.) GEO. W. BROWN, S. W. BISHOP, CHARLES C. BARKER, CALEB THOMSON, L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS. THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 50c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
Box 301, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

Advent Christian Times.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLL.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 7. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 17, 1872. WHOLE NO. 438.

Advent Christian Times.

Threatened war in Europe.

Henry Dunat is a man well known throughout Europe as the originator of "The Red Cross," a society organized to alleviate the sufferings of the sick and wounded in war. He has lately read a paper in London, before the Social Science Association, showing the necessity of an immediate and uniform organization of the Red Cross Society throughout Europe; and his arguments have attracted a great deal of attention. The following is the main idea:

> "I believe I know the continent, and my conviction is that we are on the eve of the grandest events of this century, whether viewed from a political or social point of view. A great war is imminent, and within a few years, the continent will be overturned by a general conflict of nations."

War is always an evil in itself, even when undertaken in a good cause; but it is also an instrument of good, and the realization of the prophecy, given above, is likely to produce a permanent and much needed reform. In any event, the state of things cannot be any worse than it is now. Nearly all Europe is virtually, if not nominally, enslaved. Ireland and Poland are remorselessly chained down; the Pope and his people are imprisoned by an armed force—in a word, the people, throughout the entire continent, are ruled, not by their own choice, but by military despotism. This state of things must change; and the magnitude of the evils to be unrooted renders some great social convulsion inevitable.—Irish World.

Broad-cast the Seed.

"We are told that it is a custom among the Indians, when they are sowing maize, to put seven grains of corn into the ground. One was asked why this was done. 'Well,' said the Indian, 'we put one grain for the crows, another for the worms, and a third for the squirrels, and we expect that the rest will bring forth fruit.' The Indians teach us a lesson. They teach us to sow good seed liberally, and not to be disappointed if all that we sow does not bring forth fruit. Our Savior teaches us that some will fall by the wayside, some on stony ground, and some among thorns. This we must expect, as good seed-sowers. But what of it? Should it lead us not to sow at all? Nay, it should rather lead us, like the Indians, to sow more bountifully, lest, with scanty sowing, the crows, the worms, and the squirrels get the whole harvest. If we sow bountifully, we may rest assured of this, that the good seed of truth will find its way to some honest hearts, and bring forth fruit, thirty, sixty or a hundred fold."

Such an increase will cover all losses, and produce substantial gains. Suppose three-fourths of the seed is utterly and totally wasted,—that by the wayside, on stony ground, and among thorns. What then? One fourth yet remains and brings forth fruit. If four bushels are sown, and three are lost, and the other bushel produces "thirty fold," there is a clear gain of twenty-six bushels, and that pays. Or, if three bushels are lost and one bushel produces "sixty fold," the net gain is fifty-six bushels, and that pays. Or, if one bushel produces "an hundred fold," we have ninety-six bushels more than we had in the beginning, and that is a good return. Thus Jesus teaches us to sow in faith, and a blessing is on those who sow by all waters. And if we sow in the morning, and sow in the evening, and sow broadcast, and sow liberally, we shall surely find golden sheaves in the glorious harvest home.

Do not fret about the squirrels;—put in an extra seed for the squirrels. Do not get discouraged about the crows;—scatter a handful for the crows. Do not be disheartened by the worms;—sow enough so that the worms cannot eat all if they try;—and then look to the Lord of the harvest to cause the skies to drop fatness and the soil to bring forth fruit to perfection.

Suppose the net came empty to the shore,—cast it again on the right side of the ship and ye shall find. Suppose the sermon was a failure,—pray more, and preach two others in its place. Suppose the exhortation did no good;—get low before God, and pray that he may give help next time. Suppose the tract was torn up; scatter a hundred like it, and breathe a prayer for a blessing with every one you give. The Lord's arm is not shortened, that he cannot save, nor is his ear heavy, that he cannot hear. Keep up good heart, toil on, hope on. You will never know the good you do while working for God single-handed and single eyed.

Little did that unknown minister who, in the absence of a more noted man filled the pulpit and preached Christ's gospel, imagine that among that disappointed and perhaps disgusted congregation, the seed of truth should find lodgement in the heart of a young student, and bear fruit in the career of one of the most learned and noted ministers that England ever knew. The kingdom rung with the name of John Owen, but only God knows the name of the stranger who led him to the Lord.

Little did that humble Irishman who proclaimed in a barn the grace of Him who was cradled in a manger, dream that Augustne Toplady, the English officer's son, who heard that day the saving word, should not only preach salvation in Christ himself, but should, in after years, when dead and in his grave, give voice and word to the longings of ten thousand hearts, and wake around the world and through all the ages the echoes of the Irish preacher's sermon, in the song,—

"Rock of ages, cleft for me
Let me hide myself in thee."

Little did that invalid woman, Charlotte Elliot, imagine when she sang her humble song,—

"Just as I am, without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me,
And that thou bidst me come to thee,— Oh, lamb of God, I come"— that her words would ring around the globe, and lead many a weary heavy-laden sinner to the Savior's feet.

Little did that poor unlettered English preacher suppose when he cried in his humble chalel, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth," that there sat among his hearers one weary, heavy-laden, sin-sick soul, who having sought everywhere to learn the way of life, came there in bondage to go away in peace, to preach and write, and publish salvation to such multitudes as no other man on earth can reach by voice or pen. But so it was, and the testimony of that unlettered minister of God yet rings and is repeated in the rich utterances of Charles H. Spurgeon, to charm and bless and save the souls of men.

Be strong, oh man of God. Fear not, faint not by the way. Your work shall be rewarded, your labor is not in vain. Not by might nor by power are victories won, but by the Spirit of the living God. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. Out of weakness you may be made strong, and wax valiant in the fight. Toil on, weep on; eternity will tell the story of your labors. Sow liberally, scatter the seed broadcast and in spite of every foe you shall reap a rich rewary.

"Go labor on! hands may be weak,
Knees may be faint, the soul cast down,
Yet falter not, the prize is near,
He promises a heavenly crown.
Toil on, toil on, thou soon shalt find
For labor rest, for exile home;
Soon shalt thou hear the Bridegroom's voice,
The midnight peal, Behold I come."

—The Christian.

Family Worship as it Should Be.

A correspondent of the Watchman found this family picture in vacation wandering:

After the morning meal is finished all the family gather in a pleasent room, each having a Bible, and with happy, cheerful faces take their seats, the youngest being very near her father, that he may watch over her as she reads. To the question from the father, Where are we to day? several voices hasten to give the book and chapter, showing that the Holy Word is being read in course. When all have found the place, the father begins and reads slowly and distinctly the first two verses, the mother follows, then each child down to the youngest, who has yet to spell the longer words, and is encouraged when she succeeds, and helped if she fails in pronouncing them aright. If any verse of hidden meaning occurs, it is explained, simply, clearly. A special promise, precept, or command is applied gently, lovingly. Parents and children talk frely (there is the charm) of the words of Jesus. If the chapter be long, it is divided; if too short, another is read. Then the books are closed, the father begins a familiar tune, usually one of the Sunday-school hymns, that the little ones may all join, a hymn that shall have in it something about Jesus. How they sing! with the spirit and the understanding. All kneeling, the father prays, such a simple, earnest prayer—fervent thanks for the mercies of the past night, asking for the needs of each one for that very day—"daily bread," indeed. The trials and temptations of each are remembered Jesus' aid is asked for them, at work or at play, at home or at school. Personalities are not avoided here. The name of some member of the family is mentioned as special grace is implored in his or her behalf. Nor are others forgotten. The visitors among them feel drawn into closer friendship and love as they hear the supplications for their welfare; while the whole church of God is commended to the care of "Him who, watching over Israel, slumbers not nor sleeps." How fervent are the special petitions for any who are sick or in sorrow. Finally, in unison repeating the Lord's prayer, they rise from their knees, feeling that Jesus has been there and prepared them to go forth to the duties of the day with joy and gladness. Such a service has no weariness. It never exceeds half an hour; and if a city pastor, with the many calls upon his time and attention, can so conduct his family worship, why may not the merchant, and the mechanic?

The Hope of the Patriarchs.

Dr. Fassett delivered a discourse yesterday, at the Mission street church, on the prophecy from the 49th chapter of Genesis—Jacob's exclamation—"I have waited for thy salvation." His argument was that the salvation Jacob waited for was not a conversion; not an acquired and established peace with God through renewed heart and purified conscience; nor yet a salvation to be conferred or received at death. It was the salvation of the Saints at the second coming of Jesus Christ to this globe. In negation of the two prevailing theological ideas, mentioned above, Dr. Fassett brought forth in orderly and culminating array a large body of Scripture; and, in support of his own theory, he claimed the liberal interpretation of a score of prominent verses.

He said that Dr. Stone, of this city, and other leading divines, had been forced into the predicament of admitting or affirming that the brute creation were possessed of immortal souls by nature, as well as man; and he said he intended to push this subject until his hearers must see beyond all cavil that his inference or reasoning was correct from his premises. But the foundation was all wrong; man was not possessed of immortality. Immortality—the salvation—was conferred upon the righteous waiting living, and the resurrected Saints at the day of the Second Advent.

Solomon defied the world with his so often grossly misinterpreted challenge, "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward? or the spirit of the beast that goeth downward?" Who knows that the breath of the one goes elsewhere than the breath—the expiring spirit of life—of the other? Solomon had said that "they have all one breath." The Doctor said that Solomon uttered this challenge on behalf of truth to the Immortal Soul Priests and Philosophers of the East; and he proposed to raise the challenge on the strength of the recorded wisdom of Solomon and other Bible writers—proposed to raise and argue it in San Francisco until the great theological error and falsehood of the age was thoroughly exposed before all those in our city, who, having understanding, would hear reason, and candidly decide.—San Francisco Post. Sep. 9.

The Infidel's Family.

Adolphe Monod tells us of the mother of a family married to an infidel who made jest of religion in the presence of his own children: yet she succeeded in bringing them all up in the fear of the Lord. Being asked how it was done, this was her answer: 'Because to the authority of a father I do not oppose the authority of a mother but that of a God. My children have always seen the Bible upon my table. This holy book has constituted the whole of their religious instruction. I was silent, that I might allow it to speak. Did they propose a question, did they commit a fault, did they perform a good action, I opened the Bible, and they were answered, reproved, or encouraged. Constant reading of the Scriptures has wrought the prodigy which surprises you.' Such faith in God's word will everywhere work marvels of grace.

Painful Inconsistencies.

Some men talk like angels and pray with fervor, and meditate in deep recesses, and speak to God with loving affection and words of union, and adhere to him in silent devotion and when they go abroad are as passionate as ever, peevish as a frightened fly, vexing themselves with their own reflections; they are cruel in their bargains, unmerciful in their tenants, and proud as a barbarian prince. They are, for all their fine words, impatient of reproof, scornful to their neighbors, lovers of money, supreme in their own thoughts and submit to none. All their spiritual fancy is an illusion. They are still under the power of their passions, and their sins rule them imperiously, and carry them away infallibly.—Jeremy Taylor.

It is a maxim with me not to ask what, under similar circumstances, I would not grant.—George Washington.

If we thoroughly examine, we shall find that pride, policy and power are the three principle ingredients in all the disturbances of churches.—Henry.

False friends are like our shadow, keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine, but leaving us the instant we cross into the shade.—Anon.

So I go on, not knowing;
I would not, if I might,
I would rather walk in the dark with God
Than walk alone in the light;
I would rather walk with him by faith,
Than walk alone by sight.
—Selected.

The taste for emotion may become a dangerous taste; we should be very careful how we attempt to squeeze out of human life more ecstacy and paroxysm than it can well afford.—Sydney Smith.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness, and small obligations given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir H. Davy.

They have only lived long who have lived virtuously.—Sheridan.

Live as long as you may, the first twenty years are the longest half of your life.—Southey.

Life, like a dome of many-color'd glass,
Stains the white radiance of eternity.
—Shelley.

A man's life is an appendix to his heart.—South.

Never did any soul do good, but it came readier to do the same again with more enjoyment. Never was love, or gratitude, or bounty practiced but with increasing joy, which made the practice still more in love with the fair act.—Shaftesbury.

There appears to exist a greater desire to live longer than we live well. Measure by man's desires, he cannot live long enough; measure by his good deeds, and he has not lived long enough; measure by his evil deeds, and he has lived too long.—Zimmerman.

He lives long that lives well; and time misspent is not lived, but lost. Besides, God is better than his promise, if he takes from him a lease, and gives him a free-hold of a greater value.—Fuller.

Think of "living!" Thy life, wert thou the "pitifullest of all the sons of earth," is no idle dream, but a solemn reality. It is thy own; it is all thou hast to front eternity with. Work, then, even as he has done, and does, "like a star, unhasting, yet unresting."—Carlyle.

INVERTED HYPOCRISY.—Bishop Marvin gave this good definition of a man, who, like some other pompous sinner, thinks it is a great thing to find fault with Christians, and to condescend to become one. One such said to him:—

"I design to be a Christian, but I do not purpose to make a fuss about it. I shall not go to the altar for prayer, unite with the church, nor make any public profession whatever. My religion shall be a matter between myself and my God." This, the Bishop said, was "inverted hypocrisy."

There are more hypocrites of this sort out of the church than of the other sort in it.

Not to misrepresent them, however, we prefer to give the words of one of their selectest advocates, St. Alphonzo Liguori, a man canonized by the Romish church, whose works are pronounced worthy of the highest praise, but who places the Bible among the prohibited books in his catalogue. He says: "The Scriptures, and books of controversy, may not be permitted in the vernacular tongue, as also they cannot be read without permission." Cardinal Bellarmine more openly declares that "the Catholic church forbids the reading of the Scriptures by all, without choice, or the public reading or singing of them in vulgar tongues, as it is decreed in the Council of Trent."

YOU HAVE KILLED THAT SERMON.—The preacher labored faithfully this morning. Many were affected under the sermon. Among the rest were some of your children. Now is a good time for you to come in and help your pastor in the work upon your own family. But, alas! instead of this, you have destroyed the impressions on the hearts of those affected. "How?" you ask in astonishment. Why, when returned from church, instead of talking with those serious children, you began to criticise the preacher in their hearing! During the sermon you were half asleep part of the time, and reading a hymn book another part; and now your work must be finished up in a criticism of the discourse. It was too cold, or rather boistrous. The hymns were inappropriate; the prayers too common-place. All this you have to talk before these children, but a little while ago so thoughtful. When you are done they are thoughtful no longer. Your words have driven off their good impression.

Introduction of Moral Evil.

Man is made accountable both to himself and to his Creator. To himself, in order that he may enjoy the high rewards of self-respect; and to his Creator, that he may enjoy the rewards which the Creator promises to loyalty.

If an accountable being is not rewarded for obedience and punished for disobedience, there is no significancy in accountability. Therefore an accountable being must be placed in a state of trial. He must be subjected to trial in order to test his loyalty to truth, right, conscience, and the will of God. If he is to be rewarded or punished, he must be tested in order to furnish evidence of merit or of demerit. He must be tested in order, also, to develop a capacity to enjoy the rewards promised to obedience. These prime ends—indispensable to an accountable being—can be secured in no other way.

The test may vary in kind and in degree. In fact, few human beings are tested precisely alike. But it is required of each that he endure a trial sufficient to evince loyalty, merit, and a capacity to enjoy the rewards of self-respect and of heaven. A person who is incapable of such a test can not be accountable. He who endures such a test successfully, compasses the great ends of his creation.

A trial of obedience requires that there should be difficulties in obeying. If a moral agent is to be rewarded for obedience, it must be because it is difficult to obey. If punishment is denounced against disobedience, it must be because it is easy to disobey. Obedience is indispensable to reward; but an obedience which requires no effort, no self-denial, cannot merit a reward. Resistance to evil is indispensable to reward; but that resistance cannot be meritorious, unless it be easy to yield to the solicitations of evil. For virtue to merit a reward, requires that it should be difficult to be virtuous, and easy to be vicious. A trial of one's loyalty to God requires that loyalty should have its difficulties, and disloyalty its attractions. Without these difficulties on the one hand, and these attractions on the other, there could be no valid test; none adequate to secure the necessary ends of probation. Without them, a test would be a mere pretense, a sham trial, devoid of results and of significance.

.... In the sensibilities, and in the perceptive and receptive faculties, we find a capacity to be addressed by the attractions of sin, and also all the conditions requisite for an adequate test of the soul's loyalty to God. The sensibilities are not capable of self-regulation, but move as they are moved upon. Nevertheless, they manifestly exert a great influence upon the operations of the intellect, and upon the decisions of the will. If, therefore, the normal action of the emotions, the propensities, the desires, the affections, be once materially disturbed by the solicitations or attractions of sin; if by such influences, these innocent sensibilities be thus disproportionately intensified and indulged, or if an inferior sensibility be brought to exert an undue influence over, and to finally control a superior one, the way would be prepared for a permanent derangement in the operations of the sensibilities—for a permanent interference with their proper and holy exercise. Such abnormal action once begun in the sensibilities, might be followed by erroneous perceptions and false reasonings, and might also be sanctioned and enforced by the decision of the will. Thus moral evil might secure an effectual and permanent lodgment in the soul. Manifestly the attractions of sin, directed with a view to this disastrous and far-reaching result, would be directed not to induce, at the first, the performance of an act wicked in itself, but rather such action or condition of the sensibilities, and such erroneous perceptions as might with the greatest probability be followed by wrong volitions.

From the very limitations of a probationary being—limitations in thought knowledge, experience, and observation—misapprehensions would be likely to arise; misapprehensions, for example, as to the pleasures or benefits to be derived from a proposed gratification, as to the turpitude of an act suggested and contemplated, as to the extent of his obligation to the Creator, as to the certainty and intensity of the evils to result from a deflection from duty, as to the extent of the effects of those evils upon himself, and as to the difficulties to be overcome in securing a restoration to holiness or to the forfeited favor of God. Such misapprehensions could not be prevented, we think, except by illuminations from a higher intelligence.

But in order to secure to a probationary being a test adequate to satisfy the essential conditions of accountability, sin or fallen spirits must also be permitted to exercise upon his mind such blinding and deceiving influences as would make obedience difficult and disobedience easy. Hence misapprehensions, as well as misleading desires, might be originated and fostered from without. And we may be sure that whatever their cause or source, they would furnish favorable opportunities for sin to exert its fascinations, its blinding and deceptive influences, upon the mind.

But might not God give to probationary beings such illuminations as, if they did not prevent all misapprehensions, would with entire certainty guard against any pernicious consequences from them? We think not.

In the government of accountable beings it must be provided with scrupulous exactness that their wills should be entirely untrammeled. The essential conditions of freedom must in no way be disturbed. The blinding and deceiving influences of sin or of fallen spirits must not be beyond the capacity of each moral agent to endure; since, if they were so, it would be unjust to arraign and punish him for yielding in the hour of trial. Yet they must be strong enough to furnish an adequate test. Take these influences away, and no such test could be secured. Without them, there could be no value or propriety in any system of probation anywhere in Jehovah's dominions.

For the same reason, there must be limitations to the knowledge, to the illuminations, possessed by the probationary agent. Had God more fully illumined the mind of Eve—could she, with a clearer and broader vision, have seen the consequences of her contemplated sin—could she have seen virtue in all its attractions—promptly she would have rejected the fascinations spread out before her eyes, those addressed to her instinctive love of beauty, knowledge, and power, and those whispered in her ear by a malignant but wily foe. But under such excess of knowledge, her decision, her choice of obedience, would have been no evidence of loyalty, and no reason why she should be rewarded. From that choice there could have resulted no higher excellence of soul, no progress toward the great ends of probation. For the realization of such ends she needed to be placed where, in order to show her loyalty, she must resist unholy influences, maintain harmony and purity in her affections, stand trustfully and obediently amid the darkness of missapprehensions, and in triumph pass the assaults of temptation. The attractions of vice needed to be strong enough to afford her an adequate test, but not in the least to exceed her capacities of endurance, or in the least to control her choice. Nor did they.

Notwithstanding all the attractions of vice, all its blinding and deceptive influences, without the consent and choice of her will, they could not have disturbed the proper action of the sensibilities of her soul. However strong the temptations which assailed her, they would have been harmless but for the consent of her will. It was in the free but wrong exercise of this faculty that her demerit consisted. When her will chose to yield to an improper and abnormal exercise and impulse of her sensibilities, a moral disturbance was at once produced among those sensibilities—a disturbance which broke down the harmony and unsettled the relations which God had instituted between them, and which finally perverted and reversed the whole action of the moral sensibilities of the soul. And when this disturbance of the sensibilities was affected, moral disorder, a depraved state, a condition of sinfulness, passed down into the essence of the soul. Then the state, the condition, and character of the soul became essentially sinful. In this way moral evil was introduced into the soul and into the universe [world].—Dr. McCabe.

The Sin and Folly of Scolding.

"Fret not thyself to do evil." (Ps. 37: 8.)

1. It is a sin against God.—It is an evil and only evil, and that continually. David understood both human nature and the law of God. He says "Fret not thyself in any wise to do evil." That is, never fret or scold, for it is all ways a sin. If you cannot speak without fretting or scolding, keep silence.

2. It Destroys Affection.—No one ever did, ever can, or ever will love an habitual fretter, fault-finder, or scolder. Husbands, wives, children, relatives, or domestic, have no affection for peevish, fretful faultfinders. Few tears are shed over the graves of such. Persons of high moral principle may tolerate them—may bear with them. But they cannot love them more than the sting of nettles or the noise of mosquitoes. Many a man has been driven to the tavern, and to dissipation, by a peevish, fretful wife. Many a wife has been made miserable by a peevish, fretful husband.

3. It is the Bane of Domestic Happiness.—A fretful, peevish, complaining fault-finder in a family, is like the continual chafing of an inflamed sore. Woe to the the man, women or child, who is exposed to the influence of such a temper in another. Nine-tenths of all domestic trilsa and unhappiness spring from this source. Mrs. A. is of this temperament. She wonders her husband is not more fond of her company. That her children give her so much trouble. That she cannot secure the good will of young people. That domestics do not like to work for her. The truth is, she is peevish and fretful. Children fear her, and do not love her. She never gained the affections of a young person, nor never will till she leaves off fretting.

4. It Defeats the End of Family Government.—Good family government is the blending authority with affection, so as to secure respect and love. Indeed, it is the great secret of managing young people. Now your fretters may inspire fear, but they always make two faults where they correct one. Scolding at a child, fretting at a child, sneering at a child, taunting a child, treating a child as though it has no feelings, inspires dread and dislike, and fosters those very dispositions, from which many of the faults of childhood proceed. Mr. G. and Mrs. F. are of this class. Their children are made to mind; but how? Mrs. F. frets and scolds her children. She is severe enough upon their faults. She seems to watch them in order to find fault. She sneers at them. Treats them as though they had no feelings. She seldom gives them a command without a threat and a long running fault-finding commentary. When she chides, it is not done in a dignified manner. She raises her voice, puts on a cross look, threatens, strikes them, pinches their ears, slaps their heads, &c. The children cry, pout, sulk, and poor Mrs. F. has to do her work over pretty often. Then she will find fault with her husband, because he does not fall in with her ways, or chime with her as chorus.

5. Fretting and Scolding make Hypocrites.—As a fretter never receives confidence and affection, so no one likes to tell them anything disagreeable and thus procure for themselves a fretting. Now, children conceal as much as they can from such persons. They cannot make up their minds to be frank and open-hearted. So husbands conceal from their wives, and wives from their husbands. For a man may brave a lion, but he likes not to come in contact with nettles and mosquitoes.

6. It Destroys One's Peace of Mind.—The more one frets the more he may. A fretter will always have enough to fret at, especially if he or she has the bump of order largely developed.—Something will always be out of place. There will be some dirt somewhere. Others will not eat right, look right, talk right. And fretters are generally so selfish as to have no regard for any one's comfort but their own.

7. It is a Mark of a Vulgar Disposition.—Some persons have so much gall in their disposition, are so selfish, that they have no regard to the feelings of others. All things must be done to please them. They make their husbands, wives, children, domestics, the conductors by which their spleen and ill-nature are discharged. Woe to the children who are exposed to such influences. It makes them callous and unfeeling, and when they grow up they pursue the same course with their own children, or those entrusted to their management, and thus the race of fretters is perpetuated. Any person who is in the habit of fretting or sneering, taunting their husbands, wives, children, domestics, shows either a bad disposition or else ill-breeding. For it is generally your ignorant, low bred people that are guilty of such things.—Sel.

Baptism and the Lord's Coming

The Holy Ghost labors, if I may so speak, to keep before us prominently and continually the doctrine of our Lord's second coming. The word "baptism" is found in the inspired Epistles five times. The word "baptised" is found once. The word "baptised" is found eleven times in eight verses, while in thirteen it is not even once mentioned. And yet what minister or what church neglects the doctrine of God's word touching baptism? The Lord forbid that I should undervalue in the slightest degree this important ordinance, but is it not strange that a subject so seldom mentioned in the Bible should receive so large a share of attention from all the Christian denominations, while the doctrine of Christ's second coming, which is mentioned scores and hundreds of times, scarcely gains a moment's regard from the modern church. Is it not strange that the one should be presented every day in the sermons and writings and conversations and actions of God's people as of the greatest practical utility, while the other holds no place in the esteem of multitudes, and is received by many Christians with signs of impatience and weariness? This strange fact will appear the more strange, when we remember that one of the two sacraments, as they are called, instituted by the Savior, was designed to stand in perpetual connection with the sweet promise of his second coming: "When the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: for I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. And he took the cup and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves: for I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God shall come." So the Holy Spirit writes by the apostle Paul, "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." "Here and in what follows," says Dr. Hodge, "we have his own inferences from the account which the Lord had given him. The first of those inferences is, that the Lord's supper is, and was designed to be, a proclamation of the death of Christ to continue until his second advent....As the passover was a perpetual commemoration of the deliverance out of Egypt, and a prediction of the coming and death of the Lamb of God, who was to bear the sins of the world; so the Lord's supper is at once the commemoration of the death of Christ and a pledge of his coming the second time without sin unto salvation." It would be an interesting and perhaps a profitable inquiry to ask how many Christians think not only of the first, but the second coming of Christ when they hold communion with each other and with him at his table.—J. H. Brooks.

Eye to Eye Preaching.

It is evident that in the first Christian ages what is now a sermon was only a talk about matters of the directest interests and in the directest way. This is true, too, about the Reformation. All the sermons then that went to the heart of the people from men like Latimer were full of the plainest possible talk, as of one plain man to another. And these did but follow the great models they found in the gospels and in the prophets. If we will go through these books to get an idea of the ancient preaching, I think we shall be amazed at the way those preachers of the old time contrived to bring their truth home. Everything served their purpose, and they never "beat round the bush" to come at it. But preaching now has got to be a fine art, and has taken its place among the rest of the fine arts. A sermon must be about so long, and so logical, and so good, and be written down so that you never have to wait for a word, or else it won't do. And it is possible sometimes, I feel sure, for a written sermon to be better than one preached right out of your heart and mind. There is a compactness and solidity to be attained in that way you cannot come at otherwise, and I suppose men like Dr. Chalmers and Dr. Dewey would preach better right along from manuscript than from mind; and James Martineau could no more preach without his manuscript than a bird could fly without wings, and one sermon like those he preaches would weigh more also in the solid gold of truth and genius than a hundred of the pulpit-talks of some other men. But the popular heart still responds to pulpit talk. Mr. Spurgeon has six thousand people to hear him. Mr. Martineau perhaps seven score, and I think the six thousand know what they are about. They do not want so much the fine gold of truth and genius as the warm, quick presence of a man who may not do so much for their thought, but still may do a great deal for their life.—Rev. Robert Collyer.

Nae Strife up Here.

It is related that an old Scotch elder had once a serious dispute with his minister at elders' meeting. He said some things that nearly broke the minister's heart. Afterward he went home, and the minister went home, too. The next morning the elder came down and his wife said to him.

"Ye look sad, John; what is the matter with ye?"

"Ah," he replied, "you would look sad, too, if you had such a dream as I have. I dreamed that I had been at the elders' meeting, and had said some hard things, and grieved the minister; and when he went home I thought he died and went to heaven; and I thought afterward that I died, too, and went to heaven; and when I got to the gate of heaven, out came the minister, and put out his hand to take me, saying, 'Come along, John; there's nae strife up here—I'm happy to see ye.'"

The elder went to his minister directly, to beg his pardon, and found he was dead. The elder was so strickon with the blow that two weeks after he also departed.

"And I should not wonder," said he who related the incident, "if he met the minister at heaven's gate, and heard him say, 'Come along, John; there's nae strife up here.'"—British Workman.

St. Bartholomew's Massacre.

THE NIGHT OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S.

Night had now fallen. Guise and Aumale were still lurking in the city, and came with the Duke of Montpensier at Cathrine's summons. The persons who were to be killed were in different parts of the town. Each took charge of a district. Montpensier promised to see to the Palace; Guise and his uncle undertook the Admiral; and below these the word went out to the leaders of the already organized sections, who had been disappointed once, but whose hour was now come. The Catholics were to recognize one another in the confusion by a white handkerchief on the left arm and a white cross on their caps. The Royal Guard, Catholics to a man, were instruments ready-made for the work. Guise assembled the officers; he told them that the Huguenots were preparing to rise, and that the King had ordered their instant punishment. The officers asked no questions, and desired no better service. The business was to begin at dawn. The signal would be the tolling of the great bell at the Palace of Justice, and the first death was to be Coligny's.

The soldiers stole to their posts. Twelve hundred lay along the Seine, between the river and the Hotel de Ville; other companies watched at the Louvrie. As the darkness waned the Queen Mother went down to the gate. The stillness of the dawn was broken by an accidental pistol-shot. Her heart sank, and she sent off a messenger to tell Guise to pause. But it was too late. A minute later the bell boomed out, and the Massacre of St. Bartholomew had commenced.

The Admiral was feverish with his wounds and had not slept. The surgeon and a Huguenot minister, named Milan, had passed the night with him. At the first sounds he imagined that there was an emeute of the Catholic at the Court; but the crash of his own gate, and shots and shrieks in the court below the window told him that whatever was the cause his own life was in danger. He sat up in his bed "M. Malan," he said, "pray for me; I have long expected this." Some of his attendants rushed half dressed into the room. "Gentleman, save yourselves," he said to them; "I recommend my soul to my Savior."

They scattered, escaping or trying to escape by the roofs and balconies; a German servant alone remained with him. The door was burst open immediately after, and the officer who was in charge of the house, a Bohemian servant of Guise, and a renegade Huguenot soldier, rushed in with drawn sword.

"Are you the Admiral?" the Bohemian cried.

"I am" replied Coligny; "and young man, you should respect my age and my wounds; but the term of my life does not rest in the pleasure of such as thou."

The Bohemian, with a curse, stabbed him in the breast and struck him again on the head. The window was open. "Is it done?" cried Guise from the court below, "is it done? Fling him out that we may see him." Still breathing, the Admiral was hurled upon the pavement. The Bastard of Auguleme wiped the blood from his face to be sure of his identity, and then kicking him as he lay, shouted. "so far, well. Courage my brave boys! now for the rest." One of the Duc de Nevers' people hacked off the head. A rope was knotted about the ankles, and the corpse was dragged out into the street amid the howling crowd. Teligny, who was in the adjoining house, had sprung out of bed at the first disturbance, ran down into the court, and climbed by a ladder to the roof. From behind a parapet he saw his father-in-law murdered, and scrambling on the tiles, concealed himself in a garret; but he was soon tracked, torn from his hiding-place, and thrown upon the stones with a dagger in his side. Rochefoucault and the rest of the Admiral's friends who lodged in the neighborhood were disposed of in the same way, and so complete was the surprise that there was not the most faint attempt at resistance.

Montpensier had been no less successful in Louvre. The staircases were all beset. The retinues of the King of Navarre and the Prince had been lodged in the Palace, at Charle's particular desire. Their names were called over, and, as they descended unarmed into the quadrangle, they were hewn in pieces. There, in heaps, they fell below the Royal window, under the eyes of the miserable King, who was forced forward, between his mother and his brother, that he might be seen as the accomplice of the massacre. Most of the victims were killed upon the spot. Some fled wounded up stairs, and were slaughtered in the presence of the Princesses. One gentleman rushed bleeding into the apartment of the newly-married Margaret, clung to her dress, and was hardly saved by her intercession. By 8 o'clock the work which Guise and his immediate friends had undertaken was finished, with but one failure. The Count Montgomery and the Vidame of Chartres lodged in Faubourg St. Germain, across the water, on the outskirts of the town. A party of assassins had been sent to dispatch them, but had loitered on the way to do some private murdering on their own account. When the news reached Montgomery that Paris was up, he supposed, like Coligny, that the Catholics had risen against the Court. He ran down the river's bank with a handful of men behind him, opposite the Tuleries, intending to cross to help his friends; but the boats were all secured on the other side. The soldiers shot at him from under the palace. It was said—it rests only on the worthless authority of Brantome—that Charles in his frenzy snatched a gun from a servant and fired at him also: Montgomery did not wait for further explanation. He, the Vidame, and a few others, sprang to their horses, rode for their lives, and escaped to England.

The mob meanwhile was in full enjoyment. Long possessed with the accursed formulas of the priests, they believed that the enemies of God were given into their hands. While dukes and lords were killing at the Louvre, the bands of the sections imitated them with more than success; men, women, and even children, striving which should be the first in the pious work of murder. All Catholic Paris was at the business, and every Huguenot household had neighbors to know and denounce them. Through street and lane and quay and causeway, the air rang with yells and curses, pistol-shots and crashing windows; the roadways were strewn with mangled bodies, the doors were blocked by the dead and dying. From garret, closet, roof, or stable, crouching creatures were torn shrieking out, and stabbed and hacked at; boys practiced their hands by strangling babies in their cradles, and headless bodies were trailed along the trottoirs. Carts struggled through the crowd, carrying the dead in piles to to the Seine, which, by special providence, was that morning in flood, to assist in sweeping heresy away. Under the sanction of the great cause, lust, avarice, fear, malice, and revenge, all had free indulgence, and glutted themselves to nausea. Even the distinctions of creed itself became at last confounded, and every woman or man who had a quarrel to avenge, a law-suit to settle, a wife or husband grown inconvenient, or a prospective inheritance, if obstacles could be removed, found a ready road to the object of their desires.

Toward midday some of the quieter people attempted to restore order. A party of the town police made their way to the palace. Charles caught eagerly at their offers of service, and bade them do their utmost to put the people down; but it was all in vain. The soldiers, maddened with plunder and blood, could not be brought to assist, and without them nothing could be done. All that afternoon and night, and the next day and the day after, the horrible scenes continued, till the flames burned down at last for want of fuel. The number who perished in Paris was computed variously from 2,000 to 10,000. In this, as in all such instances, the lowest estimate is probably the nearest to the truth.

HOW THE MASSACRE WAS RECEIVED.

The guilt of such enormous wickedness may be distinguished from its cause. The guilt was the Queen Mother's; the cause was Catholic fanaticism. Cathrine de Medici had designed the political murder of a few inconvenient persons, with a wicked expectation that their friends in return might kill Guise and his uncle, whose power was troublesome to her. The massacre was the spontaneous work of theological frenzy heated to the boiling point. No imaginable army of murderers could have been provided by the most accomplished conspirator to have executed such a work in such way. The actors in it were the willing instruments in the hands of teachers of religion as sincere in their madness as themselves. The equity of history requires that men be tried by the standard of their times. The citizens of Paris and Orleans may be pardoned if they were not more enlightened than the sovereign Pontiff of Christendom and the most Catholic King of Spain. Philip, when the news reached him, is said to have laughed for the first and only time in his life. He was happy in being saved from a combination which had threatened him with the loss of his Low Countries.

At Rome, in the circle of the saints, the delight was even more unbounded. Where the blood was flowing the voice of humanity could not utterly be stifled, and expressions of displeasure began early to be heard. In the Holy City there was a universal outpouring of thanksgiving to the Father who had taken pity on his children. The cannon were fired at St. Angelo, the streets were illuminated. Pope Gregory with his cardinals walked in procession from sanctuary to sanctuary to offer their sacrifice of adoring gratitude.

The scene of the massacre was painted by the Pope's orders, with an inscription immortalizing his own gratification and approval. He struck a commemorative medal, with on the one side his own image, on the other the destroying Angel immolating the Huguenots. He dispatched Cardinal Orsini to Paris to congratulate the King; and the assassins of Lyons, on whose hands the blood of the innocents was scarcely dry, knelt before the holy man in the cathedral as he passed through, and received his apostolic blessing.—Froude.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27. Left Elida, Ill., for Norwood Park, finding all well, and the office in good condition. Our pressman had left, and the press was put into the hands of Br. Tousley, a faithful, trusty man in our office. Our help take a general interest in the affairs of the Association.

THURSDAY, Aug. 29. Remaining in the city to-night I had an opportunity to attend the meeting in Green street. There were many good things said to instruct and cheer the heart of the saints. Most spoke of sanctification as a blessing they had lately obtained.

SATURDAY, Aug. 31. Finishing my work at the office, I started for Buchanan, but missed the cars and so stopped over the Sabbath, Sept. 1, in Chicago. And having no appointment I went to hear Eld. Burr, in the Green street chapel. His sermons were on the subject of sanctification, to which he had lately been converted. He spoke of sanctification as a second work distinct from justification, but I have never seen any Bible authority for this view. The Scriptures are plain on the subject. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things are passed away and all things become new." "Created anew in Christ Jesus." "Put off the old man, and put on the new man which is renewed in righteousness and true holiness, after the image of him who created him." This is no second work. It is the work on the heart, and it is done when a man is converted. All other changes are the result of Christian experience and growth in grace.

The earnest proclamation of the "Methodist" form of sanctification, as a speciality, produces results on a certain class of minds which perhaps other preaching would not bring about. Excitable temperaments are especially moved by it, many of whom soon backslide. Yet, some of the more firm and reliable elements in all societies are also brought under this influence. It is to them a wholesome renewal of their covenant with God, to live the higher life. And such persons can be depended upon. With them the higher life is connected with principle. It is not merely a feeling or passion, but a life of right actions and feelings towards others. It is not a sympathy or peculiar feeling towards those of similar views, but a right feeling toward all, or a love of goodness wherever we find it.

It is not a mesmeric state, but one of free moral action. We are not led by others, but think and act for ourselves. Our religion is not in the working of the flesh, but of the renewed mind. It is not merely emotional, but fixed as a purpose to do or to suffer, if need be, for Christ. It does not consist in feeling merely; for a heathen, or Mohammedan, or Mormon may "feel good," but that does not make them good.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6. I have spent the most of this week at the office, the cares and duties of which are of a nature to tax the mind heavily. The paper, and the business of the office, together, bring with them a multitude of duties, all of which must be looked after with scrupulous care, lest any-one should be neglected. It gives us great satisfaction when we lay down at night to know that none of our numerous patrons have been willingly neglected, though from necessity some orders may be delayed for a time.

ORDINATION.

We have in this city and Advent Christian church raised, and sustained for years by our lamented Br. Snyder. He was a German Baptist, but was enlightened on the coming of Christ, and the nature of man and the future reward and punishment. For many years he lived in Louisville, Ky., but spent the last years of his life in Chicago. He fought a hard battle with German mysticism. And at one time told me he despaired of making his brethren see the true doctrine of the nature of man, the Platonic view of the soul, was so deeply rooted in their hearts. But at length prejudice gave way, and many came to the light. And before his death he had the happiness to see a united people in the true faith, both in Chicago, and in Wisconsin, where he spent a part of his time.

Br. Snyder labored most zealously, and built a chapel in this city, and saw every cent of indebtedness paid. When he died, he left the society free of debt, and the church in peace and prosperity. Before his death he applied to me several times to seek out, if I could do so, a good young man of German birth and education, and pious withal, to fill his place, when he should fall asleep, as his disease indicated he must in a brief period. But I failed to find the right kind of a man while he was living, and so the church did the best they could. For a time they employed a young man who was a Lutheran, for their pastor. He turned out badly, and having distracted and divided the church, left them.

The church have now found a suitable young man for their elder, and preacher, Br. Charles Koier, of Chicago, who will prove, I hope, a judicious, safe and reliable man, and so the church prosper under his labors. They are united in him and now call for his ordination. And I heed their call with great pleasure on many accounts. This dear people had been like sheep without a shepherd. This was Br. Snyder's fear. He prayed much for them, and now, after his death, his prayer is answered. I am interested for them on another account. The Germans of the other churches oppose them, and they need our sympathy, and they deserve it. And lastly I feel happy to attend to this request for the sake of Br. Snyder. Though he sleeps, yet the memory of no man, as a dear sympathizing friend, when alive, so deeply touches my heart, save my own dear sons, John and Edwin. When in life his sweet spirit sympathized with mine; and I weep when I recall his kind inquiries respecting all my welfare. Blessed man! I shall see him again in the resurrection.

At half past seven p. m. the service of the ordination began. The devotional exercises were in the German language, by the church. I gave a discourse from 1 Tim. 1: 15, 16, The mission of Christ to save sinners. Br. John Ridley, from Prospect, Maine, assisted me in the service, and gave the right hand of fellowship. The meeting is one of interest. The church are cheered, and hopeful.

SATURDAY, Sep. 7. In company with Br. Ridley, came to Amboy for campmeeting. Here we were greeted by Elds. Clark, Marston, Mabey and others.

The Art of not Hearing.

The art of not hearing is fully as important to domestic hapiness as a cultivated ear, for which so much time and money are spent. There are so many things which it is painful to hear many of which, if heard, will disturb the temper, and detract from contentment and happiness, that every one should be educuated to take in and shut out sounds at will.

If a man falls into a violent passion and calls me all manner of names, the first word shuts my ears, and I hear no more. If in my quiet voygae in life, I am caught in one of those domestic whirlwinds of scolding, I shut my eyes as a sailor would furl his sails, and, making all tight, scud before the gale. If a hot and restless man begins to inflame my feelings, I consider what mischief these sparks might do in the magazine below, where my temper is kept, and instantly close the door. Does a gadding, mischief-making fellow begin to inform me what people are saying about me, down drops the portucllis of my ear and he cannot get in any further.

Some people feel very anxious to hear every thing that will vex and annoy them. If it is hinted that any one has spoken ill of them, they set about searching and finding it out. If all the petty things said of one by heedless or ill-natured idlers were to be brought home to him, he would become a mere walking pincushion, stuck full of sharp remarks. I should as soon thank a man for emptying on my bed a bushel of nettle, or setting loose a swarm of mosquitoes in my chamber, or raising a pungent dust in my house generally, as to bring upon me all the tattle of the spiteful people. If you would be happy when among good men, open your ears; when among bad, shut them.

It is not worth while to hear what your servants say when angry; what your children say after they have slammed the door; what a beggar says whose petition you have rejected; what your rivals say about your buisness or dress. I have noticed that a well-bred women never hears an impertinent or vulgar remark. A kind of discreet deafness saves one from many insults, from much blame, from not a little apparent connivance in dishonorable conversation.—Secretary.

Those whose faces are only seen and whose voices are only heard in seasons of religious revivals, are like the flowers that bloom in the morning and fade in the evening without producing fruit. They are not the evergreens of the Church.

A Syrian convert to Christianity, as the story goes, was urged by his employer to work on Sunday, but he declined. "But," said the master, "does not your Bible say that if a man has an ox or an ass that falls into a pit on the Sabbath day he may pull him out?" "Yes," answered Hayoh; "but if the ass has a habit of falling into the same pit every Sabbath day, then the man should fill up the pit or sell the ass." The story has a sort of a swivel "moral" which will fit a great many disputed points in these days.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 17, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON OF GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

THE article last week entitled The Throne of David, should have been signed "FRANK BURR."

THE report of the Iowa Campmeeting is of a very encouraging character. There has been nothing so good in that State up to the present time. We have accounts from New York, Alton Bay, Southern Michigan and Southern Illinois—all of the same cheering description.

THE meeting at Amboy was marked by many blessed features. There was much excellent preaching, and other work done that will tell through time and all eternity. The time has come for Illinois to renew her strength and vigorous action. The Northern Conference has its best days and most glorious work before it.

FRANCE is being told the truth about the nature and duration of evil. La Fin du Mal is the title of a volume put forth by Dr. E. Petavel, originally read before the Theological Society of Neuchatel, and now published by Fishbacher, of Paris. It is a valuable addition to the French literature on this topic, the Scriptural view having until this been urged only in a few anonymous pamphlets. Dr. Petavel's volume will, we trust, lead many of his countrymen into the truth expressed in the title he has selected, that evil shall have an end!

GETTING THE PAPER.

We wish our friends who have occasion to write us would mention about the time in the week their papers arrive, and whether they come regularly. Some write that their papers come more regularly and sooner than before our removal, while others complain.

We want to get facts to present to the postoffice managers, who will do all in their power to remedy any carelessness or blunders in their department.

IMMERSION.

Not seldom a grain of fact explodes a carefully prepared and screened theory, just as a single spark may blow up a magazine of powder. A correspondent of the Rainbow illustrates this in disposing of a certain futile objection to the practice of immersion as follows:

> I should like to have the opportunity of giving a little enlightenment on the physical consequences mentioned by your correspondent as likely to ensue from immersion in rivers, etc., in climates such as those in which the baptisms recorded in the Scriptures probably took place.
>
> Having spent the greater part of my life in countries where "turbans," "sandals," and loose "robes" are worn, I would mention, for the benefit of those who have not, that men always wear (for decency) an under garment about the hips and loins, so that, at any time they are able to take off their flowing robes, which they do as easily and quickly as we throw off a loose coat. Moreover, the climate is such that, even in the case of females, who could not divest themselves of their apparel, it is a common thing to see women who go to the river for water, wade into, or sit down in, the river, till the water reaches up to their necks, take off their dirty garments under water, wash, or bathe themselves, and (also under water) put on a clean cloth, and then come out of the river—of course, "dripping wet"—stand, and wash their soiled clothes in the river, and, long before they reach their homes—often before they have finished the washing of clothes—they are as dry as, in that climate, they care to be.
>
> The Ethiopian "chancellor," I doubt not, divested himself of superfluous clothing before "he went down into the water" (certainly his turban and sandals); and even if not, from what I know of deserts on "a fine sunshiny day," (which is pretty well the normal state of things in those parts!) neither his "streaming robes" nor his wet "chariot" would have caused him much inconvenience, but rather refreshment, the process of evaporation being so rapid, that neither colds, coughs, rheumatism, nor consumption need be apprehended from sitting in wet clothes there.

CHRISTIAN LIBERTY.

The apostolic injunction, prove all things: hold fast that which is good, is both comprehensive and liberal. There are not in its scope any exceptions of persons or things. We are even called upon to prove the King of heaven: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouses that there may be meat in mine house and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

We are at liberty to prove all men—By their fruits we may know them. Nothing is so beautiful as a good life. Whoever practices the precepts of the sermon on the Mount, who ever looks to Jesus Christ as his Savior, and teaches others to rely on him as the only safe foundation, is a Christian and a brother.

The same comprehensive and liberal rule applies to doctrines of all kinds. We have a right to try the theories and pretensions of all schools by this simple test—Are they good? Do they cause those who embrace them to lead lives of purity and benevolence? Since the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain, it follows that all good has its origin in God. And further, since God tempts no man with evil it follows that whatever is evil in life or doctrine is not of God nor from God. Jesus told those Jews who were his enemies—"If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.... ye are of your father, the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do."

By personal experience or by the experience of others, we are to prove all theories and all practices, and to hold fast those only which are good. Not by personal experience alone are we to prove all things. It is not necessary that I should accustom myself to drink whisky in order to prove that drunkenness is a vice and to be avoided. The effects of intemperence are always bad, while the result of a temperate course of living is always good. It would be no worse to drink whisky than to drink milk, did not the use of the first have a bad effect. Paul has given us a list of bad things, and the centuries since in their condemnation of them have without exception proved that he was right. The experience of mankind—at least of civilized mankind—has been uniform in this one thing: wrong has always been wrong, and right has always been right. It has always been right to love and always wrong to hate. The fruits of the flesh are manifest: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, murders, drunkenness, revelings and such like, of the which I tell you that they who do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Sixteen vices and nine virtues, but the former are all bad while the latter are all good. Let us therefore hold fast to all good things and reject all evil things.

Let us hold fast to love. Love is the fulfillment of the law. God is love. Love never faileth. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. Let us then hold fast to this great doctrine of holiness. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Let us then be faithful, that is, full of faith. "Blessed are the pure in heart." Let us then be pure hearted that we may enjoy God's presence, where there "is fullness of joy and where there are pleasures forevermore."

Christian liberty then is a grand and glorious doctrine. The greatest liberty is consistent only with the highest good. A Christian freeman has the range of the universe. "All things" are his. He is "Christ's, and Christ is God's." Never before was there such a scheme of liberty as that which the gospel of Christ unfolds. Let us stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free and "be not entangled again in the yoke of bondage." J. H. W.

Am I Holy?

This is an important question. One that all should be able to answer truthfully in the affirmative, for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." It is not, "am I almost holy, or partly holy," but "am I holy?" Perhaps many who make this inquiry are in some doubt what the inquiry implies and therefore do not try to answer it themselves, but say they, will leave it with God. But we should know for ourselves so that we are not deceived in our minds with regard to our standing before God.

I think all will agree that a condition of holiness is one of purity, on entire freedom from sin. But what is freedom from sin? Is it only forgiveness? But forgiveness is only for transgression, and does not affect the condition of the flesh by purifying it of worldly lusts. With only the forgiveness of "sins that are past" there yet remain "fleshly lusts that war against the soul." In the conflict with these inward foes, the justified person may gain many victories and rejoice in them, but he more often finds himself too weak, and they obtain the mastery, and he needs to be justified or forgiven for open transgression again, with only this difference, that whereas before he transgressed willfully, now he is overcome, but the act is the same, and as hateful in the sight of God. Grieving over it he starts anew only to return to the same condition of condemnation to be forgiven again, and try again. Such an one is continually "laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works" and cannot "go on into perfection." His journey is but a circle, to come to the same starting point over and over again. When temptation comes there is ever a response in the flesh, and a struggle to keep down the lusts of the flesh lest they prevail, but often in vain. And the victim cries out. "O, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"

This person needs a further work within, a cleansing of the flesh, so that his very body may be presented "holy and acceptable unto God." Or, in the words of Paul, "the very God of peace sanctify you wholly: and your whole spirit, soul and body be presented blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Here the body is to be blameless and presented so unto the coming of Christ. Here is an explanation of the question, "am I holy?" Is my body blameless? Are there foes within? When temptation comes, is there a response to it in my nature? Am I continually struggling to keep down my passions lest they gain the victory over my love for Jesus? If so, then those passions are unholy and need something more than conquering. They need eradicating. The flesh needs cleansing in order for the body to be blameless. The spiritual emotions of the person may be all right, but the fleshy emotions are all wrong. In this case the body is not holy, and I think we all believe the body is a very essential part of the man. Now then, am I holy? What shall we say to this inquiry? Is it yes, or no? Let it be candidly considered and candidly answered, even if we find the response to be in the negative.

I purpose to write several short articles on this subject of holiness for the Times, if the editor will give them place, and therefore I close the present one at this point, leaving the reader to ask the question for himself in the light of the Scriptures I have quoted, "am I holy?"

CAN I BE HOLY.

When once a person knows, or rather comes to a realizing sense of the fact that sin dwells in the flesh, and that howmuchsoever he may seek to do good, yet evil is present with him, then the legitimate and natural inquiry is, Can I be delivered from this power? A deliverance from this condition, so that a person's carnal desires in the flesh are dead, and the whole impulse of the body is spiritual, is the point under consideration. Can the body be controlled by the Spirit of God so that its emotions are not carnal but spiritual? Mark the point. I am not writing about a man's desires for holiness, but about the thing itself. A man may be converted to God so that he loves the things of God and takes delight in his service, but he "finds a law in his members warring against the law of his mind," and the question is, Can he be delivered from this condition?

This is as important a question as the one, "am I holy," for if a person fully realizes that notwithstanding his love to God and his service, there yet remains the "sin in the flesh," it is very important to know whether it must always remain there during mortality, or whether it can be rooted out now.

Must the flesh always in this life be a battle-ground of the Devil, or can its emotions be made pure so that the warfare will be one against outward temptations rather than inward lusts. Some are always talking of the trouble they have with self. Cannot self be purified so that we have no more trouble with it?

I know of many who think this cannot or will not be done in this life, and so they go on making the best of it, as they say, and don't allow it to trouble them, but leave it for God to take care of, while others mourn over it and are continually struggling for deliverance, and feel downcast because of their condition.

The first class make no progress in divine life to speak of, but are always moving in the same circle round and round. Their emotions die out, but they stick to principle, and will serve God if they die for it, but they always acknowledge that they commit sins every day, and every day they ask forgiveness, and thus they keep on sinning and asking forgiveness, and this is their highest attainment, namely a pardoned criminal.

The second class are more conscientious, and they mourn and sigh for deliverance perhaps for years, and, with the general teaching of the present day, might mourn on comfortless until [illegible] last moments of this life, [illegible]ceiving that for which they mourn, unless, perchance, light from God illuminates their minds and suddenly they discover that this inner foe can be dethroned by the power of God, and the whole being be made pure, and they can be "kept by the power of God" free from sin.

Can this change be wrought in us? Can our members be made holy an acceptable unto God? Can the fo within be turned out and we hav peace? Can we become so filled wit the spirit that there will be no inwar response to temptation without? Ca our bodies be "blameless" and cea to be the battle-ground between Go and Satan? Can we become thus holy

Dear reader, I beseech of you "b the mercies of God" that you hav faith to answer this inquiry in the a firmative. Your growth in grace d pends upon thus answering it. Yo increase unto the edifying of the bod of Christ" depend upon it. And the you will be ready for my next inquiry "How can I become holy?"

FRANK BURR.

Time of Christ's Second Coming.

[Third Article.]

"The scepter shall not depart fro Judah, nor a lawgiver from betwe his feet, till Shiloh come; and unt him shall the gathering of the peop be." (Gen. 49: 10.)

The period embraced in this la guage is said to be 1843 years, provi ed Shiloh came A. D. 30, or thir years after his birth; and his comin has been by some claimed to be wh he was born and when honored gifts from the wise men who also wo worshiped him. Others think he can in the fullness of his developme when he began his public ministr Others still think that when he w declared to be the Son of God—by h resurrection from the dead, was t time when he was fully developed the Shiloh.

There is nothing in any of the views but mere conjectures, and o view is as likely to be right as anothe and it is immaterial which is right, there is nothing depending upon an thing definite in themselves, it is de nite time; and that of course will r quire a period that will match oth figures, as has been repeatedly show in the experience of the past and spe ulatons of the present.

Were we to admit that the peri from the time the scepter was given Judah to the coming of Shiloh w just 1843 years (for which there is reliable proof), we by no means a justified in the claim that that is ju half the time God was going to pu ish Israel; for he nowhere intimat such a thing, or even that time h anything to do with the expressio "I will render unto them double for their sins." Even if it had, the pa sage referred to (Is. 40: 2) and its co text would most thoroughly pro that the period covering the wh punishment threatened in the expr sion, "I will render double," &c., pired at the first Advent of Chri There is no such thing as a lite Israel existing since the gospel disp sation was fairly ushered in, as th existed before.

Whatever was embraced in t threat ("I will render double,") has application whatever to anything b literal Israel; and it had its fulfillme while they, as such, were on the sta of action and were under the directi of God, and that for a specific purpo which was to bring about the promi ed seed (Christ); and when this w accomplished they are no longer special people under God, and th national and ecclesiastical organizati was abolished: and the plain sta ments of Paul who was brought up the feet of Gamaliel and taught cording to the perfect manner of t law of the fathers, should settle t question forever. He says: "There neither Jew nor Greek [as distinct su jects of favor or disfavor], bond n free, male nor female," &c., (Gal. 28.) Again: "For there is no diffe ence between the Jew and the Greek for the same Lord over all is rich unt all that call upon him." (Rom. 10 12.) We see that the condition o Israel under the gospel age is the sam as that occupied by the gentile, and one has the same chance for gaining the riches of God's grace that the other has: and truly this is a favored time to comfort Jerusalem if she will accept it. To construe the language of Is. 40 so as to apply it to the second advent of Christ is simply to wrest highly figuratively language from its legitimate moorings, and make a wrong application of the same. The simple essence of the matter portrayed in the [illegible] the 41st and on to the 45th of Isaiah is the deliverence of Israel from Babylon and the introduction of the Messiah, and the glorious condition that would follow the proclamation of the gospel; as the light of the world would then shine, and the enlightenment of the nations would follow: and the mechanism and art of our present day has helped to fulfill this language in part, as any one can see that will carefully read the chapter in detail.

How can any person have the audacity to bring such matters as we are criticising before the world in support of definite time for the Lord to come, and seal their futile productions with bold assertion; "that this double refers to time" and * * "that it ends in 1873," "God's word for it," etc.

Again if we were to admit that a definite period was involved in the punishment of Israel predicted by Isaiah, there is not the slightest foundation for establishing its commencement at the death of Jacob. For nothing is furnished in which we can reasonably draw such a notion. Should we end such a period with the coming of Shiloh and rest upon analogical reasoning as the best basis for such a conclusion that is to be found, we should be driven to the conclusion that the period began with Isaac instead of Judah, as Isaac, was the son of promise from whom Israel as a people can date their existence: "Of whom it was said, that in Isaac shall thy seed be called." (Heb. 21: 18.) Literal Israel began with Isaac instead of Judah, and the idea that because the scepter was not to depart from Judah, that there the date of their punishment was to begin, is simply a forced one, and altogether futile; and there is but one excuse for it, and that is, it will not match other figures when placed where it belongs, as the termination of twice the period from Isaac to Shiloh would be some time beyond 1873, as Isaac was sixty years old when Jacob was born, and Jacob was 147 years old when he died; at which time it is claimed the existence of Israel began; and they were punished till Shiloh came A. D. 30, and then were to be punished as long again to make the double, which would terminate in 1873, as it was 1843 years from A. D. 30 back to the death of Jacob.

I assert, again, that there is not one word of proof for the claim that Israel should date their existence from the death of Jacob: but every thing goes to show that their origin was in Isaac instead of Jacob. Proof: "Who are Israelites,to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises: Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ [or Shiloh] came, who is over all, God blessed forever. Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect; for they are not all Israel which are of Israel; neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children: but in Isaac shall thy seed be called." (Rom. 9: 4-7.)

Now if we begin Israel where the Scriptures do, and that is with Isaac, we have two thousand and fifty years from their beginning to A. D. 30, at which time Shiloh is claimed to have come; and to double that period, as the time when they shall have received "double" for their sins, will carry us down to A. D. two thousand and eighty; two hundred and seven years beyond 1873.

Let me be understood in this matter. The lifetime of Israel, it is claimed was 1843 years, beginning with Judah, and ending with the coming of Shiloh, A. D. 30. Now we have proved that literal Israel began in Isaac, instead of Judah: hence their lifetime measures from the birth of Isaac to the coming of Shiloh, which s two thousand and fifty years: and to double that would carry us down to A. D. 2080, at which time [according to the arrangement herewith supported] Israel shall have returned double for all his sins.

That errors should arise with regard to the time of Christ's advent is a legitimate result of the nature of the case. His children love him and desire to see him, and this desire is like all desires in its effect upon mankind: it blinds their eyes, and perverts their judgment. Let man set his affections upon a thing, and he can easily see every desire centering in that object, that can possibly be drawn out towards it. Now the church love the appearing of Christ and the time of his coming is the most natural thought connected with the event; and it is not strange, that any hint that should indicate his approach should be transformed into positive evidence, in the mind of those loving his appearing. Should you take this feature of loving his appearing from definite time there would be no virtue left in it; and this virtue does not depend upon definite time for its existence: but it exists, and definite time is one of its love-blinded fruits. This principle has developed itself in almost every age of the gospel in the way of faith in this and that period as the time when the beloved Jesus should come. Mark the principle. Loving his appearing, has caused each and every sign to be so transformed as to present to the love-blinded vision, positive evidence of time when he would come.

Can a knowledge of the time of Christ's coming be of any practical value to those who are ready for the event. No; as they by being ready are safe, and to inform them of the precise time could be of no advantage to them, unless they were disposed to take advantage of it should the time be revealed as being at a remote period, and they should conclude to risk a little more in the devil's service; hoping to be forgiven and get all right before the event came. I see no other advantage to be derived on the part of those who are all ready for it, and waiting, which is the best estate they can be found in whenever it may come; and to know just when the time will be could not improve their condition.

And then if we look at it with reference to the wicked, we are certain that those who could not be moved by the certainty and nearness of the event, without knowledge of the time, could not be moved by this additional quality. In other words, if a man will not act with reference to an impending event by being persuaded that it is coming soon, and just when you can't tell, but the event is a certainty and near, you cannot move that man by pointing out the time of the event. Again, if you can show a man that an event is to occur within the space of thirty years, and that he must prepare for it or he is lost, and he refuses to act, you may rest assured that you will gain no influence over him by telling him the precise time within the thirty years, when it will occur. Again, if the certainty of an event that is liable to come upon a man at any time will not move him, you will not get him to exercise faith in the event, by annexing the time of its occurrence. Suppose you could show men that death would be withheld from them till they were seventy years old, how many would prepare for it at thirty-five? With the fact before them that the average age of men now is but thirty-three years how few prepare for death before that age. Again, suppose you tell a man that he will die at forty-three years of age and he gets ready, and does not die; and you again tell him he will certainly go at fifty-four; and you again admonish him of sixty-seven or eight, and that passes; and you say now to him that seventy three is surely the time—what would you expect else than perfect unbelief in your ability to determine the time?

Now what would effect one man upon a principle of human nature, would effect all; and can it be expected that mankind are going to exercise faith in the declaration of any party which has proved itself totally unable to make correct calculations in the past? Who can believe that definite time is of the Lord, when such results follow in its wake?

If a man should make three mistakes, and should come to you with a fourth assertion, the truth of which mainly depend upon the falsity of the first error, you would doubtles be very skeptsical about his statements.

How often this plea is raised for each new time movement: "Why, we never had half the evidence before that we have now for this time;" just as though Christ came at the former periods, and we may surely expect him now because we have more than twice the amount of evidence than was fulfilled in the former instances.

Can any one tell just how much was lacking in past time movements, in the way of evidence? We know he did not come, but how near to it he came without coming, would seem to have been determined by some, judging by what they say about the matter.

Some have gone so far with the matter as to claim he did come in 'forty-three, and they are befogged amid the quicksands of spiritism. May God help his children to mount the watch-tower of this life and probation, and see to it that they are ready for the event, and they will be ready for the time.

I am hoping and praying for a wholesome and intelligent attitude for the people who stand before the world as the counterpart of Noah, preaching an event at hand, soon to come, and waiting for the shout of final doom, when they shall, as did Noah, retire from the conflict, and enter the ark of everlasting rest.

Wm. A. Fenn.

Alton Bay.

I came to camp last Wednesday, and found a goodly number assembled thus early (Sep. 9) making preparations for comfort during the meeting. This is the best place for a campmeeting I have ever seen. The best situated to speak, and for a large congregation to hear the speaker. There is a great number of wooden buildings here, I should think three hundred; and fifty new ones are going up; so you see it is brisk times here. The sound of the saw and hammer is heard from light in the morning till late at night.

Amid all this prosperity in this delightful grove, beside the still waters of this beautiful lake, we find time for evening meetings. Friday the sixth, "the chariots" commenced to leave those "of like precious faith," the boats also, running continually, unloaded their living treasure at this same delightful place. The prospect is that we shall have the largest meeting ever held in this grove.

They come from the South, East, West and North. It is the great Second Advent meeting of the East.

This is Monday, and the meeting is in successful operation. The preaching thus far has been characteristic of our specific faith and call, with a corresponding interest and desire for a readiness to meet the Lord in peace. There seems to be sweet harmony and love existing in the living body, looking for the consummation of our hope.

The old, original faith and fire that appreciates the flying angel's message with the gospel of the kingdom of heaven at hand, is predominant here. Amen! Glory! Hallelujah! is the order of the day, with increasing flame of light and love. The Lord is with us. The weather is delightful. Blessings are flowing, and the Lord is coming.

L. Boutell.

From Oregon.

We are truly thankful that an Adventist has found his way to Oregon, and especially to this part of the State. The seed of truth that has been scattered here by Br. M. M. Norton has taken deep root, and God is being honored by a faithful and zealous servant, setting forth the truth in its primitive purity, dividing to saint and sinner each their portion in due season. Many have embraced the truth in these regions, and many more are honestly searching after it, with a willinguess to lay aside all human creeds and preconceived ideas formed by traditionary teaching, and now taking the Bible for their rule of faith and practice.

For nearly five years I have been trying (in a weak and stumbling way) to "preach the gospel" with local license for the "United Brethren." Yet I did not, neither could I see the authority in the Bible for rewards and punishment at death. Oh! how gladly did I receive the truth when it was made plain to me; and with what eagerness did I search as I began to see it shining through those passages of Scripture I was formerly compelled to pass over as of no use. But, thank God, it is all essential now; and in it all there is harmony. My natural immortality, my reward at death, in heaven above or hell beneath, and wheel within wheel theology, are all gone.

Last Sabbath we had a glorious meeting, for the Lord was with us. Br. Norton preached on the sleep of the dead, occupying two hours and a quarter in the afternoon. This time was occupied in reading the Adventist creed and confession of faith (the Bible) after which some two hours was taken up in social service. In which several were abundantly blessed in testifying to the goodness and mercy of God, and confessing faith in the present truth.

There were two special points of the meeting that are worthy of notice: First, the case of a brother and sister who had been strong advocates of modern theology, having their faith strengthened by the testimony of their children on their death beds, declaring that they were "going to heaven," and requesting father and mother to meet them there. They said they "saw Jesus, and they would soon be with him." The evidence left by the children and the early teaching of rewards and punishment at death was testimony hard to lay down, even to search for truth. But they are honest Christian's, and were willing to make any sacrifice for the truth, and they were not long in getting evidence sufficient to convince them beyond all doubt that "the present truth," as taught by the Adventists, is the truth.

But what could they do with the evidence of these children going to heaven? "The dead know not anything." "In that very day their thoughts perish." Where there is no conscious being there can be no time: hence we believe what the children said: for to them it was going to heaven. Their faith in God reaches to the coming of the Lord, as if but the smallest moment of time intervened between them and the judgment. For instance: One stands upon an high mountain and looks afar off to another mountain, and quicker than thought the eye catches the object. Yet it does not discern the difficulties in the way of reaching it by travel. So with those dying in the faith. The eye of faith catches the promise, and never sees the period between death and the resurrection. Thus the father and mother were enabled to receive the truth and rejoice in God.

There is a wide field of labor here for several of God's ministers. If there are any in your part of the land that can bespared,let themcome and not tarry. We believe there are hundreds of souls starving for the truth. Oh! let the watchman come to warn them soon, "that the great and notable day of the Lord" will speedily come. Br. Norton is doing all that he can to spread the truth, but the field is too large for one man.

Pray for us in Oregon.

Yours in hope of the soon coming of our Lord Jesus,

James L. Campbell.

When Joseph Sutcliff was near his last hour, he said, "I have been thinking of the difference between the death of Paul and Byron. Paul said, "The time of my departure is at hand, but there is laid up for me a crown." Byron said,—

'My days are in the yellow leaf,
The flower, the fruit of life is gone;
The worm, the canker and the grief,
Are mine alone."

The eternal idea of justice makes no one just, that of truth makes no one true, that of beauty makes no one beautiful; so the eternal law of right makes no one righteous. All these standard ideas require a process or drill in the field of experience in order to become matured into character or to fashion character in the models they supply.—Bushnell.

There are men who imagine they should do well enough if they could throw the Bible overboard, and the minister after it, and sink the whole church in the sea. It is as if a man with a shattered limb should think to better himself by thrusting the doctors and their instruments out of doors. They did not break his leg, but only propose to set it. Under the hand of the poorest of them, the limb will be better than if the shattered bone were left to heal unsplintered.—H. W. Beecher.

Can't Find Time.—He who cannot find time to consult his Bible, will one day find that he has time to be sick, he who has no time to pray, must find time to die; he who can find no time to reflect, is most likely to find time to sin; he who can find no time for repentance will find an eternity, in which repentance will be of no avail; he who cannot find time to work for others, may find an eternity in which to suffer for himself.—H. Moore.

Beneficence is a duty. He who frequently practices it, and sees his benevolent intentions realized, at length comes really to love him to whom he has done good. When, therefore, it is said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, it is not meant, thou shalt love him first, and do good to him in consequence of that love, but, thou shalt do good to thy neighbor, and this thy beneficence will engender in thee that love to mankind which is the fullness and the consummation of the inclination to do good.—Kant.

How much would neighbors rise in value, and how much would neighbors rise in beauty, if all should lay aside habits of criticism, and neighborhood scandal, and petty feuds, and ridicule? And if men should study the things that make for peace, and the things that make for happiness, everybody trying to make every body else happy, whata revolution there would be!—Beecher.

A Syrian convert to Christianity, as the story goes, was urged by his employer to work on Sunday, but he declined. "But," said the master, "does not your Bible say that if a man has an ox or an ass that falls into a pit on the Sabbath day he may pull him out?" "Yes," answered Hayob; "but if the ass has a habit of falling into the same pit every Sabbath day, then the man should fill up the pit or sell the ass." The story has a sort of a swivel "moral" which will fit a great many disputed points in these days.

Communications.

"A New Movement."

In The Times of Aug. 13, 1872, p. 13, is found an article under the above caption from Br. O. R. Fassett, which, in my heart, meets with a most hearty, and ready response. Thank God for this timely voice. I hope all will read carefully the article, within whose reach The Times may come.

Will not the other papers republish it? I hope so. Every Adventist in the land, old and young, who pretend in any sense to be called an Adventist, ought to read the article. It does my very heart good to know that there are some yet left who are still on the old battle-ground; where I have stood for over thirty-one years.

Blessed be God! And here I expect to stand until the battle is finished—or at least so long as it may please our God to let me live to have part in it. But my heart has been sadly grieved for some time past on account of the many efforts of the adversary, who again and again, in various ways, has tried to drive the old Adventists from their former battle-ground. But—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ"—there are those left who will fight it out "on this line," until the end.

T. M. Preble.

More Earnest Workmen Needed.

In all the ordinary pursuits of life we pay most attention to that which is of the greatest importance, unless, indeed, we are lazy and profligate. How earnestly men labor to accumulate wealth in property of some sort, that may be of benefit in the few short years of our life. We let no opportunity pass, which might afford a chance to add to our earthly prosperity. Let some friend tell us of an opportunity to make a good investment—a splendid farm or business property, and we have plenty of time to listen, perhaps to spend hours in "talking the matter over." If a circular is handed to us headed, "A rare chance to make money," we will take time to read it carefully and pass our judgment thereupon. Not to our own interests alone, but also to that of our friends and neighbors do we continually look. If we know of anything that will benefit our friends in this life, we hesitate not to inform them of it. We make use of every argument in our power to induce them to do that which we think will add to their worldly advancement.

Now the question arises, do we as Christians, act in regard to the things of a future life, as we do with respect to those of time? Do not the concerns of eternity, far exceed in importance the things of time? Are not many of us indolent and profligate in the work of our Master? Do we spend a sufficient portion of our time in gathering a wealth of knowledge, that will not only benefit us in an endless eternity, but will, also, enable us to make loans to others which shall bring us compound interest through all the long ages to come? Although your friends invest their own capital in some paying investment, they will thankfully remember the one who turned their attention in this direction. So, although Christ may redeem and save, who shall measure the eternal gratitude that will fall to the share of the one who pointed the saved one to the source of everlasting life. You feel a great satisfaction in thinking, "I induced my friend to buy that valuable building," or "that beautiful tract of land." How much more valuable will be a mansion in the New Jerusalem, a home residence 'mid the fields of eternal deliverance.

And then how cheaply the great owner of this land and city property lends all the capital that it is necessary to invest. The price is only nominal. If you work earnestly for him, he has promised (and his promise is sure) to give you undisputed possession, whether you gain for him little or much. But you must pay the interest; and let me say it is here on earth it must be paid. This is the only opportunity you will ever have of assisting in the work of leading souls to Christ.

F. G. Williams.

Occupation.—What a glorious thing it is for the human heart! Those who work hard seldom yield to fancied or real sorrow. When grief sits down, folds its hands, and mournfully feeds upon its own fears, weaving the dim shadows that a little exertion might sweep away into a funeral pall, the strong spirit is shorn of its might, and sorrow becomes our master. When troubles flow upon you dark and heavy, toil not with the waves, and wrestle not with the torrent; rather seek by occupation to divert the dark waters that threaten to overwhelm you, into a thousand channels, which the duties of life always present. Before you dream of it, those waters will fertilize the present and give birth to fresh flowers, that will become pure and holy in the sunshine which penetrates to the path of duty in spite of every obstacle. Grief, after all, is but a selfish feeling, and most selfish is the man who yields himself to the indulgence of any passion which brings no joy to his fellow men.

The Straits of Orthodoxy.

"And fear not them who kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul, but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." (Mat. 10: 28.)

Two different meanings are given in this last clause. Certain Christians believe we should take the language of the Bible as of any other book, in its literal sense, except where it is evidently used figuratively. They find the word 'destroy' thus defined: "in general, to put an end to." They then understand the passage to declare, that he, who is to be feared, is able 'to put an end to' the soul and the body in the fires of hell (gehenna). As the Scriptures taken literally invariably corroborate this view, and beyond question enforce it by their illustrations of the same, we are justified in calling this the scriptural view.

Other Christians believe that God has rendered it impossible for him to put an end to the souls he has made. They assert that the soul cannot die; and therefore when the Bible says it does die, it must mean something else. With such the word 'destroy' must have some other than its obvious meaning: or, if taken literally, they assume it must be applied not to the soul, but to some of its attributes or conditions. The latter is the alternative adopted, and as they assume that the expression 'to destroy the soul' means not to put an end to its being, but to its "well-being," or being happy: in other words, "to destroy the soul," is not to destroy the soul, but its happiness. This interpretation we recognize as the orthodox, as distinguished from the scriptural.

But though such false doctrine may with the unthinking or the blindly prejudiced pass for genuine, yet when candidly and faithfully scrutinized, when the test of truth is applied to it, as with the toad by the ear of Eve in Paradise Lost, at the touch of Ithuriel's spear, the lurking demon springs into view.

Notice then, first, that our Lord's language in itself, inferentially, yet decidedly, condemns the orthodox view. He uses the term kill as applied to the body in its literal, not in any figurative sense. In the connected clause he uses the same word as applied to the soul, "cannot kill the soul." If the word kill is literal in the first clause, it must be in the second: no speaker, without explaining himself, can pass from a literal to a figurative use of a word in the same sentence. Here beyond question then, our Lord speaks directly of a literal killing or destroying the soul, as if it were a thing possible, not the impossibility that orthodoxy unwarrantably assumes.

Secondly, if we accept the orthodox assertion that destroying the soul means destroying its happiness, on that view we inquire, who then is the destroyer?

What destroys the happiness of the soul? It is sin, that is, the agents of sin, that alone can do this. The devil and wicked men tempt and lead a man into sin, and so become indirect agents, while the man himself choosing sin, is the direct agent in the loss of that happiness, which comes from the obedience and the favor of God.

Now such cannot be God's work. It is blasphemy to insinuate that he would thus wantonly destroy the happiness of any intelligent being, whom, in his love, he has created. The sinner himself he may destroy; he may cut off the entire life of one who has chosen (2 Pet. 2: 12) to live as a brute, and who shall perish as such; but he will not help in the devil's work. "He tempteth no man." He cannot lead man into sin, and thus by perverting him, destroy his happiness in the only way in which, while life is retained, such destruction can be effected.

So apparent is this conclusion that, to evade its force, the excellent German commentator, Stier, and others with him (Lange in first though not the second edition), in remarking upon this passage, have advanced the idea, strictly logical for orthodoxy and yet most absurd, that our Lord referred to Satan as the one to be feared: to quote Stier's words, "the horrible, nameless one, who has actually power and permission from God, first to hurt the soul as a tempter, and then to destroy [in orthodox sense] both body and soul in hell as a tormentor." (Stier's Words of Jesus, Am. Ed. Vol. 1, p. 184.) This view Olshausen, Alford, and others, have felt compelled to combat, showing that such references to Satan were at variance with the whole context; that we are ever directed to fear God, not Satan, whom indeed we may successfully resist (Jas. 4: 7); and that such an interpretation contradicts Jas. 4: 12—"There is one lawgiver who is able to save and to destroy." The pertinence of this latter reference Stier denies, making use of a style of argument quite common in theological disputes, claiming that here the word destroy, although precisely the same Greek word as in Mat. 10: 28, has this time its literal, not its orthodox sense! Now it means this, now it means that!

To such pitiful shifts are religious teachers driven, and such needless discussions arise, when they depart from the plain, literal meaning of God's word. The sad separation of Christians into so many denominations, differing in their interpretations of the standard of truth, and the theological controversies that have shaken the religious world, all come from the strange endeavor to reconcile the serpent's lie, "Ye shall not surely die," with the clear scriptural declaration to the contrary. The soul shall die! Body and soul—all possibility of a future re-living—shall be literally destroyed, in that fiery hell into which the sentence of the Judge shall cast those, who have willfully transgressed his law, written in their hearts. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life (a literal life eternal); and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of condemnation (a literal, death eternal).

Reader, have you chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from you? Have you accepted the free pardon and love of him who died for you, and is "now alive forevermore, and hath the keys of death and of the grave?" And so have you, "by his resurrection, a living hope of an inheritance incorruptible, ready to be revealed in the last time." If not, remember, now is the accepted time, the day of salvation.

Or, having thus laid hold on eternal life for yourself, can you not bring "the words of this life" to some brother perishing in his sins, so that through God's help, you may "save a soul from death?"

C. L. Ives.

Leaving for England.

FROM OUR ENGLISH CORRESPONDENT.

Mr. Editor:—It is to ones self at least, a very bustling and important affair, to pack his earthly all and remove to another town. The breaking up of home, the sundering of ties, the last "good by" to loved ones, are generally more than even a flinty heart can stand without rending. These circumstances strike like the sacred rod on the granite soul, and waters gush out in profusion. And if a near removal to a near by town, marks an epoch in a man's life, how much greater the affair when he is about to leave, not a town or State merely, but a country that has fostered him, in which he leaves behind loving friends and hallowed associations. This is the case with your correspondent.

But traveling is easy to-day, and much of the discomfort which formerly attended migrators has completely ceased by the manifold facilities offered to passengers. When our hoary-headed fathers were boys, the best means of conveyance was the old stage-coach line that galloped through the town up to the hostelry, to bait and water its horses, and take up passengers for the next and still more distant stagings. An oath, a coarse jest, a taking in vain the name of God, a whooping laugh, with a crack and slash of the whip around the horse's ears, started the nervous and excited creatures at break-neck speed. They were rushed down hills, over plains, and through gates, at such velocity as to arrive at the next station, foaming at the mouth, exhausted, panting for breath, and streaming with perspiration. Traveling then was a dread. "To be well shaken when taken" described the prospect of a passenger intendant. The jolting of the rolling and jumping vehicle, the discomfort of being crowded, and a whirling brain, were part of the programme to be expected. So that passengers usually reached their destination spent with the fatigue of the journey. But those days are in the past, and the coaches of the long ago are buried in the same grave. Times have changed; in a moral sense for the worse; but for traveling conveniences much for the better. The long lines of steel rail laid athwart log sleepers, the swift, yet smooth glide of the steam cars, drawing their coaches after them filled with large and precious cargoes of human life, the absence of profanity and vulgarity, the easy stop at the various stations by means of air brakes, are immense improvements over the rude and crude means of transit of the olden time.

And as much improvement has been made in crossing the main. As your readers well know, between Europe and America there stretches a large body of water called the Atlantic Ocean. Perhaps its width at its narrowest part is not far from three thousand miles. And once the small sailing craft only ran between the fatherland and the adopted home of the English speaking race. Then the time consumed in the passage might have been set down in safety as from a month to six weeks. Then, when a vessel was caught in a storm it tacked and beat about in the ocean till the fury of the element was over; but now "the times" have annihilated them, and placed in their room handsome palatial steamers of large tonage, rich in their accommodations as the noble and pretentious hotel, stocked in their cabins with the best of drawing-room furniture, soft with velvets, home-like with pianos, ornamented with gold and cornice work. By the aid of the propeller ships are driven forward at great speed through calm and storm, and the whole intervening space between the United States and Europe is usually covered in from nine to twelve days, and it has been made in eight. Such speed lessens the danger of the passage as it gets ocean voyagers out of a storm quicker, and exposes them to the fickle elements for a less number of days. We can see that this mode of improved and express transportation is so altogether above the past as to be out of comparison and only in contrast.

There are many companies to-day running such steamers; but your correspondent believes there is none that can show a larger and more perfect fleet than the Anchor Line. Their steamers are of various sizes and draughts, and number about forty, all told. They are well provisioned, manned and officered, have very excellent cabins and other accommodations, and are well calculated in their equipments to meet the needs of those who go on the mighty deep. By this line, all our brethren known to me who have visited England, have made the trip. By it your correspondent came to this country; and as it is "good enough," by it he hopes on the 14th, to set sail on the good ship "Anglia," praying for fine skies, calm seas, and a quick and prosperous voyage, should it be the good will of an indulgent Father to grant them.

Leaving America! this is the gist of my letter. Leaving friends, but bearing away their good will. Having their prayers on my account—their invocations that the benedictions of heaven may attend me. And I know that the effectual fervent prayers of a righteous man availeth much. Leaving America! I trust to do the will of "our Father" "in heaven." Then "Farewell" to the saints holy and beloved—understand not a simple wave of leave taking; but a hearty, earnest desire that in time and in eternity ye may all fare well. And good speed, even God's speed, to all who run the way of God's commandments with pleasure and purpose. And an intense desire of a yet propitious heaven that many a sinful, wretched wanderer may be led to bethink himself of his sins and repent.

Mr. Editor, permit me to say one word more and that is for Messrs. C. L. Bartlett & Co., 16 Broad St., Boston, who are agents for the Anchor Line—a line I think equal to any, if not better than some others; one I can recommend to parties contemplating a visit to the old land. The agents, who are gentlemanly and obliging, tell me they are always ready to secure good berths for our people and your readers, on the best of terms; and I am sure I can cordially recommend them, and believe they will keep their word. The fare is $65 and $75 cabin, as against $75 and $85 on other lines.

But I will scribble you in my next a brief diary of our voyage, and the loving kindness of "our Father," whose "way is in the seas," whose "faith" is "in the great waters," and whose "footsteps are not known." For the present, adieu!

Discussion.

The following propositions were discussed near Alanthus, Mo., by Eld. A. F. Dugger, and Eld. Jasper Coffey of the Christian church, June 24–28.

Resolved, That man exists in a conscious state between death and the resurrection.

Eld Coffey affirms.

Resolved, That endless misery is not a Bible doctrine. Eld. Dugger affirms.

Eld. Coffey has had considerable experience as a debator, and is a well qualified exponent of the peculiar tenets of the "Christian" order.

After making some appropriate introductory remarks he proceeded with his attempt to prove that man is conscious after death by an appeal to 2

Cor. 4: 16. Where Paul says that "though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." He remarked that the apostle had in his mind a feeble body which suffers disease and decay, while there is an inward man that is "renewed day by day." Reference was made to Eph. 3: 16; Rom. 8: 23; 2 Cor. 5: 10. He affirmed that this "inner man" has consciousness between death and the resurrection and that it is the intellectual man, and quoted the apostle's language, "We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved we have a building of God," &c. John 11: 25; 6: 51 and the Transfiguration were referred to. He argued that Moses and Elias were as really there as living conscious beings, although Moses had been dead over fifteen hundred years.

Br. Dugger, in reply, gave examples of the use of the terms "new man' and "inner man" and showed that the passages quoted by his opponent were not relevant, and did not bear upon the question at issue. He then called attention to the account of the creation of man in order to show what he is, and showed plainly (Gen. 2: 7; 5: 5) that Adam was called man before God added the breath of life, and that no account is given of placing a man within the man formed of the dust. The expression "inner man" must be understood in harmony with the account of creation. Upon John 11: 25, 26, where Jesus declares that "he that believeth in me shall never die," he proved that Jesus referred to the resurrection state, when believers will become immortal.

Eld. Coffey then labored to show that Adam died a spiritual death, and brought up the expression "I am not a God of the dead but of the living," to prove the dead are alive. But Eld. Dugger showed that Adam became subject to death on the day he ate of the forbidden fruit, as the expression in the Hebrew, "dying thou shalt die," plainly shows the tree of life was guarded in order to prevent his eating of its fruits, as by so doing he would have had opportunity of living on eternally in sin and rebellion against God. The point he impressed upon the audience was that man suffered, and the conscious state of man was entirely overlooked in Genesis and by the apostles and prophets. Lk. 20: 35–39, where the words "I am not the God of the dead," &c. occur, show that all do live unto him in the sense that they exist in the purpose of God and will be brought to life at the resurrection. Eld. Coffey offered a syllogism based on this text:

God is not a God of the dead.

He is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Therefore Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are alive.

From this conclusion a basis was made for another syllogism which overthrew the first completely.

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are alive.

Living men or beings are not subjects of a resurrection.

Therefore, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob can have no resurrection! Br. Dugger quoted Rom. 14: 9 where Paul declares that "to this end Christ both died and rose and revived that he might be Lord both of the dead and living," showing his power to raise the dead (not the living) to life.

For lack of better arguments Eld. Coffey repeated his previous texts and placed great stress on them. He affirmed that the "inward man" never loses its consciousness and that he possessed a twofold nature: while possessing an external body he also had an "inward man," and that while the body is decaying, the inward man is renewed day by day. (2 Cor. 5: 4; Jno. 11: 25; Acts 23: 6, 7.) The Transfiguration was again brought forward, and he represented it to be a convention composed of delegates from the earth state, the glorified state, and intermediate state of existence; and, furthermore, did not believe it was a dream or fancy, as they were wide awake. He then mentioned an error, as he thought, of Br. Dugger and his brethren, in defining the term death as being equivalent to annihilation, repeating it with much emphasis. This was a sad blow to his hope of success, as it was a positive misrepresentation.

Gen. 1: 26 was appealed to in proof of the dual nature of man, because God said "let us make man in our image" which was a manifest weakness on his part. He said there was a marked distinction between the spirit of the beast and of the man, and referred to Eccl. 3: 21; 12: 7, to show its consciousness after passing the boundaries of time. He admitted the dead do not know anything that transpires here on earth, and that he goes to the spirit land; and then made a comparison to show that although the man was dead, he was still conscious, which was very inapt and was not noticed.

Br. Dugger again referred him to the story of creation as the only proper place to ascertain what man is, and pressed its importance as he had thus far failed to show the origin of man. He showed, too, in reply to his remarks on Rom 8: 23 that it referred to the resurrection, and the word "ourselves" did not bear upon the proposition: and if it did apply to the "inward man," proved that it was under sentence of death. (2 Cor. 1: 9.) He clearly showed also, if those who believe in Christ never died, that a fair inference would teach, no life to the unbeliever.

The question was then raised, Where is Moses? is he alive or dead? Deut. 3: 23–29; 4: 22; 34: 6, established the fact that Moses died and was buried: consequently he must have been raised if he appeared in reality on the Mount. Yet Eld. Coffey insisted the "vision" was a reality. He referred to the witch of Endor (1 Sam. 28: 7–19) and had a great many dates to prove that Samuel conversed with Saul five years after his death, and affirmed it proved Samuel was conscious after death. For want of a better proof he related a death-bed scene, which was very affecting, but was no argument.

His course thus far has been in a zig zag direction, without coming to the point at issue, man being the subject and not "familiar spirits," or "human spirits," or "visions." He showed considerable ingenuity in evading the direct question and rambling off in all directions for argument.

Br. Dugger objected to the witness, and in an able manner reasoned against the witch being received as a true witness, and that her testimony could not be taken. Could it be possible that after God declared his just judgments against witchcraft and sorcery and all that should consult those who used it, that he would allow the backslider, Saul, to gain any information from her? The Lord had departed from Saul and would not answer him by dreams nor by prophets; yet this deceiver pretended to call up one of them to satisfy a wicked king. In all the narrative not one word is said about Saul seeing Samuel, but it was the witch all the time, who was using deception in the case. And furthermore, if she raised the dead she must have the keys to unlock the grave. But Christ is declared to hold them; therefore she could not have raised him, as no such authority was given her. And there is no evidence whatever to prove that "disembodied" human spirits communicate with the living. This was an unanswerable argument and was appreciated by the audience.

Eld. Coffey noticed the denial of Br. Dugger that disembodied human spirits communicate with the living, and thought the witch stood in his way, or he would have disposed of it sooner, and quoted Lev. 19: 31; 20: 6 to show that witchcraft and sorcery were a reality, which had not been denied. Affirming it as proof that demons and devils exist and that there were 'disembodied' spirits, which he never proved, and also said that God permitted the witch to bring Samuel up. He accused Br. Dugger of trying to conceal God's truth because he would not take the testimony of this "medium." He decided that Saul sought for information in an unlawful manner, and that he suffered for it. Br. Dugger had not denied that it was a reality, but did deny the agency of human spirits, and said there was a positive law against it, and it was unreasonable to suppose God would violate his own law. He then referred to the "inner man" and asked if the wicked have an "inward man," and is it the spirit or soul? Reference was made to Eph. 2: 15 where the apostle speaks of making "of twain one new man," and the question raised would Eld. C. contend that this was a literal man. And Peter speaks of the "hidden man of the heart," showing these and similar expressions were figurative. No argument could be based upon them. Paul was appealed to, by Eld. Coffey, as being a Pharisee, without a qualification. He was asked if Paul was a Pharisee in the broadest sense of the term. Josephus was then appealed to in regard to their particular faith and it was clearly demonstrated that he was not in every point a Pharisee. Christ tells his followers "to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees," which would have been unreasonable if Paul was a believer in all their doctrines. The word of God entirely overlooks the theory of consciousness after death, and does not teach two conflicting doctrines, therefore it cannot be true.

Eld. Coffey made some very reasonable admissions in regard to the faith of the Sadducees and Pharisees, and then quoted from the Emphatic Diaglott, and referred to it as our "oracle," which was not altogether true. The case of the rich man and Lazarus then came up, and to his mind proves there are two characters represented: the spirits of the righteous and of the wicked go to hades; gives Josephus' description of hades, also the number of times it occurs. He gave its definition as meaning not to see or the unseen. One apartment for the righteous and another for the wicked, where the "inner man," soul or spirit goes. Hades, then, simply means the unseen world, and it don't make any difference where it is. He makes Abraham's bosom represent a place of security, Paradise a place of pleasure, and that the righteous and wicked are conscious in this unseen world.

Eld. Dugger briefly noticed the case of Lazarus and the rich man and explained it as referring to a condition, and not a place. The two individuals are a rich man and poor man, and not as good and bad men; so that it refers only to condition and not character. Reference to Job 7: 9; 10: 21; 10: 18.

Eld. Coffey then referred to the thief on the cross, and asks where did Christ go? and answers, to hades. He stated his position to be that "Paradise" was in hades, so that Christ and the rich man and thief must have been in the same place. He again attempted to prove the consciousness of man after death by referring to Elijah's restoring the child to life. (1 Ki. 17: 21.) Laid great stress upon this. Stephen's case was next brought up to prove his position, but did not prove to be any support. 2 Cor. 12: 1, 2 was appealed to. He gave a partial definition of the word vision, as the act of seeing external objects, and then tried to prove that Paul was out of the body, or in it beholding the beauties of Paradise, whereas he had located Paradise in the "unseen." The souls under the altar, Rev. 6: 9 then demanded his attention, and he stated that the word soul was used as equivalent to spirit or "inner man." He also requested Br. Dugger to answer the question, Did Christ die and was he unconscious? Br. Dugger, in replying to him, referred again to Lk. 16: 19 and briefly explained it and showed the meaning of the original word for hell to be the state of the dead or the grave.

In regard to the question whether Christ died or not, it is certain he truly died; and Br. Dugger plainly showed that he did, and that there were twenty-four passages declaring this truth. If he did not die, how could God have raised him from the dead. In 1 Ki. 17: 21 the word soul occurs instead of life. It is plain that the life of the child came into it again. The souls under the altar possessed blood, and that the altar is not in heaven, but on earth: and as Eld. Coffey places all souls in hades, then John could not have seen them. But he declares he saw the souls. In summing up, Eld Coffey repeated his texts and arguments, and said that if Br. Dugger's position was true he would not give much for the Bible. Such remarks are not at all creditable to him. Br. Dugger then brought in his closing arguments, following his opponent closely, nailing the truth fast at each advance, on the minds of the people. Many points are omitted on account of time and space. E. A. Marsh.

Conference Minutes

New York A. C. Conference.

The first Q. M. of this Conference, this year, by a special vote of the annual session, was held in connection with the State Conference at Fairport, Aug. 14–17, 1872. Properly this was an adjourned session of the annual Conference;—certain unfinished business belonging constitutionally to that body having been made the special order of this meeting as advertised in the President's call.

The business meetings, of which there were six, were each called to order by the President, and opened by devout prayer, and singing. At the first session, Wednesday morning, Br. W. Vreeland not being present, the address was postponed, and was finally given on short notice, Thursday morning, by his alternate, Br. J. E. Wells.

Committees. Business:—J. H. Whitmore, W. J. Hobbs, and R. C. Brown.

Devotional Exercises:—D. Cogswell, A. P. Moore, and B. P. Stevens.

Campmeeting:—B. P. Stevens and R. C. Brown, Eastern District; D. Cogswell and N. T. Withington, Southern District; B. C. Simonds and P. M. Grinnell, Western District, and Marshall S. Hall, Canada.

Brn. D. T. Cooper and Wm. I. Lord were appointed to fill a vacancy in the present acting committee.

The following delegates were received; the sums following their names being the amount of the Quarterly collections taken by their respective churches: N. McCollock and D. T. Cooper, Rochester ($6,00); Moses Whitaker, Darien ($5,00); O. B. Brown, Honeoye Flats ($4,10); N. T, and S. H. Withington, Springwater ($5,37); Edward Sanderson, East Shelby ($6,05); D. Cogswell, Dansville ($10,00); E. A. Bowe, LeRoy. Total amount of the collections $36,52. This, together with $38,48 from the camp collections, making $75,00 was put into the hands of the devotional committee for an equitable distribution among the ministers, in view of their (generally) small support in the mission field. May the Lord bless it abundantly to them, as he did the five loaves and two small fishes.

In the examination of the standing of ministers, some inquiries were made relative to the active services (as ordained ministers) of Brn. Ira Allen and J. H. Suttenton. Brn. Cogswell and Newell were appointed to confer personally or by letter with them respecting the same. No charges being preferred against any member of the conference, by any, this order was passed and the reports of delegates and ministers taken up. These generally were interesting and not more varied than usual; all had trials, hopes and fears; discouragements and encouragements; sunshine and clouds; but all reported firm resolutions to press the battle till Jesus comes and gives release. Letters were read from Brn. C. H. Williams and J. W. Taylor, and from the church at Lockport.

The special business of the session was now reached and the chairman of the business committee reported the following preamble and joint resolution which was, with little discussion, unanimously adopted.

Whereas, it is desirable that a full attendance of the members of this Conference should be had at each of its general meetings; and,

Whereas, such meetings have grown so large with us, as that this result cannot well attain under our present custom of holding four general meetings each year; therefore,

Resolved 1, That for the purpose of meeting this difficulty, this Conference shall hereafter be composed of (for the present) three Quarterly meeting Districts. 2. The churches of each District shall hold three regular quarterly meetings, succeeding the general annual session, each year. 3. The churches at Darien, LeRoy, Lockport, Brockport, Knowlesville, Murray, East Shelby, etc., shall be known as the Western District; the churches at Honeoye Flats, Springwater, Dansville, Freemont (Stevens' Mills), Rodgersville, Hornellsville, Cohocton, etc., shall be known as the Southern District; and that the churches at Rochester, Seneca Falls, South Butler, Conquest, Wolcott, Alton, etc., shall be known as the Eastern District.

4. The officers of these districts, until the next Annual meeting, shall be as follows:

Western District: President, A. C. Newell; Vice Pres., W. Vreeland; Secretary, A. P. Moore; Treasurer, B. C. Simonds.

Southern District: President, D. Cogswell; Vice Pres., W. J. Hobbs; Secretary, H. H. Brown; Treasurer, S. H. Withington.

Eastern District: President, M. R. Miles; Vice Pres., Wm. A. Fenn; Secretary, Wm. E. Brown; Treasurer, R. C. Brown.

5. It shall be the duty of Secretaries of the several districts to report to the Secretary of the general Conference at least four weeks before the Annual Session.

Those churches in the several districts desiring the next quarterly meeting, will, of course correspond immediately with the proper officers, who are expected to call the meetings about the first of December, March and September. May the Lord greatly bless this new plan of conference for advancing its general interests through the State and, we earnestly pray that a new impetus may be given to the cause in each district. Brethren and sisters do all help—don't miss a meeting, one of them, one of you.

The character of the religious exercises of this session has been set forth in the report of the campmeeting.

W. E. Brown, Sec'y.

The Dusty Room.

A young girl was sweeping a room one day, when she went to the window shade and hastily drew it down. "It makes the room so dusty," she said, "to have the sunshine coming in!"

The atoms of dust which shone golden in the sunbeams were unseen in the dimmer light. The untaught girl imagined it was the sunshine which made the dust.

Now, many persons imagine themselves very good people. One poor old man, who had lived all his life without a thought of love to God, said he was all ready to die. "He didn't owe any man a cent." If the spirit of God should shine brightly into such a heart, how do you suppose it would look? It would show them sins enough to crush them.

The light of the spirit is like the sunshine in the dusty room. It reveals what was before hidden. When we begin to feel unhappy about our sins, let us never try to put away the feeling. Don't let us put down the curtain, and fancy there is no dust. It is the Holy Spirit's voice in our hearts. He is showing us ourselves; and better still, he will show us the true way to happiness.

Neglect of Duty.

Will the simple acknowledgement of the neglect of duty atone for such neglect? I do not think it will. Yet very many are living as though they thought it did.

I have known persons who, when spoken to with regard to neglected duty, would say, "I know it, I know it," and they would hope very earnestly that they might "be enabled to do better in the future." The future never seemed to come to them.

Br. G——— was in the habit of speaking in class-meeting, in this wise: "Friends, I know I am not as good as I ought to be; I do not go to church, nor to prayer-meeting as much as I ought to go; and of late I have neglected the Sunday-school, but I hope I may do better in the future. I want you all to pray for me." Then he would sit down to await the sympathy of his hearers. They were well aware he had no excuse for his carelessness or indifference.

One evening Br. W———, after listening as patiently as he could for the end of Br. G.'s remarks, arose, and in a very distinct and earnest manner, said:

"If I may be allowed to give my advice, I would say to Br. G———, that when Sunday comes, he shall rise in time for church, get ready—and go. When Wednesday evening comes, with its prayer-meeting, get ready—and go. Whenever there is Sunday-school, get ready—and go!"

Br. W——— then sat down, and all present felt that it was just the best advice that could be given.

Now, reader, if you have a duty, that from time to time you have neglected, set about it. Do it at once. Be assured, you can have no peace and joy until you do. And, "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men."—Sel.

If you venture to decide in a difference between two of your friends, be assured you will lose one of them. It is better to be an umpire in a dispute betwixt your enemies; for, in that case,

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 17, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do not fail to comply with these suggestions.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price. Two copies, post paid, 10c; 25 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

The Faith of St. Paul.

The immediate demand for this work so far exceeded our anticipations, that the first edition was exhausted ere we were aware. The second edition is in preparation and will be ready soon. Orders will then be promptly filled.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No 375 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music.

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post paid, for 25c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

P. G. MARSH Thank you for the "Postscript." .. M. J. HUNT. Geo Trask, Fitchburg, Mass., is the party to address for tobacco tracts...T. J GIDDINGS. Quite impossible to visit you at present....TO ALL. Please use good ink, and write names plainly .. C. E BARNES We were not offended, but grateful Still we could not receive it. A. C. HUETSON. It could not have come in a better time.... E. S. R. It is indeed a comforting thought that we are only required to do what we can. If prayer is the only thing we have to give, how faithful we should be in bestowing it. A. M HUNT. We do not know where to procure the book you name. J. W. THOMPSON. You did not give Br. Card's name or address.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A Sanford 2 W L Reddington E A Lake A E Fox O E Cole W Royce C Churchill J M Snook G Benfer B Constable H F Cordell J A Junk W L Reddington S S Babcock M Pierando L C Collins J Wilder R Sproull R A Miller J Luttrell J R Wilson C Combs S P Whitney J Graham L N Snell E Wakeman G E Lloyd R V Philip O P Davis C M Shepard A Sanford E S Penwell G Wright T Wilson J Ferriss J P Thing W H Jarvis J A Knott T Vandervort C Holland J M Snook G W Turner S M Lum J Thayer W B Hackling B F Workman P W Hough D D Reed O R Fassett E C Andrus C Baker C T Russell jr P Hitchcock R Vites P H Walt M H King J Lowry J N Porter P Allyn E Lister A Thompson L A Richardson L H Davis J H Dibler Dr Nale D M Evans A J Young L D Weaver L C Collins J Thompson.

Tract Fund.

G E Merrill 80c; Wm Maine $10; Mrs D Baker $1.

Marriages.

BAUM—THURSTON.—Aug. 11, 1872, at the bride's father's, in Galien, Mich., by Eld. Jas. Ferriss, M. H. Baum, of Onondaga, Mich., and Salina Thurston, of Galien.

MORFORD—CHASE.—On Sept. 10, in Almo, Wis., at the residence of the bride's fa[illegible] by Eld. P. W. Hough, Mr. F. D. Morford, of [illegible]lvania, and Miss Ida W. Chase.

EVERTS—CHURCH.—In Uni[illegible]d., Sept. 8, 1872, by Eld. D. Mathewson, [illegible]as A. Everts of Winnemac, Ill., and Mi[illegible]antha Church, of Union Mills.

Obituary.

DAY.—Died, Sept. 3, 1872, in Sanilac, Sanilac Co., Mich., Andrew T. Day: aged 4 years, 1 month and 10 days.

Sept. 4, James A. Day; aged 1 year, 4 months; only children of David and Canvass Day.

The funeral service was held in the Advent chapel, Pt. Sanilac. It was the writer's privilege to address a large and deeply afflicted audience from the words, "Comfort one another with these words." (1 Thes. 4: 18.) We endeavored to show the Christian's hope centers in the resurrection. Br. and Sr. Day were comforted, as their dear children were lowered by kind hands in one grave, and we sang these sweet words of comfort:

"We shall sleep, but not forever
In the lone and silent grave ...
There will be a glorious dawn &c."

Farewell till then. GEO. WRIGHT.

BOON.—Died, Aug. 5, 1872, at Berrien Centre, Mich., Martha A., wife of Henry Boon; aged 40 years, 5 months and 16 days.

Sister B. leaves a husband and three sons to mourn, but not as those who have no hope. She died triumphant, and sleeps in Jesus sweetly, until the coming of the Blessed One.

Words of comfort by the writer, from Job. 14: 10.

JAS. FERRISS.

IRWIN.—Died, Aug. 10, 1872, in Berrien Co., Mich. James Irwin; aged 77 years.

Br. I. was bereft of his beloved wife last April, who was a devoted Christian, and true mother in Israel, a loving companion and faithful friend. The loss was so great that our aged brother sank under it, and sleeps in hope of eternal life.

A discourse by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 14.

JAS. FERRISS.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

To Western Friends.

We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work be properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 16, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object.

D. MATHEWSON,
WM. SHELDON,
WM. McCULLOCK,
DANIEL S. CLARK,
O. S. KNAPP,
FRANK BURR,
H. G. McCULLOCK.

To the West.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that the Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work. WM. L. HIMES, Business Agent.

Book Notices, Etc.

Woman in the Church. An Essay, by James H. Whitmore. Now ready. Price 10c. Address
WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR

SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

ARKANSAS.

Early in November, with Eld. Lawrer, I shall go to Arkansas. We shall go from Cobden, Egypt, on horseback, and preach as we go, reaching Batesville about the middle of the month, and attend the Advent Conference the 20th. After this we shall spend a short time in preaching in such places as open to us.

KANSAS.

Columbus, Thursday, Sept. 19, at 7 p. m.
Spring River Falls, Friday Sept. 20, at 7 p. m.
Lowell, Saturday, Sept. 21, at 2 and 7 p. m.
Baxter Springs, Sunday, Sept. 22, 10.30 a.m.
Brush Creek S. H., Monday, Sept. 23, 7 p. m.
Cherokee City, Tuesday Sept. 24, 7 p. m.
Jones S. H. Wednesday, Sept. 25, at 7 p. m

In the Mission Tent, at 2 and 7 p. m. each day, at Bero, from Sept. 26 to Oct. 2, and at Columbus from Oct. 3 to the 6 inclusive. All are cordially invited to attend.

MISSOURI.

Brookfield, Oct. 8, and over Sabbath, and not Oct. 6, as in former appointment.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour. God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors. JOSHUA V. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABRY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.

Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4 and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

The next Q. M. of the Neponset District will be held with the church at Toulon, commencing Thursday, Oct. 3, and holding over Sunday.

L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Udina, 7.30 p. m. Sept. 22.
Coral, 7.30 p. m. Sept. 29.

E. H. BURINGTON.

The next Q. M. of the DeKalb District will be held with the church in DeKalb, commencing Thursday eve. Oct. 17, and holding over Sunday.

H. G. McCULLOCK, Sec'y.

INDIANA.

A Q. M. of the Northern Conference District will be held at Union Mills, commencing Oct. 11, at 2 p. m. and continue several days. A general attendance of ministers and brethren is solicited.

E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

I will preach at the Potato Creek church house Sept. 28, eve., and over Sunday.

Stingley S. H. Oct. 5, eve., and over Sunday.

E. C. ANDRUS.

IOWA.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Ox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

I will hold a public discussion in Greenfield, Adair Co., commencing Oct. 9, and continue as long as may seem necessary. Subject—The Nature and Future Rewards and Punishments of Man. My opponent, Eld. Israel Mershon, of the M. E. Church of St. Charles, is said to be the best disputant they have. May the truth triumph. D. S. CLARK.

WISCONSIN.

The first Q. M. for the East Dist. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek church, eight miles N. of Ironton, Sauk Co., Friday eve. Sep. 20, and over Lord's day. Let there be a general rally to this meeting.

GEO. THOMSON.

Whereas Br. Geo. Thomson, being sick, has written to me to attend the Q. M. in the eastern district of Wisconsin, to be held at Big Creek, commencing Friday evening, Sept. 20, and, whereas, I cannot attend at that time, the meeting will be adjourned four weeks, and then if Br. Thomson is well he can attend. If not I will attend. Will some brother say by letter that he will meet me at the Manston Station on the day of the meeting. P. W. HOUGH.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve. Sept. 20, and continue over Sunday. As this will be the last for this Conference year, let us all pray that it may be the best.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

At Shelby, Blue Earth Co., in a grove near Brown S. H., at a Basket Meeting, Sept. 22, 10.30 a. m., and 3 p. m. at Brown S. H.

At Kasota, Lesuer Co., at a Basket Meeting on the old camp ground, Sept. 24, at 10.30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Expect to baptise. S. C. WELLCOME.

MICHIGAN.

The first Q. M. of the Eastern District will be held with the A. C. church in Almont, Lapeer Co., commencing Thusday, Oct. 3, at 2 p. m. and continue over Sunday. We extend to the friends a cordial invitation, and hope for a full attendance of men and women imbued with the Good Spirit. We expect to have our chapel ready for use on this occasion. J. H. PATON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

OHIO.

There will be a Grove meeting at Montpelier, Williams Co., commencing Sept. 19, and continue over the Sabbath. Br. Babcock will preach the word. G. W. ENGLISH.

KANSAS.

At Columbus, Cherokee Co., commencing at 2 p. m. on Thursday, Oct. 3, will be held a series of meetings by Elds. J. V. Himes, H. J. Munson, and other preaching brethren. Ample arrangements will be made by the Columbus church for the accommodation of brethren and sisters from abroad. AMOS SANFORD, Sec'y.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C. will be held with the Have Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA

Sutton's Corners, Crawford Co., Sept. 22.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a "Time Conference" at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sep. 26, and continuing over the following Sabbath.

Preaching brethren and others, from all parts are earnestly invited to be present. The evidence that the Prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and the great plan of salvation, under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a deep interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved, all over the land.

"Watchman what of the night?"

Come men of God! from the North, South, East, and West. Come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned; for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things be true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they are without foundation in God's word, let this be exposed. Come brethren from every part. Those who have arguments against, are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it.

We expect and hope by the blessings of God to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom.

Brn. L. T. Cunningham, N. H. Barbour, Sheldon and others are expected.

For the church. GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR,
J. T. MERRILL.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

A special Time Conference will be held on the Life and Union campground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18, 1872, to continue over Lord's day.

The object of this meeting will be to earnestly investigate the prophecies bearing on the time of the coming of Christ, and deliverence of the people of God; the justification of the sanctuary; and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence of Christ's immediate coming; and to take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ.

Let such as can, bring their provision; but such as cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally.

(Signed.) GEO. W. BROWN, S. W. BISHOP, CHARLES C. BARKER, CALEB THOMSON, L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Blenny St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $600, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $35. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

POCKET HYMN BOOK
With Music.
COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.
"Hymns of the Morning"
is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding	50c
Morocco "	75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT, Box 496, Concord, N. H.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

GERMAN TRACTS
On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1606 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

Advent Christian Tim

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.—NO. 8. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 24, 1872. WHOLE NO. 439.

LIBRARY COPY AURORA COLLEGE

JAPeterson 146 Front-st 15-73

Advent Christian Times.

AN OLD BOOK.

Recently while visiting with Br. Spotswood, in Elida, Ill., he showed us an old and rare book—"Annotations upon the Books of the Old and New Testaments, wherein the text is explained, doubts revealed, Scriptures paralleled, and various readings observed. By the joint labor of certain learned divines, thereunto appointed, and therein employed as is expressed in the preface."

This is one of the earliest Protestant works of value, printed two hundred and twenty-eight years ago. It is the first time I have seen it. I have looked over its pages with deep interest. I will give a few facts gathered from its pages. First in relation to the preaching of those times. When the "idol shepherds" were removed from the fold of Christ, and others (Protestants) chosen in their places, there were so few able and orthodox divines to be found in the land, that there was a necessity of admitting many that were not scholars to read the word of God to the people. Even in the city of London it was a rare thing to "find a pulpit with a clapper," as Latimer expressed it. "Pulpits were like a bell without a clapper," and seldom entered by a minister more than once a year, as the Bible readers did not ascend them for their services at all.

In this time of "famine for the word of God," the people thought themselves well provided for, if, after many weeks fasting, they might be sure of a sermon once a quarter. Sometime after this they got a monthly sermon, and some favored places had weekly sermons.

In the time of the Annotations, 1645, preachers began to be multiplied, and "the Lord gave the word and great was the company of them that published it." The means of grace have been multiplied. They say:

> "As we have been further removed from the tyrannical reigne of that arch-hypocrite usurping the title of principall bishop, pastor, and doctor of the church, doth seldom or never performe the principall office of a bishop, pastor or doctor of the church, who is as the pseudo synod of Trent, is forced to confesse, to preach the word of God to the people."

When the people had preaching once a quarter, and had mainly to fight their own battles with the Pope and the devil, word of God in hand, they prospered in the Lord. But when the means of grace were multiplied, and the church grew strong, the Pope set on foot a plan to cause the church to retrograde in religion," as they say, "in seeking to turn them toward the tenets of doctrine, and forme of worship of the Romish church. But if these masters of the mysteries of iniquity having long since set on foote their design to mount it on horseback, it must be by putting down the sound, sincere and zealous preaching of the Word, as by some experimentall preparations we have seen of late, who labor to eclypse or extinguish the light of evangelical doctrine: First, by picking a quarrel with the most sufficient preachers, to stop their mouths, imprison their persons or drive them from their homes."

The church is always in the most danger in the hour of prosperity. But by clinging to the faithful word, the Protestants maintained their position against all the machinations of Rome. They gave plenty of the "sincere milk of the word to babes" in the church, and "strong meat" to the mature in age which took the place of the Latin Mass, and the husks of Popish times, and so increased in their stock of truth and righteousness.

The word of God in those times began to be appreciated, and translated into the common tongue for the people. The "Annotations," say:

> The first good news of this kinde which came to the notice of the inhabitants of this Island, [England,] was in the yeare 700, or, as some write, 709, when Adelme, Bishop of Sherborne (for both Bishopricks and Archbishopricks were anciently otherwise divided and entitled than now they are), translated the Psalms of David into the Saxon Language, which is thought to have suffered shipwreck by the Tempest of the Danish wars wherein the the Churches (which were the learned Treasuries or publique Libraries of those times) were burned. About twenty, or at the most thirty years after, Beda translated the whole Bible into the same Tongue, as Master Fox observed in his Epistle Dedicatory, to Queen Elizabeth, set before this translation of the Gospels out of the Saxon Tongue, Printed Anno 1571. Yet elsewhere he maketh mention onely of the translation of St. John's Gospel as the last labour of his life.
>
> After Beda about two hundred years, King Alfred undertooke the Translation of the Psalter, haply either to supply the loss of that of Adelme, or to better that of Bedaes; for Bedaes' Translation was simple without any curiositie of stile; and of Alfred, it is said of him that none of the English was more acute in conceit, or more eloquent in expression than he was: which was the more to be marvelled at, because he was twelve years old before he knew a letter on the Booke; but he ended his life well—near the beginning of his work, having scarce finished the first part. The Translation of the Bible of most note after these (and whether any come between we do not find) is that of John Wickliffe, which was best liked and most used by the better sort of Christians in the reign of King Richard the Second, but so much maligned by the Popish party, that it was condemned in a Provincial Synod at Oxford, held under Archbishop Arundel, An. 1406, and after he was dead and buried, by a Decree of the Councell of Constance about the year 1412 his bones were to be unburied, and his Books to be burned: And so they were, not only where the Decree was made, but in Bohemia, where Subincus (Archbishop of Prague) making diligent inquisition after them found to the number of two hundred volumes of his composing (most excellently written, and richly adorned with bosses of gold, and rich coverings), and burnt them all. And in England there was a strict Proclamation for abolishing of them by King Henry the eighth, Anno 1546. And though the Papists had an especial spight at his Translation of the Bible, both because it was a Translation into the Vulgar Tongue, and such a Translation as they accounted most Heretical, yet (by God's providence) some Manuscript Copies of it (as well as of others of his Books) were preserved, which are extant to this day, in diverse Libraries of this Kingdom, particularly mentioned in the Margent, which is attested by a very learned Author, much versed in the most Authentic Records and copies of ancient writers.
>
> Next unto Wickliffe's Translation, was that of John Trevisa, who undertook and finished the Translation of the whole Bible in English at the entreaty of his Patrone, the Lord Barkley, Anno 1397, in the reign of Richard the Second, as Baleus writeth, though some say it was in the year 1400, and in the reign of Henry the Fourth. In the year 1527, Tyndall first translated the New Testament; after that, he took in hand the Translation of the Old, finishing the five Books of Moses, with sundry most learned and godly Prologues; the like also he did on the New Testament. When he translated the fifth Book of Moses called Deuteron, minding to print the the Translation at Hamburg, he sailed thitherward, but by the way (upon the coast of Holland) he suffered ship-wreck, whereby he lost all his Books and copies, and so was compelled to begin all again; when (in another ship) he was by the Divine providence safely conveyed whither he first intended; and where Master Coverdale being there before him, tarried for him, who helped him in the Translation of the five books of Moses, from Easter till December: and 'tis like he made use of his help, if not to compose, at least, to revise his Translation of the New Testament: which societie in the same service, may be the reason that the Translation is sometimes called Tyndal's, sometimes Coverdale's.
>
> But what name soever it had, it had an ill name among the Popish Prelates, chiefly for Tyndal's sake, those Spiritual Fathers crying out upon it, bearing men in hand that there were a thousand heresies in it; and some said it was not possible to translate the Scriptures into English; some that it was not lawful for lay people to have it in their Mother Tongue; some, that it would make them all Heretiques. For prevention whereof a proclamation was published by Ki~~ng Henry the~~ Eighth, bearing date July 8, 1546, prohibiting after the first of August, all persons to receive, take, or keep in his or their possession, the Text of the New Testament, of Tyndal's or Coverdale's Translation in English, or any Books in the English Tongue, under the name of Frith, Tyndall, Wickliffe, Lay, Roy, Barill, Bale, Barnes, Coverdale, Turner, Tracy. But above all the name of Tyndall and his translation were most traduced, which were exposed to more hate and contempt by means of Sir Thomas Moore, who used his wit (which was as sharp as his spleen) to cavill at his writings, and his fervor, which was as great as both, (being Lord Chancellour of England) to suppress them, especially his Translation of the Scripture: which that it might the more undoubtedly be done, (besides the Proclamation forementioned) there was an Act of Parliament passed, to abolish Tyndall's Translation by name, with diverse other English Bookes, yet with allowance of other Translations, for private use, and with limitation and exception of several sorts of persons to whom they were forbidden.
>
> Notwithstanding Tyndall's Translation was not smothered, but came to light, and was more acceptable for their correction of it by Thomas Mathews, which was published as his Translation with Annotations, and printed by special priviledge of King Edward the Sixth, An. 1551, and so was that of Coverdale's allowed by publicke Authoritie, which bore his name, because he made some corrections of Tyndal's.
>
> And from the beginning of Edward the Sixth, Anno 1549, towards the twentieth of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1577, the Bibles of the English Translation used in Churches, were either Tyndal's or Coverdale's, but that Tyndal's was the chief and most warranted may thence be collected, for that the reading Psalmes are in the Service Bookes to this day, according to his Translation (as some have observed), and the Epistles and Gospels are also conformable to the same Translation. In the yeare 1560 were the Geneva Interpretations and Annotations set forth. And Anno 1577 there was an English Edition of the Bible published by diverse Bishops in a large Volumne, yet that from Geneva was generally more used, and more esteemed than any of those that went before it, until the year 1612, when the last Translation procured by King James was first imprinted, which for the Text thereof may give better satisfaction to such as have abilitie, to compare the Originall of both Testaments and their Translations together."

Yes, to those who have the "ability to compare the originals of both Testaments."

This is well said; for how can we get a correct understanding of the words sheol, hades, gehenna, or baptism, and many other words without a reference to the original. The world is misled by the common translation.

But we have reason to thank God that we have the Bible in any form, even though there be defects of translation. And most of all, that we have the right to read and understand it for ourselves. How different are these days to those of Popish rule, before the reformation, when "no Women, Artificers, Apprentices, Journeymen, serving-men yeomen, husbandmen or laborers," were allowed to read the Bible even privately.

The Protestant Reformation drove the Papists at length to translate and give the Bible to their people. First the New Testament, at Rheims, and after that the Old Testament, at Donay, in the English tongue. But these translations are from the Latin Vulgate, of which Isado Clovius, a Popish bishop ~~said,~~ "it contained no fewer than eight thousand errors."

Crying Peace and Safety.

The history of Israel furnishes abundant evidence of the fact that men are often disposed to cry "Peace" when danger is really at hand. "They have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly," said Jeremiah, "saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace." (Jer. 6: 14). We have been reminded of this by an editorial in the Providence Journal which closes thus:—

"This day, the 12th of August, is the one announced for the advent of Plantemour's comet, which was to make a mighty conflagration of the world, and we quickly see the fallacy of the prediction. Many a grand show of meteors will illumine the skies, many a fiery comet sweep the heavens with its gossamer tails, many a new star flash into transient life among the shining groups, and many a star lose its place among its peers, before the coming of the prophetic time 'when the earth and all that dwell therein shall be burned up.' "

That "the day of the Lord" will come, "wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat," we know from the oracles of God, but who has authorized any one to affirm positively that "the coming of this prophetic time" is far in the future? How forcibly the above words bring to mind the prediction of the apostle, "Ye yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night [suddenly and unexpectedly to the wicked]: for when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape." (1 Thes. 5: 2, 3.) "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh," is the warning of him whose glorious advent introduces the day of burning; and who has authorized any one to put that day afar off? Announcements respecting "the advent of Plantemour's comet or of some other may prove erroneous, but that gives no license to any to say, "My Lord delayeth his coming." The world may cry, "Peace," but the Master says, "Watch and be ready."—Advent Herald.

Not Scripture.

The following may be useful to prevent misquotations from Scripture:

"God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." From Sterne's Sentimental Journey to Italy. Compare Isaiah 26: 8.

"In the midst of life we are in death." From the Burial Service; and this, originally from a hymn of Luther.

"Bread and wine which the Lord hath commanded to be received." From the English Catechism.

"Not to be wise above what is written." Not in scripture.

"That the Spirit would go from heart to heart as oil from vessel to vessel." Not in Scripture.

"The merciful man is merciful to his beast." The scriptural form is, "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast." (Prov. 12: 10.)

"A nation shall be born in a day." In Isaiah it reads, " Shall a nation be born at once? ch. 66: 8.

"That he who runs may read." "That he may run that readeth." (Hab. 2: 2.)

"Owe no man anything but love." "Owe no man any thing, but to love one another." (Rom. 12: 8.)

"Prone to sin as the sparks fly upward." "Born to trouble as the sparks fly upward." (5: 7.)

"Exalted to heaven in point of privilege." Not in the Bible.

Eve was not Adam's helpmate, but merely a help meet for him; nor was Absalom's long hair, of which he was so proud, the instrument of his destruction; his head, and not the hair upon it, having been caught in the boughs of the tree. (2 Sam. 18: 9.) A London wig-maker once had a sign upon which was painted Absalom suspended from the branches of the oak by his hair, and underneath the following couplet:—

If Absalom hadn't worn his own hair,
He'd ne'er been found a hanging there.

—N. Y. Observer.

A Living, Buoying-up Power.

We should solemnly awake to more practical realizations of the power of the blessed hope of Christ's speedy return. It is sad to reflect how much the hope of Christ's coming is held as a doctrine in the head rather than as a living power in the soul; and I humbly judge that there has been a declension in this matter A few years since, I believe, we heard far more respecting the coming of the Lord than we do now; and we often find in gatherings like these it is thrown in, in the shape of a hymn or a word now and then, so as to give a little tone to the meeting, instead of its being seen and felt to be the one living, buoying-up power that God has designed it should be. Oh, brethren, let us awake, trim our lamps, watch and be like unto servants waiting for their Lord, and as the bride waiting for the Bridegroom. It is easy to sing, as we do at times—

'I can almost hear his footfall
On the threshold of the door;
And my heart, my heart is longing
To be his forevermore;'

but oh! brethren, do we realize it in our souls? If we did honestly believe this to be true, what prayerness, what devotedness, what watchfulness would be manifested by us every night and henceforth. What earnest prayers should we offer for our unsaved ones around, what tear-blotted letters we should write them, beseeching them them to come to Christ! What now-unsanctified possessions and hoarded means should we lay at our Master's feet, to be employed in his service! What zealous devotedness would characterize our whole being, if we but believed what we have just sung! Yet on his part it is true; for our Lord says, 'SURELY I COME QUICKLY!' May our God give us grace to awake from our slumber, to watch and pray, crying from our longing hearts, 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus!'—O. R. Hurditch.

Poetry.

The Lark's Mission.

A REAL OCCURRENCE.

As morn by morn the sun arose,
For o'er the deep blue tide,
Shedding a golden pathway there,
Where angel feet might glide:
There rose a lark on joyous wing,
Singing, as still he flies,
His morning song of praise to Him
Who made the earth and skies.

Meanwhile, down by yonder fisher's cot,
You'd see his busy hand
Mending the nets, while yet the tide
Steals slowly up the strand;
Each morning finds him at the task
He knows and plies so well,
And as he works he hears the lark
Whose notes with rapture swell.

Is it an echo in his heart—
An arrow winged with love?
He stops his work and gazes up—
Up to the sky above.

"My bonnie birdie, ilka morn
Ye sing your blithesome lay,
While ne'er a song o' praise I gie
To Him who guides my way.
Aye! I hae clean forgotten Him
To whom ye gie the praise,
Though He's sae mindfu' aye o' me
In a' my wilfu' ways.

'Twas but yest're'en I saw the tempest lour,
And thocht o' Nelly, and the bairnies four—
Thocht how they'd greet, if never, never mair
They'd see the faither in his ain bit chair!
Aye, what a sicht was Nelly's watery e'e,
Wi' Robbie in her arms sae fu' o' glee;
When as the wind cam' swoopin' owre the wole,
The boat was anchored safe in Lucky's hole!
Aye, but yon lav'rock there has smote my heart;
I ne'er in sang o' praise ha'e ta'en a part—
I ne'er ha'e thankit Him nor praised his name,
Wha gar'd the awsome waves to guide me hame:
I e'en maun try; like yon blithe birdie there,
To raise a mornin' sang and evenin' prayer.
Sae ilka day I'll praise and bless His name,
Wha sent the birdie wi' this message hame.

Aye! yonder's Nelly wi' the bairn,
As blithe as blithe can be,
Singin' like ony laverock
Abund the grassy lea.

'Atweel' gudewife, yon lav'rock there
Has brocht my sin to mind,
We ne'er ha'e praised nor blessed the Lord
Wha's been sae gude and kind;
We ne'er ha'e thocht o' Him ava'.
Nor seen His lovin' hand in a'.

Let's read His Word, gudewife,
Wha bade the storm be still,
And teach our bairnies, as they grow,
To do His holy will;
Let's teach them in the morn to sing,
Like to the lav'rock there,
A lilt o' praise unto the King,
Who made them a' sae fair.

I mind my mither tellin' me
He gi'ed His Son to dee,
That in death's gloamin' we micht sing
A sang o' victory.

Let's gi'e our hearts to Him, Nelly,
Who lo'ed us a' sae weel;
Then like the lav'rock we will sing,
While yet we mind the kreel."

"Gudeman, your words mak' glad my heart,
For 'twas but yesternicht
I cried in my puir way to Him,
Wha hauds a' power and micht,
That He wad bring ye safe, Willie—
Safe through the storm to me,
That ance mair I might see ye
Wi' the bairnies on your knee.
We'll thank Him baith thegither, Will,
We'll learn the bairns to sing;
And ilka morn and e'en we'll pray
To Him, our Lord and King."

—Lady Liston Foulis, in Scottish Am. Journal.

Hades.

We now proceed to a very important part of our inquiry, viz., the nature of that state or place which is called in the Hebrew Scriptures sheol. Throughout this chapter we will call it hades. Hades is a name more familiar to our ears than sheol and of the identity of the two terms in meaning there can be, and we believe is, no doubt. The Greek translation of the Septuagint invariably renders sheol by hades. In the quotation of passages from the Old Testament into the New, where the word sheol occurs in the former, it is always translated hades in the latter. (Acts 2: 27–31, and Ps. 16: 10.) It had been well if our translators had observed the uniformity of translation of which the Septuagint version set them the example. In their utter confusion of ideas, however, on this whole question, produced by their adoption of the Platonic ideas of death and the soul, they have given to the Hebrew word sheol such a variety of translations as has almost effectually prevented the English reader of the Old Testament from being able to form any opinion as to what the Old Testament really teaches. The Hebrew sheol has been translated by them "hell," "the grav[illegible]t," just as they, in the utt[illegible] their thoughts, suppose[illegible] result has been a confusion of thoughts, upon this question which seems all but impossible to remove. We trust the revisers of our translations will attend to this very important point. We would suggest hades as the invariable translation of sheol. Our translators surely need not scruple to follow the example which has been set them by the inspired writings of the New Testament. It is true that the word hades is associated in our minds with the picture drawn by Homer, Virgil, and the Greek tragedians, but we venture to say that the only result of making hades a prominent word in the Old Testament will be to show how utterly different a description God gives of it from that which has been drawn by heathen writers. If our revisers should object to the term hades, which we fancy they will be compelled to use in their version of the New Testament, their next best way, in our judgment, would be to give us the Hebrew term sheol itself untranslated. It will soon become a familiar word. The English reader will then be able to see for himself how it is understood and used in Scripture. If it has but one sense, he will be able readily to ascertain this sense. If it have several senses, the usage of Scripture enables him to see for himself what they are. We respectfully call upon our revisers not to perpetuate the confusion of thought which the present variety of translation has introduced. "Hell" is a word all but universally associated with the place of future punishment, and it is a most unsuitable translation for this reason. Suitable as we ourselves think "the grave" is for its translation, yet Christian thinkers are by no means agreed on this, and therefore we do not ask for it. "The pit" is an expression to which it is difficult to attach any definite meaning. It may stand for anything we choose to imagine. Let us then have the translation which God has given it already, and call it hades. If not let us have the word sheol itself untranslated. We will here merly inform our readers that we invariably use the word hades as the equivalent for sheol, and that whenever we use hades they are to understand that the Hebrew sheol is spoken of.

The locality of hades is a matter easily decided. It is beyond a doubt, a place and condition within this earth of ours. It is always spoken of agreeably with such an idea. One distinct reference to its locality places this beyond a question. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram have headed a rebellion against the authority of Moses in the wilderness. Moses appeals to the mode of death which these men were to die as deciding that God was on his side and against them. He said, "If the Lord make a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, and they go down alive into hades, and the earth close upon them." (Num. 16: 30–33; Deut. 32: 22.) This one passage decides the question. Our authorized version obscures the thing to the English reader by translating sheol "the pit;" but the original Hebrew is sheol, and we therefore are here told by Moses that sheol or hades is within this earth of ours. Every other of the very numerous passages in the Old Testament only confirms this view: not a single passage can be quoted that is even apparently opposed to it. It would therefore be mere waste of time to spend further labor upon this point. Hades is within the crust of this earth. Our further inquiries will only confirm our view.

There can be no question that to this hades, this place and state within our earth, the Old Testament teaches that all souls go in death. Of course through this chapter we speak only of the time antecedent to the resurrection of Christ, when, according to some, a very important change was made in the intermediate state of believers. But of that period of time which preceded the resurrection of our Lord, there can be no doubt that the Old Testament taught that all souls went during it to hades. A few texts will be sufficient to show this. The psalmist affirms it of the soul of every man whatsoever, in these words,—"What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of hades?" (Ps. 89: 48.) Here, as usual with our translators, the English reader is mystified by the translation "the grave" in the authorized version. In the older translation of the Psalms retained in the book of Common Prayer, the translation is "hell." The Hebrew word however for these varying translations is sheol, i. e. hades, and the text tells us that the soul of every man without exception goes at death into the hand of hades. The truth expressed by David, speaking in the person of Christ, that his "soul should not be left in hades," shows us also that the soul of our blessed Lord, and by undoubted inference the souls of men (for the histor[illegible] Christ's humility, with the [illegible] of his miraculous conceptic[illegible] history of our common humi[illegible]are in hades during the state of death. (Ps. 16; 10; 49: 15.) The soul cannot be delivered from a place in which it was not previous to its deliverance.

But not only does the Old Testament teach us that the soul of every man goes in and during death to hades, but it also teaches us that man himself, as a person or individual, goes in death to hades. Passages affirming this are very numerous: we will content ourselves with quoting a few of them. Job teaches it in the words, "As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away: so he that goeth down to hades shall come up no more:" and again he says, speaking of the wicked, "they spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to hades." (Job 7: 9; 21: 13.) Again, the psalmist teaches us this when, speaking of the foolish, he says, "like sheep they are laid in hades; death shall feed on them." (Ps. 49: 14.) And, once more, Jacob expresses his faith that in death he would himself go there, and that it was not merely for the wicked it was ordained, when on hearing of Joseph's disappearance, "he refused to be comforted, and said, I will go down into hades unto my son mourning." (Gen. 37: 35.) We thus see it to be the teaching of the Old Testament that every soul of man, and every man himself, goes to hades and remains in hades during the period of death.

Again, as we have learned so many useful lessons about ourselves from the lower creatures of God's hands, so now we learn another lesson from them relative to hades. It is what will doubtless surprise and considerably shock our Platonising divines, namely, that not only do men go on death to hades, but that beasts also on death go there! We saw before that the lower creatures are possessed of a spirit of life from God, which on death goes back to God, just as does that of man: we now will see that on this dissolution happening the beasts themselves go to that very hades to which man himself is consigned. This startling fact, so abhorrent to Plato and his Christian disciples, is however told us in that word of God which we see to be perpetually teaching us a physiology of man of a kind totally unlike that of Plato. We cannot of course expect to find many passages of a nature such as this, nor could we expect even one whose object it is to teach us a truth of the kind. The expression comes in incidentally, just as we should expect, when speaking of another subject of more importance. It is not however the less valuable for that. The passage to which we refer is one already quoted, where the psalmist, speaking of foolish men in their death, says, "like sheep they are laid in hades." (Ps. 46: 14.) Our authorized version translates, "like sheep they are laid in the grave:" the earlier version in the book of Common Prayer translates "they lie in the hell like sheep;" but here we have it affirmed that sheep are in sheol, i. e. in hades, as well as men.

We next draw our readers' attention to the fact that hades is always spoken of in the Old Testament as a place of death. The ordinary Platonic theology tells us that the grave, the receptacle of the body, is a place of death, but that hades, the receptacle of disembodied souls, is a place of life. Denying that the soul in death dies or perishes: holding that it retains a perfect life, susceptible of every thought that we now have, even beyond its power here susceptible of joys or painful emotions, and in the case of the redeemed enjoying a happiness greater by far than it had ever experienced in this age or world, they hold, and must needs hold, hades to be a land of life. For all, good and bad, they must hold it to be a land of the living: while, with their ideas of what life in its most true and proper sense means, viz., well being and happiness and holiness, they must in the case of redeemed souls hold hades to be pre-emminently a land of life. Where there is no sin—where there is no sorrow—where peace and happiness are enjoyed, and even a brighter existence is looked forward to with hope and assurance, is most assuredly and unquestionably a land of life. Compared with it this present earth even in its happiest aspect is a vale of tears. Accordingly the very names which common theology attaches to that part of hades where the righteous souls are supposed to dwell apart from the wicked fully carries out their idea of it. Two of those names are "paradise," and "Abraham's bosom." Paradise is a land of life. Abraham's bosom is a land of life. And thus it is easily seen that whatever ideas they may attach to the supposed division of hades, where they locate wicked souls, that part of hades where they locate righteous souls must be truly and pre-eminently a land of life.

But is it ever thus spoken of in the Old Testament? We leave out of view here the case of wicked souls. It might well be that it would be only in gloomy terms that Scripture would speak of their locality. So we will leave them out altogether. But righteous souls, and righteous men, are in hades as well as they. Now does Scripture ever once speak of hades in connection with them as a land of life? Never. Not so much as once. We call upon our Platonic divines to produce a single passage of the Old Testament which does. We know of course that there is here and there a poetical image, as Isaiah 14, where those in hades are said to perform the acts of living men. To all such we will apply ourselves by and by. If we do not mistake, every such passage speaks of the wicked and not of the righteous. But what we do say is this, that every passage of the Old Testament that speaks without poetical figure of hades in relation to believers, or describes the feelings of believers at their prospect of entering upon the hades state, speaks of that state and place as one of death and not of life.

We will refer our readers to several passages of Scripture which invariably connect the idea and mention of hades with the idea of death. We cannot, however, dwell upon these passages, and probably there is no occasion for our doing so. The quotation of the passage will probably in most cases suffice. Hannah, in her inspired song of praise to God for the birth of Samuel, describes God as one who "killeth and maketh alive: who bringeth down to hades and bringeth up." Here, bringing down to hades is equivalent to killing, as bringing up from hades is equivalent to making alive. Hannah's idea of hades was as a place of death and without life. (1 Sam. 2: 6.) Again, David gives us precisely the same as his idea of hades in his own case; "the sorrow of hades compassed me about; the snares of death prevented me." (2 Sam. 22: 6.) Hades in the first clause is given as his equivalent for death in the second. This idea is frequently repeated throughout the Psalms. Thus we read, "O Lord, thou hast brought up my soul from hades: thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down to the pit." Bringing up from hades is reckoned as identical with keeping alive, hades being reckoned a place of death. Again we read, "What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of hades?" Death and hades are here equivalents. (Ps. 30: 3; 49: 14, 15; 89: 48; 11[illegible] 3.) So the idea runs throughout Scripture. In Proverbs we are told of the strange woman, that "her feet go down to death: her steps take hold on hades:" and again, "her house is the way to hades, going down to the chamber of death." (Prov. 5: 5; 7: 27.) The bride in the book of Canticles speaks in the same strain: "Love is as strong as death; jealousy is cruel as hades." (Cant. 8: 6.) Hades and death are regarded as synonymous. So runs the idea as we go on through the Old Testament to its close. Isaiah represents the scorners of Jerusalem as saying, "We have made a covenant with death, and with hades are we at agreement." (Is. 28: 15.) Death and hades were in their minds one and the same condition. And so Habakkuk speakes where he describes the proud man as one "who enlargeth his desire as hades, and is as death." (Hab. 2: 5.) Thus invariably and throughout the Old Testament from its earliest books to its close, is the idea of hades and death associated and linked together as in truth one and the same idea. So far is the Old Testament from describing hades, or any division of it, as the land of life, that it invariably describes it as the land of the shadow of death.

And hence the wail of the believer under the ancient dispensation when he contemplated his going into this dark, silent, lifeless state of hades, while he saw not with the Christian's clearness of vision its dominion broken and its rule abolished in the resurrection of Christ from its power and dominion. Did David imagine he would be alive in hades? No: he knew that he would not. He knew that when he went, as go, he knew he must, to that land, he went to a land of utter silence and of utter darkness. "In hades," he said, in one of his inspired psalms, "who shall give thee thanks?" (Ps. 6: 5.) He knew and tells us that not one would. Of all that innumerable host of holy men who had passed out of this life and been gathered together into hades, he tells us that no note of praise could ascend from the lips of a single one of them while there. Abel there uttered no note of praise: Noah was silent: and Abraham, and Sarah, and Isaac, and Rebecca, and Moses the man of God, and Samuel, the prophet of God, and even himself, the sweet singer of Israel, could none of them praise the Lord. And was that a land of life where this vast congregation of saints were silent? No. Hades was not a land of life. It was "the land of darkness and the shadow of death; a land of darkness as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkness." (Job 10: 22.) What, think you, is that land? Is it paradise, or the bosom of Abraham?

It is the grave! It is no other land. To this Scripture brings us as last. Our inquiries can reach no other goal. Have not our readers come to this conclusion even before we bring a direct proof? That place within this earth whither man, and man's soul, goes on death, where the beast of the field goes when it lays down its life, where man is dead and silent, where death reigns with unbroken slumber, that place is no other than the grave. Yes; hades is the grave. It is the silent, invisible land to which God told sinful Adam he must go when he said, "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." We will show by and by further proof, though further proof is surely not required.

While on this question we must admit that lexicons of high authority are against us. The sheol of the Hebrews is both by Furst and Gesenius described as "the region of ghosts," while neither of these eminent Hebraists give it the sense of "the grave." Here, however, we hold ourselves as just as capable of ascertaining the meaning of sheol as either Furst or Gesenius, or any other. The etymology of the word is uncertain, according to Gesenius; and if so, we can derive no help towards its meaning from those cognate languages with which, we are sorry to say, we are wholly unacquainted. According to Furst it is derived from the Hebrew verb shahal, to dig, an etymology which, it is quite evident, points rather to the grave which men do actually dig and hollow out, than to any supposed region within the earth, wholly inaccessible to the research of man. If, as seems to us not at all improbable, it is derived from the Hebrew verb shaal, to ask, it is evident that such an etymology is quite suitable to the sense of "the grave" which we put upon it, that hungry grave which is never satisfied, and never has enough, but is gathering to itself generation after generation of mankind. But whatever we suppose of the etymology or want of etymology of this word sheol, it is quite plain that, to the Hebrew Scriptures alone we can look for its sense. It here occurs quite often enough to be able to ascertain its sense, and we will take its sense from no other source, neither from lexicographers who may have been misled as to its meaning by philosophical opinions of their own, nor from Gentile fables about Pluto and Orcus and the Shades, nor from Jewish tales gathered from heathen sources, or generated by the natural superstition of the human mind. To the Old Testament and its usage alone we appeal to know what God meant by the word sheol, a word in constant use from the opening of the Bible to its close.

Indeed, we think that what lexicographers opposed to our view tell us is the proper meaning of sheol, or hades, in the Old Testament, tells strongly in our favor. We refer here to the lexicon of Gesenius. It will be remembered that we hold sheol to be a land of death, and to be equivalent to the grave: Gesenius on the contrary holds it not to be the grave, but to be a land of living ghosts. Yet how does this eminent author, after his careful examination of this important word in Scripture, define it? Here is his definition: "Sheol," he tells us, "is the hades of the Hebrews; in which thick darkness reigns, and where all men after death live as ghosts, without thought or sensation." To us this appears perfect nonsense. We deny wholly that a thing which has neither "thought or sensation" has animal life at all. To affirm animal life of that which has neither thought nor sensation is to make life equivalent to death. But the important thing here is the fact that Gesenius tells us that, according to the usage of Scripture, those who are in sheol, or hades are devoid of thought and sensation. This is really all that we contend for. To our minds the man that is devoid of thought and sensation is dead. This Gesenius allows to be the case of all in hades. If he likes to call this thoughtless, senseless state, a living state, of course he can do so. It is for him or his followers to justify this use of language, which certainly is not justified in any of our standard English lexicons with which we are acquainted. To our minds, to say that a man who is "without thought or sensation" is a living man, is the same as saying that sweet is bitter, or round is square. We claim Gesenius as really on our side when he affirms of everything in hades that it is "without thought or sensation." When he also affirms of it that it is alive, we make bold to say that he uses the word alive in a non-natural sense.

The frequency with which sheol or hades, is translated by "the grave" in our authorized version is a strong argument in favor of its being the true sense. (Job 21: 13; 17: 13; 24: 19; Gen. 37: 35; 42: 38; 44: 29, 31; Ps. 30: 3.) So far from having, as some suppose, a strong prejudice in favor of this translation they had a very strong prejudice against it. With their ideas of the immortality of the soul, of the nature of the soul as a true personality existing after bodily dissolution, they had a very strong feeling leading them to suppose that place where they knew that all souls, at least in the old dispensation, went on death to be a land of the living. They were most unwilling, with this leading idea of theirs, which they must guard as much as possible from intrusion, to identify the hades whither the soul went with the grave whither the body went. And yet here, as everywhere in respect to their Platonic ideas, Scripture was every now and then rudely breaking in on their sacred ideas. The hades which they would fain confine to a place of departed ghosts, etherial, yet full of life and thought and sensation, they could not help seeing must sometimes be identified with that grave from which they would dissociate it. And hence the fact that hades, or sheol, is very frequently translated "the grave" in our authorized version is a very powerful argument that such is its proper translation. We will next proceed to show that such is its sense in Scripture.

HENRY CONSTABLE.

NATURAL SELECTION.—Disburdened of circumlocution and all extraneous details, his (Darwin's) argument takes this shape: Because by select breeding, and the accumulation of small modifications through many generations, men have succeeded in producing from the beautiful and handsome wild rock pigeon, such a monstrosity as the English pouter, represented in Mr. Darwin's work; therefore, it may be concluded that God—no, not God, but an abstraction called "Natural Selection," acting without intentional or special guidance, may, by a similar accumulation of small modifications through countless generations, have formed the human species from some other species of an inferior grade in the organic scale. This analogy is not only weak but false. It would have been more accurate to have argued that because man had succeeded in degrading the wild rock pigeon into a pouter, natural selections might, by an accumulation of small modifications, have degraded some abnormal, inferior specimen of the human species into a gorilla.—The Beginning: Its When and its How. By Mungo Ponton, F. R. S. E.

Many Christians are dull, and stupid, and useless, because they have not had disaster enough to wake them up. The brightest scarf that heaven makes is thrown over the shoulders of the storm. You cannot make a thorough Christian life out of sunshine alone. There are some very dark hues in the ribbon of the rainbow; you must have in life the blue as well as the orange. Mingling all the colors of the former makes a white light; and it takes all the shades, and sadnesses, and vicissitudes of life to make the white lustre of a pure Christian character.

Truth, however, diversified in its application, is essentially a unit. The universal law of gravitation, whether applied to the falling apple, the rising smoke, or the stationary eagle. poised amid air, upon his pinions, is the same. Things often apparently contradictory and complicated appear consistent and simple when understood. Much of the controversy in the world is about apparantl rather than real issues.

A "Mistake" Corrected.

In your last issue it is stated, on the authority of Sir William Thompson, that the earth's rotation on its axis is subject to a retarding influence, sufficient, in some millions of years, to reduce it one-half; and he supposes this to militate against the geological doctrine of the great antiquity of the earth. On the contrary, when this influence was first pointed out by Prof. Ferrel, it was hailed by geologists as a relief from a difficulty, under which they had previously labored—viz., that owing to the cooling and consequent contraction of the earth, ever going on, its rate of rotation must, according to well-known physical laws, be accelerated. The two influences, acting thus in opposition to each other, their effects are neutralized, and the rate of rotation remains sensibly the same age to age.

J. H. C.

Remark.—These two statements abundantly illustrate the inadequacy of science, at present, to determine, with even an approximation to probability, as to the antiquity of the earth. No theory has yet been started that a jury of twelve scientists could agree upon. The Word of God is the best authority yet.—Observer.

Letter From Our English Correspondent.

NEW CREED OF UNIVERSALISM—"TO DIE IS GAIN."

MR. EDITOR. Strange but true, the saying that "you must go abroad to learn what takes place at home." I was reading an English work a few days ago, entitled, Religious Tendencies of the Times. The author is a Mr. James Grant. He is a writer of some note, and author of many works. The book has been out almost two years. In it he assailed the doctrines of Universalism and Annihilationism—though the kind of the latter is hardly recognizable except as a mongrel. The specie is not known to me, and I think its only a man of straw of Mr. Grant's own fixing. The latter part of the book is devoted to proofs of the endlessness of future torment; and perhaps one man is satisfied with the argument, though it would be perilous risking much on that. Yet, by the way, he brings out some things of interest, and so forcible in logic and truth as he cannot dust away himself. Witness the following:

"Dr. Dolphus Skinner, one of the most distinguished Universalists of America, has entered into a controversy with a brother minister, in which he says that if the new view of Universalism be what he has said, he is no Universalist. Dr. Skinner gives us a condensation of the new (?) creed in the following terms, in the correctness of which both he and his opponent concur: 'Men,' it is said, 'do not sow seed in one country, and go to another country to reap the harvest. I do not believe in sowing wheat or tares in America and going to Europe to reap the fruits. We expect to reap the harvest in the field where the seed is sown; and it is equally absurd and illogical to argue that men will reap in another world the fruits of their good or evil deeds, of their virtues or vices, in this world. This I acknowledge is the substance of your argument, if such you call it; though the form is varied.' (p. 189.)"

Who can object to this? Certainly it is good sense, and God is never against that. If we are taught by Jesus to make analogies from nature—if creation is a great parable to be read by the devout, it teaches us to look for the harvest where we sow the seed. That is what we do. While others teach sowing seed here to the Spirit and gathering the harvest in the skies at a remove of untold millions of miles, or sinning here and being punished in a dark and distant sphere, we object on the ground of its being non-natural. Let us hear the word concerning the righteous. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth"—where they sowed the seed. And concerning the wicked: "Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner;" the earth being "renewed unto fire and the perdition of ungodly men." Their reward being meted to them, and they reaping it, in the place where they "sowed to the flesh"—the earth. Perhaps a careful reading of each passage might convert Mr. Grant to the truth. But concerning Universalists, we differ from them concerning the time they reap their reward. We do not sow seed and shout "Harvest Home" in the same moment. There is need of "long waiting," and careful tillage, and after days and months we gather the fruit. So, "The [time of] harvest is the end of the world."

"For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain,"—words of the apostle Paul, of beautiful import, but much misunderstood and often wrongly construed. A brief exposition may not be profitless. For Paul to live was Christ; that is, it would be for the exhibition of the Christ-life. The life of Jesus is lived over again by every saint. They are separate from sinners like Jesus; they are loving like Jesus; they talk with God like Jesus; they do his will like Jesus; they live in his fellowship, friendship, and complacency as Jesus. God hears their prayers, and supports them in their trials as he did Jesus; "must suffer persecution" like Jesus. Thus Paul's life was a life of labor, suffering and fellowship, like the Savior's. Therefore for Paul to live was Christ. The lineaments of the Holy One of God were to be traced in the apostle; the life of Jesus was made manifest in the mortal flesh. For him to live was Christ, for Christ was in him, his hope, his example, his Savior, his all. Farther, the Christ was the one he lived to preach and recommend, he only lived to spread the sweet savor of the name of Jesus.

"And to die is gain." To whom? Paul? Yes, verily, in the resurrection; for the martyrs are a white-robed band and the special ones on whom heaven first calls to "rejoice," when Babylon disappears beneath the tidal wave of God's fierce wrath. But Paul does not refer to himself here. He thinks of the gain his Master shall realize by his martyrdom. He thinks of the crowd who shall gather and be the spectators of his execution. "They shall see me suffer without flinching; they shall see how a Christian can rejoice over death, in hope of a resurrection to eternal life; they shall see the heroism and triumphs of righteousness over oppression; and they shall ask what faith and hope and virtue that is that can stand fire, and knife, and whip, and even death. So shall many, witnessing my death, be won to the Lord." "To die is gain." Jesus shall gain by my death. For, "as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether by life or by death." Christ would be the gainer by Paul's death,—there is not the slightest trace of an intimation that he would become a bodiless spirit, and thus be a gainer. Evidently, allowing he could be a disembodied man, he would be a loser, for he would lose in substance—his body; and he could not be a gainer in joy, by a partial felicity, for he already had that, being "filled with comfort," and "exceeding joyful." For certain, then, he was not thinking selfishly of self; but he was exulting in the thought that a painful death for him would be a means of leading men to Christ. So the fathers of the early church looked on martyrdom. Hear Tertullian:

> "Torment, rack, condemn, crush us, the most exquisite cruelty you can devise avails you nothing, but rather induces the more to become Christians. As often as we are cut down by persecution we spring up abundantly. The blood of Christians is the seed of the church."

The author of the epistle to Diognetus says:

> "See you not that those who are delivered up to wild beasts, because they will not deny their God, are not overcome; but only increase the more, they are persecuted."

WM. KELLAWAY.

The Christian Life.

The Rowers.

I saw several sailors step into a boat to cross a river. Two took the oars, and, as usual, turned their backs upon the shore to which they intended to sail. A third stood and kept his eye unaverted on the place where they wished to land, and which they very speedily reached.

So here, I said to those about me, what may well remind us of our condition. Life is a mighty river, rapidly flowing into the ocean of eternity, and returning no more. On this river we are all afloat in the bark of our vocation, which we must urge forward with the oars of industry and toil. Like these sailors, therefore, we ought to turn our back upon the future, put our confidence in God, who stands at the helm, and by his mighty power steers the vessel to where happiness and salvation await us, and diligently labor, unconcerned about anything else.

We would smile were these men to turn round and pretend that they could not row blindfold, but must needs see the place to which their course was directed. And it is no less foolish in us to insist on apprehending, with our anxieties and thoughts, all things, whether future or at hand. Let it be our part to ply the oar, and toil, and pray; but let us leave to God to steer, and bless, and govern.

But in order that we may be entitled thus to cast the care of all the future upon God, we must first see to it that he is our God. Many will not admit him into their vessel at all; they never inquire whether he is willing to come. Will an honest pilot consent to enter a mutinous ship, and steer the mutineers wherever they wish to go? Will a loyal captain consent to take charge of a pirate ship, and lend his courage and his skill to the service of its robber crew in the persuit of their nefarious, murderous course? Can he overlook either the crimes they have committed, or the crimes they will commit? And shall the Holy God be the God and guide of us sinners, unless we are reconciled to him by faith in Christ, having obtained his royal pardon, and have submitted ourselves to his royal will?

If the Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. If the Lord is my God in Christ, I will fear no evil.—Good News.

Sowing and Reaping.

A Christian gentleman was staying a few days with a farmer, who, though a man of sound sense and many amiable traits, was a neglecter of religion, and known to be both passionate and profane. He was an excellent farmer, priding himself not a little on the fine appearance and thorough culture of his farm, and evidently was pleased with his guest, who was a man of winning manners and extensive information.

One day, the gentleman walked out where the farmer was scattering his seed broadcast in the field.

"What are you sowing Mr. H——?" was his pleasant inquiry.

"Wheat," was the answer.

"And what do you expect to reap from it?"

"Why, wheat, of course," said the farmer.

At the close of the day, as all were gathered in the family circle, some little thing provoked the farmer,—the husband, the father, and the head of the family—and at once he flew into a violent passion, and forgetting in his excitement, the presence of his guest he swore profanely.

The latter who was sitting next to him, at once, and in a low serious tone said, "And what are you sowing now?"

The farmer seemed startled. A new meaning at once flashed on him from the question of the morning. "What!" he said, with a thoughtful look, "do you take such serious views of life as that, such serious views of every mood and word and action?"

"Yes," was the reply; "for every mood helps to form the permanent temper; and for every word we must give account, and every act but aids to form a habit; and habits are to the soul what the veins are to the blood, the courses in which it moves, and will move forever. By all these little things we are forming character; and that character will go with us to eternity: and according to it will be our destiny forever."

It was a new and startling view to the farmer, who, though sensible and thoughtful on most matters, had given little thought to the subject of religion. And it led him to a train of thought which, it is to be hoped, left him a wiser and a better man.—Sel.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 24, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON OF GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

A VENERATED minister asks us to explain why we did not comment unfavorably upon a certain item we published. Answer: We relied on the intelligence of our readers.—Exchange.

REV. STEPHEN FANT, of Delaware, O., has published a sermon on the 'General Judgment:' so we learn by an exchange. We have not seen the pamphlet, but notice the event of its publication as of interest, as showing that the fact of a judgment to come is not altogether lost sight of, though it is quite obscured by the mists and fogs of the false doctrines about rewards and punishments at death.

A 'THEOLOGICAL Professor,' of Montreal, writes, we believe, better than he himself thinks, to the New York Daily Witness, upon subjects for the pulpit. He says:

> I heard lately a Christian lady of remarkable intellectual power and culture say, after listening to a very able analysis of "A Just Man," and of our Lord's "Golden Rule," "I am tired of these everlasting disquisitions on duty, for I know what my duti are; I want to be stirred up to its perform by those grand objective facts and tru which the Apostles made so prominent."

—There certainly wou... be a revolution in theology if modern preachers should commence to use apostolic proportions in mixing their sermons. The advent, resurrection, judgment, and kindred themes would receive more attention than they now obtain, while death-bed scenes, going to heaven and hell at death; the immortality of souls and spirits, and related topics, would be at a heavy discount.

IN reply to the question, 'Do the wicked receive immortal bodies at the resurrection?' the Christian Standard says: 'The Bible, so far as we know, is reticent on the question. We must not seek to be wise above what is written.' We are not of those who would be wise beyond what is written, but it does appear that one may be well posted at this point, and keep a long way inside of that bound. 'He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption.' (Gal. 5: 9.) 'These.... shall utterly perish in their own corruption.' (2 Pet. 2: 12.) 'Into smoke shall they consume away.' (Ps. 37: 20.) 'He will burn up the chaff [the wicked] with unquenchable fire.' (Mat. 3: 12.) Is it not perfectly safe to conclude that inasmuch as the wicked reap corruption, are perishable, are consumable, and shall be 'burned up,' that they are not raised immortal? Surely there can be but one answer to this question.

RATHER curious language this for an Advent minister, even of the 'Evangelical' school:

> I owe much of my progress in the divine life to two youthful Christian ladies that came out in the same revival that I did, forty years ago. One has departed "to be with Christ," the other is now about ready to cross the river to the other shore, and, thank God! I am on the way to meet them in the land of bright glory when Jesus shall come.

—Who would dream from such language that the writer looked for his inheritance in the renewed earth? 'Ready to cross the river!'—a thoroughly heathen metaphor: for they made death a river, and had a ferry for souls bound to bliss or wo. But in Scripture we have the figure of a river of judgment, not of death; and the people are not ferried over, neither do they straggle through one by one; but the power of God makes a path through the waters, and they all go through the river together. Let us purge out the leaven of heathen illustration which has corrupted the true faith.

WE are like to have some new problems in Christology. A correspondent of the Standard puts the following questions to Eld. Braden, evidently suggested by our late discussion:

> 1. Jesus Christ was put to death in the flesh, but made alive in spirit. Was he ever dead in spirit?
>
> 2. The human spirit of Christ preached to the spirits in prison (and if I mistake not) released many from their prison. What gospel did his spirit preach? and the evidence that they were released.
>
> 3. In the case of the rich man and Lazarus, Abraham declared that there was an impassable gulf between the wicked and the righteous. Was that gulf bridged by the death of Christ, that his human spirit should pass it to preach to those wicked antediluvians? Is God partial to those wicked spirits, or are all the wicked dead to have the gospel preached to them? And if so, who is to be the missionary?

—It is a point of some interest how one could be made alive in spirit who had never been dead in spirit. Furthermore, as the spirit is defined to be the intelligent, moral, conscious, etc., part of man, and as Christ's 'human spirit' is spoken of as a distinct entity from some other spirit possessed by him, it follows he included at least two, distinct, intelligent, moral, conscious, etc., entities. And, really, is'nt this too absurd—is it not paying more for an argument than even hard pushed immaterialists can afford?

We want to hear more about these matters. 'Is God partial?' Who, then, is to be the next missionary in hades? And finally, does this straw, with some others, indicate a tendency among the Disciples to Restorationism?

THE Christian Standard says upon 2 Cor. 12: 2–4:

> The fact that Paul did not know whether he was in or out of the body, proves that there is such a thing as the existence of the spirit out of the body. Paul at least had not the modern materialistic conceptions of this subject.

—To say, 'the fact proves,' is much stronger language than the facts in the case will warrant. If it could be first shown that the spirit of man is the personality, and a separate entity, then there would be some color for the claim that the separation of Paul's spirit from the body is referred to in the expression 'out of the body.' But even then such an inference would be by no means essential. One may be 'out of the body' in a perfectly intelligible sense, without becoming disembodied. In 1 Cor. 5: 3 Paul speaks of himself as 'absent in body,' yet 'in spirit present' at Corinth. Now his 'presence in spirit' must have been by a spirit entity, or by mental action. The same remark applies with equal force to Col. 2: 5. Probably no one will insist that Paul was speaking of a disembodied condition in the two passages last referred to. Why then insist that there is proof of disembodiment of an intelligent spirit in another passage where similar phraseology occurs? If the too common notion of man's nature was true, it is not probable that Paul had it in mind here. He is speaking of 'visions and revelations.' He only affirms that he was so overwhelmed that he could not tell whether he was conveyed physically to Paradise, or whether he was only wrapt mentally.

Finally, as 'the body without the spirit is dead' (James), if absence of the spirit from the body in a literal sense is the meaning of 'out of the body,' and similar expressions, then it follows that Paul died not less than four times: his body being 'without the spirit' in the instances described in 1 Cor. 5: 3, 2 Cor. 12: 3 and Col. 2: 5. These with his final demise make at least four deaths that the eminent apostle suffered.

OUR MAILS.

Since our last publication day we have had a chat with the Postoffice Agents, and they assure us that every pains will be taken to ensure promptness in forwarding our mail matter. But we still request that our subscribers in writing will mention the day they get their paper, and whether it is received regularly.

AN ADVERTISEMENT.

> THE ANNIHILATION OF THE WICKED, Scripturally Considered, by Rev. Wm. McDonald. New York: Carlton and Lanahan. The title ought to have added, "And the Twofold Nature of Man, psychologically considered, by Rev. W. R. Clarke, D.D.," for this essay is also included in the book, and should have been in the title. The little volume of one hundred pages, lacking one, is the fruit of a debate in the Boston Preachers' Meeting. The first essay is one of those sharp dialectic efforts in which Mr. McDonald so well succeeds. It takes the texts of Scripture and shows, how they annihilate annihilationism. It is keen and unanswerable. Dr. Clarke examines the subject from another standpoint, and shows how man's own instincts and laws oppose this folly. The testimony of consciousness is powerfully urged. The book should be put in the hands of every one troubled with this distemper.—Zion's Herald.

We are acquainted with Dr. Clark's effort, undoubtedly one of the strongest essays ever written against the Bible doctrine of the nature of man. The readers of the Advent Quarterly will recollect Eld. J. H. Whitmore's admirable review of that document, in which Dr. Clarke's positions were fairly turned, and shown to be untenable. We are informed that Dr. Clarke read, (or listened to the reading of) the review; his only response was that "Whitmore misunderstood him." But if Whitmore misunderstood him, then every reader of Dr. Clarke's essay we have met misunderstood him also; for all gather the same conclusions that Eld. Whitmore deduced and fairly condemned. Now if the object of Dr. Clarke and his orthodox followers is really to correct us who are heretics, an explanation is certainly due from him. If we have not understood him, we wish to do so. And the candor with which we have listened to him and expressed our desires to hear further, certainly gives us some claim for consideration, as a matter of courtesy, if nothing more. We will willingly set at his feet to learn, if he will guide us into truth. Pray tell us, Doctor, wherein we "misunderstood" you.

With Mr. McDonald's essay we have no acquaintance. It is not a part of our opponents' policy to send their works to our journals for notice or review. They prefer to do their own noticing, advertising and reviewing. "Here!" they say, "this annihilation is folly," and a "distemper," and "we've got the documents to prove it; and every one infected should have the book;" then why not take a little pains to make the documents known amongst those who need them most. If Mr. McDonald has something "unanswerable" on the orthodox side of this question, there are from seventy-five to one hundred thousand people in this country who, above all others, ought to know it. We have given him a good advertisement: will he favor us with a copy of his book? We are open to conviction.

A FEW OBITUARIES.

There were twenty-six in all in the sheet from which the extracts were made, and not one contained an allusion in any sort to the resurrection, while some, as will be seen, encourage Spiritism. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." It follows, then (for this statement and these extracts are a fair sample of obituaries in general) that the doctrine of the resurrection does not lie near the heart of the Christian church of this age; whence it further follows that there has been a backsliding from the apostolic faith, and the substitution of another for the Scriptural hope.

But let us peruse the extracts:

Esther, wife of Ira S——....did not really die, but 'faded in light even as a glorious star is hidden in the splendor of the morn.'

If Esther did not really die, we wish to know why her name is found under the head of "obituary notice"?

Mary Ellen E—— passed away to endless rest. (Comp. Heb. 4: 9; 11: 39, 40.)

Maria B—— said, 'I am going to glory!' (Comp. Col. 3: 4.)

Sallie J. C—— has exchanged labor for reward. (Comp. Mat. 16: 27.)

Abner L—— gave his last public testimony for Jesus on Friday, 'going to join the singing ones of the heavenly church on the following Wednesday.' (Comp. Rev. 5: 9, 10.)

Ellen G—— assured her sister, 'If permitted in another world my spirit shall be with you and comfort you.'

Nancy S——. On Sunday morning, the day she died, her husband said to her, 'you will not go to church to-day.' She quickly replied, 'I think I shall, but it will be the church triumphant.'

John K—— went to his sick chamber, and in one short week joined the church triumphant on the other side of the river.

Finally a notice of the children assures us that within eight days three little lambs were taken to the upper fold.

It does seem that a candid comparison of the obituary notices in evangelical papers with the language of the Bible upon death and the resurrection, would force upon even a prejudiced mind the conviction that the differences between the two are nothing more nor less than flat contradictions. Paul, inspired with the Divine Spirit, asserts that, at the resurrection, death shall be swallowed in victory: the obituaries assure us that death ushers into the church triumphant. And the masses believe the obituaries and disbelieve Paul; and that is why the church has ceased to love and long for Jesus' second appearing.

God's prophet says the dead children are in the "land of the enemy:" but the obituary says they are in "the upper fold;" and the mortuary gospel again commands the faith of the church, and the Lord's inspired witness is, practically, impeached; and, worst of all, his professed people "love to have it so." The ancient prophet denounced this sin in his day as "a wonderful and horrible thing." Is it any less than that now?

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16. Continued. Arrived at Wilton Junction, Iowa. We once had an Advent church here. There are still a goodly number of believers, but they have not been able to sustain a meeting of late, and so attend other congregations, while they still hold their faith. But they find this to be a poor way to live. I hope they will rally and raise the standard again ere long, that when the Master come He may find them ready with their lights burning.

Since I was here three years ago, Father and Mother Covill have passed away, with other dear ones. They left a faithful testimony, and we shall meet them again in the morning. Br. Gibson resides here, having a home, with many family connections, which makes it pleasant for him and his family. As a missionary, his field of labor is at present in another part of the State.

Saturday eve. I spoke in the hall of the Baptist college, to a good assembly, from Matt. 5: 5, giving the main characteristics of the true Christian and the nature of his inheritance—the renewed earth.

A friend called my attention to-day to the "Confession of Faith," of the Presbyterian church, on the article "Last Judgment," in which they say: "The wicked, who know not God, and who obey not the gospel of Jesus Christ, shall be cast into eternal torment, and be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and the glory of his power." I asked my friend on reading this, if there ever was a plainer contradiction than this. How blinded the makers of this creed to the plain flat. See here!

BIBLE SAYS:	CREED SAYS:
"Everlasting destruction."—2 Thes. 1: 9.	"Eternal torments."

How can a being who is destroyed utterly, be eternally tormented? How?

SABBATH, Aug. 18. Held services in the Baptist chapel, all day. Full attendance and much interest to hear on the Lord's coming in his Kingdom. I spoke on the first and second coming of Christ, and the signs of his speedy appearing. I found a host of old and new friends, and among them one of my old Chardon St. congregation, of Boston, Mass., over thirty years ago. Br. Hiram Mooney, formerly of Alton Bay, N. H., who gave me a warm welcome. Judge Washburn, of Muscatine, came over to attend meeting, with his family. They have lately become Christians, and look for "that blessed hope." It is ten years since I enjoyed their hospitality in my visit to Muscatine. These old friendships are precious to the pilgrim, green spots, or oases of the desert. Soon they will be perfected in the society of the blest—the Kingdom of God.

A wide door is open in all this region for the truth. But the laborers are wanting.

MONDAY, Aug. 19. Took leave of Br. Gibson at an early hour. I shall not forget his kindness and hearty co-operation in our common work. He is prudent and faithful, and much beloved by the churches. He needs help in connection with Br. Baldwin, to extend the work and build up the new conference in Southern Iowa.

I came to Freeport, Ill., via Rock Island, where I had to lay over till night, some seven hours. I took a walk through the town, an enterprising and wealthy place. They have some eleven thousand inhabitants. But we have no believers here that I know of.

On Tuesday I reached Elida, near Rockford, Ill., where I met Br. Marston and brethren. Put up with Br. Spotswood, an old Adventist from Canada. He first heard the truth from Eld. Philip Hough. The teacher has turned away from the faith, the disciple continues faithful.

Here we have a small church raised up by Br. Morston, this year, which is growing in grace and numbers, and having favor with the people. There is no village; the central part of the town has been called Westfield Corners, but now Elida, where there is a Post Office, and a chapel of the M. E. church. The people are Germans, who are industrious and prosperous.

The tent is pitched in a beautiful valley near Br. Spootswood's at the Corners, on the green lawn. And the camp of the Lord never looked more beautiful.

I spoke at night on Is. 44: 1—5, showing that God is the author of revivals. "I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring." "One shall say I am the Lord's" &c. At the close two gave themselves to God in tears, and said, "We are the Lord's." The greatest solemnity prevailed in the congregation. The Spirit was indeed poured upon us.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 21. At night the tent was graced with a good audience to whom I spoke from Is. 44: 21, 22 on the completeness of redemption. One soul came out for God and one spoke of deliverance with joy and hope.

THURSDAY, Aug. 22. This a. m., with Br. Marston I attended the funeral services of Mr. Schoonmaker, an old industrious citizen, who was killed by falling from a load of hay, the wheels of the wagon running over him. How important for all to live so that we can be ready for any event. Sermon by Mr. Strout, the M. E. preacher, from Job 33:29, 30. He endeavored to show the uncertainty of life, and the importance of a preparation for death. He spoke of "going over the river;" "going to heaven;" and of "the soul living on, on, on, as long as God shall exist;" but not a word about the resurrection. The Rev. Mr. Plato, of ancient Greece, could have said as much about the future life. We gain but little over heathen views in the popular theology.

At night we had a glorious gathering and the Spirit of the Lord was in the camp. Four new ones came out on the Lord's side, and almost every profession of religion present spoke of their joys and hope. It is good to be here. The bitter spirit of sect is broken down, and the word of the Lord has a free course and is glorified.

FRIDAY, Aug. 23. Called on Br. Wm. Ellis, who, with his wife, were converted under the labors of Br. S. G. Mathewson, in Middlebury, Ct., about twenty years ago. They were without Advent preaching till Br. Marston came to Elida, this year, and now they are pillars in the Advent church here. And their children are coming in with them in the present meeting and standing up nobly for the truth. They keep up the family altar, and God is with them. The family altar is a means of life and safety.

In conversation with Br. Spotswood to-day he remarked that after Br. Marston had lectured here last winter, Mr. Gay, the Presbyterian minister at Winnebago, in preaching a discourse on the immortality of the soul, said; that his father was well acquainted with Wm. Miller, the founder of the Advent Sect; and that his father had an interview with Father Miller, at his home at the time he was preaching the end of the world within a few months. "My father told me," said he, "that Mr. Miller showed him his ascension robe! in which, he said, he should ascend, in a short time." "At the same time, he said, that Mr. Miller told him he was going to make improvements on his farm that would take years of time."

He then said, on his own authority, that Mr. Miller was the first who taught the sleep of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked, and was the author of the theory of annihilation, in America!!!

He then berated the Adventists as an ignorant class of people, and withal, they did not keep the Sabbath, and were not a pious people, with much more of the same class of reproachful words.

Br. Spotswood listened with special care and coolness. He is a Scotchman, not easily moved in his temper; "but," said he, "the man lowered himself amazingly in my estimation. I had thought well of the young man before, but his unfair treatment of a devoted and pious people, as also Father Miller, before a public audience sunk him beneath the dignity of a minister of the gospel." This misrepresentation of Mr. Gay refutes itself. Still, a word or two respecting it may not be out of place.

As I was intimate with Father Miller for the last eleven years of his life, and very frequently at his residence, I have reason to know that the entire statement of Mr. Gay was without any foundation in truth whatever. It is a pure fiction.

1. The "ascension robe" story is an unmittigated falshood. No Adventist ever arrayed such a garment.

2. Father Miller, so far from being the author of annihilation in this country, never believed it himself, but opposed it.

3. As to the ignorance or impiety of the Adventists, we leave that for the public to judge. The Elida Advent Christian church is a fair specimen, and if Mr. Gay will get acquainted with his Advent neighbors he will have some facts both of piety and intelligence that will be an advantage to him in the way of an example.

I spoke at night on the question, "How to become a Christian." The work of the Lord deepens and spreads. Nine intelligent young persons spoke of their joys, and the blessedness of sins forgiven. Among them were two school teachers. This is the most precious work among the unconverted I have seen for some time. Br. Marston and the church are greatly encouraged.

SATURDAY, Aug. 24. There was no especial breakdown among the unconverted to-night, but one young man, with others, took a noble stand for the Lord. We look for greater things.

Br. and Sr. Stocking, of Lindenville, came to-day, to cheer us, and a good company from Crane's Grove, Br. Seth Newton and some of Br. Alland's family, of Shefford, Canada, who helped to fight the battles of the Lord there, with Brn. Hutchinson and Porter, thirty years ago. Br. Alland came West and preached the word, but now sleeps, and the fruits of his work remain. He opened his house for the little church in Shefford, now Waterloo, in the midst of a great fight of afflictions. I remember to have preached in his upper chamber at the time. It was a dark hour, but light has sprung out of it, and will shine to the end.

SABBATH, Aug. 25. We have a beautiful day without, and look for the blessing of the Lord in camp. I spoke in the a. m. on the evidence from prophecy of the first coming of Christ. It is a saying worthy if all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. Br. Marston spoke in the p. m. from 1 Pet. 4:17. "The end of the ungodly." He showed it would not be eternal life in misery, but death, the Second Death. It made a deep impression on the large audience. At night I made my final appeal to the unconverted here, from Jer. 8:22, 23. "The harvest is past and the summer is ended and we are not saved." The congregation was the largest we had seen, and the interest was intense. We had some victory, but the mass of mind under the influence of truth continued intrenched behind the old excuse, "Not now!" Millions perish here. I never was more impressed with Jesus' statement to the Jews, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Here is the cause: Ye will not come. Men resist the Spirit, the word, the expostulations, and every means of grace, with their eyes wide open, and in view of the second death. How sad, when the feast is prepared, and all things are ready, and they are bidden to come, "without money and without price," that they all begin to make excuse and despise the infinite treasures of God's grace.

MONDAY, Aug. 26. Had an interview with Br. and Sr. DeWolf, of Rochelle, Ill. I first saw them at Shabbona Grove, Ill., in the days of Eld. Saml. Chapman, one of the first Advent pioneers in the West. They have been faithful and true, having no sympathy for disorganizing elements that only distract. The Rochelle Advent church employs Br. Marston half the time, and gives him such portion of this as new mission fields may require. The churches at Elida, Forreston, etc., are the fruit of the liberality of this society. Thank God for noble, unselfish and generous souls.

Br. Marston has been diligent and faithful from the hour he came among us. He has more calls than he can fill, and has been well sustained. But he is doing too much. An overdoing may prove an *un*doing. The Lord give wisdom.

Eleven were baptised, and the Elida tent meeting closed with an interesting communion season.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

We learn from the Crisis that Thos. L. Scott, General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of New Orleans, though a member of the Baptist church, is an Adventist in faith. And many more are with us in sentiment though not in name.———Br Ongley reports seventeen baptisms at meetings in N. W. Pennsylvania attended by Brn. Sweet, Buzzel, Wood and himself. The interest indicates more fruit to be gathered. ———A Baptist minister of Mobile thanks us for books and tracts, and adds: I have no one to sympathise with me, still I do not feel discouraged. ———Br. S. C. Welloome has baptised twenty-two souls this summer, and organized three new churches in Minnesota since Conference.———Eld. J. C. Bywater has united with the Disciple church. The minister who received him announced that as Eld. B. had renounced his Advent views there could be no objection to his becoming a member with them.———A brother in Salem, Mass., has fitted up a fine hall 55x32 feet for the accomodation of the church in that city. It will seat 350 persons.———Br. G. W. Miller has been laid by from labor by a serious accident from a runaway horse. He barely escaped with his life.———About 5000 people were in attendance at the late meeting at Colfax, Ind. on Sunday. The indications for future success are very favorable. ———The brethren at Almont, Mich., are 'determined' to have a chapel. Amen. The site is procured, and work begun. Br. Paton buried in baptism at Brockway Center, not long ago eleven rejoicing souls.———W. H. Lawrence writes that the outlook in South Carolina is favorable. The papers help somewhat to make up for the lack of living preachers.———A drop of ministerial statistics has fallen into our hands. Three months work: 1900 miles travel; 37 meetings; 5 baptised, traveling expenses $49; Total receipts $88, with calls from new fields demanding new sacrifices. Go on Br. Ongley. The reward will come by and by.———The brethren—a few—at Brothertown, Wis., would like a call from some of our preachers. Inquire for J. Prosser.———A sister in Wisconsin who lost her eyesight last October, stopped THE TIMES, because she could no longer read it. But recently her sight was restored, and last week she sends for the paper again. ——— Br. S. W. Thurber has removed to Minneapolis, Minn., and is settled as pastor of the church there. The Lord bless pastor and people abundantly.———Br. R. P. Hoge, Wenona, Ill., has so far recovered his health as to be able to preach occasionally. We hope the 'occasionally' will soon be every Sunday. ———As we go to press we hear that Sr. L. E. Fassett lies alarmingly sick, at Santa Clara, Cal. Remember her and her companion at the throne of grace.———The meeting at Assyria was a good time. Br. Babcock baptised three, and a church of thirteen members was organized.———Br. Henry Pratt has baptised two at Portland, Me., one a man of over four score years. ———We are informed that the scene on the street cars in Chicago, related in the "Gleanings" some time ago, was incorrectly reported. The tobacco nuisance is about as trying to the temper as anything we know of, but in this instance none of the parties were out of patience.———Indiana friends will please observe the change in the time of the Q. M. at Union Mills; and, further, please arrange to be present. A great feast is expected. Don't fail to be present to enjoy it.

No Second Life to Hear the Gospel.

Scripture "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom, Preach the Word." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 4: 1-2.)

This solemn sanction to the gospel ministry binds us by all the motives of fear and hope, to confine our teaching to "the word." This word forbids a second life to hear the gospel, as some fondly dream. Now let us note the proof.

1. The tares and the wheat grow together till the harvest, the tares are bundled for the burning, and the wheat is garnered. (Mat. 13:24–30.) The tares, the chaff, the briars and thorns, the children of the curse, are NOT put through another process to give them "a better chance" (as they say); but burned up in unquenchable fire." Mat. 3:10, 12; Heb. 6:8; 2 Pet. 2: 14–17.

Every dispensational promise, prophecy, parable and verbal statement of this point forbids the notion of a second process, or "a better chance." Every fact in nature (that forms the basis of these parables) lies against the idle assumption of a second life for sinners to hear the gospel. The notion is human, and the imagination vain. It is against experience, and the well known constitution of all things.

II. If Dunn (the author of this "unpreached gospel," as he terms it, that arrogates a second life to hear the gospel, and enjoy the imagined "better chance") would but "think soberly," as he ought to think, he might see that "chance" never saves. Salvation is of the Lord, according to the gospel. The present dispensation of grace is to take out a people for his name. Acts 15:14; Mat. 24:14; 28:20. Hence, there is no ground for this new notion, in reason or religion. This gospel age is to give place (not to the resurrection of "the unjust," to hear the gospel a second time, but) to Christ in "the times of restitution of all things spoken by all the prophets." Acts 3:21. This gospel is that preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Acts 2. It leaves no time or occasion for "the *un*preached gospel" of this new theory. It is all a monstrous impertinence.

III. The crowning proof is personal. "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord," etc.; but "the candle of the wicked shall be put out." Prov. 13:9; 29:20, 27; 24:20; Job 18:5–6 and 17–18. "His lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness;" in "the blackness of darkness forever." Jude 13. The believer says: "Thou wilt light my candle. The Lord my God will enlighten my darkness." Ps. 18:28. But no such light of gospel promise shines through the tomb of those whose "lamp is PUT OUT" in "the blackness of darkness forever." More of detail is not needful for proof on this point, as the above is both personal and dispensational, and given in various forms. Therefore there can be no second life to hear the gospel with a "better chance."—J. B. Cook, in Crisis.

The Dark Day in 1780.

An inquirer under "Notes and Queries" in the Observer of July 25, asked for information in regard to the nature, duration and assigned cause of the Dark Day in New England in 1780. We published in this paper a condensed account of that remarkable phenonenon, forwarded to us by D. T. Taylor, of Rouse's Point, N. Y. The article was originally published in the Boston Journal of June 14, 1871. The phenomenon has never been explained. Dr. Tenney, in 1785, wrote to the Historical Society that the ability of the land had endeavored to present cause, but, said he, "you will agree with me that no satisfactory solution has yet appeared." In similar language wrote Dr. Noah Webster in 1843. The theory of some, that it was smoke and ashes from the forest fires, extensively raging, was disproved. No fires in the forests could have been sufficient to spread a dense cloud over the whole of New England and even some parts of the Middle States. It came too suddenly, with no wind to carry it from one point to another. It was a darkness that settled down over an area of more than 300,000 square miles at the same time.—N. Y. Observer.

The Times.

AT HOME.

‟ ‟ ‟The past two months seem to have been a season of unusually fierce thunder storms in many sections.

‟ ‟ ‟Walnut stumps have become an article of merchandise, and many of them are very valuable. The curly grain of the root is used for veneering, and some stumps are worth $150 after being properly worked into shape.

‟ ‟ ‟Zion's Herald says: There is certainly much and most pressing work to be done by the temperance reformers, and every good man should proffer his personal aid in the work. The old prevailing habit of the general use of intoxicating drinks is certainly threatening the community again.

‟ ‟ ‟Soon after the Mormons established themselves in the Far West, a large company of emigrants, on their way to California, were murdered in Southern Utah. They were surrounded in a valley and deliberately shot down. Only the little children—and even not all of them—escaped. This "Mountain Meadow Massacre" has always been charged by the "Gentiles," upon the Mormons, and, by the Mormons, upon the Indians. Some years ago, an army officer placed in the valley a small slab, with the roughly-cut inscription: "Vengence is mine, saith the Lord." This was at once removed by order of Brigham Young. One Philip Klingonsmith, an ex-Bishop of the Later-Day-Saints, made, on April 10, 1871, an affidavit, which has just been published. If this man's testimony is credible, it fixes the responsibility of the massacre wholy upon the Mormons. He swears that the slayers were members of the Mormon Church; that they had "orders from headquarters to kill all of said company of emigrants except the little children;" and that the details of the massacre were at once "fully reported" to Brigham Young.

ABROAD.

‟ ‟ ‟The cholera is spreading rapidly in Roumania, and fears of its wide extension are entertained.

‟ ‟ ‟Ireland is threatened with another potato famine—the rot prevails almost universally. This, with the rise in the price of coal and meats, makes the prospects for the poor in Great Britain during the coming winter melancholy indeed.

‟ ‟ ‟The mixed commission for the settlement of the Alabama claims has concluded its labors by awarding something over $15,000,000 to the United States. This settlement seems to give general satisfaction to both countries interested. If we could only hope that arbitration might hereafter take the place of war in settling national difficulties, earth's prospects would be far more brighter than they are. We cannot be too thankful that peaceful counsels have prevailed in this case.

‟ ‟ ‟Moltke's history of the late war in Europe shows that even in 1868 every preparation had been made for war. The routes for the different troops and their places of assemblage had all been planned out, the force of the enemy had been calculated, and the very orders calling out the men had been drawn up and signed, only the date being left out. And what is confessed in the case of Germany was designed to be true in the case of France, but failed from the imbecility of her Emperor. The nations are engaged in similar occupations now. None can tell what moment an untoward event may fire the train of events that will lead to a general explosion.

‟ ‟ ‟A deep-seated uneasiness seems to pervade all the European nations as to their future, for they all appear to be looking with distrust to some "Battle of Dorking" that shall annihilate them, as this fabulous one is to swallow up England. French Switzerland is just now reading theirs bearing this ominous title, and it sounds somewhat like a nursery tale of horror. According to its predictions the Prussians are to march into Switzerland and gobble up the country, carrying off the famous bears of Berne to be an ornament of the Imperial City of Berlin. The Italians, too, are having their "Battle of Dorking," which is being read by all classes with much uneasiness. The French, however, are their bugaboo, who in twenty-five years are to land on their coast to punish them for their ingratitude to the "great nation" that so long protected them, and to pay them off for having accepted an alliance with Germany and Austria. As the story runs, the Italians first loose their fleet, then an army of some half million of men, and when they then appeal to their German friends for help, these latter send word that they will pray for them, which is intended to hint that by this time the Ultramontanes will be in power in Berlin. The French effect a landing almost unmolested, and are soon in possession of the kingdom of Italy, while Sardania, Sicily, and Naples set up again for themselves. That the book is widely read shows an anxiety of the nation.—Christian Advocate.

Communications.

Scraps of History.

The following items may be of interest to the readers of THE TIMES, and valuable also for further reference.

Eternal conscious suffering in a lake of fire, as the penalty for sin, was first preached by Athenagoras in the second century; and Origen took the other extreme and began to preach universal salvation about the same time. (Born A. D. 165.)

Mohamet, the founder of the Mohammedan religion, was born Nov. 10th, A. D. 570.

Spirituous liquors were first distilled in A. D. 1195. Wine only being used previous to that time.

Powder was invented A. D. 1340. Cannon were first used by Mohamedan Moors, in defending Algeria in Grenada, against the Castilians, A. D. 1342.

The art of printing was invented A. D. 1440. And the first book that ever was printed was the Bible. Printed in Mentz, France, Aug. 14, 1443.

Stops and pauses in literature were first used A. D. 1550, and were never used in the old manuscripts.

Tobacco was first discovered in St. Domingo, A. D. 2496. And was first used by the Indians.

Tea was first brought into Europe A. D. 1652.

The first Bible Society, (the British and Foreign), was organized A. D. 1804. The American Bible Society was organized in 1816. Now there are upwards of eighty parent societies, beside their auxiliaries.

The aurora borealis [northern lights] were first recorded as being seen March 6, 1726.

The first newspaper printed in America was the Boston News Letter (a sheet 8 by 12 inches) printed in Boston, Mass. April 24, 1724.

The first steamboat that was put in successful operation was the Fulton Clermont, built by Robert Fulton in 1807. And the first steam-vessels that crossed the Atlantic were the Sirius and the Great Western. They both arrived in New York from England April 23, 1838.

The modern railroad dates from the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester line in 1830.

Electric telegraphing was invented by Prof. Morse, and the first line was opened between Baltimore and Washington in 1843.

Modern Spiritism started among the Fox girls in Rochester, N. Y. March 31, 1848.

There were issued from the Patent Office at Washington during last year (1871) 3033 patents.

From the above statistics we learn (1) that men are running "to and fro," and knowledge is being increased. (2) That evil is abounding, and "evil men and seducers" are waxing "worse and worse." (3) That "fearful sights and great signs" are seen in heaven. And as this was to be the condition of things in the "time of the end," therefore we may conclude the Lord is soon to come. Let us be prepared to meet him in peace.

J. RIDLEY.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Utica, Winona Co. Minn., Sept. 10, 1872, Mrs. Martha Cheatheam: aged 84 years and 6 months.

"Grandma" Cheatham, as she was familiarly called, was born in Kentucky in 1788, and there lived for many years. In 1856 she came with her husband and sons, and their families, to Utica, where she has since lived with her son, Demetrius. Her husband died thirteen years ago, and she now lies by his side. Few persons leave so large a circle of friends to mourn their loss. She leaves one hundred and thirty-six children, grand children, and great-grand children. Sixty-four relatives were mourners at the funeral.

Sr. Cheatham was dearly beloved by all who knew her. She has lived a faithful Christian for over fifty years. For a number of years she has been a firm believer in the Advent doctrines, and rejoiced in the blessed hope. She preached Christ in her daily life, and many will remember the wise counsels she gave to them. The Bible was her companion daily. Her mind was remarkably strong for her age. She has often been called the mother of the Adventists in Winona Co. Her son's (Demetrius,) house has always been a "pilgrim's home," and it was the delight of all to talk with "Grandma." Brn. J. V. Himes, Sheldon, Miller, my own brothers, Br. Bursell, and many other preachers, will remember her while they live. She loved them and all true laborers in the vineyard, and even in her dying hours, though suffering severe pain, she often spoke of Br. Bursell and others, and wanted to see them. She then exhorted Christians to sound the gospel through the land, and exhort sinners to prepare for a judgment, and not wait for a dying bed; and saying that she was ready to go, she continued to exhort and talk of her hope while she had strength, and then falling into a stupor, yet suffering, she remained unable to talk for about twenty-four hours, when she fell to sleep, to awake no more till the resurrection morn, when she will come forth in the glorious image of her Master.

All was done for her that could be done during her sickness; but neither kindness nor care could save her from the cruel hand of death.

During my short acquaintance with her, of about two years, I learned to love her almost as my own mother; and I must say I never saw so much love and respect shown to any aged person by all their kindred, as to her. All wanted to do something to make her comfortable. God bless them for it. We can truly say of her as was said of Anna the prophetess—"She was of great age, and served God with fasting and prayers, night and day."

The funeral was at Cheatham's Grove, Sept. 11. It had been rainy weather the night and up to the hour of the funeral; but our prayers were ascending to God for the clouds to break away, and the rain to cease: and as the procession moved from the house of her grand-daughter, Sr. Doolittle, where she died, the clouds parted and the rain ceased until the funeral was over and she was buried, when the rain came down again and continued through evening. She was brought upon the old campground, where she had so often met with us, and while she lay sleeping quietly in the embrace of death, beneath the dense foliage of the beautiful oak grove, surrounded by weeping relatives and friends and a large circle of sympathizing neighbors, (sixty wagon loads of persons being present as I was informed) I spoke to the living from Job 19: 25-27, words that she had often been heard to repeat, and that contained the substance of her hope, that after the worms should have destroyed this body it should be renewed, and made immortal. She expected to see Jesus and dwell with him forever. Oh! blessed hope! Br. P. Raimer, Eld. Craven, (Presbyterian of St. Charles,) and Br. and Sr. Cobb, (F. W. Baptists), were present and assisted in the services. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

S. C. WELLCOME.

—Crisis please copy.

Discussion.

[Second Article.]

The second proposition in the discussion between Eld. Jasper Coffey, of the Disciple order, and Eld. A. F. Dugger, was:

Resolved, That endless misery is not a Bible doctrine.

In the outset of the discussion Eld. Dugger remarked that he came before them to consider a solemn subject, the doom of the ungodly, and affirmed that the Bible does not teach eternal misery, and we can only appeal to the word of God in reference to it. He first considered the uses and usages of the terms eternal, eternity and everlasting.

The word "eternity" occurs but once in the Bible, and was shown to apply to God who inhabited eternity. (Job 58:15.) "Eternal" only twice in the Old Testament and "eternal life" not once. The word "everlasting" is applied to the mountains, hills, laws and Jewish ordinances, and thus is shown to have a limited signification. Nowhere do the terms "everlasting," or "eternal life" apply to the sinner. He then gave examples of the limited and unlimited uses of the word, and referred to Mat. 25: 46, where the words "eternal" and "everlasting" are derived from the same word in the original, and said that in this connection it was used in an unlimited sense and proved that at the judgment the sinner would go into eternal death.

What is the nature of the punishment? is it misery or death? Paul declares, (Rom. 6: 2,) "The wages of sin is death," not suffering. Hence death is the punishment.

Christ declares, "if a man keep my saying he shall never see death," which cannot refer to temporal death, as all die that. (John 8: 51.) Will the wicked live forever? was answered by referring to John 6: 53; "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you." The righteous have eternal life by faith. It is said we go to the Old Testament; but these are words of Christ. Reference was also made to John 11: 51; 7: 38, and the question asked, Does this sound like "endless misery"? Death is defined by Webster, "to put an end to:" consequently the sinner cannot be in existence after the penalty is inflicted. In John 10: 27-8, Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I give unto them eternal life;" but the other class, it is declared, shall utterly perish. In James 5: 20, we read: "He which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death:" not save from everlasting misery, but from death. Christ says, (John 3: 14, 15,) "That whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life." Then those who do not, perish and are lost eternally. If we have eternal life, why make such a promise. In Prov. 8: 35, 36 it is declared he that sinneth against the Lord "wrongeth his own soul; all that hate me love death." It is then not misery and happiness, but life and death. "As the whirlwind passeth so is the wicked no more." (Prov. 10: 25.)

Eld. Coffey admitted that upon the words "eternal" and "everlasting" Eld. D. was right, and that "everlasting" is used in limited senses; that it includes all the time an object is to exist: therefore upon all these matters they agreed; such admissions are fatal to his own theory. Because Eld. Dugger believed that death was an extinction of life, Eld. Coffey averred that it led to a denial of the resurrection, and that his definition was equivalent to nonexistence, which was not true; as we believe the resurrection to be the only hope of a future life presented in the Scriptures. He referred to Mat. 25: 46, where the word aionias occurs, and admitted that it showed the duration of punishment, and then proceeded to show what he called the infidelity of the question, by asking, "Can you punish a nonentity?" The adjective form of the word aionias shows it was not limited in either case in the above quotation. The passage he considered was a description of the judgment. In reference to the two classes mentioned in Mat. 25: 31, he remarked if the punishment is annihilation he is using the word "death" as equivalent of it. He then showed the antithetic form of the passage to be life opposed to misery, which would not be following the rule that both members of a sentence must be opposed to each other; so we have the righteous and wicked and life and death (not life and misery) in opposition. On Rom. 6: 23 he made some remarks, and stated a person "may be dead and yet conscious," and quoted the expression of Christ concerning a certain woman—"She is dead while she liveth," which did not advance his argument a single step.

The term "perish" is rendered from eleven different words. The word appolumi, translated "lost," can expend its full force on a man in this life. He then gave examples of the occurrence of the word and conveyed the idea that it invariably expended its force in present time, from Lk. 16: 4, 8. And if the word "perish" means annihilation it will show eleven different destructions, yet Br. D. had not given the word that definition; and so he had no authority to present such a wrong idea to the people to prejudice their minds against his position.

Eld. Dugger repeated his statement in regard to the words "everlasting" and "eternal," and said he had no disposition to limit the word aionias in Mat. 25: 46. He then called upon his opponent to show that a being can be conscious without life. In regard to punishing a nonentity, he replied that it was putting the entity into nonentity which constitutes the punishment. So long as the righteous live the wicked will be dead after the judgment. The points directly opposed are the wicked and righteous, life eternal and death eternal. He then gave the definition of the word appolumi, from Donnegan, "to destroy totally;" and from the Analytical Greek Lexicon, "to destroy utterly." He then referred to Prov. 11: 19; Mat. 12: 37; Ezk. 18: 4; 20: 31. Those who develop an unrighteous and immoral character receive death. Will God exercise his power in keeping the sinners in protracted suffering? The Lord says "I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked." Ezk. 33:11. When the wicked are dead they are not alive. Misery is defined by Webster to be extreme pain, great unhappiness. Rev. 2: 11 brings to view the second death, which was readily admitted by Eld. C.; but he failed to show what it means; for if death means misery then it would be an infliction of a second misery. The penalty of sin is therefore the second death.

When Eld. C. replied he flattered himself somewhat and then brought up the word appolumi again, and quoted Lk. 15: 24 to show that it expends its full force on a being who is yet the possessor of consciousness. He then tried to show that death is a separation, so not differing materially from the Spiritists, teaching that a man may be dead in one sense, yet alive in another. The second death is being driven away into everlasting punishment, so Eld. C. declares, which is a very strange theory indeed. He quoted for proof texts Mat. 26: 36; Mk. 5: 35; Mat. 8: 32. A repetition of some of his previous arguments and texts followed, which did not advance his position in the least. He quoted Dan. 12: 2, and remarked that if the life of the righteous is endless the contempt of the wicked is also. He thought to anticipate Br. Dugger, and so brought up Mk. 9: 43, where the words "unquenchable fire" are used, and rendered "inextinguishable fire" in the Emphatic version, and referred to the valley of Hinnom near Jerusalem.—To be concluded.

It is generally conceded that by the expression, 'God breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living soul, no more is meant than that God caused him to breath, and he became a living soul. "Living soul" is applied to him in common with birds, beasts, and reptiles in the same chapter.—C. Beecher.

The hardest part of a clergyman's life, as it is of an editor's is the necessity of producing without the time to produce. Good thoughts, whether in the paper, the volume, or the sermon, need time to grow up leisurely, to mature in calm restfulness, and to produce when, and only when, they are so ripe that they need expression.

Take your religion with you to the seashore, the springs, and to the mountains; retain its spirit; and in order to this, jealously maintain its form: Too many of us are like the little girl who, at the close of her evening prayer one day said, "Now good-bye, God; good-bye, Jesus Christ; I'm going to Boston to-morrow."—Anonymous.

When Rev. C. B. Crane, D. D., attended the Tabernacle, and heard Spurgeon preach, two or three of the six deacons, seated in the pulpit, fronting the congregation, fell into a doze before the sermon ended! Then we need not conclude, when persons sleep under our preaching, that the fault is always with us. No: even Spurgeon cannot keep everybody awake.

If a women is evidently shallow and vain, and is plainly more concerned with the effect that her toilet will produce than with that of her words—if what she says is evidently said for sensation—no man and no women will care to hear her. But there are women as intelligent, who think as much and feel as deeply, as the best men: and when one of them, feeling the influence of certain customs and laws of society as no man can feel them, appeals soberly and eloquently to the judgment and conscience of society, it is a peculiar becoming, and especially feminine, duty that she does.

The Christian church is even yet but very imperfectly freed from the unholy influence, and the mischievous operation of human authority. The house requires to be more carefully swept than it was at the reformation from Popery, and a more thorough search must be made for the old leaven, that it may be more completely cast out. Let all individual Christians, let all Christian churches learn to act on principle, that in reference to Christian faith and duty, and worship, the question is not, How thinkest thou? but, How readest thou? Not, What is the use and wont? but, What is written in the law? Not, How is it to be arranged by us? but, How has it been settled by our Master? Let us "seek out of the book of the Lord and read."—Dr. Brown.

PROF. HUXLEY ON SPIRITUALISM.—Having been invited by the Dialectical Society to join their Committee of Investigation on Spiritualism, Professor Huxley sent the following reply: I regret that I am unable to accept the invitation of the Council of the Dialectical Society to co-operate with a Committee for the investigation of "Spiritualism," and for two reasons. In the first place I have no time for such an inquiry, which would involve much trouble and (unless it were unlike all inquiries of that kind I have known) much annoyance. In the second place, I take no interest in the subject. The only case of "spiritualism" I have had the opportunity of examining into for myself was as gross an imposture as ever came under my notice. But, supposing the phenomena to be genuine, they do not interest me. If anybody would endow me with the faculty of listening to the chatter of old women and curates in the nearest Cathedral town, I should decline the privilege, having better things to do; and if the folks in the spiritual world do not talk more wisely and sensibly than their friends report them to do, I put them down in the same category. The only good that I can see in a demonstration of the truth of "spirtualism" is to furnish an additional argument against suicide. Better live a crossing-sweeper than die and be made to talk twaddle by a medium hired at a guinea a seance.

Correspondence.

From Wm. McCullock.

To the brethren in Wayne and adjacent counties in Iowa. Dear Brethren: Having seen your kind invitation in THE TIMES for me to come to Iowa and labor in the ministry, in reply I would say that I appreciate your invitation, and hope to be willing to labor in that field where God's blessing may rest upon me and my labors. It is not for me to choose my own field, or say here or there only will I go. I trust I am the Lord's, and if so I must do the Lord's bidding.

I have pressing calls from N. W. Missouri, and also from Kansas, and Southern Illinois; and my prayer is, for wisdom to direct, and grace to sustain, and strength to perform. Where my future field of labor will be, I know not. If it will please the Lord for me to go to Kansas and help Br. Munson and others in that new field, then I want a willingness to go. Or, if to go to N. W. Mo. to stay up the hands of Br. Hink, and give encouragement to the little flock there; or, if it is to Wayne Co. Iowa, the Master calls, oh! for a heart to say, Not my will, but thine, O Lord be done!

Meanwhile, brethren, pray for me, and ask the Lord to show the path of duty.

The brethren in Illinois want to know if they have not a better claim upon me than Iowa, or Kansas, or Missouri; to which I reply: The Master has the first claim and the best; and where he opens the door for me, I feel that it is best to obey. I expect to devote all my time and energy in the cause of God.

Our late campmeeting in Southern Illinois was a blessed season. The Lord manifested his special blessing and a goodly number were brought from darkness to light. Nine were baptised, and several others united with churches of Union and Johnson counties. Opposition to the truth seemed to vanish under the heavenly rays of the Holy Spirit, and many who were determined not to like the meeting, were compelled to say—"God is here, of a truth!" The Methodists and Baptists took part in our meetings.

Br. Childs labored with us in this meeting, and perfect unity and harmony prevailed throughout. May the Lord still add to their numbers of such as shall be saved.

Our Young Folks.

"Don't be laughed out of your money or your prayers." This was the advice given a poor lad as he went on board a vessel in the humblest capacity to work his way in the world. It was followed; and while many of his companions sank into obscurity, this poor boy, by his own merit, rose from one degree of eminence to another, becoming, at last, an admiral in the British navy. Good advice it would be to us all, on land or sea. Fear or ridicule causes many an unwise expenditure that is afterward bitterly but unavailingly repented of, while many a lad or lass going forth from the sanctity of a religious home when surrounded by the careless and indifferent neglects for the same reason to put up the accustomed daily prayer for strength and guidance.

"Never be laughed out of your money or your prayers." Let this be your motto, rigidly adhered to, and be assured a harvest of good will be the result.—Young People's Helper.

A Good Little Mother with a Bad Name.

There is a very nice, careful little mother, not an inch long, who never does a bit of harm. On the contrary, she is quite useful to us and perfectly devoted to her babies. Yet shocking stories are told about her, and it's all on account of her name.

You see, she has a droll pair of wings. She seldom opens them; but when she does they look something like a human ear. So the poor creature got the name of Ear-wig or Ear-wing. Whereupon some people, who thought they knew everything, said she was so named because she had a fancy for getting into people's ears! And then every ignorant and stupid nurse girl repeated it to the children. So it went on spreading, like other scandal—and nothing in the world can spread like scandal—till everybody got to be dreadfully afraid of the innocent little creature, and nobody dared lie down on the grass for fear a prowling Ear-wig should take up her quarters in his ear. So her reputation got thoroughly established as an evil-disposed mother, and even the wise men who make the books fell into the error.

Don't you believe a word of it! Nobody would be more frightened than she to find herself in such a place. And, if she did happen to stray in, she couldn't possibly get further than the drum of the ear (you know you have a little drum in your ear, dont you?).

But she has altogether different ideas about a nursery for her babies. She much prefers a damp wall or a hole between bricks. This she prepares very carefully and nicely, by smoothing the stone or brick, making a nice bed of brickdust, and altogether a very cosy and comfortable house, about as big as a lady's watch. When the house is fixed to her taste she lays her eggs.

But her work isn't yet done; in fact, it's hardly begun. Every day, for three or four weeks, she turns those eggs—I don't know how many dozen of them. At the end of this time they hatch, and out come a whole tribe of babies.

Not a bit like their mother, in her sober dress of brown and lead color; but tiny atoms of creatures, in white like other babies.

They're a lively family, though; and every day mama Ear-wig takes the whole troop out on a foraging expedition. Selecting some deep flower, where there is plenty of pollen for the babies to eat, she leads the whole family into it, and there they spend the day.

Think of going pic-nicing and spending the day in the heart of a lily cup.

Well, when it grows dark the whole family return to the home; and thus they live for five or six weeks. All this time the babies have been growing, and every now and then throwing off their old skin and coming out in a bran-new suit, somewhat larger than the last. That's the way insects have of changing their dress—perhaps you know.

Now comes the sad part of my story, for I am sorry to say it winds up with a tragedy.

As these ungrateful babies come to their full size, forgetful of the constant care of their good little mother, unmindful of the cozy home and the nice pic-nics they have enjoyed with her, these wretched little cannibals actually eat up their own mother!

Of course, that breaks up the whole family. The unnatural children throw off their last suit, come out with gorgeous wings, and fly off the first thing, to seek their own fortunes.

Besides the slander about the ear, there's another naughty thing said of this unfortunate mother. She does (it must be admitted) eat holes in melon-rinds and the leaves of plants. But when you know more about it you'll be ready to thank her instead of abusing her.

Every bite she takes is to eat the eggs of some other insect, which are special food. If she did not eat those eggs, they would hatch, and not only the rinds, but every bit of the melon be eaten. She must be allowed to be very useful.

In fact, the more you know of these little bodies the more you will find that every one has its use. Some are made to prevent too great growth of vegetation, others to thin out the ranks of their fellow insects.

Those busy little worms who dig in the ground, and whom we call nuisances, are, in truth, doing a most important and useful work. By their incessant wriggling and twisting in the ground they keep it mellow and soft, and thus suitable for the growth of plants.

But there's another funny thing I want to tell you about this little mother with a bad name. At the end of her tail she has a sort of a pair of forceps. You'd never guess what she uses them for; but one of those inquisitive naturalists, who spend their lives studying those little creatures, found out, by watching just what Madame Ear-wig does with her forceps.

You must know that her wings, which are so beautiful, are packed away in a very small place. They are first folded like a shut-up fan, and then doubled twice the other way. Now, when the droll little mother wants to fold her wings and pack them safely away, she just turns her tail over her back, and with the forceps, as if they were hands, she folds and tucks away the wings.

It's almost too funny to believe; but the Rev. Mr. Wood declares that he has seen her do it.—Independent.

Conference Minutes

Michigan.

SOUTHERN CAMPMEETING.

The services commenced on Wednesday. The first discourse was delivered by Br. Babcock to good acceptance, leaving all in good cheer for the work yet to be done. Br. Quimby, from Barry Co., arrived to-day; also Sr. Mansfield, from Norwood Park, Ill. With such helpers, how could we anticipate anything but a good meeting? Sr. Mansfield's old friends were gratified to find her in so good health and spirits. How true, that those who live near the Throne carry the comforting influences of the Spirit with them. Sr. M. did most of the preaching, which was well received by all. Members of other churches being asked what they thought of the preaching, answered—"It was well said, and bears the mark of truth on every sentence." Others say—"It was decidedly Christian." Suffice it to say we were greatly helped in our work. May the blessing of the Most High, and the sympathy of all the faithful in Christ be given to encourage those whose gifts qualify them for the highest stations in the world's favor, who, notwithstanding, have given all for Christ and his cause, and have consecrated their powers to the service of those who would follow Jesus.

Br. Quimby is a new hand in the Advent ministry; but is doing well. Our camp family was not large, as many of the brethren lived at their homes, and attended as they were able. Quite a number of brethren recently from Vermont have settled at Reading, Mich., and were, in company with Brn. Chapman and Smith, at our meeting. Of one of them I will speak more definitely—the devoted and accomplished Dr. L. H. Thomas, who will be remembered by all the preachers as the man who presented them each a bottle of the best ink they ever saw. Brethren from Montpelier, O., and from Woodbridge, Camden, Jonesville, Moscow, Jackson, and Leslie were present. Elds. Snook and Fox arrived Saturday night, and helped make up our Sunday's great gathering. Br. Snook, known to so many of our people in Michigan as the friend of the children, and who has been so successful in the Master's vineyard in organizing churches, is temporarily laid aside on account of his health; but his sympathies are still with us, and his heart in the work.

We were favored on Sunday with a collection on the ground of $44.47, and Br. Field added $1. This sum was expended as follows:

To preachers	$30 00
To J. D. Paul, for team work	4 50
To J. Gordonier, " "	2 00
Expenses of fitting ground and work on well	9 00
	$45 50

The Quarterly C[illegible]ference also met on the ground on Saturd[illegible] Br. Babcock in the chair, Eli Wakeman, S[illegible] tem. Prayer by Br. Preston. Br. P[illegible] presented the church of Assyria, B[illegible], for admission to Conference. Rece[illegible]

Other items [illegible]rest came up and were duly disposed o[illegible]

Voted, That t[illegible]xt Q. M. be held at Woodbridge, Nov. 14.

F[illegible]MAN, Sec'y pro tem.

NOR[illegible] DISTRICT.

The first Q[illegible] year was held in Dayton, Au[illegible] old officers were re-elected: [illegible], Chairman; E. B. Scott, Sec[illegible]son, Treasurer. Reports of m[illegible]hurches encouraging. $14.88 was p[illegible] the Missionary Fund. J. Bower, A[illegible]nson, and A. Amos were appointed a disp[illegible]ing committee. $34 was paid in as free w[illegible] offering to help defray the expenses of preaching brethren.

This meeting was largely attended both from abroad and at home. A deep interest was manifested by all. The preaching was of the best kind. We hope for good results. At the close, thirty-four sat down to the Lord's table, hoping soon to sit down with all the redeemed in the kingdom of God.

E. B. Scott, Sec'y.

Indiana.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The third annual session of the Indiana Conference convened at Colfax, Clinton Co., Aug. 9, and closed at night, Aug. 18. All the churches on the list of last year reported, mostly in a prosperous condition. Three others were received: Volga church, Jefferson Co.; Union Mills; Sumption's Prairie. There were in all ten preachers in attendance. Br. B. H. Osborn, of Goodland, Newton Co., was licensed to preach. And Br. Smith came in and united with us, who had been holding an isolated position.

The reports of evangelists were satisfactory and encouraging. The preaching by Brn. Field and Andrus was able, logical—I might add, simply irresistible. Orthodoxy reeled to and fro under well directed blows of the gospel hammer, and the community saw and felt the power of truth, which all seemed deeply anxious to hear and know. We feel certain that seed was sown that will yield an abundant harvest.

The officers of last year were re-elected. A committee was appointed to choose and purchase four acres of ground suitable for, and prepare it for a permanent place for conference meetings.

It is hoped and expected that at the next session all parts of the brotherhood will feel the importance of sending up full delegations of their active members, and especially such as are filled with the Spirit of the Master, and those also who are well trained or gifted in vocal music. If there was anything more to be desired at the conference, it was more of our spiritual minded members, and more of our good singers.

This was the first meeting at this place. We feel that it was a good one, and God was with us; and each succeeding year, as time lasts, we expect a larger attendance of working brethren, and increasing interest. On Sunday the concourse was immense, variously estimated at from 4,000 to 6,000 persons.

C. H. Cass, Sec'y.

Wisconsin.

CAMPMEETING REPORT.

We had the public square at Tomah for our campground, a beautiful place, and the best of order, good congregations, solemn attention to the word preached, excellent prayer and conference meetings, four confessed Christ, and with all these rich blessings our heavenly Father gave us good weather, and many friends in and around Tomah. We appointed a Campmeeting Committee to arrange to have a central meeting in this western field next season.

Brn. Sheldon, Brown, Adams, Foster, and Putnam were with us, and preached the word to acceptance.

Thirty-five sat down in remembrance of Jesus' dying love. It was good. For a new place, never saw its superior.

P. W. Hough.

WESTERN DISTRICT.

Q. M. at Burns, Aug. 16. There was nothing very special, but a very deep feeling seemed to pervade all present that the coming One was very near. Sweet peace and brotherly love abounded. Eld. Foster, the Methodist minister of West Salem was with us, and took part in the devotional exercises. It was good to be there. P. W. Hough.

Illinois.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT.

Our first annual campmeeting for Southern Illinois is now in the past, and a matter of record. Our last sermon was preached; the last prayer invoked, with hymns sung to the praise of God. The meeting from beginning to its close was characterized by perfect harmony and self-consecration to the work to be performed. We were disappointed in not being able to procure all the help the meeting required. The great burden rested upon the shoulders of our highly esteemed and much beloved brother, Wm. McCullock. We found in him a support worthy of our confidence. He is a laborer in the field that none need hesitate to secure. His efforts are logical, clear and impressive; he preached eighteen sermons during the week, all completely vindicating both by sound argument and Christlike spirit, the primitive doctrines of the Bible. To the close of the meeting not a discordant note was heard; all opposition was hushed and the truth vindicated. God grant that more such laborers be sent into the great harvest-field.

As a result of those labors, nine souls obeyed their Master in baptism, with some fifteen to twenty additions to the Anna and Mt. Joy churches, for which let God be praised. We feel confident in saying that this is only the "first fruits" of the meeting; such convincing arguments can never die, especially when seasoned with the Spirit of our Master. Many, very many have had their prejudices removed, and not a few are almost persuaded to cast in their lot with us. God grant that their nobler convictions may prevail, and at the first opportunity cheer our hearts with their presence.

We had representatives from the region round about, every church was represented, in the Southern Illinois Conference. Our hearts were cheered, and all returned to their homes with stronger resolutions to work for God. Our encampment was small, consisting of one large and four small tents, but the accommodations were sufficient. We are now in our infancy, but hope to grow in numbers and usefulness, as God shall give us the increase. Thus ended our first Advent campmeeting in Southern Illinois; God grant, should time continue, that this may not be the last. F. A. Childs.

Iowa.

The Iowa Christian Conference met at New Hartford, Butler Co., June 18. Job Gildersleve, President, and Alonzo Raymond, Sec'y,—both present. P. S. W. Deyo and J. J. Towsley were appointed committee on credentials.

Visiting brethren were invited to take part in our deliberations. Alonzo Raymond was elected President, and N. F. Eggleston, Secretary, for the ensuing year. W. H. Peck, Eber Dunham, and J. J. Towsley were elected as Conference Board. P. S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsay, and N. F. Eggleston were appointed a committee on ordination. Job Gildersleve, S. B. Ensign, and J. J. Towsley were appointed a committee on membership.

New Hartford church reported 150 members; Sunday-school of 25 scholars. Are in the background: need a revival. Tama City church reports 43 members. Bear Creek church reports 7 members; spiritual life increasing; preaching "once in a while." Floyd church, 65 members; do not enjoy that degree of consecration that they desire; future prospects those of joyful hope in God. Ettie church, organized April 4, 1872, by P. S. W. Deyo, with 20 members; four have since been baptised; no regular preaching; in need of help. Little Cedar church, 58 members; spiritual condition will compare favorably with other churches; preaching by P. S. W. Deyo and A. A. Wilbur. Parkersburg church, 8 members; alive and doing what they can.

Ten ministers reported personally, and three by letter. The evangelist, P. S. W. Deyo, reports: I have preached at Floyd, Clear Lake, Tama City, Belle Plain, Ettie, Boylan's Grove, Osage, Little Cedar, in this State. In Illinois, at Streator, Ancona, Deer Park. Have spent two months in protracted meetings; have assisted in one that continued one month; attended two quarterly meetings, baptised 43; organized one church, and traveled about 1,500 miles.

Altogether, our conference was a profitable season. The ministers seemed to be filled with the Spirit, to realize that the end of all things is at hand, and the coming of the Lord nigh, even at the doors, and expressed a determination to live nearer to God, to make an entire consecration to him, and do more for his cause in the future, than in the past. The business was conducted in a spirit of love and harmony, and we parted with the joyful assurance of soon meeting in the kingdom of God. N. F. Eggleston, Sec'y.

New York.

THE FAIRPORT CAMPMEETING.

The second annual Campmeeting of the Adventists in New York, just closed (Aug. 19), was, as all said, a great success.

It was a most blessed place, where the scattered, waiting ones, in a happy re-union, enjoyed another of those heavenly sittings together—which is their fortune occasionally—as the wearied, thirsty, desert traveler enjoys the green oasis of Sahara, anon, in his long pilgrimage over its burning sands. The grove itself was a lovely spot, and the forest shade delightful; but the encampment of so many dear pilgrim saints, patiently waiting for the return of Jesus, and having the only apparent purpose of fitting themselves therefor, and of blending also an influence to "prepare a people, made ready for the Lord," made doubly dear the place, and doubly refreshing the retirement of the woods, where now the purest breezes of earth, laden, as it were, with an heavenly ruach, cooled not only the brow of the "outer," but fanned to a spiritual glow the zeal of the "inner man."

It was indeed good—superlatively so, thrice told for emphasis—to be there. They who were most doubtful of the propriety of holding such meetings, and of the benefit of them, were well convinced to the contrary, as many testified, and voted heartily for another meeting (time continuing) next season.

There were eighteen family and society tents, all well filled (especially at the latter part of the meeting), besides the boarding tent, and the large State Mission Tent, which afforded quarters for a goodly number. Each Sunday there were, as estimated, between two and three thousand people out; and we think there was as good order as such a crowd ever preserves, especially the last Sunday; the Lord and his truth have the praise and the glory; it was not of us.

The preachers present were S. C. Gove, B. P. Stevens, J. E. Wells, P. A. Smith, J. Wendell, J. H. Whitmore, D. Cogswell, M. R. Miles, J. T. Ongley, A. P. Moore, H. H. Brown, E. S. Jennings, W. A. Fenn, E. F. Sergisson, A. C. Newell, W. J. Hobbs, Ira Allen, Warren Vreeland, Wm. L. Himes and Frank Burr. The coming of the last two brethren from Chicago was to us like the coming of Titus to Paul, and we thought too of what he said about Stephanas and others (1 Cor. 16:15-18)—we could say as much, and that as heartily as he. They came to us neither as whisperers, "busy-bodies in other men's matters," nor talking about their neighbors; they were the other kind of visitors, whom we love so well to entertain. We hope to meet again, if not in a like capacity, in a better—that for which we sigh—where the faintest of our earthly fears will all have passed away with the "old things."

But I have something to say of this meeting, it is quite as applicable to many others, recently, in which I design to represent no other persons, directly or indirectly; it is a digression here:—Good as this meeting was, it might have been eclipsed, as I conceive, in its power for positive good. There were twenty-five sermons in all (one by Eld. Cameron, a Baptist brother,) and twenty-four by our own brethren, named above, embracing all the various subjects that interest us as a people. The coming of Christ was made prominent in the preaching, singing, prayers and exhortations; but the time of the Advent received a very meager amount of attention. This, to me, is a sad declension from the original spirit and animus of Adventism. There are tears that fain would wash out these lines; but an aching heart too well attests their truthfulness. Only two sermons were devoted to a definiteness beyond the general signs and indications of the approaching Advent. Why should only one-twelfth part of Adventist preaching now be to show "the time fulfilled," or "at hand," from the periods? Can Rome rise higher than she has risen; or fall lower (temporally) than she has now fallen? Why it seems to me that the very stones might cry out if we thus hold our (new-found) peace. Adventist meetings! Adventist preachers! thousands of ears to hear; and disappointed in not hearing! the books unsealed; the time of the end almost expired! the vision written "upon tables, that he may run that readeth!" everything that Adventists ever asked the world to concede, now self-arranged into arguments unequaled for strength—a team mighty for execution! and more of us at the bits than at the reins and the wheels!! Two sermons only out of twenty-four honoring the periods with a balance of two practically dishonoring them! Brethren, "think on these things." Oh! when the Wesleys and the Millers of every reformation that ever blessed the world, blush for the growing spirit of compromise which that strength that overcomes persecution (and thus popularizes) brings so gradually to their various causes, they may well sigh in the strain of the weeping prophet to Israel: "thy backslidings shall reprove thee." When we meet Habakkuk will we scold him for the charts—useless things, but to show the time? When we meet Daniel and John will we reprove them for the periods—useless things, but to show the time? When we meet Jesus shall he say to us, "because thou knewest not the time?" "God forbid." Brethren, in the name of the Lord, let us never (under the circumstances) before any men or things that have yet opposed us, blush or apologize for "our mistakes." There are a thousand to one good things that came on the same train; and when they call us down to "our mistakes," let us own the corn and call them up to our achievements. This is not to boast; nevertheless, if Adventists may not in this respect boast, what religious reformers may? It is a weak train that is much burdened with cinders from its own smoke-stack. Examine the freight; boxes and crates (whole or broken) are necessary and go as freight through no part of it. There are a few spoiled gardens in every city; but the same track that has despoiled them of their petty pride has borne to them many and many a train of treasure and wealth which their soils could never have produced.

To dogmatize upon a day, or even a year, is not necessary to a powerful and telling argument from the periods; and few press those points. But for this people to forget or ignore those God-given and God-blessed periods (and now! when every feature of evidence relative to that unholy power they measure—its rise and sway, and its decay and destruction—is so clearly before the world, marking circles so small around those corresponding dates, 538, 1798 and 1873) is, I can say no less, far too rash a concession of vital points; it is yielding the keys of our fortress, and opening the very gates to the enemy.

Be this truth, yea or nay, God will never show us, only as he may assist an humble, earnest spirit for the truth, lead us whence it may.

Our excellent meeting, like all others here, came to its close, and found us all sad to part. Fifteen had been baptised during the meeting, several of whom had made their first public profession upon the grounds, and one had come from the Catholic church. Over two hundred sat down to the table of the Lord, the last evening, in commemoration of his sufferings and death. One Baptist lady remarked to me she would like to sit with us; and I doubt not others felt the fetters that bound them. The social and prayer-meetings were, throughout the week, very interesting and profitable seasons—cheering the hearts and strengthening the minds of believers, and carrying conviction to the unconverted. At one time there were 110 testimonies, 5 prayers, and 11 bursts of song crowded into the space of an hour. With two or three (possible) exceptions there were no freaks or paroxysms of "wild-fire," examples of fanaticism, nor anything that looked seriously like it; nor were there, perhaps, more than that number of those crazy-like 'Amens' that quite too frequently force themselves upon a campmeeting as if they were a natural accompaniment, but their very awkwardness showing them to be unnatural and unfrequent utterances. If crazy-like is an unpardonable expression, it is not also a misnomer by any means. "Let your moderation be known to all men," and "be ye temperate in all things"—those are safe campmeeting as well as home mottoes. To sanction an expressed truth by a candid response in any sensible key, with or without a (reasonable) hallelujah, or a welling-up (but well-tempered) Glory to God, is not an idle thing or a small matter. But the practice of acoustics as a speciality, or as an outward show of an inward zeal, in times of social religious intercourse, is so out of keeping with all the principles of the gospel that it everywhere needs rebuke. If it is an object to expand or strengthen the respiratory, or improve the vocal organs, let the dumb-bells and the gymnasium be resorted to as (to that end) the better means of grace.

Financially, our meeting was also a success. The committee's account stands as follows:

Bill of Lumber	$30 00
Rent of "	10 00
" Grounds	15 00
Straw and Hay	16 00
Police duty	22 00
Tracts (mostly used)	21 50
Paid the preachers (including $36.36 delegate money)	75 00
Freight, Oil, Wood, Nails, Advertisements, etc	25 42
	$210 92
Collections	150 31
Individuals, as an errand	23 00
Delegates	35 52
	$208 83
Charged to Conference for Tracts left	2 09

Respectfully submitted,

Wm. E. Brown.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, September 24, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.

Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope: but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

The Faith of St Paul.

The immediate demand for this work so far exceed- our anticipations, that the first edition was ex- h [illegible] re we were aware. The second edition is in p [illegible] tion, and will be ready soon. Orders will then be [illegible] ptly filled.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No. 375 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post-paid, for 30c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page, $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

ANDREW THOMPSON. What is your P. O. Address. Give us that and we shall be happy to oblige you.....W. GOOD. Sent envelopes Sept. 18.

Tent Fund.

H. J. Munson, $75.

Tract Fund.

W. M. Palmer, $1; J. Prosser, $10.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

G Huckins W S Dibble O D Gibson D Mathewson H A King F H Kenny Miles & Benedict J C Smith A I Tuttle S B White O Geer H H Brown I E Miller A F Dugger H J Munson U Smith W A Allen S Morrell O Wiswell G B Hurlburt K B Scott J S Lawver N Runquist E N Bliss H H Janes P Williams J Head A A Phelps W Erwin S S Walker J Ridley H D Cutting J Mayell J W Sims J Stockwell jr M McMillan I Adrian J B Walker E Pope E Lambkin R Wilson J T Ongley B Finders F A Baker O Cushing P W Hough C C Marston O R Hale V Hunt H M Judge D F Quimby M M Weatherhead W True A Boult S P Whitney L Remick S C Wellcome J Bedient P Alling F W Kent H Beller C C Marston R Murphy N N Thompson P A Thomas W McCullock 2 T Gale W Roper.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

E H Durand 4 D D Reed 2 J H Paton W A Allen J K Perry E E Wheeler W J Cumins 4 D C Williamson 2 W M Palmer T Richmond H V Barlow H Beller G F Miller A M Boult J M Snook J Griffith 2 L F Cole L Record 2 R Allen P Hitchcock F A Shaw J N Porter J Thompson W M Rhoads M Johnson P Cunningham J H Dillier G W Hurd 2 T C Barker W Good C Williams G T Cranston F O Koss L H Davis C T Russell jr P A Smith T H Bancroft Dr Nafe A M Gladding L A Richardson P Allyn J Thompson.

Marriages.

MARTIN—RAND.—At Mindora, Wis., Sept. 18, 1872, by Eld. P. W. Hough, Mr. Silas Martin and Miss Christiana Rand, both of Amsterdam, Wis.

DURAND—CAMPBELL.—At the residence of the bride's father, Br. Simon Campbell, Elkland, Tuscola Co, Mich., Sept. 15, 1872, by Eld. W. C. Hicks, E. H. Durand and Fannie Campbell.

Obituary.

MILLARD.—Sept. 12, 1871 (no place given), Hallo A., daughter of Wm. A. and Hallo M. Millard: aged 1 year, 10 months, and 26 days.

Words of comfort by P. W. Hough, from 1 Thes. 4: 18.

RUCKER.—In Ionia, Ill., Aug. 16, 1872, Harry, youngest son of John and Matilda Rucker: aged 1 year, and 6 months. Also, Aug. 26, Sarah A., daughter of same parents: aged 4 years, and 1 month.

Thus in the short period of ten days, our brother and sister were called to part with one-half of their dear children. May the grace of God sustain them in their affliction. Words of comfort by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 26; and Rev. 21: 4. M. McCULLOCH.

CHURCHILL.—In Cottage Grove, Minn., Sept. 3, 1872, Willie, only surviving son of Br. J. A. and Sr. Ella Churchill: aged 14 months.

Discourse by the writer, from Jer. 31: 14, 16. Eld. Ackerson, the Baptist preacher, kindly assisted in the services.

Willie sleeps, a quiet slumber,
Where we've laid him down to rest;
But he'll waken in the morning,
And come forth among the blest.

S. C. WELLCOME.

Book Notices, Etc.

Woman in the Church. An Essay, by James B. Whitmore. Now ready. Price 20c. Address
WM. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

THE DESTINY OF MAN. We have received from Wm. Erwin, Painted Post, N. Y., a copy of his book with this title, which we shall notice further as soon as we have read it.

SCRIBNER'S, prompt and beautiful, strongly contending for a place as the best of the monthly magazines. The October is not a whit behind the best of its predecessors. $4 a year. Published by Scribner & Co., 654 Broadway, New York City.

Prospectus.

I am preparing an exposition of the great prophecy of Christ, uttered upon the Mount of Olives, and recorded in Mat. 24; Mark 13, and Luke 21. The general plan of the work is that followed by D. D. Buck, in "Our Lord's Great Prophecy." It is in two parts.

Part First embraces several introductory chapters on the Harmony, proving that Matthew, Mark, and Luke record the same discourse, and presenting the plan of exposition.

Part Second contains the exposition, based upon the harmonized account of the three evangelists. It is the author's purpose to make the work as complete as its limits (about 225 pp.) will allow; and those who do not endorse the exposition, will find in it much valuable and interesting matter. Among other things, the remarkable phenomena of the past few years are described, especially those occurring in "The Black and Terrible Year, 1871," and which fulfill, in part, the prediction concerning "distress of nations, with perplexity."

The work will be published as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained. Let all who desire one or more copies subscribe immediately, and send me their P. O. Address. The price will not exceed seventy-five cents; it may be much less.

All orders should be addressed to
C. H. LEVERTON, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The churches in Iowa that wish me to visit them will please write me at Manchester, Iowa.
ISAAC ADRIAN.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

To Western Friends.

We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work be properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 16, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object.

D. MATHEWSON,
WM. SHELDON,
WM. McCULLOCK,
DANIEL S. CLARK,
O. S. KNAPP,
FRANK BURR,
H. G. McCULLOCK.

To the West.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that the Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work. WM. L. HIMES, Business Agent.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR

SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

KANSAS.

In the Mission Tent, at 2 and 7 p. m. each day, at Bero, from Sept. 26 to Oct. 2, and at Columbus from Oct. 3 to the 6 inclusive. All are cordially invited to attend.

ARKANSAS.

Early in November, with Eld. Lawver, I shall go to Arkansas. We shall go from Cobden, Egypt, on horseback, and preach as we go, reaching Batesville about the middle of the month, and attend the Advent Conference the 20th. After this we shall spend a short time in preaching in such places as open to us.

MISSOURI.

Brookfield, Oct. 8, and over Sabbath, and not Oct. 6, as in former appointment.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour. God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors. JOSHUA V. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.
Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Amboy, Lee Co. Preaching the second and fourth Sabbaths of each month, at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. Prayermeeting Wednesday eve. Also Sabbath afternoon when no preaching.
Traveling brethren will be welcomed at any of our meetings. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice
Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

The next Q. M. of the Neponset District will be held with the church at Toulon, commencing Thursday, Oct. 3, and holding over Sunday.
L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Coral, 7:30 p. m. Sept. 29.
E. H. BURINGTON.

The next Q. M. of the DeKalb District will be held with the church in DeKalb, commencing Thursday eve. Oct. 17, and holding over Sunday.
H. G. McCULLOCK, Sec'y.

Rockford, Sep. 15 to Oct. 3.
Hennepin, special meeting, Oct. 8, to continue indefinitely.
Lanark, Nov. 4, 5.
Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Elida, Nov. 8-10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.
C. C. MARSTON.

Equality, Gallatin Co., as Br. Ashley may arrange, Thursday eve., Oct. 24, and continue until Nov. 2.
Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., Saturday eve., Nov. 2 and over Sunday.
Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.
Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Sunday.
Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawver may arrange.
WM. McCULLOCK.

INDIANA.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of the Indiana Conference will be held at Union Mills, LaPorte Co., commencing Friday, Oct. 18 and continuing several days. The change in time from the first announcement is to enable brethren to better arrange for the Association Meeting. A general attendance is desired.
E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

IOWA.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.
Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.
Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JANES.

I will hold a public discussion in Greenfield, Adair Co., commencing Oct. 9, and continue as long as may seem necessary. Subject—The Nature and Future Rewards and Punishments of Man. My opponent, Eld. Isrel Mershon, of the M. E. Church of St. Charles, is said to be the best disputant they have. May the truth triumph. D. S. CLARK.

The first Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa, Machester District, is to be held at Six Mile Grove, in Horton Township, Bremer Co., commencing Thursday, Oct. 10, at 7 p. m. and holding over Sunday. All the friends of Jesus are invited to be there, to work for God and the salvation of precious souls, for whom Jesus died. Br. I. Adrian is expected to be there, with the tent, if the weather will permit.
M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

Q. M. for Winona District will be held with the Utica church, near D. Cheatham's, Friday eve. Sept. 27, and continue over Sunday. Let there be special efforts made by all living in the district to attend this meeting—the last for this conference year. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

MICHIGAN.

The first Q. M. of the Eastern District will be held with the A. C. church in Almont, Lapeer Co., commencing Thusday, Oct. 3, at 2 p. m. and continue over Sunday. We extend to the friends a cordial invitation, and hope for a full attendance of men and women imbued with the Good Spirit. We expect to have our chapel ready for use on this occasion. J. H. PATON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

KANSAS.

At Columbus, Cherokee Co., commencing at 2 p. m. on Thursday, Oct. 3, will be held a series of meetings by Elds. J. V. Himes, H. J. Munson, and other preaching brethren. Ample arrangements will be made by the Columbus church for the accommodation of brethren and sisters from abroad. AMOS SANFORD, Sec'y.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Haye Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.
S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y., will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday evening, Sep. 12, to continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come and labor for the promotion of the cause of truth.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y. J. W. TAYLOR, Pres.

Muncy, Lycoming Co., Oct. 3, 4.
Quaker Hill, Oct. 5, 6.
Canton, Bradford Co., Oct. 9.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., Oct. 10-13.
East Troy, Oct. 15, 16.
South Creek, Oct. 17. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleuny St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 8, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.
Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.
Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.
N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $35.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every sub- [illegible] paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.
N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and [illegible], one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.
Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for [illegible]. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following

REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding	50c
Morocco "	75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.
This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.
For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 496, Concord, N. H.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.
The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.
This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,

1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are
Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 9. CHICAGO, OCTOBER 1, 1872. WHOLE NO. 40.

Advent Christian Times.

A Word About Technical Sanctification.

Ed. Times: I would be very reluctant to place my word of opinion touching any matter of religious sentiment against the emphatic declarations of prominent preachers and servants in the Advent cause. But it seems to me that there has come an extraordinary time, an exigency, requiring even laymen of the most unobtrusive qualities, to speak out and protest.

I was delighted with the communication of Eld. O. R. Fassett, in a recent number of The Times, touching the lately revived hobby doctrine of Sanctification. I have sat under the regular preaching of Eld. Fassett, in my day, and I have general knowledge of the fact that he is a sound thinker and a godly man. He is without guile, and words from him on such a theme give me clear liberty to speak out my mind—what has been my thought and conclusion—on the Sanctification movement.

And, first, I do not believe there is an intelligent man in this country, who has ever given an attentive hearing to the gospel, who does not distinctly understand and thoroughly comprehend that "half-hearted Christianity" is not Christianity at all. That there is no fractional condition or state in the Christian fold. Entire devotion is according to the light you have, or there is neither peace nor safety. I have supposed that no one on earth, who professed Christianity or professed to understand its requirements, would dispute, or, on proper occasion, fail to announce this.

All efforts to bring men up to a practical realization of this are a part of true, rational, ministry. And there is to be a judicious consideration of the classes of minds addresed, the respective experiences, education and present circumstances, etc.

THIS BEING SO,

second, it may be announced that proportionate to zeal in the cause, according to knowledge, will peace deepen, assurance grow doubly sure, and a sense of multiplying good providences become a part of realized blessings for the believer.

Now, I submit, third, all this is against the theory of any super-excellent, thrice-refined purification of heart, consequent upon a single act of self-incantation, followed up by a persistent effort to believe in the transcending virtues of a new dedication.

I love the Advent church doctrines (which may as well be called by this as by any other term or phrase) because they regard man as man; and repudiate moonshine ideas of him and his duties and destiny. These doctrines are opposed to everything that is fanciful, conceited—all "fond things," as the old writers speak. "Do RIGHT and thy soul shall live." If we do his commandments we shall know of the doctrine, and the truth will make us free. And all exhortation that subordinates both faith and works—as this erroneous doctrine of Sanctification does, in my judgment—tends to enervate or discourage the sound, thinking disciple, or breeds a sentimental excitement, a fictitious glow, which is not Christianity, and no part of Christian fervor. It rapidly runs into mania, or there is a sinking into hypocrisy. Is not this according to history?

I do not plead against enthusiasm, even movements of high excitement, in the Master's cause. They are right at well chosen times, as the result of earnest work, and the consequent special coming of the Holy Spirit. On the contrary, sentimental Sanctification will end in torpor. It must end in open proclamations—

"TOUCH ME NOT!

I am holier than thou!" And then, against those of the church who do not follow in the same way, will come all manner of opposition. This thing has been repeated over and over and over again, in the record of the world. If leading men in the Advent church advocate the "doctrine," to the subordinating of the Faith, let us hope the church as a body will not be led into the rhapsody movememt.

God requires of every soul an entire consecration of faculties of mind and body to his service. Every intelligent man in the Protestant churches understands this with his outward ear. Every true, Christian feels this, acknowledges this, from day to day. For such Christians there is now no condemnation.

Now if you teach there must be an hourly exaltation, or a continual balmy surge of repose in a sweet valley, a delicious lassitude in the perfumed vapors of an ecstatic love, you will not find one temperament out of ten thousand that will not misapprehend, misunderstand, or be mystified thereby.

I don't believe in theological or emotional confectionary. This world is for work, in faith of the solid gospel, and the genuine peace that passes all understanding belongs to the laborer in the vine-yard—not to the dreamer. It comes by virtue of work, and not from bathing in the waters of third or fourth Sanctifications. Men picture seraphic joy of mind, say that every Christian should always have it. And backsliders follow the proclamation in scores.

CHRISTIANITY IS A LIFE.

It is to work honestly and well in our respective callings, being obedient to the divine command. Men who say it is or ought to be all sunshine, are they whose experience has been limited, or who have slipped, I fear, under a delusion.

I hope the great truths given to the Advent church to utter are not to be placed in qualified contempt, or in parenthesis, because some of the brethren—among the very noblest, perhaps, in the record of this branch of the church universal, have got mistaken ideas upon Sanctification, and (as an inevitable consequent) stand ready to condemn all that do not bow when the Sanctification dogma goes up, in chapel or campmeetings, with a shout.

We have a religion of common sense. We have doctrines which to the end by the Advent church with unmistakable emphasis. You make a man thoroughly convinced that the Judge is at the door, that soon he may have life eternal or must suffer everlasting destruction, and if there is savable material or foundation in him, he is going to get ready. I think you check him, and even endanger his life, if you represent to him—he trusting much in you—that he must pass into a perpetual fervor of joy, and self-satisfaction toward God. Why this is the old song of many of the churches that are most vehement in denying the nearness, the approach or even the possibility of a literal Second Coming.

SHOULD BE PROCLAIMED

A.

The Papacy in Prophecy.

In the seventeenth chapter of Revelation is brought to view a woman sitting on a scarlet-colored beast. This beast was full of the names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. In our former article we ascertained this beast to represent the Roman dynasty. Its "scarlet color" denotes the external splendor of the dynasty. "Covered over with the names of blasphemy," indicates that the dynasty had the reputation of arrogating to itself a divine origin, divine rights, prerogatives and authority in both temporal and spiritual matters, which has been the historic fact from the days of Constantine down to the present century. "The beast carrying a person," is equivalent to the dynasty's supporting by its power and resources that for which the woman stands, whatever that may be. For what does the woman stand?

In the interpretation of Daniel's vision by the angel, we learned that an agent, the beast, stood for political agents, or rulers. The woman is an agent belonging to civil life. On the same principle she stands for agents. As the beasts stood for an organized system of government, so the woman stands for agents combined into an organization. Hence, the woman stands for an organization of some kind, coextensive with the Roman dynasty and maintained by it. We look at some marks of identification. "She sat upon many waters," as well as on the scarlet-colored beast. The angel interprets to John the waters to be "peoples and multitudes, and nations and tongues." For the woman to sit on the waters, is for the organization which she represents to be supported and maintained by the masses of the people throughout the territory of the Roman dynasty. "The woman," says the angel, in explaining, "sitteth on seven mountains." The capital of the Roman dynasty was built on seven hills, and the seven heads of the beast are like these seven hills; and as the woman sitteth on the beast, she is located literally on the seven hills, or in the capital of the Roman empire. John could identify her by that circumstance. Hence the central power of the organization, which the woman represents, was located in the Roman capital. The woman was drunk with the blood of the saints. A person intoxicated is exhilerated with physical pleasure, devoid of reason, glorifying in his shame, and jovial over the intoxicating draught. So the organization, for which the woman stands, took fiendish delight in persecuting the people of God, and was ever jubilant over their destruction. Now the question arises, What kind of an organization was this, political or religious? The Roman dynasty, from first to last, never would tolerate "imperium imperio," in a civil sense. All the countries which it subdued it incorporated into the empire, and their people it assimilated to its own, so that every subject, to whatever nationality it may have belonged, became a Roman citizen. The woman does not stand for a political organization. It must be religious. It is not Paganism; for that system, as such, became extinct upon the accession of Constantine the Great to the empire, 320 years A. D. It is not Protestantism in any of its forms, for that took its rise under Martin Luther 1600 years A. D., and was never maintained by the Roman dynasty under any of its forms. But it is a matter of history that the Roman Catholic hierarchy had its origin in the Roman capital, was constituted of Roman citizens, held jurisdiction, in the first instance, over the territory of the old Roman empire in Italy, and subsequently extended her jurisdiction over all the territory conquered by Rome. It was, from first to last, maintained by the masses of the people by private contributions, and directly by the civil and military power, whether in the form of the empire or the various governments into which it was subsequently divided. These facts the members of that establishment have never attempted to deny. So far from it, they even now claim jurisdiction over the same territory, and support, as by divine right, of all the governments that have succeeded the Roman empire; and because they have been ousted of their jurisdiction, and deprived of the support of the civil power, their infallible head has poured out his anathemas like water, and doomed the recreant government to endless perdition. The woman represents the Papal hierarchy without the shadow of a doubt, if the beast which she rides stands for the Roman dynasty. We will now let the angel in his interpretation to John determine that. At the expression of wonder by John the angel proposes to explain the mystery of the woman and the beast: "Here is the mind that hath wisdom;" or in other words, If you will reflect a little you can determine the meaning of what you see. "The seven heads" (of the beast) are seven mountains. There are seven kings. Of these, five have fallen; one now is, or exists, and one is yet to exist. "And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet, but receive power as kings one hour with the beast. These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast. These shall make war with the Lamb." Or, in language more familiar to us: You may know what the beast stands for when the seven heads are likened to seven mountains where the woman sitteth. It is a dynasty of kings or forms of governments. Five had passed away—one now exists, at the time I am explaining these matters to you, John. One form is yet to exist. The ten horns stand also for ten dynasties, which will succeed the old dynasty in its seventh form, and will constitute the eighth king or dynasty. All these ten dynasties are one in policy, in spirit, in blasphemy. They are but part and parcel of the original dynasty. They all have been, and will continue to be, bitter persecutors of those who believe in the atonement of Christ as the only means of salvation of divine origin. Could John, or any body else, fail to recognize in this minute description the Roman dynasty? What other civil government persecuted the saints in John's day? None whatever. The conclusion is inevitable, that the beast which the woman rode is the Roman dynasty in the form of the empire, and the different governments that succeeded it. And, also, the woman that rode the beast is the Roman Catholic hierarchy.—Meth. Protestant.

Europe Preparing for War.

Rumors of coming conflicts, and, indeed, of a general war, have filled the atmosphere of Europe for some time past. It may be that great preparations to avoid war, or, at least, to be ready for any emergency, have given currency to these rumors, although the occasions for war are not wanting. But the state of things all over the continent, at the present time, is decidedly martial, and the peaceful but grand military displays that are taking place have a significance. The London Times says:

"The hosts of Europe are being marshalled in numbers sufficient to invade and conquer kingdoms. They are provided, at immense cost, with the full equipment and the most scientific apparatus of war: they are commanded by generals who feel, it is said, all the responsibilities of a campaign, and by officers earnest to obtain the practical knowledge of their profession; they engage in the most complicated operations, and all to prepare for that coming war which the policy of every European State assumes to be inevitable. The Russians commenced their grand manœuvers this week, and are still in the midst of them. It is to be hoped that in their northern latitude the heats from which we are suffering are a little tempered. The Prussians enter into campaign on the 1st of August, and for nine days the operations will proceed with as much seriousness and precision as if the armies were once more marching on Paris. The great heat prevented the French review the other day, but the autumn will not have begun before the reconstructed army of the republic will be tested as openly as its chiefs can venture to recommend, considering the susceptibilities of Berlin. The Austrians, ever beaten, but ever confident, and with a military machine which to the professional eye is always in perfect order, will not be behindhand. No State has labored more at army reform and organization than Austria during the last six years, and she will take her usual pride in exhibiting her new weapons and her new uniforms on the largest scale to military critics. Passing over minor continental States, which are all ready to spend their last shilling on soldiers, we come to a country in which there is more fuss about military matters than in any other, though the people, with the utmost sincerity, protest their peacefulness, and boast of their freedom from the warlike passions. We, too, shall have our autumn manœuvers to display, and instruct a select portion of a national force which, as far as numbers go, is really formidable, and which is certainly far larger than Great Britain has ever maintained in time of peace. Between the present time and the end of September, the governments of Europe will have set in the field whole armies, the choicest levies of a body which cannot be reckoned at less than four millions of men."—N. Y. Observer, July.

Poetry.

Then and Now.

Christ was dining with Pharisees—upper ten
Of Bethany—saintly and solid men,
Too pure for the touch of guile;
And a woman, a sinner they called her there,
Brought as an offering—maybe as a prayer—
Sweet ointment; and the while

The lowly Nazarene sat at meat
She bathed his weary and wayworn feet,
In grateful and penitent tears;
Poured on them the ointment whose rare perfume
Pervaded the ample and gorgeous room,
And kissed them despite her tears.

But Simon knitted his brows. "How's this?
If he is a prophet, there's something amiss—
He'd know her at once for a sinner;
Nor would suffer a woman to touch him so;
Would straightway rebuke her and bid her go,
Nor mar our immaculate dinner."

The guests were indignant—some, making haste
To be rich, declared it a wanton waste;
While others opined they should
Have given the same to the needy poor,
Jesus answered, "Why trouble her more?
She hath done what she could."

It was Pharisee then, it is Presbyter now,
Ever ready to drive the churchly plow
In uprooting mortal sin;
Its banner not love, but a mighty creed;
To the work of the kingdom—man's utmost need—
It only may enter in.

And jealous of power, the thought that dares
Dissent from its dogmas it sternly declares
To be heretic, infidel, sinner;
Yet the Master most lovingly says that "the last Shall be first, and the first shall be last,"
And Humility always the winner.

Next it forages Scripture all over to find
The narrowest promise for weak womankind,
The broadest for man—
Forgets, as it gathers the wherefore and why,
The words of the Savior directly imply
She may do what she can.

So let Woman go preach, let Woman go pray,
Nor heed for a moment the Critic's say,
Be it Pharisee, Presbyter, Sec—
For the vineyard is wide, and its laborers few
And the Lord of the Harvest hath need of the true,
Co-workers with him to be.

Go lift up the fallen, the lowly teach
Inspire the prisoner within thy reach
With hope of the life above—
"For whatever thou doest to please
The lowest, the meanest, the least of these,"
Is done to Eternal love.

Dare always to work, if need be to fight,
Building thy thought with thy utmost might,
So it be true and good—
For our Lord will rule in the Judgment Day,
And knowing thy service, will tenderly say:
"She hath done what she could."

—Philadelphia Dispatch.

How Can I Become Holy?

If, after a careful consideration of our condition, we find that there is an internal warfare, and that in spite of our firmest resolutions to keep ourselves in the love of God, yet there is a continual uprising of the fleshly lusts against purity, and we also find the scriptures exhorting us to holiness and purity and requiring it at our hand in the judgment day, then the question becomes pertinent, "how can I become holy?"

There is no use in answering this question to a person who does not long for it. I have seen some whose consciences were so defiled that they were indifferent to the whole subject, and would hardly give it a second thought. The conscience must be thoroughly aroused upon this point. This is the first thing necessary to be realized in this work. Like a man seeking to escape a burning building so the conscience must be aroused to seek escape from the inward pollutions of sin. A deep conviction of the necessity of deliverance must settle down in the heart to make the work thorough. A study of the Bible upon the subject by the aid of the Holy Spirit will accomplish this in most people, while others need a more complete self-examination to fully feel their need.

But when the soul really agonizes for deliverance, then how can it be wrought out? I answer, there is but one way taught in the Scriptures, or known by experience, and that way is, "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseths from all sin," and, "he is faithful to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." We cannot cleanse ourselves by works or will-power. We may lop off the branches and sprouts of sin, but we cannot dig out the roots. In other words we may refrain from actually committing sin, but we cannot change our natures that continually prompt us to sin. God alone can do that. Hear the great apostle: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and your whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." (1 Thes. 5:23, 24.)

God alone can pardon. God alone can cleanse. Yet there are conditions laid upon us before he will accomplish the work. These should be fully understood by us. What are they? Simply, an entire consecration of our bodies to God for this very purpose, and an earnest, prayerful seeking for full deliverance. This is the exercise of faith.

It is not doing but yielding. What for? To obtain joy? No, but peace. For the fullness of Christ, instead of the fullness of Satan. Joy will come, but it is not the joy itself the soul is hungering for. A hungry man sits down to eat, not because he is sorrowful, but because he craves food; but when fully satisfied he rejoices with his friends.

Do you feel an inward lack of purity, and have you a longing to have the foe turned out of your flesh, and to "be filled with all the fullness o God?" Do you wish this civil war to cease and your warfare henceforth to be against "foes without" instead o "foes within"? Then give yourself up to God for this purpose. Let go of the world. Let go of everything but Jesus. Dont try to get up any particular feeling, or try to manufacture more faith. Let go of all but Jesus. Never mind what your feelings are, get down. Get to the bottom of all earthly hopes and aspirations. Make an entire consecration of yourself and all you have to do and to suffer the will of God. Don't worry or be particular about how God shall deal with you. Sign a blank and let God fill it out.

Are you afraid folks will think and call you a Methodist? That's awful! Better go to ruin than to be called thus? Are you afraid you will make some demonstrations that would be ridiculous, and men will deride you? That would be terrible! Hadn't you better lose your life than suffer thus? No. Forget all this. Give all to Christ. Let him do as seemeth to him good.

By faith alone can the work be done on our part. None can "purify himself" or "purify the heart," except by faith, and this is simply submitting to God, and refraining from our own works.

Much more might be said upon this subject with profit but I leave it here, for my next article on "Personal Experience." FRANK BURR.

Tried, and Cast Out.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES:

Dear Sir—Having been a reader of your valuable paper for some time, I have at different times been astonished while I read accounts of the harsh and unconstitutional treatment of Baptist ministers by what were called Baptist churches, or Baptist Associations. I did not believe that any Baptist in the bounds of my acquaintance could ever be provoked, or otherwise induced so to do. But at the last annual meeting of the Apple Creek Association of United Baptists, of which I have for a long time been a member, I learned that all that was necessary to insure them to do as others had done, was to have their theological prejudices aroused against what is called "Materialism."

Three years ago this querry was presented to them, viz., "Will this body hold in its fellowship any church who hold in their fellowship members who hold the doctrine of Materialism?"

Answer, "No."

Again, last year it was asked: "Will this Association hold in its fellowship any church who hold in their fellowship any minister or members who hold and teach the doctrine of materialism, commonly called soul-sleeping; or denying the immortality of the soul?"

Answer, "No."

The following preamble and resolution were also adopted by said body last year:

WHEREAS, It is reported that the Mount Pleasant church (located at Medora, Ill.) holds in her communion members who hold and teach the doctrine of materialism; therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of five ministers be appointed to visit said church, and learn the truth of said report, and report to this body next year.

Said committee visited this church, and reported the dangerous doctrine as found there.

This report received by the Association stood then as a charge confirmed against said church. What then shall the body do with said church? Their written constitution directs that the Association shall counsel or advise said church; and IF THEY REFUSE SAID COUNSEL, they may be dropped from the body.

This, then, seemed their plain line of duty, but did they follow it? No. What then did they do? A committee of five ministers and members, whose dislike of said doctrine well fitted them for the work, were then appointed to draft a resolution, by which the matter was to be disposed of. And having the matter all previously arranged, they soon reported a resolution torturing the two above named queries into constitutional counsel or advice; which resolution declared (in utter disregard of the truth) that said church had refused to receive their counsel, therefore,

Resolved, "That they be dropped from the Association."

Resolution adopted.

Pending the discussion of this resolution there was made such a display of partiality, against the accused, as disgusted perhaps every impartial observer. The accused were allowed to make short speeches in defense, provided they stuck to the resolution under debate. But the ministerial attorneys on the prosecution, aided by such help as they chose, were allowed by the moderator to make long harangues, without ever alluding to the resolution under discussion. In fact it was persistently determined beforehand that there was to be no doctrinal discussion of this subject. Therefore, the determination seemed to be to crush the defense, and crowd the resolution to the expulsion of said church—which they carried most ingloriously.

There being another church pastored by the pastor of the excluded church, which was thought to be tainted with Materialism, a committee of five was appointed to visit said church, learn the facts, and report next year. And to keep their inconsistency before the public, their inexperienced Moderator placed on said committee two members of the excluded church! Will any one doubt the truth of the charge, when we say they were governed by prejudice and partiality? But more of this when they report.

In the meantime no opportunity was lost by the ministerial attorneys in urging the members of the excluded church as to their proceedings on returning home. They were at their next meeting to elect a certain person as their pastor, and get rid of those heretics, and return next year to loyalty to the Association. For this, circumstances were favorable, the church having previously set the first meeting after the Association, to make choice of their pastor for the ensuing year, with special request for ALL of the members to be present. A large attendance was the response to the above request, and as the church with an equally large attendance a month previous, had elected three heretics (so-called) as delegates to the Association, at which time the Clerk of the church was accused of keeping a dishonest poll; so at the election of pastor he was required to give place to another, whose honesty none dare impeach. Under this new administration the vote was taken, resulting in the choice of their old pastor, Albert Farrow (that old "heretic"), which was no sooner announced than one of the deacons (imitating the example set in the Association), rose to his feet and declared that a "minority was ruling the church." This he knew and could prove (he said, but did not do it), and that he would not stand it. This seemed to say that, as a resolution founded in untruth threw the church out of the Association, so a like declaration openly made in the church was now to hurl from the church this, so-called, minority of heretics, regardless of the facts in the case. But this did not prevail. Many hard things were said to the brethren for electing "Farrow" as their pastor, which they tried to bear patiently. The opposition declared privately that they would have Eld. —— to preach to them, and that they would hold their meetings on the regular time, &c. How far they will carry out this declaration remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, truth is spreading; and its votaries are gaining strength. Pray for us, that we may ever be found faithful to our trust, as stewards of our soon-coming Lord.

Yours, in hope of eternal life by a resurrection from the dead.

HERETIC.

P. S. I see that my subscription to THE TIMES is out. I will renew it next week; and try to send at least one new subscriber. We shall want at an early day a large delegation of those silent ministers of heavenly truth, to carry the same where I cannot go. Will send cash for same soon.

Br. Larkin Scott was present at the church meeting named above, and preached for us on Saturday evening. We bid him God speed. The Lord send him again, with others of like precious faith, to preach to us the present truth.

Merits of Playing Croquet.

I saw an article in a late issue of THE TIMES headed "Playing Croquet," which especially attracted my attention; and the dear sister wished to ascertain the merits of croquet, if it had any. Now let me say in all Christian kindness, and candor, that I believe Croquet playing, or any other innocent amusement, is conducive to health. And if our ministers would take a little more such exercise, and thus give their brains and stomachs opportunity for rest, they would find that a class of ailments now affecting many of them, and of which so many of them die, would not come near them. Why? Because, by recreation they would stand in much better relation to health, and not succumb so easily to nervous prostration brought upon them by an overworked intellect, which has used up so much of both blood and nervous force that disease is the result. There is not as much harm in a game of croquet, as there is in drinking a cup of strong tea in order to get a little more work done; or to refuse to rest when the mental and bodily powers are worn down, and thus give nature a chance to recuperate and take on vitality for the expenditures of life; or by overworking the mental and physical powers in transgressions of the laws of one's organization. Yet how many do these things? they think if they live in accordance with the Decalogue, that is all that is required of them; not realizing that God will hold us responsible for disobedience to nature's laws, as well as moral law.

How few, comparatively, realize this. They lack conscientiousness with reference to the use of their bodily power. Do not many cherish the idea that God is greatly interested that we be very careful of his laws which relate to the moral nature, but that he does not care a fig that they reverence and obey the wise and good laws established for the regulation of their physical life? "All violation of law is sin," and the health laws are as much laws of God, written by his finger on our very constitution, as the Decalogue. And if professing Christians will pay more attention to the laws of their being, we would have more zealous laborers, less dyspeptics, and a far less falling into untimely graves, through disobedience to the health-laws.

I am a professing Christian, and by God's grace I mean to be a living Christian both bodily and spiritually. I consider croquet an innocent recreation for Christians, and especially for ministers, for their brains need rest. How few understand that much brain labor uses up a large amount of both blood and nervous force: consequently ministers cannot be healthfully subjected to great and constant physical labor, with favorable opportunity for recuperation. What they need as against thought is absence of thought, induced by recreation.

Alas! How few, under the present condition of society, with all its false notions concerning ministers, and their obligations to society, will step out on the broad platform of health and claim this boon (coveted by many), of innocent recreation, daily, in the pure air of heaven, with mental labors forgotten! In playing croquet, one is compelled to laugh heartily many times, and what will send the blood coursing more rapidly through the veins instinct with new life imparted to it, than a hearty laugh.

An innocent amusement is more productive of health than an aimless walk, for the walk does not divert the blood from an overworked brain, neither does it impart tone and vigor to the whole system. It cannot be wicked to laugh; for if it were, God would never have given us the muscles to laugh with. This harmless game does not divert the Christian's mind from high and heavenly things, as many suppose; for I never quit a game without feeling more like singing or praying than I did when I commenced.

Sisters, I will tell you what is more sinful and hurtful to ourselves, and others than croquet playing. It is the unhygienic way we have of taking the most healthful food and of so mixing it, and cooking it, that it is not fit for the stomach of a swine. No human stomach can partake of the mixture with impunity. Such failures in cooking nature's bountiful productions are wicked. Many will persist in keeping up their style of living, when they are well aware that it is deleterious to the system, and at the same time they are very careful in the observance of spiritual law. "Oh! consistency, thou art a jewel!"

When the minister comes, how the table groans under the weight of the incongruous meal. No wonder they grow weak, decay, and die before their time. I tell you, sisters, if we want to be good, we must obey all laws, and try and have obers obey them, too: and when our ministers come among us let them enjoy rest: give them good food properly prepared, with a warm room, and a dry bed. Don't for pity's sake, put them in your "spare room" where there has been no fire for months, perhaps, nor the blessed sunlight been permitted to penetrate and by its warming and revivifying rays dispel the dampness. How often lodging in such rooms has resulted in severe colds, disease and death.

Now, may God protect us from the evils of society, from the errors of life, and may we try to know his will concerning us, and as much as in us lies live for his glory, obey all of his wise and benevolent laws, that we may glorify him in our bodies and spirits which are his. ELIZA A. LAKE.

Discussion.

(Concluded.)

In assuming the affirmative, Eld. Dugger cited Rom. 6 : 22, proving the pay the sinner receives is death. He then took up Mk. 9: 4, 3, and showed that Christ made use of very strong figures to express the punishment due the sinner. Figures can never set aside plain testimony.

Coffey admitted the wages of sin is death, and this is fatal to the theory he advocates. Now the question is ot how the word appolumi may be used, but how does the Bible use it. He has given its secondary and not its literal sense. 2 Pet. 2 : 9 reads, that the "wicked are reserved to the day of judgment to be punished." Then had we not better be careful how we threaten the sinner, as this proves that evil characters cannot exist eternally. (Mat. 13: 12.) When a thing is burned up, where is it? Life and death are presented in the Scriptures. Reference was made to Jude 6; and although the word eternal is used, it does not prove he Sodomites are now suffering; and the question was asked, Do Sodom and Gomorrah burn to day? which was ot answered. Will Satan live forever? Heb. 2 : 14; Lk. 17 : 26–29; Mat. 25 : 11–33 answers the question, and proves the destruction of Satan and extinction of evil.

Eld. Coffey then tried to show that because Jude 6 refers to God and fallen angels, that the word "everlasting" was unlimited. He then quoted a number of passages from Revelation, and eferred to the phrase "day and night forever and ever," as strong proof of he endless sufferings of the sinner, which did not even hint at or imply hat it was endless, as the terms "day and night" must be limited to time. s. 9: 18 was quoted, but did not have any particular bearing on the proposition.

Eld. Dugger then showed that in admitting death to be the punishment, his position was surrendered, and in saying a person could be dead and yet onscious at the same time. Death is epresented by sleep, and so we hear esus saying, "Lazarus sleepeth;" and why is it thus represented? Because there is to be a waking up, and they hen resume their consciousness. When we come to the second death it s not represented by sleep. Why? Because it is eternal death. If it is eath to the sinner, how can he be onscious? Is death life? Is life eath? If so, the righteous possess onsciousness, and the wicked do not. The word oppolumi occurs in Mat. 8: 2, translated "perish," and shows that e swine perished in the sea. Did the wine perish? are they alive to-day? ere questions that could not be answered to harmonize with his theorizing. Donnegan defines appolumi, "to estroy totally." As the Sodomites ere destroyed, so will the wicked be, s their destruction is an example of e future destruction of the wicked. s everlasting punishment everlasting misery? Rom. 6: 23 declares it is eath. Will my opponent say that eath is not a punishment? He did ot; and so the argument stands that is death, and not misery. Does Paul in 2 Thes. 1: 7–9 say the wicked re punished with "endless misery?" What did Paul say about this matter. He was discoursing on the same subject Christ was speaking upon in Mat. 5: 31–46, and declares it is "destruction from the presence of the Lord." They shall be punished with death. an this be harmonized with the eternal preservation of the wicked?

Gal. 6: 17; Rom. 1: 29 were quoted, d sustained the position that the imes of men are worthy of death, d the apostles agree upon this.

Eld. Coffey then attempted to do away with the force of the word ppolumi and the figure of sleep. He id the word oppothnesco translated eath could expend its full force on a ing in this life, and quoting a few ssages, made some remarks upon em which were not relevant, and arged Br. D. with calling on the rong witnesses.

Br. D. called attention to the antithesis in Mat. 25: 16, and gave the rule such cases, and showed the punishment of the wicked to be opposed to e reward of the righteous, one being eath, the other life. What the righteous gain, the wicked lose, which is fe. He then proved death to be a punishment, from Ex. 21 : 20. Death the extinction of life. Three times od explained death to be a punishment. When the word everlasting is plied to God or Christ it is shown be eternal. Peter asks "what shall the end of them that obey not," d Paul answers, "Whose end is destruction." (Phil. 3: 18, 19.) The definition of the word destruction shows it will finish the wicked, which was also proved by referring to Ps. 145: 20; Lev. 26 : 19; Num. 34 : 52, where the Hebrew word shah-mad occurs, which lexicographers define "to cut off, to blot out persons and nations." Prof. Pick defines it "to annihilate." (Amos. 9: 8; Is. 13 : 9.) Mah-gah (Gen. 6 : 7; 7 : 4, 21) defined "to blot out, erase:" same word rendered "blot out" in Ps. 51 : 1, 9.

Eld. Coffey expressed himself as astonished at his opposer's argument, and would not follow him, so admitting his weakness. He rehearsed some of his previous arguments; said that destruction did not mean annihilation; admitted that "forever and ever" is limited sometimes, and that death is the penalty, but that it means a "banishment from the presence of God." Quoted Is. 59 : 2; Rom. 6 : 7; 1 Tim. 5 : 6.

Br. D. in his affirmative explained Rev. 14 : 11; Rev. 9 : 9, by Is. 34 : 8. Referred to the word thanatos (Rom. 6 : 23); defined "extinction of life," and also to Ps. 49 : 30; 9 : 17; Mat. 4 : 1–4. If it could be proved that ashes and grass were conscious, Eld. Coffey could prove this theory to be true.

Eld. Coffey seems to evade the direct force of argument by going into side issues, and in repeating his former arguments. In reference to Dan. 12 : 2 he remarked that if the life of the righteous is endless, the contempt of the wicked will be; which we believe. Mal. 4, he thought, referred to the destruction of Jerusalem, which is simply ridiculous, as was proved by his opponent.

Eld. Dugger asked, if after the wicked are destroyed they will live forever, when the Scriptures declare "they shall be as though they had not been?" He then proved the annihilation of the wicked (Ps. 18 : 4), where the word Tzah-math is found, rendered destroy, and defined by Prof. Pick, "annihilate." (Ps. 54 : 5; 94 : 23.) "Cut off," from the same word. Mah-gah, found in Gen. 7 : 4, defined to "blot out, erase." Shah-val, rendered destroyed in Prov. 13 : 13; 29 : 1 is defined "to be destroyed." Ah-vad, rendered perish, applied to the hypocrite's hope, &c. (Job 8 : 13; 6 : 18; Jer. 10 : 11; Job 20 : 6, 8; Ps. 37 : 20.) Kah-lup, occurring in 1 Ki. 18 : 38; Is. 1 : 28; Ps. 37 : 9, 11, defined, "to be completed, finished, ended, consumed, destroyed, a full end." These terms are defined by standard authorities, Gesenius and others.

Eld. Coffey was astonished again, and well he might be, for the tide of argument was against him. He quoted Jer. 9 : 12; Is. 57 : 1, 2.

Eld. Dugger, in his closing speech, added to the abundance of testimony that had been brought forward, Ps. 37 : 2, 9, 10, 31; 119 : 119; 1 John 3 : 8; Eph. 1 : 10; Rev. 5 : 13, and many other emphatic testimonies, and stated that he had over 200 texts directly sustaining his position, against fifteen passages, from which his opponent derived an inferential argument. The argument throughout proves conclusively the final and utter extinction of sin and sinners, vindicates God's injured attributes of love, mercy, and benevolence, and frees his great scheme of human redemption from a stain.

In Eld. Coffey's last effort, in direct violation of the rules of debate, he introduced a new argument in answer to the oft-repeated and long-neglected question, where are the wicked? He founded his remarks on Rev. 21 : 8, which of course did not advance his cause in the least. He also quoted Rev. 22 : 15, but the question still remains unanswered. He failed most signally of sustaining his position, from the fact that he resorted to visions, parables, symbols, figures of speech, and assertions founded on the assumption that the wicked exist in endless misery.

The discussion closed with good feeling on both sides, with a great interest, and the results will be good.

E. A. MARSH.

Earthquakes in 1871-1872.

The following is an extremely concise list of the earthquakes and volcanic disturbances which occurred during the spring of 1872; and it must be remembered that this catalogue is necessarily imperfect, both on account of the slowness with which such information comes in, and our distance from the most direct and authentic source of information. The time embraced is from December to April 1871 '72:

Dec. 23, Jan. 6. Terrible earthquake in Persia. Khabooshan, in northwest Khorassan, entirely destroyed, and 30,000 persons killed.

Jan. Severe earthquakes in Australia. Regions afflicted by them which never before had been shaken since the country was settled.

Jan. 16. Shamaka, at the southern base of the Caucasus, seventy miles West of Caspian sea, entirely destroyed, and over one hundred persons killed. The surrounding country suffered severely.

Jan. 28. Smart shock in Malaga—at 3 hours and 1 minute p. m., lasting from four to six seconds.

Feb. 6. At Winona, Minnesota—8 a. m.

Feb. 8. At Cairo, Ill.—5 a. m.

March 6. In central and eastern Germany. A large area shaken; disturbance lasted over an hour.

March 11. Yokohama, Japan. About this time destructive earthquakes took place in Japan. The town of Hamada was destroyed, and five hundred persons killed. The North China Herald, says, in its Japanese news, "Great earthquakes in the South, and much damage to life and property."

March 23. At Unionville and Winnemucca, Nevada. Slight shocks.

March 26. The series of earthquakes in California and Nevada commenced, and continued for two months and over; especially severe at the eastern base of the Sierra Nevada, in Owen's Valley, where between twenty and thirty persons were killed. This earthquake was felt over all of California, except its extreme northern end, and throughout nearly all of Nevada.

March 26. The same day as the Owen's Valley earthquake, the city of Mexico was shaken, between 8 and 9 a. m. It is said that this disturbance extended over a wide region to the South—that Oaxaca was seriously injured, and that the volcano of Colima burst into eruption. No authentic details, however, of these occurrences have been received.

March 26. Slight shock at Paducah, Kentucky.

March 28. Slight shock at Salt Lake City.

April 3. Terrible earthquake at Antioch and vicinity; felt far to the East, and over a wide area of territory. The shock continued for a week or more. Some 1,000 or 1,500 persons killed in the vicinity of Antioch.

April 15. Earthquake at Accra, on the gold coast of Africa.

April 15. The volcano of Merapi, in Java, which had been quiet since 1863, burst into a terrible eruption. Great destruction of life and property followed.

April 16, 17, 18. Several shocks in Iceland, partly destroying the town of Husvick.

April 24. Mt. Vesuvius commenced its greatest eruption since 1632, much loss of life and property resulting.

April—. Eruption of the Mayou—a magnificent volcano in the Philippine Islands. A letter published in Nature, May 16, 1872, from W. W. Wood, of Manila, says: "The terrestrial disturbances still continue in the Philippine Islands, and almost every post brings us intelligence of earthquakes in the provinces. The past year has been remarkable for the great number of earthquakes throughout the archipelago, especially on the great island of Mindano, where the new military colony of the great river suffered severely."

From the above list—which no doubt will be extended considerable, as detailed news reaches us from the far off regions of the earth—it will be seen that the winter and spring of 1871–2 were a season of extraordinary seismic disturbance; North America, Iceland, Europe, Africa, Asia, the Japanese, the Philippine and the East India Islands, as well as Australia, being all visited by severe shocks, which in many cases were highly destructive. Probably over fifty thousand, and possibly as many as one hundred thousand, lost their lives in these convulsions in nature. This excited period lasted over four months. —From "The Owen's Valley Earthquake," in the Overland Monthly for September.

Santa Clara, Cal.

Elds. Wilson, Reed, and myself, together with our companions, have just closed an interesting protracted meeting here, during which we have given prophetic, doctrinal, and practical discourses. The result has been the organization of a church now membering twenty-six members. Others outstanding will soon join us. On the day of organization, a Christian brother remarked: "Santa Clara has been the head-quarters of Romanism, and Methodism, and now bids fair to be the head-quarters of Adventism on this coast."

We have felt since coming to this valley and being compelled to reside here under covert from the coast winds, that we must have an Advent church and meeting in Santa Clara. And then, this place from its very beginning has been under religious superstition and error! Why had not the time come for "the truth crushed to the earth" to "arise" and be vindicated? has been an inquiry, and prayer before the Lord.

We therefore have hope, and take courage. Eld. Reed and myself go to Vallejo to give a second benefit, on the re-opening of their chapel, now plastered and finished. We shall hold a week's meeting, and trust the Lord will give us success in saving some from the coming day of wrath, and bless the active church in that city.

Eld. Wilson is fast improving in health, the brethren will be glad to know; and now fills regular appointments on the Lord's day somewhere. He meditates going into the destitute regions to scatter publications, converse with the people (and he is remarkably qualified for this work) as well as to preach the gospel of the kingdom. The Lord be praised for sending such a faithful co-laborer to this field, than whom there is none more efficient.

Mrs. Fassett is just now laid aside from her labors by a bad condition of the lungs contracted by a recent cold, and over work. We want the prayers of the church abroad, and of the brethren and sisters of faith, in secret, that she may be spared to us, and raised up to assist in this important field. We see not how we can now dispense with her labors. Still the Lord knows best. Providence seems to indicate that California is henceforth to be our post of duty. With sadness we turn our eyes back toward the East, kindred and friends, brethren and sisters, and bid them Farewell, till Jesus comes. Pray for us, if the Master has so appointed. "The post of duty, is the place of honor." O. R. FASSETT.

Norwood Park.

In my tour from Maine to Iowa, I stopped in Chicago, and went out to Norwood Park, where THE TIMES is printed, and had the privilege of spending a day in looking around the village, and also in watching the movement of things at the pressroom.

Norwood is handsomely and conveniently laid out, is growing, and bids fair to be a large and handsome suburban village. As to the press, everything was moving along smoothly, and I was very much pleased with the situation. I think the Association acted wisely in accepting the offer of the Norwood Park Company, and removing their property from Buchanan to this place. I believe the Lord directed in the movement, and if all of the churches in the West give them their sympathy and support (as I believe they will), the work of the Lord will no doubt prosper in their hands.

J. RIDLEY.

Attention District 3.

Will the brethren and friends in Neponset District of Northern Ill. A C. Conf. remember that this quarterly meeting was started in earnest, and that we are bound that it shall be a success, and to this end we invite, beg, entreat, exhort, command, desire you to attend according to notice, and assist in this work for the Master.

We wish you to come with the intention of remaining over the Lord's day, and not to skulk from the thickest of the fight.

We are praying for even a better meeting than that at Oneida, and of course none who were there will willingly be absent from the next.

Come then in the name of the Lord, and may he add his blessing.

L. F. COLE.

Intelligent Skepticism.

Many young men seeming to suppose that the danger of being credulous and weak, lies wholly in the direction of giving credence to Christianity, that the need of proof and care is peculiarly the heritage of those who would examine the authority and claims of the Christian Scriptures.

But all such overlook the fact that it requires more proof and care to become an intelligent, consistent skeptic, than it does to become a Christian; simply because skepticism holds out no inducement, and offers no reward. It gives no comfort or encouragement for the present, and makes no promises for the future.

A learned writer has well stated things necessary in order to become an intelligent skeptic, in the following quotation. He says: "The number of skeptics is comparatively few whose opinions are the result of any tolerable investigation. They embrace skeptical notions through the means they now take of diffusing them among others—not by arguments, but by jests—not by objections to the historical evidence of Christianity, but by conceits and witticisms. To disbelieve in Christianity upon grounds which shall be credible to the understanding, involves no light task. A man must investigate and scrutinize; he must examine the credibility of testimony; he must weigh and compare evidence; he must inquire into the reality of historical facts. If, after rationally doing all this, he disbelieves in Christianity, be it so. I shall doubtless think him mistaken, but I shall not think him puerile and credulous. But he who professes skepticism without any of this species of inquiry, is credulous and puerile indeed; and such the most of skeptics actually are."

If this writer has given a fair statement of the labor and care required in order to become an intelligent skeptic, I think we may safely conclude that such skeptics are really few in number. Fewer by far than the most of men have supposed, for Dr. Priestly testifies, "that after seeing and conversing with the philosophical skeptics of France, he found that they had given no proper attention to it, and did not really know what Christianity was."

And if they did not know whereof they affirmed, what can we hope for from those, who lay no claims to erudition or philosophy?—Cor. of the Star in the West.

"FLEECING THE FLOCK."—On this subject, the Gospel Herald says:—Our ministers are frequently exhorted to 'feed the flock, and not fleece it.' Now we must confess that we have never known an instance in which a minister has fleeced a flock. Often, and justly too, a few handsful of wool are bestowed to comfort the pastor and his little ones in the winter; but as to 'fleecing the flock,' we will propose that if a single one of our 'flocks' will give us a quarter of this summer's fleece, there shall be nothing said about salaries for the next ten years."

FIFTEEN GREAT MISTAKES.—The following mistakes so commonly made are worthy of note:

It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly. It is a great mistake to measure the enjoyments of others by our own; to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; to look for judgment and experience in youth; to endeavor to mold all dispositions alike; not to yield to immaterial trifles; to look for perfection in our own actions; to worry ourselves and others with what can not be remedied; to alleviate all that needs alleviation, as far as lies in our power; not to make allowances for the infirmities of others; to consider everything impossible which we can not perform; to believe only what our finite minds can grasp; to expect to be able to understand everything. The greatest of all mistakes is, to live for time, when any moment may launch us into eternity.

Because all men feel and know and see that they must die and disappear, each seeks an earthly immortality in being evermore remembered. Sometimes great sovereigns, princes, and nobles, have sought it by rearing pillars of marble or lofty pyramids pointing to the skies; by these they have fancied themselves immortalized. And still, by great churches and other sumptuous edifices, warriors have pursued and striven to perpetuate honor and renown after their famous victories. Learned men seek by the composition of books an undying name, as we often see in our own day. But as to the everlasting, imperishable honor—an eternity with God—to this they pay no regard. Ah, we are a despicable race!—Luther.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 1, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the Son of God," the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

THE following bit of irony from the Watchman and Reflector will be readily appreciated:

> Horse-racing is disreputable, but "trials of speed" are perfectly proper. It may puzzle our readers to see the difference between the two, but the modern code of morals is very elastic, and does not assume consistency. Agricultural horse-trots are now in season and are fashionable, but by no means patronize a horse race!

THE Christian Era cites Lange, one of the standard orthodox expositors, as affirming:

> Would the Protestant church fulfill and attain to its high destiny, the baptism of infants must of necessity be abolished. It has sunk down to a mere formality, without any religious meaning for the child, and stands in contradiction to the fundamental doctrines of the Reformers, on the advantage and use of the sacraments. It cannot on any point of view be justified by the Holy Scriptures.

WE learn of a new effort to stay the tide of theological reform. Dr. N. L. Rice enters the field as the champion of the dogmas of the natural immortality of all men, and the eternal misery of a vast mass of them. As usual, no copies of the work are sent to any 'annihilationist' journal for notice or review. The work is issued by the Presbyterian Board of Publication, at Philadelphia. The Interior commends it as containing 'clear reasonings,' and as 'fresh. We are really glad if there is something fresh to be offered on that side of the question. There has been a dreary sameness in immaterialist objections and arguments.

THE Interior says, in an article headed "The Immortality of all Souls:" "We have often pressed upon us the doctrine that all evil, natural and moral, will some time come to an end." We are obliged for the admission. This question is a living issue, and is pressing its way, is making its power felt. Editors and clergymen may imagine that they can quiet inquiry by an occasional dogmatic article or discourse, but they will find themselves mistaken. The movement is of God, and can be put down neither by direct attack or the 'let alone policy."

THE theory of the thing, in poetic measure, is as follows:

> "O, would he more of heaven bestow,
> And let the vessels break,
> And our triumphant spirits go
> To grasp the God we seek."

—In practice, as soon as there is any danger that 'the vessels' may 'break' and allow the 'triumphant spirit' to escape, no possible measures for securing the vessels are neglected: neither pains nor expense are spared to keep said spirit a prisoner. For sane persons never candidly desire death, until life becomes a burden, with no hope of release. Can't people see that they are singing untruths in such hymns as this? One would think the doctor's bills might lead them to truer doctrine, if nothing else would.

MR. MINTON has been endeavoring to do all one man can do to break down the sectarian barriers between his own church (the Church of England) and Dissenters. He lately occupied Newman Hall's (Congregationalist) pulpit, speaking from the text—'Blessed are the peacemakers.' He stated frankly that he had not the power to invite Mr. Hall to his pulpit; but he hoped for better days, when brotherly communion between churches would not be unlawful.

Mr. Minton is well known to our readers as a pronounced 'Annihilationist.' He is a man of large views, and we are not surprised to find him among the foremost in opposition to sectarianism. His blows in that direction, like those he has delivered against the dogma of eternal evil, are most forcible; but we fear, as in the other case, comparatively few will be reformed.

DR. HODGE, in his Systematic Theology, assures us that we have the right to 'reject as untrue whatever it is impossible that God should require us to believe. He can no more require us to believe what is absurd, than to do what is wrong.'

Is it possible that God should require us to believe that eternal evil is necessary to the divine government?

Is it possible that God should require us to believe that, though unnecessary to the divine government, evil will be eternally preserved, and that, too, in individual sufferers?

Is it possible that he would require us to believe that he created a race immortal, knowing beforehand that this involved endless sin and ceaseless wo to an immense number of that race?

Allowing that three fourths of the race attain immortal bliss, is it reasonable to suppose, that the fact that their felicity involves the endless and infinite misery of the remainder of their fellow-beings will cast no shade of gloom over their joys; will cause not even a tear of sympathy, or a pitying sigh?

THE Interior says: 'The dictionaries of Webster and Worcester, as well as the Hebrew and Greek lexicons, and indeed those of all Christendom, must be re-written so far as to give new definitions to such words as soul, spirit, and life, if the Annihilationists are to get a sure footing in the common language and common sense of mankind.' We think the Interior entirely mistaken upon this point of the necessity to our position of 'new definitions' to certain terms; but were it otherwise, surely the Interior cannot be ignorant that the work of re-writing dictionaries is going forward. If it has a Webster of 1859, and one of 1865, it will find some suggestive changes. Under 'soul' in the edition of '59 it will find the unqualified assertion that 'The immortality of the soul is a fundamental article of the Christian system.' In the edition of '65, that radically false statement is omitted. In the edition of '59, one definition of death is 'eternal torments.' In the later edition that theological monstrosity finds no place. Now it is undeniable that many writers do use the term death to signify eternal torments. Why then did Webster drop that horrible phrase from his list of definitions? Evidently because it was an improper use of the term death, and should be purged from the language. 'Common sense' is making its way against arbitrary theology.

A REPORTER of a late campmeeting where the so-called sanctification was made prominent, remarks that one minister 'spoke of a campmeeting many years ago, where they had two altars, one for those who were seeking for pardon, and the other for those seeking a pure heart,' which is saying that one may be converted and yet not have a pure heart. Hence we are not astonished to read further: 'One man, a class-leader, said he had given up his class-book, and should not attempt to lead the class again until he had a pure heart, and he had come to the meeting to get it.'

If the good man had read 1 Pet. 1:2, he would have found an inspired rule for purification; and that it is not especially a campmeeting blessing.

QUERY: If the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin, will it not leave a pardoned man clean? and is not a clean man a pure man? And is not this complication of the work of salvation the work of man, calculated to perplex many and cause others to stumble? Such has been the result. Let us return to the simplicity of the gospel.

EVERY little while we have fresh evidence that the church is drifting away from the Scriptural doctrine of the resurrection. We recollect having seen somewhere the past season an angry protest against this assertion, with a long array of citations from church creeds and disciplines to prove that orthodoxy is still orthodox. But creeds can be spiritualized as well as Scripture. The Christian Advocate of New York may be fairly called a representative and influential orthodox journal. In a recent notice of a new work upon the resurrection, it says, and endorses the sentiments as its own:

> The points especially made by the writer are that the resurrection of the dead does not necessarily imply the resuscitation of the material body, and that the intermediate state of departed souls (hades) is clearly taught in Scripture; deliverance from which constitutes the true resurrection.

—In other words, the resurrection is the deliverance of an immaterial soul from hades, and not the restoration of the material body to form and life! True, Bp. Merrill protested against the introduction of this error into Methodist theology; but what avails his protest. The leading journal of Methodism endorses the spiritualizing view: the elements are ready to receive it. We predict that it will prevail.

A BAPTIST writer, in the Era, combats the idea of the identity of the present and the future bodies. The resurrection body will, he says, have 'resemblance to the one had here.' He then cites the once-in-seven-years-change theory, and adds:

> But there is no need of this speculation. The apostle's account is plain. Nothing but the germinant principle of the grain sown, enters into the new grain. Nothing but the germinant principle of the old body, enters into the new body. If any one asks, what the germinant principle is, in either case, I answer that I cannot tell. "God knoweth."

—Let us see. 'So also is the resurrection of the dead....It [the germinant principle] is sown a natural body: it [the same principle] is raised a spiritual body.' This writer would have done far better to have made his confession of ignorance broader, covering the whole subject of the resurrection. This whittling of the Christian's vital hope down to the promise of a body bearing a 'resemblance' to, and containing the 'germinant principle' of the old one, displays a better acquaintance with 'science falsely so-called,' than with the gospel. We commend to such triflers the language of Pascal:

> I see no greater difficulty in believing the resurrection of the dead or the conception of the Virgin than the creation of the world. Is it less easy to reproduce a human body than it is to produce it at first?

WE hear sometimes about getting out of the seventh chapter of Romans into the eighth. If any are perplexed as to the meaning of those two chapters, we have a word for them: Get into the fifth chapter of Romans, and stay there! There is no better place this side of the kingdom. Once there, our "offences" are all behind us; at our right hand is faith; on the left is hope; within is peace and joy; before us the glory of God in its ineffable fullness; and all around us, and above and beneath, and thrilling through our very being is the matchless love of God, bestowed while we were enemies, and of his Son, who died for us while we were yet sinners.

Here is something substantial: as you take your stand upon it you feel that you have bed-rock under your feet. 'Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.' This is the "rest of faith." There are no metaphors or metonymies to perplex us. The words are all easy; their combined sense is plain; it is ours to enjoy. Did we not well say, Get into the fifth chapter of Romans and stay there!

THERE is always danger of running into extremes. Action and reaction are equal. An overdoing must be followed by an underdoing. The present danger before us as a people is the reaction from the pressure of mistaken views of the subject of sanctification. We think the danger of running into fanaticism is now passed. The decided stand upon a Scriptural basis, taken in strong terms, by influential men at our general meetings, and in our papers, has not been without effect. There has been a modification in the tone and manner of the new movement. We have strong hope that we are positively safe from the excesses which have characterized similar movements in the past. Doubtless there are some who will in this hour find an excuse for swinging to the other extreme of dead formalism, form without power. To such we say, Beware! It is suicidal to oppose one error with another. Let none take anything from sanctification, because others have made it more than or different from what the Bible teaches. There is only one way: "As ye have received....Christ....so walk ye in him." Straight on in the way you started is the only way. You gave up all, then: there is no point in the way where any less will be accepted. Don't forget this.

NORWOOD PARK—RAILROAD NOTICE.

Trains leave Chicago for Norwood Park on the Wisconsin Division of the Northwestern Railway.

They leave Kinzie Street depot for Norwood Park at 9 a. m., and 3.30, 4.45 and 6.15 p. m.

The meeting begins on Tuesday. Endeavor to reach Chicago so as to come out on the 9 a. m. train on Tuesday morning. If all come early, we can proceed to business at once, and get through in good season.

THE COMING MEETING.

The next meeting of our Western Association will without any doubt be the most important session of that body that has been held. It is a crisis with us in the West, and we need cool heads and wise counsels. We need our men of business, men who take practical views of life and its duties and difficulties, and the way to meet, fulfill or surmount them.

There is an unwise prejudice among us against business meetings. If we had been more faithful in this respect in the past, things would have been in better conditions now. Leave then your stores, your shops, your farms, and come up to spend two or three days in business for the Lord's cause. "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety." Your presence is needed.

Do not say, "I am not a member of the Association." You can easily become one. If you love the Advent truths, and want to see them proclaimed as they should be, come up and help arrange the best plans for carrying forward this work successfully.

The ministry are deeply interested. It is not only true that you cannot spare the paper nor the publishing office, but it is for your interest, as laborers, to have them on the firmest possible basis, and in the best possible working order.

Let the meeting be a subject of much prayer.

"WOMAN IN THE CHURCH.".

This is the title of an essay read at the last annual meeting of the New York Advent Christian Conference, upon the question whether women are entitled, by Scripture authority, to hold all the offices men may hold in the church of Christ. Apart from the merits of the question the document is well worth reading merely as a literary production. But, besides this, it is a clear, strongly compacted, and clearly put argument. It should be widely read by all who are interested in the "Woman question"—and who is not? Send for a copy. Published at this office. Price, 20c post-paid.

Items About the Meeting.

The legal meeting will be composed of members of the Association upon its original basis. Those who have not become members may do so at the meeting. Voting by proxy is not allowed. You must come yourself if you would vote.

We expect to provide at least "campmeeting comfort" for as many as will come. We shall provide good healthful food, enough of it, a place to sleep, and a place for work—transacting business; which last is the object of the meeting.

We would esteem it a favor if as many who intend to come, and have not already done so, will write us, giving notice of the fact. It will help in our preparatory arrangements.

Come.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

The revelations, or what are called revelations of science, are attracting some attention to this topic. We observe leaders in the Cincinnati Commercial and in the Scottish American Journal devoted to the subject, and there have been frequent references to the subject in many quarters. We cannot help but notice one point in all these articles—and, in fact, it is the point in each case—and that is an exhortation not to be afraid! They discuss the probabilities of our being melted by the sun, or the fulfillment of the prophecies relating to the judgment, and conclude that, upon the whole, "there is no use in getting alarmed. All things continue as from the beginning; those things that seem new, seem so only because when they happened before they were not observed, or if observed were not recorded." Of course these things may mean something, but on the whole, the probabilities favor the "don't get alarmed" idea. It is safe to risk it.

Now all this is a very shallow view of things. There is a future; and whether we are to have any part in it is, to each of us a question of great interest and importance. And it is certain that the man who is not ready for "the end of the world" is not ready for the future life. He whose peace is disturbed by prediction of theological or scientific prophet, certainly has not a mind stayed upon God, or faith in the care of his Creator. He is a stranger to that repose of faith that quells fear even in the presence of mountains removing from their solid bases into the depths of the sea. "The end of the world" is unpopular solely because the mass of mankind are unready. What care they for the fact that it is to usher in a better state of things, so long as they feel that their unfitness will shut them out of Paradise restored?

"Nevertheless the day of the Lord will come." The heavens as to their present conditions will pass away; earth will melt; men's works therein will be burned up; new heavens and earth, reconstructed from the old will in due time succeed; and there the righteous shall dwell. (2 Pet. 3.) It is the time for making an end of all sin and sorrow; only the fit for eternity, of both men and things will survive. Why then should the event be distasteful. Is this earth so good that we can desire nothing better? Something better is promised. Is it not the wiser part to so live that tokens of the approach of the predicted charge will fill us with joy, and not with dread?

SIGNS IN THE SUN.

Among other causes aiding to disquiet the world, and cause men's hearts to fail for fear, are the speculations of the astronomer. A New York paper says:

> The apprehension of the pseudo-comet has hardly abated before we have accounts from astronomers of something more alarming. The danger this time comes from the sun himself, the great fountain of fire, light, and life for the planetary system. We have learned a great deal within the last few years about the tremendous tempests that are raging in the molten body of the sun—tempests of inconceivable sweep, intensity, and velocity; and we are enabled, by means of the spectroscope, to comprehend something of the elemental chemistry of the sun, and the nature of the forces which are brought into play. The eminent Italian astronomer, Jacchini, has recently observed certain remarkable solar phenomena, which, he says, are altogether new in the whole series of his observations, and which are, in fact, entirely unlike anything before known to astronomers. He has discovered peculiar disturbances in the sun, and in the gaseous envelop by which it is surrounded, called the chromatosphere. This envelop consists, in the main, of glowing hydrogen, but it also contains the glowing vapors of other elements. Now, there have been sweeping from the body of the sun into the glowing hydrogen of the envelop vast volumes of glowing magnesium, and these seem to be working changes of a kind not to be comprehended. Jacchini and the other astronomers associated with him describe the phenomena in vivid language; but they can give no idea of their significance, or probable results. It would appear as though they might at any time endanger the existence of our planet. If, by means of these changes and disturbances, the sun should suddenly lose the best part of his light, or if he should suddenly grow a hundred fold brighter and hotter than he now is, in either event our globe would be the sufferer. There are stars or suns in the sidereal universe which, after shining steadily for countless ages, have disappeared altogether; and there are others which have suddenly blazed out with far greater luster than they previously possessed. It is impossible to assert that one or the other event might not occur to our sun at any time.

The Cincinnati Commercial says:

> For some time past astronomers have been appalled at the solar revelations made to them through the spectroscope and the telescope. There are evidences of stupendous convulsions and mysterious changes in the flaming essence of the sun itself, and in the gaseous envelop of glowing hydrogen, called the chromatosphere, which surrounds it. What they may portend, no scientific investigation can tell; but it appears from very recent observations that processes are at work upon the sun which may at any time destroy his power as the fire, light and life of the planetary system. Whether he may lose his light and heat through these changes, or whether he may become a hundred fold brighter and hotter than he is now, no idea can be formed; but if either of these things should take place, our globe must be among the sufferers. In the present position of sidereal astronomy (says the London Spectator) it is quite impossible to assert confidently that one event or the other might not take place at any time. There are stars, or suns, in our heavens, which have shone for incalculable ages and suddenly disappeared; and there are others which have suddenly blazed out for awhile with vastly greater luster than they previously possessed. It is impossible to consider the remarkable phenomenon recently observed by the Italian astronomer, Tacchini, and discussed in the Spectator—an event, in fact, unlike any which astronomers have hitherto observed—without being struck by the evidence which it affords of solar mutability.
>
> It is not worth while getting alarmed. If our earth is imperiled by the comet, or by the disturbances of the sun, or by the glowing vapor of magnesium, which has been streaming from the blazing luminary itself into its chromatosphere, we can't help it. We may avert the lightning, or fly from the volcano, or escape the earthquake; but if the sun is undergoing such a change as has been referred to, our globe may at any moment be turned into a molten or gaseous mass, which will be swept to its original source, and disappear forever in the solar essence. The only comfort one can find, in presence of such a prospect, is that of the devout man, who knows that the universe is governed by infinite wisdom which acts through fixed ws, and that no changes in it can take place accident or chance.

—These journals suggest that such ings may have been occurring every nce Abraham's day; and it is not est to be alarmed; but we can't help inking that all truly wise men will ffer themselves to be sufficiently armed to get ready for the things com-g upon the earth, let those things be hat they may. There e altitude at is perfectly safe: "Let your loins e girded about, and lights burning d ye yourselves like unto men that ait for their Lord, when he will reurn." Waiting, watching for Jesus! is is the safe, the only safe position.

ANOTHER ADVERTISEMENT.

Not long since we advertised the ork which is (according to Zion's Ierald) to lay Materialism in the dust.
Ve now call attention to another "big un" and its commendation by the ame sheet, as follows;

> ANNIHILATIONISM NOT OF THE BIBLE, by ev. N. D. George, is the most valuable book sued against that pestilent error,—clear, criptural, and incisive in statement, and umulative and forcible in argument. The eapons of the foe are turned against himself. The advocates of this dogma are theological errillas—the Arabs of the church. They ght singly, and in detail. When you move e solemn column of logic against them, they re not there; they have fled behind some xt, or specious interpretation, or great name, dart out again at an unexpected moment, demolish some good pilgrim.
>
> With a system rooted in materialism, they t appeal, in defense of their views, to the xt of the Bible. The Bible is their hobby, ut it is the Bible tortured and misinterpret-l. There is the text. The bold, Oriental gure is pared and trimmed down to a bald teralism; but there it is. No matter if it e opposed to the whole spirit of the book; at passage reads so and so, and they will rust it in your face.
>
> The merit of George is that he meets them their own ground, and employs their own eapons. Each passage is taken up, and ex-mined; the enemy is followed into all his ding places, and at each time is heard the ack of his rifle, which never fails to do exe-ution on the foe. General and broad argu-ents produce no visible impression on the rger part of those holding this doctrine, d hence many works written in that style e valueless. Mr. George avoids that error; has caught the spirit of their methods, has en among them till he has learned their ode of warfare, and shows a dextrous hand using their weapons.
>
> While the main part of the work is proper-devoted to the Scriptural argument, he ves some space, also, to those general argu-ents which may be useful to those in danger falling into the heresy, if not to those al-ady in the slough. A reading of the work n hardly fail to deter a candid mind from nbracing an error so fatal to personal piety, d so contrary to the whole spirit of the oly Scriptures.

We believe that overreaching is ounted a serious fault; the horse may e a good one, but if he overreaches
e is continually liable to cut himself p more or less severely. The Herald as certainly "overreached" in its nxiety to tread upon a "pestilent er-or." It says that Mr. George has urned our own weapons upon us—he 'employs their own weapons,'
What weapons does he employ? Why,
' clear, Scriptural, and incisive in statement, and cumulative and forcible in rgument." Thank you Br. Herald, or that admission; we believe just hat of our weapons. But please tell s if our arguments are Scriptural, how
Mr. George can meet us with the same.
Are the scriptures an armory that urnishes weapons to both truth and er-or?

But, on the other hand, the Herald
ays annihilationists defend their views by torturing and misinterpreting the Bible; and again "the merit of George s that he meets them on their own ground and employs their own weapons." Well, confession is said to be good for the soul, and we are glad the Herald has owned up that "the Bible tortured and misinterpreted" is the weapon employed by Mr. George.
We have no doubt the Herald really believes us all guilty of the same sin:
but if it were so, how can that justify
Mr. George. Surely the Herald is not ready, in the face of Paul's teaching to the contrary, to say that we may do evil that good may come.

Seriously, which party pares "bold Oriental figures" "down to bald literalism." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Is that an Oriental figure? We accept it as a simple statement of a simple truth. "Their fire shall not be quenched." Is that an Oriental figure? Nine times over it is explained in the Scriptures to be a consuming fire and yet Mr. George and the Herald maintain it is a "bald literalism," and means a tormenting flame, or its equivalent, whose duration is litterally eternal. The rich man and Lazarus is prosaic history—"bald literalism" to them; while the thirty-seventh Psalm is "bold Oriental figures."

The Herald being judge our methods of reasoning are wicked; yet it boldly commends the man who has "caught the spirit of our method," "learned our mode of warfare," and "shows a dexterous hand in using our weapons."

The Herald has, no doubt unconsciously, told just the truth concerning Mr. George's methods, though it has misrepresented us in doing so. Mr. George's work will never convert an intelligent "annihilationist." Its animus is too evident. It may serve to prejudice those who know nothing of "annihilationism" save what they learn from its pages, and thus prevent many from an examination of one of the most important subjects now before the world. That was, we believe, the design of the work. In that direction it will have some success: of its futility is a work of logic, Br. L. H. Thorne's review entitled "Man Not Immortal" is a crushing evidence.

Shall it Be?

What? That our Association meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 15th shall prove a failure for want of attendance by the Stock holders of the same. I hope not. Shall it be, that the trifling expense will keep us away?

Dear Brn., inasmuch as we believe in Life and Death let us show sighs of life if we have life: and if not, then let us have the obsequizes performed and be buried quietly, and that without complaining. But while we profess life, I object to this burial service, or the manifest indifference of the past; and I hope and trust that a new era is about to dawn upon our Western interest.

Thank God! I can discern, I think, new tokens of life and activity in the body, especially in some of the Western conferences. And shall it be that Illinois, which has taken the lead as it were, in this great onward movement, shall be compelled by her inactivity to fall into the rear? I trust not.

Then, brethren, if life remains, let us wake up—wake to the responsibility that rests upon us. Every voice ought to be heard in the contemplated meeting, or every stockholder represented. New duties and responsibilities are developing every hour: are we awake to them, or are we drowsy and sleepy?

I know it is a hard time, but what of that. So much the more need of help. Some will say, "I cannot do much." But that is no good excuse. It is the little streams that make the river. Another may say—"They will have it all their own way anyhow!" Well, that is your own fault. Go to the meeting yourself, and do your duty, in the name of the Lord, to make all right. Come with the spirit of the Master, and see if we cannot have it all His way. If there is anything not right, let us make it right. let us all have a voice, and then there will be none left to complain.

Some will say, "I am so far away I cannot go." Brethren, remember the long journeys some of your preachers have to take to get to some of their appointments, and stay away many weeks too, to spread the glad tidings. Now, for about three days, make the sacrifice of a little time and money, as the cause demands (I am sure.)

As I write these lines, I begin to feel that my heading is wrong. And if I could see you, and hear your voices, I think you would almost unanimously say: "It shall not be my fault if the meeting is not well attended." Come then, one and all.

Perhaps you fear that Norwood Park will not contain the throng, nor the brethren there be able to entertain us all. Well, perhaps you will never know unless you go and see: for my own part I shall risk it, and if there should be so great a number of wide awake Adventists in the Park at once, we could not fail to have a glorious time even if we slept on the floor, or in the office. We are soldiers, brethren. Don't let us whine at the fare. We are workers, don't let us shirk or shrink from the task. We are burden bearers, don't see your brother break down under the load and you look on with indifference.

Come, then, I say again: let us have a Soldier's Reunion in the name of our great Captain. Let prayer go up daily for the prosperity of the cause in our great field.

Brethren in the ministry, much depends upon us. If the ministry flags, the laity will. If the ministry whines and finds fault, the churches will. Then let us cheer up and infuse new life wherever we go. Speak encouragingly, be hopeful yourself, and a new state of affairs will soon be inaugurated in our Association and conferences. There has been too much of this sickly "don't know" feeling in the minist y. I hope it is a thing of the past. Let us now have unity in Jesus, and with one another, in this great work. WM. MCCULLOCK.

The Tithes Demanded.

The Church needs the Spirit, more of the Spirit of Christ. She will never rise out of her l ndition without the Spirit of the d. But in order to this, she mus ring all the tithes into the storeh e, that there may be meat in the Lord's house, and prove him. Then he will open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. (Mal. 3:1–10.)

Our possessions must be consecrated anew to God. They must be, practically considered as not our own, but God's. They are his. His is the gold and the silver and the cattle upon a thousand hills; and whatever is found in our hands is lent to us to occupy for the interests of the great Proprietor. This must be more generally felt and acknowledged. This property question needs to be re-examined. It is but half understood, or its claims but half admitted. There are thousands of men who, notwithstanding all that is said of Christian stewardship, do not comprehend the alphabet of this doctrine. They plan and toil and accumulate, to pamper their appetite, and feed their vanity or ease, and never dream that they are embezzling the Lord's property.

When Oliver Cromwell visited Yorkminster Cathedral, in England, his attention was drawn to twelve statues of the apostles, in silver, which stood in their appropriate niches near the ceiling of one of the apartments. Looking upon them for a moment, he inquired, "Who are those fellows standing yonder?" And on being informed, he exclaimed, "Take them down, and let them go about doing good." Accordingly they were melted down and put into the treasury. So let a right sentiment as to Christian stewardship once obtain, and many a wealthy professor, as he surveyed his splendid establishment, would be constrained to convert many extravagant decorations and much costly plate into money for the Lord's treasury; thus sending them forth on the sublime errand of doing good.

Not the wealthy alone, but all classes, were this sentiment to obtain, would join in the glorious reform until the present system of selfishness were entirely broken up, and the cause of benevolence made to wear an aspect entirely new.—Primitive Piety Revived.

The Times.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

" " " We are glad that our city press, with a few exceptions, refrained from publishing the sayings and doings of the Spiritualist Convention held in Boston last week. The proceedings were simply disgraceful to any community, and the notorious Victoria Woodhull surpassed even her own indecencies, and said things and made charges that should put her in "durance vile." And here in good old Boston were scores of people who listened and applauded! Shame on Woodhull, shame on her hearers!—Watchman (Boston).

" " " The law recently passed in Prussia, expelling the Jesuits from the empire, is already in process of execution—rather the Jesuits are yielding to the law without waiting for its execution. They are very generally making Austria their new home. One Jesuit institution employed sixteen hours at a stretch, from 4 a. m. to 8 p. m., in prayer, preliminary to their breaking up. Evidently they do not believe that they shall not be heard for their much speaking.

" " " Nothing could be more suggestive (of what, we don't pretend to say) than the marked changes that time works in the various religious denominations, almost without exception. We have all witnessed the increase of that paradoxical class called the "gay Quakers," but who would have expected from the primitive Methodists such an operatic advertisment as the following:

"Bedford Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn. It is understood that Miss Butman, the soprano, is engaged, and will make her appearance in the choir next Sabbath."—Chris. Union.

" " " There may be woes worse than those of poverty. An English editor recounts his visit to a clerical friend, who feeds and clothes his family of ten on an income of £140 a year. He found husband and wife in tears, and the children crying in chorus. Visions of want flashed, of course, over the visitor's mind, but his ready proffer of aid was declined. "It is not that, not that," sobbed the poor preacher, "but I see that the Athanasian Creed—the bulwark of our faith—will probably be rejected by the Church. This is the first step towards infidelity." For such grief there was no consolation. Father, mother, and eight children were weeping together over the possible loss of dogma of eternal damnation [wo].

" " " The Jesuits, says the Religious Herald, have recently been expelled from some of the European countries. This will doubtless cause many of them to come to the United States. Their order will thus be largely strengthened in this country. The security that they enjoy here is favorable to the formation and execution of their plans. They should be closely watched. They are zealous, wily and persistent. Many of them are learned and able. Their principles and policy make their influence inimical to the interests of religion and liberty. They are unscrupulous in the use of measures. Success is to be secured at any cost. They are dangerous enemies to both church and State. The only power with which they can be opposed is moral power. Let every legitimate means of counteracting their influence and destroying their power be diligently used.

" " " A Christian sect of unknown origin and antiquity has been discovered by French missionaries to Loudiana, in India. By a voyage which extended thirty miles to the south of that place, they fell in with a company of Shikes, who profess to believe the New Testament as a divine revelation, and who consider Christ as the immaculate incarnation of the Deity. Their priest, gourou, teaches his people that Christ is about to reveal himself from heaven, according to Mat. 24: 23, and Rev. 19: 22, but in his own person. (? person of the priest, or of Christ?) This sect is wholly separate from other Indian tribes, and is considered by them as a truly Christian band. The number of its members was found to be on the increase, with the probability of large accessions in a short time. They observe the Sabbath, are accustomed to pray, and do not recognize the obligations of caste. The sect extends over the territories of Maharajah and Putteala, and probably belongs to the Kuka race, despite differences in faith.

AT HOME.

" " " It is a fact of some interest that about the time the comet which Plantamour never predicted was announced to arrive, throughout July, as well as a large part of August, there was intense heat in the greater part of Europe and America, and the effect of the heat was very peculiar, and at once depressing and exciting. At the same time we had here and elsewhere unusual early and brilliant auroral displays, and electrical discharges which seemed like solid sheets of flame, showing apparently that there was something abnormal in the meteorological condition of our planet. Indeed, similar displays have been observed up to the present time. In different parts of the North West most fearful thunderstorms have occurred within a fortnight, attended in some instances with loss of life.

" " " Of the storm in Wall St. a short time since, the New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes: The fact that seven men, controlling seven millions, can knock things endwise on the street, paralyze the business of the country, and ruin a thousand men in an hour, is rather an alarming view of the financial affairs of this country. Yet such is the fact. Seven men can lock up greenbacks, and demoralize trade beyond the lakes. Dog won't eat dog, but bull will eat bull and bear will eat bear on the street. If one wishes to know the truth of the adage that there is no friendship in trade, let him come on to the stock market. Sharpness, adroitness, diamond cut-diamond keenness, governs the transactions of the street. Nobody is safe. The sudden storms of the Mediterranean are not more unexpected and violent than the changes in the market. Men who form pools will sell each other out, without a word of warning. Men who combine capital and talent, and meet in private dens and by-places, to bull or bear the market lock up greenbacks, make the market short on a private stock, or create a panic, will go out from the conclave and join a counter combination to ruin every one of their associates. Neither talent, integrity or piety is the slightest guarantee that an operator will not ruin in stocks every man he can touch. Men who are personally regarded as the highest toned men of the city will gamble in stocks, create a panic, make money scarce, and ruin a thousand small traders. Men will come out from leading a classmeeting, and who are noted for their promptness in attending church prayermeetings, and go on to the street, and by throwing stock onto the market, or by buying it up, carry consternation high and low. Since the Black Friday, Wal street has not seen such a week as this. First came the Erie corner. Not a share could be had. "Uncle Daniel had it," the street said. Then came the corner in gold, and small traders could not get it at any price. Had not the government interfered, as it did on the Black Friday, universal failure would have followed. The recklessness and daring of a few men is marvelous. Their going out and coming in is watched by the excited street. The anxious throng that hovered round the offices when these seven men assemble, shows how completely the street is at their mercy. In relation to the Black Friday Col. Fisk told your correspondent that he held more gold under his control that morning than the Rothschilds ever moved at one time, and if the government had not meddled he would have made millions. Something is evidently wrong when half a dozen unscrupulous men can ruin trade by an hour's combination. The public are calling for a stringent law that shall put an end to such unholy alliances. The remedy is not an easy one.

ABROAD.

" " "The Shah of Persia is about to visit Europe, and preparations on a scale of truly Oriental magnificence are already making for the occasion. He will probably embark at Constantinople early in the Spring of 1873.

" " "The Manchester Guardian thinks there will be nothing unbecoming in England's being reminded, by the appearance of the cattle plague at this moment of the accumulation of trials upon the head of Job. It adds: "With coal at rates never heard of before, the potato crop to a great extent destroyed, and a large part of the corn harvest still lying in a precarious condition on the ground, the householder finds himself face to face with another visitation which threatens to raise indefinitely the already extravagant price of butcher's meat.

" " "That vast and vague spectre the International Association seems to be breaking like a great bubble,—and, like the bubble, to have been but a hollow affair after all. At its Congress just held at the Hague, confusion and dissension reigned supreme. What was left of the head of the Council, voted to hold its sessions hereafter in New York. This is equivalent to giving up the game altogether. The European working men will not be controlled by power on this side of the Atlantic. And as far as this country is concerned, the "Council" is at full liberty to ventilate its decrees and harangues alongside of our home-made nonsense—the politics of George Francis Train, or the metaphysics of Stephen Pearl Andrews—and they will have just as much effect on the community. The prominent men at the Congress of the International have always been crack brained pretenders and demagogues. The only importance attributed to their actions was in the influence which the International, with its centralized organization, seemed to give them over the discontented and ignorant who are so numerous throughout Europe. But it is evident that the European workingmen are not silly enough to unquestioningly follow these self-constituted chiefs. As the London Times expresses it: "The aim of the masses is simply an international trade union: the ambition of the leaders turns it to the purpose of a Communistic revolution.—Christ. Union.

" " "A great agitation is going on now in London about the high price of meat. The democratic and trade societies of London have been constantly holding meetings in Trafalgar-square to consider what steps should be taken to prevent a continuance of the grievance, and the general conclusion is that its principal cause is the game laws. In Scotland, especially, large tracts of land which formerly supported large herds of cattle have been turned into deer forests and grouse moors. An agitation has therefore been begun in London against these laws, having at its head the newly formed anti-Game Law League (of which Mr. P. A. Taylor, M. P., is president). In all probability at all elections for some time to come this question will be one of those upon which the contest will be fought. The League has already made its influence felt in the recent election at Preston.

" " The Vienna Neue Freie Presse on the 11th of September stated that it learned on good authority in reference to the political significance of the meeting of the Emperors at Berlin, that the three Chancellors had not up to that time held any conference, nor was it expected that they would do so. On the other hand, however, mutual conversations had taken place between Princes Gortschakoff and Bismark and Count Andrassy from which it was clear that the three States were perfectly of one mind in reference to all the great European questions, and further it was understood that no steps in any of the great European questions should be taken by any one of the Powers without a previous understanding with the other two Powers. The Presse announced from P n that the greatest satisfaction preval re at the political results of the meeting ussia and Prussia had expressed the most emphatic disapproval of all those aspirations in Austria which might be hostile to the State. At the conversations of the Ministers no treaties were framed or protocols drawn up; still identical diplomatic communications would probably be made shortly. The strengthening of the authority of the State, the maintenance of the present condition of affairs, and the preservation of peace were declared to have been the general objects of the meeting.

Communications.

Who are the Daughters of Zion?

There are very many daughters in the land. There are many who profess to be the "Daughters of Zion." But who are the Daughters of Zion? How many good old Ruths are there? How many Sarahs and Rebeccas? How many Marys and Marthas? Who can tell us where Dorcas may be found? Can you? Can you tell us? How many of those beautful, oriental emblems of Zion have we in our midst at the present day? How many young women of our land can call themselves the "Daughters of Zion?" There are in these United States more than two hundred thousand young women, as Sir Ralph Abercrombie said of those of Scotland, "the prettiest lassies in a' the world," "who toil not neither do they spin," who are yet clothed like the lilies of the valley. Are these the "Daughters of Zion?" They thrum the piano and a few of the more dainty the harp or guitar; who walk as the Bible says, "softly," lest brisker movements might snap tapes drawn to their utmost tension. They have read romances and been to theaters. They have wrought algebraic solutions on the black-board, and they have shown themselves no mean proficients in the casuistry of Paley. They are, in short the very roses of the garden, the altar of life. But let me ask, are these the "Daughters of Zion"?

Go with me into the interior villages of our rural districts. The fair one sits down to clink the wires of the piano. We see the fingers displayed on the keys, which we are sure never washed a handkerchief, never prepared a dinner, or made a garment for their robust brothers. We need not enter in person, imagination sees the pretty one erect on her music stool, laced and pinioned, flowing sleeved and deformed with hair shorn from other's scalps, and reduced to a questionable class of ringlets or water-fall (secundo more) dinging, as Sawney would say, at the wires as though she could in some way beat out of them music, amusement, and a husband. Are these the "Daughters of Zion"? Look at her taper and cream colored fingers; how they glisten with jewels. Is she a utilitarian? Is she a daughter of Shiloh come to the dance, where every man may catch himself a wife? (Jud. 21 : 21.)

Ask her when she has beaten all the music out of the instrument—pretty, fair one, canst thou talk to thy poor sick father so as to beguile him out of the headache or rheumatism? Canst thou repeat the Lord's prayer? Thou wast a chemist, I remember, at the examination: canst thou compound, prepare, and afterwards boil or bake a good pudding? Say, lady, canst thou make one of the hundred subordinate ornaments of thy fair person? In short, tell us thy use in existence, except to be contemplated as a beautiful picture. Say you, "We are the daughters of Zion." Do you? Do you say so? Did the daughters of Zion have more surface than solidity? Did they walk and talk, frolic and dance, and

"Trip the light fantastic toe"
"Till the wee small hours in the morning,"

as though their brains were in their heels? Did they? Did they do this? Oh! no, no! They did not do so. The daughters of Zion were the humblest and noblest daughters of the land. They were the most beautiful, because they adorned themselves with divine wisdom. They were the most lovely, not because their eyes rolled in dazzling splendor, not because their lips were sculptured in a line of perfect beauty, but because they were good; because they loved the patriarchs and prophets. Because they loved, not this world, but poor sinners. Because they loved God. C. E. Darrow.

From Arkansas.

We are having a great religious conflict in this part of Arkansas. Sectarianism and superstitions of Platonists are trying to over-rule the plain and simple truths of the revelations of Jesus Christ. But thank God, the truth will prevail over the head of every opposition to some extent. Of course we can't expect the whole world to be converted to the truth: that would be contrary to Christ's word. He plainly said that the day would come when men would not endure sound doctrine. I think that time is fully come; else the English language is to be taken backwards. Orthodoxy says, to burn up, be as though they had not been, perish, devour, consume, and such English phrases, mean eternal torment in hell. We are forced to believe that the Bible is right and orthodoxy is wrong. For if their theory is right, and if death, perish, destruction, devour, &c., mean eternal life, we are forced to conclude that eternal ife, immortality, &c., promised the faithful, mean destruction and death. Hence the Christian, according to their theory consistently carried out, must perish in his own corruption. Oh! fatal delusion! We often have Bible arguments with men who claim at first that the soul is immortal. We prove that "the soul that sinneth it must die," and that David said that God would redeem his soul from the power of the grave, and show that in many other instances the soul is threatened with death. They then say it is the spirit that is immortal. We then prove that the beasts have the same spirit as man. This completely confounds them. Still they claim man has an immortal entity; but they can't name it. There are some thirty in this part of the country who have laid down their old superstitions and traditions and have come boldly out for the truth as it is written in the word of God, while most of the populace won't listen to anything but what they have been taught all their lives. We have the word preached with power twice a month at Pleasant Plains, by Eldr. Crosby and Overstreet. There is a great many that will not come to the light. They say this Advent doctrine was gotten up by some Yankee to make money, and that it sends every man's soul to hell that believed it. We tell them it makes no difference who got it up, since Christ preached it and Paul approved it.

The few Adventists here are persecuted, but bear it with patience, like Paul, ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of their faith.

I had a private talk with a Baptist class leader on the subject of immortal-soulism. He said God breathed an immortal soul into Adam when he received the breath of life. I told him the beasts had the same breath as man; and if that breath was immortal in the man it must also be in the beast; as the breath of life was all that man received. Oh! he said, "man became a living soul." Very well, said I; did the man become a living soul, or did a living soul come into the man? This brought him to his studies. He said he could find immortal soul in the Bible. I told him I would be glad to see it. He said he would "find it and send it to me!" But he has not sent it yet. Immaterialists are getting very shy in these parts. It is hard to get them to face us with the word. All the Bible they bring up is the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, the thief on the cross, and the smoke of torment; and when we overthrow them on these points, they generally get mad and call us "dead-horse fellows," and such like. Oh! may the light burst in on their hearts, and cause them to see the truth as it is revealed in God's word.

I have been almost an infidel ever since I first became a Bible reader, until I first began to read the Advent doctrine. I had been taught that a man possessed inherent immortality, and that he would go to heaven or hell at death to live forever, or "die the death that never dies." I would read, and I could not find it; but I, like a good many now, thought surely so many smart men would not preach it if it was not there! I would read where the sinner was threatened with destruction, to perish, the second death, &c. So I thought the Bible would say one thing and then turn around and deny it. But when I quit listening to "smart men," and read for myself and let the Bible be its own interpreter, I found it all plain. Let us take the Bible for what it says, regardless of men. H. M. Judge.

Correspondence.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

AMBOY CAMPMEETING.

The old camp-ground looks good. It is one of the most beautiful groves on the banks of the Green River. It is near the railroad, and every way convenient. This was the spot where the later movement of the Advent cause in the West began, by Brn. McCullock, Spencer, Clark, Calkins and others, some dozen years ago. The first meetings were small, but they were carried on by earnest and hopeful men, who worked for a time almost against hope. but they made the sacrifice, and trusted in God for success, and now they see the fruit.

In the evening Eld. John Ridley, from Prospect, Me., spoke on the importance of prayer, from Acts 12: 5, making a good beginning. We had a thunder tempest at the time, which did not injure the meeting, though it affected some. Most were storm proof, feeling that "Christ was in the strife."

Sabbath, Sep. 8. Heavy storm last night, but clearing off we had a good audience all day. Br. Ridley spoke in the a. m. on the promise to Abraham, a very refreshing and timely sermon. In the p. m. I spoke from Is. 44: 3–5, and encouraged the church to hope for a gracious revival. The attendance was large, and the blessing of God was upon us. At night we gathered for worship, but a thunder tempest and a drenching rain prevented any meeting. The brethren sung many of their sweet hymns amid the "patter of the rain on the roof" of our tent. The people went home through the mud and rain and darkness. But none murmured.

Monday, Sept. 9. The Lord gives us a pleasant morning, for pitching our small tents, though it is wet and muddy under foot. A good number have arrived to-day, and the prospect is that most of our people will come in earlier than usual. This will add to the interest of the meeting.

Br. L. F. Cole spoke at night to a large audience on the blessedness of the word of God, as a "lamp to our feet, and a light to our path." There was a blessed interest for good.

Tuesday, Sept. 10. I spoke in the a. m. on what it is to be a Christian, in deed and truth. A precious time indeed. Br. Burr spoke in the p. m. on sanctification. Br. Burington and others followed in interesting remarks. At night Br. Chandler spoke on the words of Solomon, "Buy the truth and sell it not." It was an able discourse. He showed some important truths of the gospel, and how they could be bought, and advised all to buy the truth and sell it not. At the close one soul came out for Christ and the truth. The interest of the meeting increases.

Wednesday, Sept. 11. We have rain again this a. m., but the spirit of the meeting is excellent, with good conference and prayer-meetings.

At 10 a. m. Br. Hurd gave us a sermon from Is. 1: 18. "Come and let us reason together." He spoke of the character of God, as a God of love, ready to save all that would come to him.

At 2 p. m. Eld. Grant spoke on the subject of holiness, from Rev. 21: 27. The view presented was the common one, of living near to God. We have long preached the same thing, as have our Advent preachers in the East and West. And the more such preaching the better, with the practice to correspond. Let us be ready for the kingdom of God.

At night Sr. Mansfield preached from the passage—"Death shall be swallowed up in victory." (Is. 25: 8) It was one of the most intensely interesting sermons I ever heard her preach. At the close three souls gave all for Christ. The interest of the meeting is rising, and the prospect is cheering for great good.

We received a telegram to-day from Br. Kenney for help at the campmeeting at Manchester, Iowa. Brn. Cole and Ridley volunteered to go. They will do good, God bless them.

Thursday, Sept. 12. We have had more rain. Amboy keeps up its character. We are always greeted with rain-storms at our meetings here. Well, we have heavenly showers too.

Elder Marston spoke in the a. m. on sanctification. He said, sanctification and holiness are not synonymous. Many get into confusion of ideas by confounding these terms. In 2 Chron. we read "they sanctified themselves in holiness." This shows that they are different and distinct things. And while holiness is a state or condition into which we are introduced by conversion, as shown by Paul in Ephesians, sanctification is a work of the creature.

He showed that sanctification was not a "second blessing," as some teach, but that it was a work to be performed by all Christians, and that we are to be sanctified by the truth. (Jno. 17: 17.) Growth in all the Christian graces is universally taught in the Scriptures. So we shall never get to a "stand still place" in the blessed work of sanctification so long as we live in this world of conflict and trial.

At the close of the service Br. Clark immersed three converts in Green River. Glorious time at the water.

At 2 p. m. Elder Grant spoke on Rom. 12: 1, on presenting our bodies a living sacrifice. He gave an account of his conversion to his new views or position on sanctification.

At night Eld. Sheldon spoke on the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. At the close Eld. Calkins made a powerful appeal to the unconverted, and some came to Christ, and the day closed with joy and hope.

Friday, Sept. 13. Good love feast. Br. Calkins spoke on the sufferings of Jesus and plan of redemption. The resurrection and glory of the future being beautifully portrayed.

At 1 p. m. Br. Mansfield conducted a young people's meeting with much interest.

This noon Eld. Hastings arrived and was cordially welcomed by all; and at 2 p. m. he spoke from Rom. 1: 28, upon the "fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ." He intensely interested the audience. Eld. Grant spoke at night.

Saturday, Sept. 14. Eld. Hastings spoke in the forenoon and evening, and Eld. Grant in the afternoon. The preaching has been good, and the people deeply interested.

Sabbath, Sept. 15. A beautiful and glorious day, and the tabernacles of the Lord appear beautiful and glorious. We have a large attendance, good order and the best attention to the word of God. We had four sermons. Br. Hastings in the morning and evening; Eld. Grant at 2 p. m., and Sr. Mansfield at 4 p. m. Great interest was manifested in all the sermons. The themes were prophecy, repentance, holiness, and the coming of the Lord in his kingdom and glory.

We had the communion in the boarding tent at the close of the public service at night. A large number took part. It was a joyful season, yet solemn. Some sat down to the Lord's table for the first time, including a number who were baptised to-day.

COLUMBUS KANSAS.

Friday, Sept. 20. I arrived here at noon after two days and three nights in the cars, with but little sleep, or rest, yet I am well, and ready for work.

On the way we had unusual detentions, which is good for the cultivation of the grace of patience, if nothing else. At Kansas City I fell in with Br. Henry Pollard. Our interview in this far off land was sweet. At Girard I saw Br. Munson a few moments. His family are sick, as are others of the brethren there. Soon I was in Columbus, where I was warmly greeted by Br. Amos Sanford and household, who are in the faith and spirit of the hope of the Lord's speedy coming.

The church here is still alive, hoping for a refreshing time in our coming meetings.

After dinner, took carriage with Br. Sanford and son, twelve miles, to Spring River Falls, for preaching at night. Br. Wells, of the Christian church invited us to his hospitalities.

This region of country is only dotted here and there with farm houses, and only a small portion of the country is under cultivation. The land is rich, and there is still room for the landless.

Saturday, Sept. 21. Came to-day to Lowell, on the east side of Spring River, near the Missouri line, almost in the corner of the State. We were kindly received by Br. C. T. Shattuck, the Congregationalist missionary, who is liberal and favorable. Lowell is one of the old towns on the River, having two mills and a small group of dwelling houses, with a school-house, used for educational and religious purposes. I was invited here to speak on the Advent.

At two p. m. a few of us met at the S. H., where I spoke on the condition of the dead before the resurrection, as an unconscious state of silence and sleep. At night my subject was from Mat. 5: 5. I portrayed the true religion and its renewal in the kingdom of God. Glorious time indeed. Many questions were asked at the close of the sermon, of a sensible character, to which I replied fully, getting out much truth. At the close of the service they were hungry for tracts and papers. We had a supply, so that none went away empty. The way is opening for the word of the Lord to have a free course and be glorified in Kansas. It has been a hard thing to break in or get an opening, but it will be done. God is in the work.

Br. Sanford has got out of politics, and into the work of God, and will be able to help us more now than in the past. He is with me, and helping much. He spoke after my sermon this evening with good results. The people all know him, and have confidence, which will give him power for good.

Sabbath, Sept. 22. I rise this morning refreshed by sweet repose, and the blessing of the Lord. My Savior's blessing is upon me, with all my weakness and infirmity, with all my errors and shortcomings, the dear friend of sinners blesses me. Yes, he fills my cup, and it runs over. He spreads a table in the presence of my enemies; he leads me into green pastures, beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul. He doeth all things well, blessed be his holy name forever and ever. I am full, unutterably full. Peace like a river, with love, and joy.

I have been wading through trials keen, sharp and almost overwhelming. God is trying me, and I think he means to save me. Blessed be his holy name. I will "trust him though he slay me." How good God is.

"When through the deep waters I cause thee to go,
The rivers of wo shall not thee overflow;
I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand,
Upheld by my righteous omnipotent hand.

When through fiery trials thy pathway shall lie,
My grace, all-sufficient, shall be thy supply;
The flames shall not hurt thee, I only design
Thy dross to consume and thy gold to refine."

At 7 a. m. Br Sanford got up the Indian ponies, and we sat down intending to start after breakfast, but the ponies were impatient, slipped their halters and went off at full speed. Br. Sanford darted after them, and succeeded, after a short race in recapturing them. Our appointment was twelve miles away, at Columbus, at 11 a. m., and we had just time to get there. We arrived all safe in good season. We met in the new stone S. H. Good hearing on the beatitude of Jesus. (Mat. 5:14.) I got out living truths, which gave life and power to the waiting, and stirred up the lost ones. The members of the church greeted me warmly.

At 7 p. m. met at Br. Sanford's residence. I spoke concerning "What manner of person ought you to be, seeing ye look for such things?" (2 Pet. 3: 11.) We had some waking up. Nearly all the church spoke of their faith and hope, and desired to attain the higher life. It is a hard place to maintain a religious interest, but some live and hold up the light.

Since I visited Kansas, Mr. Hammond, the evangelist, has spent some time in Topeka, Fort Scott and other cities. As usual, great numbers crowded to hear him, and multitudes were converted. In Topeka alone, it is said 800 made profession, of whom seven-eighths have already gone back to the world!

Some men have a magnetic force by which they sway the masses; but when the magnet leaves, the converts go back into the world. There is more of the human than the divine in such cases. However, some good is done that remains.

It is the same with the apostles of sanctification. The men who best succeed in this work have large magnetic force. They stir up and galvanize old backsliders, and set them to work for a higher life. But after all, unless this work is done by the truth, it will be of a short duration. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," said Jesus. It is the truth that binds, truth makes free, truth that sanctifies, and truth sets the soul at liberty.

"A large estate that soul has got,
Who buys the truth and sells it not."

From Isaac Adrian.

The cause in Iowa is advancing. Since I last wrote I have visited Manchester and preached Sunday, Aug. 11, in the Universalist house in the afternoon, and Presbyterian in the evening. A large attendance at both places, and subsequent developments give no chance to doubt the success of the effort. The Advent church is encouraged to struggle on against the opposition of the age. From Manchester I went with Br. Kenny to Greely, and held a novel grove meeting. We assembled in a beautiful grove, and for the want of seats, in this country so destitute of timber, we unhitched the horses from the wagons and drew the wagons close to each other in the form of a seated ground, and the people sat in their wagons to hear the preaching. Br. Kenny preached a stirring sermon in the morning, and I did the best I could in trying to preach in the afternoon. Some dear souls have decided for the truth. May the Lord bless them. I spoke at night in the Universalist house to a large attentive congregation, who were so much interested in the truth that they wish constant preaching of the same kind.

Tuesday morning I started for Boylan's Grove. Landed among strangers but was made welcome by Br. Overturf and his dear companion. Sr. O. is in very poor health, yet full of the blessed hope. The society is now in working order, having reorganized into an Advent Christian church. I spent two Sundays with them and had a blessed time. They are in need of the preaching of the gospel. I shall visit them again as soon as I can after attending the Lord's work in other fields. On my return I called on Dr. Tichner, of Clarksville. The doctor is almost alone in this town, as a decided Advent believer. I expect to visit Clarksville in October and hold a protracted meeting.

Arrived at the camp in season to assist in raising the tent. Felt some worn down yet determined to work. I was much disappointed in not meeting Br. Thurber, yet we were resolved to press the battle. Br. Dutton preached a stirring sermon on prayer. Br. Wilber (God bless him! I used to know him when a young man in Chicopee, Mass.) gave us some good sermons. Sr. Janes, though in feeble health, held a large audience while she threw her very soul into the work. Br. Kenny gave us one of his good sound sermons. Br. Kenny has, and deserves the respect of all classes among whom he has lived. As we moved together about the streets of Manchester and I saw the respect manifest to this man of God, I could but think of some whose boisterous profession stinks under the nose of community in consequence of their dishonesty in business matters.

In answer to our telegraphic dispatch to the Amboy meeting, Br. Cole and Ridley came, to our assistance, causing great joy. We were greatly blessed in the gifts of these two young men. The Lord was with us from the first, and the interest increased to the end. A son of Br. Nye, of Syene, Wis., with his two daughters were converted and baptised at this meeting. Our last interview on Sunday evening, was a melting season. The Lord was truly in our midst.

From Cornelius M. Davis, Wabashaw Co., Minn.

I am seeking the truth as taught by Christ and his holy apostles. Error and superstition have taken a strong hold in the minds of the mass of people. I have had the thick veil withdrawn from my eyes, and begin to see the faith as taught by the Lord Jesus and his apostles. I find that the doctrine of this present age is not apostolic or Biblé teaching, but is a falling away from the truth, and going into superstition and error. How true the perdiction has proved, that there should be a great falling away before the appearance of our Lord from heaven. How few look for Christ to come. The cry is peace! peace and safety! while sudden destruction is nigh. We hear people that profess to be Christians saying as the Bible has said they would say (2 Pet. 3: 3-4,) "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." Now dear brother, for one I feel like putting on the breast-plate of righteousness, and indeed the whole armor of God, that I may wield the sword of the Spirit and fight the battle of my Lord with his chosen weapons and nothing else. Let us faint not nor be weary in well doing; for we are to seek for glory, honor and immortality, and eternal life will be our reward.

From E. C. Bronaugh, Multonomah Co., Oregon.

I had the pleasure recently of meeting with Br. M. M. Norton who is engaged in missionary Advent preaching in this vicinity. You may imagine that it was a real pleasure when I inform you that although I have been for six years a believer in the doctrine, he is the first person with whom I ever met who had any intelligent conception of the teachings of the Bible on the subject, or any sympathy with those who embrace those teachings. I hope to be able soon to remit something for tracts for distribution here.

[We felt sure Br. Norton's mission was of the Lord. We shall see a noble cause in Oregon. Ed.

From Amelia Du Paul.

Dear old Times, how I love you. Thou hast been my comfort and friend through many days of affliction. For three months I have been deprived of the privelege of attending meeting; but I always take new courage to work for Jesus when I read the letters from those of like faith. Although some have got tired and mingle with the pleasures of the world, God help me to be more zealous, is my prayer. Although afflicted and cast down at times I am not forsaken. Oh! we have sweet promises to all that are faithful. Let us work for Jesus. Our afflictions are nothing compared with what he endured.

I praise the Lord that he sent Br. Durand here. Many read the Bible, with myself, in a new light. I have not the means to pay for The Times at present, but hope to soon. My whole trust is in the Savior, he will provide in good time for me; and, I trust, a way that I can send the glad tidings to many that have not as yet heard or received the precious truth.

From S. B. Mabry.

My heart is bound up in this glorious doctrine of the advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, and with the idea of a speedy resurrection of the dead. This is my only hope. I am willing to stand upon it, and feel that I am on the rock of truth. Jesus is coming! I want to emphasize that word. He will come "in like manner as he went away." "Every eye shall see him." The Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with the voice of the archangel and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain unto his coming shall be changed and caught up together with them (that now sleep) and meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the lord." Amen.

From Ephriam Bee, Doddridge Co., W. Va.

In August 1870, at Roane I heard Mr. Whitney preach two sermons. His first text was, "What is man?" the second was, "He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved." I thought the Lord had called him to preach. I gave him two dollars to send me the Advent Christian Times for one year. I still thought that I should see some preacher that I could have the paper still sent to me. But I have not. Enclosed I send you a money order; please send on your paper to me, and some tracts on the nature of man and future punishment. My father and mother died Seventh day Baptists. I shall soon be seventy years old. I have 15 living children 54 living grand children.

I have believed in the Advent doctrine for 30 years. I belong to no church. Two of my brothers are Seventh day Baptist preachers. I am the only man in this County that advocates the Advent doctrine.

I wish some Advent preacher that the Lord had called to preach his gospel would come here and proclaim the truth.

From Wm. Breech, Kentucky.

I wrote you a few lines some six months ago for some papers and tracts which I received. I read them and was interested. I also gave them to my neighbors and some of them have almost become Adventists. We have an old neighbor, a man 80 years of age who said he never saw any Christian work so true to the word of Christ as your publications. He wants me to send for some more of your papers and books.

I want to read and circulate your books, but I am a poor man and work by the day to maintain my large family. I will send a little now and a little at another time.

We have a great many who call themselves Christians here, but if I am any judge they are far from what the apostle Paul teaches are Christians. The word is what I preach to them, and some of them have gone to reading, and are almost convinced they are sinners. I hope to see the work go on.

From C. Pike, St. Charles, Ill.

I have been much pleased and edified with Br. Whitmore's articles in The Times on the time of the end, and am fully persuaded that much of the writing and preaching on the subject of definite time has been speculative. But there is still a wide field of investigation open upon this subject, which I would be glad to have able critics enter, and if possible explain to honest inquirers after truth what seem to be dark and mysterious passages, if they do not teach that the time of the end is revealed in such a way that it will be understood before the end comes.

While it is true that our Lord said to the disciples eighteen hundred years ago, in answer to their questions in relation to the time of the end, that "of that day and hour knoweth no man, neither the angels, nor the Son," yet he spoke in the then present tense; and to assume that he meant to say that the angels or Son would never know until the event spoken of took place, is certainly hardly reasonable, and is certainly not satisfactory to my mind.

But supposing we concede that the language used conveys this idea, that the day and hour were never to be known to any: then what was the knowledge or words which Daniel was told to "close up and seal until the time of the end?" What was it that the wise were to understand that the wicked should not? Why was this knowledge concealed up to a certain period, and then to be revealed? Of what use could a revelation be if made after the end had come? What use can be made of the periods 2300, 1335, if they are not to be understood before the end? What means the oath of the man clothed in linen, who stood upon the waters of the river and sware that it shall be for a time times and an half? (Dan. 12: 7.)

When the disciples questioned our Lord in relation to the time, why did he refer them to the prophet Daniel as a source from which to gain the desired information?

Will Br. Whitmore, or some other one, answer these questions, or give us their views touching this subject. I do not insist that all of "the wise" will understand the time, but by "wise" I think are probably meant those who by long, faithful and careful study of Scripture and history are able to understand the year of the Lord's coming. The expression in Mat. 24: 15—"Whoso readeth, let him understand," I think implies the necessity of one's reading history in order to be able to understand when the abomination that maketh desolate was set up, which was referred to by the angel, and which Jesus referred his disciples to as the only clue to the information which they desired.

This event spoken of by the angel to Daniel was minutely described and its duration given as 1335 years; yet the angel may not have known when the event would take place, though he could give details. This event was of such a nature as rendered it uncertain when the person or power alluded to could come up: but his fall was of so marked a character and so fully filled the character of the person predicted that when he fell, by running back the number of years assigned in prophecy we may find the date of his rise: and hence the reader of history is enabled to understand, if he is "wise," in the sense in which the Spirit makes use of the word, when the year of the Lord's coming arrives.

All Scripture is profitable; yet surely no one can be profited by what he cannot understand. Then all Scripture was intended to be understood by some one, some age, or generation; and as the prophecy of Daniel was sealed until the time of the end, at that time, or before the end, it must be understood.

From W. S. Covey, Jasper Co., Miss.

I received your tracts in due time and was glad to get them, for there was preaching here at that time. I handed several of them out, and the people are very much surprised and seemed to be amazed at the idea that the man dies and lies in the grave till the great day of the Lord. They say Scripture has been changed. Undoubtedly it seems so. But they have not been studying as they ought to have done. But still they are so prejudiced that they will not gve up their old views. I heard from my father a short time ago. He is well and still laboring in Arkansas to prepare a people to meet the Lord when he comes.

From L. L. Ames, Dunn Co., Wis.

I love the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who is soon coming to reign supreme over all the land, from the East to the West, from the North to the South; the very same land that God promised to faithful Abraham, and to his seed. I feel like saying that it is good to be Christ's; to be Christ-like. "For if ye are Christ's, then ye are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Brethren, let us be more faithful. Let us abide in Christ, for soon, very soon, we, with all the faithful, will be gathered to inherit that blessed land, and shall delight ourselves in the abundance of peace. I am striving to do the Master's will in all things; to live in strict obedience to his Divine will. I trust that I have consecrated all to God. I have been trying to do some good by scattering tracts. May God bless those that read, and may their eyes be opened to see the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, is my prayer. We have no Advent preaching here or near here. Pray for us.

From Edward Orr, Jackson Co., Minn.

I suppose you will begin to think that I am quite an Adventist. Well, I plead guilty to the charge, and I think if others will do as I have done, they will become Adventists too. I have never heard one sermon by an Adventist preacher, neither have I had the privilege of conversing with one; but a friend lent me his paper (The Times) and a few of your tracts. I then commenced to read and as I read I tested thh doctrine by that word which liveth and abideth forever, and hence the result: and I think I am making better headway than ever before: the "wood, hay, stubble" theology will not do in the day when it will be "revealed by fire." Give me Paul, Peter or John, or all three, if you please; but no lessons from Confucius, Plato, or Pope. Nothing but a "thus saith the Lord" is the standard by which we are to be justified or condemned. Would it not be well for Br. Braden if he would measure by this rule. I think it would. His discussion with Eld. Himes, in my opinion, would then read far better than it now does. The day may be even now at the doors that will try every man's work, of what sort it is. Let us with Paul love Christ's appearing, fight a good fight, keep the faith, looking for that blessed hope, and with Paul receive the crown of righteousness at that day. Amen and amen.

From D. C. M. Richmond, St. Joseph Co., Ind.

The new letter tract is received according to order. I am highly pleased with it, and shall use no other for letter writing, where there is any prospect of doing good by thus spreading the truth. I earnestly hope the arrangement will be extensively adopted, and thus the truth be spread and read by thousands who do not at present read anything upon the subject.

From C. J. Bales, Vermillion Co., Ill.

I wish we could get a good minister to preach here. I believe that a small church could be organised. There are large churches here of other orders. I have held the doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead and the final destruction of the wicked for about seventeen years. I do not belong to any church at present. The doctrine preached here I do not enjoy, and I don't go to hear preaching very often. I would like to hear some Adventist. We will do the best we can for him and the cause.

From P. S. W. Deyo.

I have just returned from a visit to my old home at Strawberry Point, where I lived over fifteen years. A heavy rain spoiled the basket part of the meeting, but it did not spoil the preaching. The dampness of the grove and the farewell sermon of the M. E. preacher made a thin congregation in the forenoon; but in the afternoon I had more of the village people to hear than I expected would be out. I also had the privilege of filling the desk of Eld. John Martindale, of the Disciple Church, at Greeley, which he kindly offered me with the privilege of making an appointment, which I did, and had a good hearing. I hope to be able to visit every church in the conference this year. Please give me due note of your wants.

From J. H. May, Benton Co., Ark.

I am still striving for truth, and I can say that I have great reasons to praise God for the demonstrations that we have seen by the presentation of that word which the beloved John says is mighty above all things and will prevail. It would be superfluous talk for me to tell your or any other enlightened Christian that triumphs of this truth over error, ignorance and tradition were without bitter persecution. I am surrounded by Baptists, Methodists, Disciples, and Christian Union (so-called). They all say that myself and brethren are teaching a doctrine concerning the nature of man that makes man and beast equal, because we tell them that man has no natural or inherent immortality. The Disciple brethren are now holding a meeting in my neighborhood. I had a conversation the other evening with one of their preachers upon this subject. I brought some testimony to show him that man as he now is, and as he was when God created him, was a mortal and a natural creature, and in this respect he had no superiority over any of God's animate creation: for all are mortal, all of dust, and all must return to dust again. But while this is the case, man in his natural organism is endowed with faculties which are superior to those of any beasts, which make him susceptible of receiving the revealed will of God which makes him accountable to his Creator, for the proper use of his faculties. Yet none of these faculties are immortal. He just said to me, "Br. May, if I was to believe that man had nothing that would survive death, that the whole man dies as the brute, I would burn my Bible, or throw it away." I tried to show him the obedient were promised a glorious resurrection to immortality, but he turned away, and would not listen.

But I find that every one who gives us a candid hearing and investigates our claims and doctrine, or, in other words the doctrine of God, they become our friend, and the friend of Jesus by doing whatsoever he commands.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 1, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS:—{ Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.

EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do not fail to comply with these suggestions.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.35, post-paid. The Jubilee Hymns, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

The Faith of St. Paul.

The immediate demand for this work so far exceeded our anticipations, that the first edition was exhausted ere we were aware. The second edition is in preparation, and will be ready soon. Orders will then be promptly filled.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No. 375 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post paid, for 30c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 50c.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

S B Mabey 2 S Baldwin D S Clark J Ridley O R Fassett G Howard W T Baker E N Bliss C W Shole E Nordlind T Brooks G E Lee M A Smith L H Shepard P Hitchcock I Smith E N Corgin T Johnson C Beagle J H Paton R Rupel G L Harding A G Williamson P Montgomery A P Dagger W Rouwith N C Miller C C Marston J F Huber D D Reed G T Adams E B Holmes A M Barber M M Maxwell C E Darrow T W Richards M Clagg J H Spring F C Bailey D S Burson G W Lawrence P S Hartough A S Miller C A Sumner A Farrow Arthur J Raymond M R Sayre C H Ramer E R Stebbins T Histed N H Young P Bowen G W Stetson W Branch G E Merrill D W Rook E A Mollett D M Canright T J Morgan E H Burington M E Osterhout J McMichael L D Heath S Chambers A B Cushing E C Andrus R Whitney J T Ongley A Mosher S Rosebraugh J Howland G M Myers A L Day E H Durand E Orr T W Pease E S Smith J Eaton J W Taylor W T Gilbert G M Betton M Ades H Hall J S Lawver J D Rogers S E Lanphere E C Bronaugh 2.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

M M Norton 3 E H Burington 3 W Breech S Chambers 2 E B Holmes C S Whitney A Mosher A Hale J Stoughton R W Brown G W Myers J Eaton J S Lawver Dr Jarvis J W Taylor.

Notice.

Those who have not paid their subscription to help pay the debt of the Winona church, Minn., are respectfully requested to send in the amount immediately, as the debt is due this fall, and must be paid. As I do not know the P. O. address of all who subscribed, I notify you through THE TIMES. Please let this notice be sufficient.

O. H. RAMER, Treas.
Winona, Minn.

Obituary.

PRIOR. Died Sept. 21, 1872, at his residence near Sparland, Ill., James Prior; aged 61 years, 2 months and 26 days.

He was a much respected brother in Christ. He embraced the glorious hope of endless life through Christ in Jan., 1868, in a protracted meeting by Eld. D. S. Clark. He has always been found faithful in well doing, and has gone down to the grave with cherishing hopes of an endless life when the Savior comes.

D. S. BURSON.

HARDING. At Oak Hill, Oakland Co., Mich., Sept. 21, 1872, Hiram N. M., son of G. L. and M. J. Harding, aged 8 months and 10 days.

EMMONS.—At Magnolia, Rock Co., Wis., Sept. 17, 1872, Hannah Jane, wife of John Emmons; aged 60 years and 8 months.

She came to this State from Freedom, Maine. She was converted 35 years ago last April, and has since lived a consistent Christian life. She cherished the "blessed hope," and upon her death bed expressed her faith of soon meeting her loved ones in the coming kingdom.

Words of comfort by the writer from Rev. 21: 7, "He that overcometh shall inherit all these things."

GEORGE HOWARD.

Book Notices, Etc.

Prospectus.

I am preparing an exposition of the great prophecy of Christ, uttered upon the Mount of Olives, and recorded in Mat. 24; Mark 13, and Luke 21. The general plan of the work is that followed by D. D. Buck, in "Our Lord's Great Prophecy." It is in two parts.

Part First embraces several introductory chapters on the Harmony, proving that Matthew, Mark, and Luke record the same discourse, and presenting the plan of exposition.

Part Second contains the exposition, based upon the harmonized account of the three evangelists. It is the author's purpose to make the work as complete as its limits (about 220 pp.) will allow; and those who do not endorse the exposition, will find in it much valuable and interesting matter. Among other things, the remarkable phenomena of the past few years are described, especially those occurring in "The Black and Terrible Year, 1871," and which fulfill, in part, the prediction concerning "distress of nations, with perplexity."

The work will be published as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained. Let all who desire one or more copies subscribe immediately, and send me their P. O. Address. The price will not exceed seventy-five cents; it may be much less.

All orders should be addressed to

C. H. LAVERTON, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The churches in Iowa that wish me to visit them, will please write me at Manchester, Iowa.

ISAAC ADRIAN.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

Notice.

Having closed my stated labors at DeKalb, I wish to say to brethren in destitute regions that I am at liberty and will attend to calls wherever my labors may be desired. My P. O. address until further notice, is DeKalb, Ill.

S. B. MAREY.

Notice.

My health continues very poor, and my cough is no better. I have no hopes of speedy improvement sufficient to enable me to resume public labor. I am compelled therefore, reluctantly, to ask a postponement of the proposed debate at Greenfield, Iowa. It will be physically impossible for me to attend it at the time agreed upon. I will, the Lord willing, attend to it as soon as my health will allow.

DANIEL S. CLARK.

To Western Friends.

We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work be properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 16, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object.

D. MATHEWSON,
WM. SHELDON,
WM. McCULLOCK,
DANIEL S. CLARK,
O. S. KNAPP,
FRANK BURR,
H. G. McCULLOCK.

To the West.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that the Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work.

WM. L. HIMES, Business Agent.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes.

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR

SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

[illegible]

In the Mission Tent, at 2 and 7 p. m. each day, at Bero, from Sept. 26 to Oct. 2, and at Columbus from Oct. 3 to the 6, inclusive. All are cordially invited to attend.

ARKANSAS.

Early in November, with Eld. Lawver, I shall go to Arkansas. We shall go from Cobden, Egypt, on horseback, and preach as we go, reaching Batesville about the middle of the month, and attend the Advent Conference the 20th. After this we shall spend a short time in preaching in such places as open to us.

MISSOURI.

Brookfield, Oct. 8, and over Sabbath, and not Oct. 6, as in former appointment.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour. God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors.

JOSHUA V. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MAREY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St. near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

The next Q. M. of the Neponset District will be held with the church at Toulon, commencing Thursday, Oct. 3, and holding over Sunday.

L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

Hennepin, special meeting, Oct. 6, to continue indefinitely.
Lanark, Nov. 4, 5.
Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Elida, Nov. 8-10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.

C. C. MARSTON.

Equality, Gallatin Co., as Br. Ashley may arrange, Thursday eve., Oct. 24, and continue until Nov. 2.

Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., Saturday eve., Nov. 2 and over Sunday.

Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.

Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Sunday.

Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawver may arrange.

WM. McCULLOCK.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

The next Q. M. of the DeKalb District will be held with the church in DeKalb, commencing Thursday eve. Oct. 17, and holding over Sunday.

H. G. McCULLOCK, Sec'y.

INDIANA.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of the Indiana Conference will be held at Union Mills, LaPorte Co., commencing Friday, Oct. 18 and continuing several days. The change in time from the first announcement is to enable brethren to better arrange for the Association Meeting. A general attendance is desired.

E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

Buchanan, Saturday eve., Oct. 5, and onward as the Lord may direct. MILES GRANT.

The first Q. M. of the Eastern District will be held with the A. C. church in Almont, Lapeer Co., commencing Thursday, Oct. 3, at 2 p. m. and continue over Sunday. We extend to the friends a cordial invitation, and hope for a full attendance of men and women imbued with the Good Spirit. We expect to have our chapel ready for use on this occasion. J. H. PATON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

The first Q. M. of the North Missouri and Southern Iowa Conference will be held with the Corydon church, at the Chester S. H., four miles east of Corydon, Wayne Co., Iowa, commencing Friday, Oct. 11, at 7 p. m.

As this is our first Q. M., we would like to see as many of the brethren and friends as can meet with us. We would be glad to see Eld. N. C. Miller, and as many of the ministers as can come. Br. Gibson is expected.

L. Z. LOTSPEICH, Sec'y.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Rose S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The first Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa, Machester District, is to be held at Six Mile Grove, in Horton Township, Bremer Co., commencing Thursday, Oct. 10, at 7 p. m. and holding over Sunday. All the friends of Jesus are invited to be there, to work for God and the salvation of precious souls, for whom Jesus died. Br. I. Adrian is expected to be there, with the tent, if the weather will permit.

M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

Plainview, Bentley S. H., 7½ p. m., Oct. 5, and 10½ a. m. Oct. 6.

Viola, Stone S. H., 2½ and 7½ p. m., Oct. 6.

Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Thursday eve., Oct. 10.

Alma City, Waseca Co., Saturday eve., Oct. 12, 7½ o'clock.

Freedom, Converse S. H., 10½ a. m., Oct. 13.

Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2½ and 7½ p. m.

Kasota, Thursday eve., Oct. 15.

S. C. WELLCOME.

NEW YORK.

The fourth Q. M. of the A. C. church of Honeoye, Ontario Co., N. Y., will commence Friday, Oct. 4, and continue over the Sunday following. Sr. E. S. Jennings or others are expected to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in adjoining towns are cordially invited to attend.

H. H. BROWN,
O. B. BROWN.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Muncy, Lycoming Co., Oct. 3, 4.
Quaker Hill, Oct. 5, 6.
Canton, Bradford Co., Oct. 9.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., Oct. 10-13.
East Troy, Oct. 15, 16.
South Creek, Oct. 17. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

Advertisements.

The Estey Organ. Any person wishing to procure a splendid, new, Estey Organ or Melodeon, at a great bargain, can learn particulars by addressing this office.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $800, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $35. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 56 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding........................50c
Morocco "........................75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 486, Concord, N. H.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

WANTED.

AGENTS TO SELL OUR NEW WINDOW LOCKS, THE NEATEST, BEST, AND MOST DURABLE MADE.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

(1) It is perfectly self-adjusting; any child can use it. (2) It holds the window at any point without cutting or notching the casing in the least; and holds the window firmly down by a single notch in the casing. (3) It neither wears or even blackens the casing, whether painted or varnished. (4) No cutting, notching or boring required to attach the lock. It is secured to the sash by one screw.

Those wishing a good, and very profitable business will do well to write us, enclosing 25c. for sample and postage on the same. Address:

NOVELTY SASH LOCK CO.,
(c39m1) Box 101, LAINGSBURG, Mich.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

[illegible] Re- Prof. Whiting - p 78.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledg shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 10. CHICAGO, OCTOBER 8, 1872. WHOLE NO. 441.

Advent Christian Times.

A Theological Conversation.

The Unitarian Herald gives its readers a report of a conversation between a Unitarian and an Independent minister, which occurred during a ride upon an English railway. We quote a passage relating to the doctrine of future punishment:

After a while we diverged into the question of future punishments, and on that I expressed myself in rather strong language. I said, "I am delighted to see that many Independents are giving up the eternity of future punishment, and opening a door in hell for the sun to shine through, or else letting the wicked find rest in annihilation. What's your own opinion?"

"Mine?" answered he. "I lean to the side of mercy. I think Mr. Maurice is the greatest theologian this age has seen. But the old men among us, as a rule, like hard and bitter doctrines. Some of the young men are liberal, but they have very up-hill work. Calvin is a heavy weight."

"So he is," said I, "a perfect Old Man of the Sea. You must do as Sinbad did with his enemy—throttle him, and march on in liberty. As to Mr. Maurice, the best part of his theology is the Unitarian element he inherited, and the worst is the Prayer-book dogmas which were grafted on his youthful Unitarianism, and which he spent a noble, but, in my opinion, a mistaken life in vainly trying to explain away. But why do not you Liberal Independents make a decided and organized stand against that awful and worse than atheistic superstition of an endless hell?"

He shrugged his shoulders. Then he made a minute's meditative pause. Then he locked out of the window on the beautiful day. Then he puffed at his cigar as if profoundly enjoying it, and praised the brand. Then he replied to my still waiting query, "What can we do? We do all we can, and I am sorry to say that's not much. We ignore the doctrine of eternal punishment. We don't deny it. Many of our people could not bear the denial. Besides, we can't keep going out of our way to deny everything we don't believe. We preach the goodness of God and the love of Christ, and hope that in time these affirmations will exhaust the semblance of life in the old lie. It's scarcely worth while throwing stones at what is dying of itself."

"That's slow work," I said. "I believe the wisest way to treat error is to knock it on the head. Think of the harm it does while it lasts. Think of its subtle poison, its nightmare terrors, its cruelty to man, its libel on God."

"All true enough, apparently," he said. "In some moods I feel inclined to go as far as you, and am tempted to be quite as positive as you are. But then I can't always see my way, and so prefer holding my tongue. I don't say it's true, and I don't say it isn't true. I let it alone. After all it's not the only puzzle. Sin itself, the very existence of sin, is the great difficulty to my mind. How do you reconcile that with your perfection of God? If he permits sin for a moment, he may, for ought I know, permit it forever. I can't say I believe he does, and I hope he does not. But there, at any rate, is the equal mystery."

"Not at all," I replied. "The mysteries are by no means equal. There is a world-wide difference between sin for a moment and sin forever. The first passes away like that puff of smoke. It obscures the sky temporarily, but it's lost again in the clear daylight. The last is a total and enduring eclipse of the sun. When I have risen above the individual sins, I can even see some wise meaning of beneficence in their very permission. They've braced me and educated me. Doubtless I might have been better still without them, but they are not altogether evil. Sins that are outgrown may be stepping-stones to piety; but sins that endure eternally, that cannot be abandoned, that are nourished for ever, just that they may be tormented forever, these I cannot see a shadow of good in."

"Never mind discussing that any more," he said. "It's likely enough that at the bottom we agree, only I get at the good by affirming the good and say nothing about the evil. You get at it by affirming the good and denying the evil."

The Claims of Romanism.

A correspondent of the Journal and Messenger, in a criticism of Dr. Hodge, gives some facts of interest concerning the great apostasy:

"There is none other name given under heaven whereby we may be saved but the name of Jesus." Rome does not teach this vital truth. Let me say that I go to Rome herself for her doctrines, to her own books, in their original language, whatsoever it may be. "As to our own merits," says the Council of Trent (Sess. 6, Cap. 10, Can. 25), "a man by good works is justified. Men are justified by good works appointed by the Church." As to our one Mediator the Litany of Loretto calls Mary the "Ark of the Covenant and Refuge of Sinners;" and St. Amadeo says that "she continually stands before the face of God interceding for us." "The Church of Rome," says the Doctor, "proclaims the divine authority of Scripture." Per contra, she says, "The word of God derives all its authority from the Pope." (Tetzel, Ekias et Prierias.) "The reading Scripture without the traditions of the Church makes the gospel of Jesus Christ the gospel of the devil." (Arnend, Defense de Ver., p. 63.) "Without the tradition of the Church I would value Matthew no more than Livy." (Brille S. S. Bellarmine de verb. Dei non Script, Lib. I. Cap. 4.) As to morality, Rome teaches (Martinet Rel. in Soc., Cap. 56, 57) that Mary is ever to be worshiped. "Images are to be reverenced and worshiped." (Council of Trent, Sess. 25.) "Religious worship is due to God and the saints." (Bellarmine De Sanctor, Book I. Cap. 12.) "To swear out of lightness or vanity is innocent." (Bonacien Tom. 2.) "To disobey parents is a venial error." (See Sylvestre, Graffis and Sotus.) "To kill a heretic is nothing." (De Graffis, l. c. xi., n. xii.) "Christiano habere licitum, certe loco uxoris concubinem." (Pithon's Canon Law approved by Gregory XIII.) "Civil contracts, oaths, promises or agreements with heretics are to be broken." (Canon 14.) "It is lawful to steal in necessity." (Sessions on Justice, Book II. Chap. 12; also many others.) "Calumny, though grounded on absolute falsities, is not a mortal sin, either against justice or charity." (Dicastillo, De Justitia Desprit 12, Num. 404.)

Leaves From the Flames.

Rev. Mr. Chamberlain, pastor of the New England Congregational church in Chicago, relates that at the time when they were most afflicted by the loss of their beautiful edifice, a singular circumstance became known, which greatly cheered and encouraged them to put forth the most strenuous efforts to obtain the necessary means to rebuild. It seems that among the debris two bits of printed paper were found, one of which proved to be the only remaining fragment of a Bible, and the only legible portion was this verse from 2 Cor. 5: 1:—

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens."

The other was a scrap from the hymn book, upon which was printed hymn 1160 of Songs of the Sanctuary:"—

"Daughter of Zion! from the dust
  Exalt thy fallen head:
Again in thy Redeemer trust,
  He calls thee from the dead.

* * * * * * * *

Rebuild thy walls, thy bounds enlarge,
  And send thy heralds forth;
Say to the south, 'Give up thy charge,
  And keep not back, O north.'"

Mr. W. D. Bancker is said by the New York Tribune to have brought from Chicago a curious memorial of the great fire. Among the ruins of the Western News Company's establishment, where an immense stock of periodicals and books was reduced to ashes, there was found a single leaf of a quarto Bible, charred around the edges. It contained the first chapter of the Lamentations of Jeremiah, which opens with the following words: "How doth the city sit solitary that was full of people! how has she become as a widow! she that was great among nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary! She weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are on her cheeks: among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her." That was the only fragment of literature saved from the News Company's great depot.

"We read years ago," adds an exchange, "of a similar instance which, it is said, occurred at the burning of the Methodist Book Concern in New York, in the great fire of 1835. A single charred leaf of a large Bible was blown over to Long Island where it was found, the only legible reading on which was the passage from Isaiah 64: 11, 'Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee, is burned up with fire; and all our pleasant things are laid waste.'"—Sel.

THE SECOND ADVENT.

THE LAST PROMISE AND THE LAST PRAYER.

The following remarks upon the Advent are from the Christian Observer, the leading Presbyterian journal South. The vast importance of the subject is admitted; yet the question which opens the article is left unanswered. We have no hesitation in saying the second advent is not made as prominent in the Presbyterian, or any other Evangelical church, as in the New Testament; for the excellent reason that another doctrine has taken its place. Belief in rewards at death and vital interest in the second advent cannot long coexist. The article contains the inevitable disclaimer as to "time;" but, as an orthodox view of an all important Bible doctrine, will be perused with interest. It is valuable as a testimony that the church is under conviction concerning this point. The Observer says:

1. Is the second coming of Christ made as prominent in the pulpits of the Presbyterian Church as it is in the New Testament? It is undoubtedly a truth revealed by the highest authority that Christ will come again in person to this world where he taught thousands, wrought miracles, suffered, died, rose from the dead, and triumphed over sin, death and hell. He spake of his coming again repeatedly during his ministry. In his last discourse to his disciples before his death, he repeated the promise that he would come again. And some fourscore years after his ascension to heaven, he again repeats the promise to his servant and apostle, John, while he was in exile on Patmos.

The last promise recorded in the Holy Scriptures is the promise of the second advent. "Surely (he says) I come quickly." It is also the last prayer of the Church, which by the apostle responds, "Amen. Even so, come Lord Jesus." The prayer is the echo of the promise. "What comes from heaven (says Henry) in a promise, should be sent back to heaven in a prayer." "Come Lord Jesus." Put an end to this state of sin, sorrow and temptation. Gather thy people out of this present evil world, and take them up to heaven, that state of perfect purity, peace and joy, and fulfill all the word in which thou hast caused thy people to hope." It is the second advent here promised which the Apostle Paul directs us to look for, designating it as "that blessed hope—the glorious appearing of the great God, even our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

After his resurrection, as he ascended to heaven, he promised his ministers his gracious presence, to be with them "till the end of the world;" and now at the close of the revelation given to his Church, he renews the promise before made to his disciples that he will come again.

2. When will he come? This has been the inquiry of many in our times, as it was also in past ages of the Church. Many students of prophecy, besides Dr. Cumming, of London, have endeavored to ascertain the period, the time when he will appear, and have made calculations, as if the inquiry is to be answered by interpretations of prophecy. A similar inquiry was made to Christ in person by his disciples, shortly after his resurrection. His reply to them seems not to have been considered either by the ancient Church, or by many of his servants in our times. To his disciples he said. "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father has put in his own power."

The Bible is a wonderful book in what it conceals from human curiosity as well as in what it reveals. The incarnation of the Son of God is a wonderful truth, revealed to faith; and it is eminently practical in the duties of life. But it is not important for us to know whether few or many are to be saved, in order to engage earnestly in the work and service of God. Neither is it important for us to know the precise time when Christ shall come in the glory of the Father to consumate the work of the redemption of his people. Such knowledge, if possessed by the world, might impair the moral influence of his coming. It is enough for us to know assuredly that he will come again, "to judge the world in righteousness," and that "every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." But the time of his coming is not for us to know at present. The announcement that he will come should awaken hope, and create in the minds of men the expectation that they will see the Son of God on earth, and inspire the wicked with holy fear, knowing as they should know, that his enemies will then call to the rocks and mountains to fall on them and "hide them from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb."

We are aware that there are those who will say, as did the scoffers of old, "Where is the promise of his coming, for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation?" The promise of his coming is in the book of the revelation of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who affirms, "I am He that liveth and was dead; and behold I am alive forevermore." And though with him, "one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." He will come sooner than his enemies desire to see him, sooner than they expected him, sooner than they will be prepared to meet him; from whose face the earth and the heavens will flee away, and there will be found no place for them. We shall not attempt to answer their inquiry as to the time of his coming, for we think it is not revealed. And we are by no means sure that the world will be converted to God before he appears. But though he is silent in regard to the day of his advent, He has explicitly informed us that "the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night," when he is not expected. The apostle Peter reaffirms this prophecy. "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works therein, shall be burned up." To many it will be a day of mourning and sorrow. The evangelists teach that "then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." We cannot attempt to describe the majestic, awe-inspiring scene. The words of inspiration speak of it as transcendently glorious above everything ever witnessed on earth.

For what purposes will he come again to the earth? The Apostle Paul answers, "He will come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." He will come to "judge the world in righteousness," and render to every man according to his works. He will come to receive his people to himself, that where he is there they may be also, and that he may confer on them the glory which he sought for them in earnest prayer on the eve of his sufferings. He will come to illustrate the perfections and glory of God in the highest, in the fulfillment of all the promises made to his Church and accomplish all the purposes of God, revealed in his word.

Christians, then, should know as a truth, inspiring joyful hope, that Christ will come again; that his appearing will be majestic and glorious; and that he will come to accomplish the most high and glorious and holy purposes. On these points the Scriptures are most explicit. These are things which God has made known to his people. But in regard to the precise time when he will come; whether to-day or next year; whether at the close of long expected millennium, when the knowledge of the Lord shall be diffused over the earth, and all shall know him; or whether his coming will usher in the glories of that day, are questions on which we have no opinions to offer. It might gratify curiosity to have these questions solved; but could their solution make our present duty more plain or more important to us or to others, than it has already been made in almost every part of the Bible? Instead of bewildering ourselves in the study of unrevealed mysteries which abound in the works of God, no less than in his word, let us rejoice in the light and in the work of God assigned to us. "This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent."
—Christian Observer.

Personal Experience.

All personal experience should harmonize with Bible doctrine to be of any permanent value before God. Any feelings or deeds that fall short of a Bible standard of duty or privilege are faulty, and any that go beyond or outside of it are very pernicious.

Upon the subject of holiness the same care should be exercised as with other subjects. I am satisfied that Satan has taken advantage of many persons who would seek for this pure condition, and persuaded them to run too far in the matter, so as to be deceived in their own minds, and then to fall back into a worse state than at first. People have been led to think that when sanctified wholly they could never sin again nor be even tempted, and the invariable result to my observation of such deception has been that the person so deceived has always gone into deep sin and fallen low.

Knowing this, I have always endeavored carefully to avoid any extreme sensations or developments, lest I too be led away. And my purpose is the same even now, with this exception, that where I have Bible ground to stand upon I will not fear. I have always supposed that the prevalence of sin would abide with us in the flesh while mortal, and that a civil warfare must be carried on by the Christian in order to keep down the "old man" and not let the flesh rule, but be led by the Spirit. I supposed sin in the flesh to be like an ugly dog in the yard, who would make no trouble as long as he was kept chained, and who must be watched that he did not break his chain and get loose. I did not think of killing the dog. I supposed that mortal flesh must necessarily be sinful flesh. This is where I erred.

While walking up Lake Street in Chicago one day this summer with one of our brethren, and talking about the "outward man" and the "inner man," I was asked to the effect that if the "outward man" dwelt in the flesh, whether it was not really inside after all as much as at any time, and that if we "put off the old man," could he still be in us, or on us? These things set me thinking on this subject as never before, and I went direct to my Bible to learn its teachings, and there I found a new experience taught me, such as I had deemed impossible, namely, bodily purity and holiness, and entire spiritual sanctification, and perfect rest in Christ, and an abiding power to keep me pure and blameless in body, "having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." The reader who is interested can turn to the following passages on this point: Rom. 12 : 1; Eph. 2 : 17, 21; 1 Cor. 6 : 15; 1 Thes. 5 : 23, 24. The New Testament abounds in this teaching, but I refer to these as plain specimens.

You may ask why I did not see this before. I can only answer, I wonder I did not, and only wish I had. Doubtless, prejudice had much to do with it. But thank God I have seen it. I then saw that this purity coming by God's Spirit must be a gift of grace, and could not be worked into. And as a gift, it must be sought for to be obtained. Faith and entire consecration were necessary on my part, and the work of the Spirit upon my flesh was necessary on God's part.

I was not backslidden. I loved God, and felt I was his child, and was blessed of him, but the dog was in the yard. I had great peace, but it was because the dog was chained. He was there, oftentimes howling, and I was always afraid of him lest he would get loose.

I now proposed that this dog, "the body of sin," should be destroyed. I was in earnest. I prayed. God gave me sweet assurance in prayer that I was his child, but this was not enough. I wanted to be "filled with all the fullness of God." God tested my faith many days. I set the time at last when I said to him that I must be filled. But my time was not his. I must give up to him. Many days passed on. God blessed me wonderfully in preaching, but I was not satisfied. I was well aware that when the Holy Spirit took possession of my flesh, my flesh would be sensible of it, and until that was done I would pray for it, if it was for a lifetime.

Then I signed the blank. In other words, I said, "Lord, any way, any time, any place, but I will not stop praying for it—I will not let thee go except thou bless me." Coming to this condition of mind I did not have to wait long. As I commenced the exercises of a regular prayer meeting on Tuesday evening, the 13th day of August, 1872, while I was praying, the Lord sent the cleansing power and filled my body with his Spirit. I felt it through my whole being as a sensible power in my flesh. It filled me and took entire possession of me. I rejoiced greatly. Who would not rejoice at receiving that which was so precious, and which they so earnestly desired? Others rejoiced with me, but no others felt at that time what I did.

From that time until now the same power has abode with me. I had been baptised by the Holy Spirit before, but never cleansed, sanctified in body by it until then. I had peace before, because the inner foes were quiet, but never before felt my flesh filled with the fullness of God.

You may ask if I was converted before, I would say, if you mean pardoned of past sins and received into the family of Christ, I answer, yes. If you mean cleansed in body, and indwelling sin removed, I answer, I was not. If you mean made immortal, I answer, I am not yet converted. Conversion, in Bible language, sometimes means any one of these, and sometimes all of them, and sometimes some other things.

Is this cleansing necessarily a second work of the Holy Spirit upon the child of God? It was to me, for the reason that I did not seek it at first, and never sought it for my flesh until lately. And if any of you feel evidence of pardon and still realize a warfare in the flesh, you need a second work. And when Jesus comes you will need still more, namely, immortalizing, and you will get it. But if any think that pardon and cleansing come together, let them come. But above all things, let us be without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.

And now, if any reader feels a spiritual lack, let him or her go in faith and full consecration, and seek for the fullness until it is obtained.

In my next and closing article on this series, I will speak on the condition of perfect holiness, or "how to be kept." FRANK BURR.

Nearer to God.

This is the sentiment of every Christian heart. It is the unwavering desire of all who love the Savior, to get nearer and still nearer to him. This is natural and it is right.

It is not best to "follow the Savior afar off," as did Peter. How many hearts can respond to this sentiment! The chilling frosts of these outskirt regions of Christianity, are anything but pleasant. Better by far be in the inner circle, where the warming rays of the Sun of righteousness shall shine with full power upon your heart. Here the saint of God grows up like the tree planted by the river, clad with green foliage and burdened with luscious fruit. But if you stay away in the background, where you do not feel the warming influence of God's love beaming into your heart, ere you are aware of it, you will be frozen fast to some iceburg of formality or indifference, and in the end "become a castaway."

There is no danger of getting too near to God, but there is danger of thinking we are nearer than we really are. The idea is prevailing in some parts, that it is possible for us to get so near to our heavenly Father, as that we cannot get any nearer to him. And some even profess to be in this state, and therefore renounce the beautiful and gospel hymn that begins with:

"Nearer my God to thee."

Now this, it appears to me, is a false position, and there is danger ahead when the lovers of Jesus allow themselves to become hallucinated by it. To other sincere minds it may appear differently, but looking at it from my standpoint, it is certainly a dangerous position to occupy. The person's own individual success and safety as a Christian is endangered by it in my opinion. For instance: when a man is fully persuaded in his own mind that he is as near Christ, and therefore as nearly like him as it is possible for him to be, will not that conviction produce in his mind a moral apathy and lethargy, and have a tendancy to make him a sluggard? My reader says no, perhaps. But it seems to me if I were fully convinced that I was as good as I could be, in order to be consistent with my conviction, I should have to cease making efforts towards improvement and advancement. And then again, it seems to me that if I should cease working, I would become a sluggard, or drone in God's service. So then it is a dangerous position in that it imperils our own Christian safety.

We are exhorted in the Scriptures of truth, to "draw nigh to God," and there is no inspired law declared so far, that I have heard of, to disannul, or make void, this most wholesome admonition. It should therefore be the continual motto of our lives to draw near to the Lord. Let us be very careful not to exalt ourselves, for if we do, we shall be abased; let us rather humble ourselves that in due time we may be exalted.

C. C. MARSTON.

A Word for our Table.

Who does not remember that when the light of these great last day truths broke into our minds, how honestly we thought they were so clear, that any one would receive them as soon as we presented them; but how often did we find ourselves mistaken, and then our only course was to furnish reading matter, and so, often those who would not listen to us have read and re-read argument in this form until the truth has fastened itself in their minds and brought forth fruit.

How many are kept alive by the food that is carried to them in our publications, the Lord only knows, doubtless a great many, and well there may be; that loaf out of Whitmore's basket, in connection with that savory dish called "Good Tidings," brought along by those caterers for God's people, Himes, Sheldon, Grant, and Couch, is enough to furnish a good square meal to any poor hungry soul that has come to learn that immaterialism is nothing-ism, and that in theology, as in nature, we must have substance, or die.

Then there are side-tables loaded: "Voice of the Church," "Plan of Redemption," "Futurity," "First-Day Sabbath," "Future Punishment by Constable"—a constable ought to understand the law and its penalty, certainly—and too numerous to mention are the choice varieties of—not wines and liquors that old soakers look for in every modern church feast, but—books, pamphlets, tracts, &c., from the pens of big preachers, issued from THE TIMES office, Scriptural Tract Repository, Crisis office, and by Br. Wellcome in Maine.

Now somebody is waiting to get hold of these dishes that are so good, something that is not "spiced" and "doctored" until the simplicity of the gospel is doubted.

Question: will you pass that bashful friend a dish? Remember the cup of cold water story.

Let us work while life lasts or the Master tarries, doing all that is commanded: soon shall we feast in the kingdom, at the Lord's table.

L. F. COLE.

Doctrinal Preaching.

The gospel cannot be preached without doctrinal statements. Sensible people do not expect it to be done. Hearts imbued with the spirit of Christ feast on the doctrine of Christ, and gather new strength for duty and trial as they treasure the truth. But somehow or other an unaccountable prejudice has made headway in the church against doctrinal preaching. It is, however, a mere prejudice, the offspring of thoughtlessness, and should not deter any true minister from holding forth the word of life, as he understands it.

Rhetorical splurges on moral questions should not be allowed to take the place of bold, faithful descriptions of human guilt and danger; nor should scientific lectures displace the exposition of the sacred text. The age of "itching ears" has come. Young men and maidens frown the moment the preacher launches into theology. Their frown is sometimes potent. Its influence too often reaches the pulpit, and he whose face should be flint to defend the right, feels strange misgivings when visions of coming remonstrances flit before his imagination. It is laudable to wish to please. He who does not please, can scarcely hope to profit his hearers. Such reasoning leads to compromises, and these to further concessions, until the glow of manhood fades, and spiritual independence succumbs to the imperious mandates of worldly prudence. And then indeed is the pulpit muzzled. The preacher reflects the mind of the people. He fears to do otherwise. Unpalatable truths are shut out. The gospel is multiplied. Instead of the "sincere milk of the Word" to nourish babies in Christ, or the "strong meat" for those whose spiritual sense are exercised so as to need it, the juiceless husks of human learning, or the tinsel of rhetoric, or the flowers of a beautiful style, are dealt out to souls famishing for the bread of life. There is too much of this in the church. It is laying waste the fairest fields of the Lord's heritage.

The church needs doctrines. Without them she will perish, in spite of wealth, and numbers, and culture. We do not mean disputes and wrangling, but doctrines. What God says to man, of sin, and of the devil, must be repeated and enforced. The office and mission of Christ must be explained and defended. The work of the Holy Ghost, as it relates to the impenitent, the seeker, and the believer, must be kept before the mind. The dread realities of retribution in eternity must be held up for warning and reproof. Can he be faithful who speaks lightly of these things? Can the church prosper where they are distasteful? Will not God hold both ministers and people to account if truth falls in the streets, because the flippant outcry against doctrinal preaching has been raised?—Western Advocate.

The Authority of our Moral Nature.

The Independent, in closing a brief notice of the first volume of Dr. Hodge's Systematic Theology, remarks:

Reason, however, or the reasoning faculty, is not the only faculty to be employed in ascertaining and defining what the revelation is which God has recorded. Dr. Hodge tells us: "It is not to be denied that great authority is due to our moral nature in matters of religion." "It is conceded that nothing contrary to reason can be true. But it is no less important to remember that nothing contrary to our moral nature can be true." (p. 7.) So, in another place our author speaks of certain "first truths which God has implanted in the constitution of all moral beings, and which no objective revelation can possibly contradict." (p. 10.) What shall we say, then, if we find that what was once accepted as a valid interpretation has evolved from the Bible and has even incorporated into traditionary systems of theology some dogma which is "contrary to our moral nature," and which (in the present meaning of its terms) actually contradicts those "first truths" which no objective revelation can possibly contradict? Must we not take refuge in the broad and hopeful principle propounded on another page? "Theologians are not infallible in the interpretation of Scripture. It may, therefore, happen in the future, as it has in the past, that interpretations of the Bible, long confidently received, must be modified or abandoned." "This change of view as to the true meaning of the Bible may be a painful trial to the church; but it does not in the least impair the authority of the Scriptures. They remain infallible. We are merely convicted of having mistaken their meaning." (p. 59.)

We will not take it upon ourselves to say what topics treated in this volume will be or ought to be discussed very carefully by orthodox theologians of various Protestant denominations. Let us hope that, whatever those topics may be, the discussion will be conducted, not in the spirit of excision or of mutual distrust, but in the spirit of love; rising above the petty interests of sects and parties; humbly remembering that "theologians," Old School and New School alike, "are not infallible in the interpretation of Scripture;" ready to learn as well as to teach and convince; and earnestly striving to make the theology of the coming age more intelligent, more sound, more disentangled from the traditions and commandments of men, and more accordant with the simplicity of the gospel of Christ.

Eternal Misery Inconsistent with the Divine Love.

Is eternal punishment [misery] consistent with the nature of God, that nature being love, being that of a father. Would a loving father condemn a disobedient child to suffer the most intense suffering forever? to secure the order of the universe he might be forced thus to punish, but this not because he loved his children; justice or necessity might compel such a course. Another element comes in just here.

If God to sustain the order of the universe were comqelled to eternally punish his disobedient children, as he knows everything, and before his children come into existence knows their fate, he certainly is not compelled to continue the peopleing of hell's dreary realm. If only those are saved who come to Jesus, is that God who continues to bring into the world those whom he knows are doomed to eternal torture, is he loving? If words have any meaning, if we understand in the least what the significance of love is, then such a being is no loving Father, but a devil who gloats over suffering, who smells the smoke of eternal torment as a sweet perfume. Eternal punishment [misery] is utterly inconsistent with Divine love, at least the continued creation of beings doomed to hell is inconsistent with love. A God who continues this horrible work is worse than Moloch. I know that I shall be pointed to earthquakes, hurricanes and pestilences, and asked, if they are consistent with God's love; and I answer unhesitatingly, Yes. Suffering, even death, may be allowed and ordered by love. But eternal torment never.

Any suffering which sometime has an end, however intense and severe, may be inflicted by a being who loves the sufferer; but that which never has an end can not result in good to the criminal. If you say God must thus punish to sustain the order of the moral universe, you limit his power; if you say he chooses to thus punish, you deny his love.—Cor. Star in the West.

Sanctification.

[After penning some thoughts on this bject recently, we found very nearly ne same ideas expressed by a corespondnt of the Crisis, which we cordially ommend to the attention of our readrs. Ed.]

I have for a long time felt deeply the ecessity of light on the subject of sanctification, and greatly rejoice to see such walking up to write and talk, and I ope feel, about it. I have watched close- y what has been written, and feel afraid he subject is not clearly understood by nany. There seems to be such a anging on to former teachings,—that person can be a Christian, justified, or a salvable state, without being sanctied. Why, the very meaning of the ord shows that we cannot be justified rom personal sins without sanctifying urselves; and when this is done on ur part, is God slack to perform his? No, verily.

To sanctify is to set apart for a holy r religious use. This must be done y us, and God never fails to accept he offering the moment it is made. This setting apart is nothing more or ess than a giving up of all to God, a eeling of the heart which says—

'Here, Lord, I give myself away,
'Tis all that I can do."

yield my will to be controlled by hine. The very moment we feel in ur heart to say, "Not my will, but hine, O Lord, be done," in everything, hat moment we have done our part f the work of sanctification for the ime being, and God accepts and sets s apart for work in his service, and gives his Spirit as a seal, or witness. This Spirit brings peace and joy.

Now does any brother or sister who as received this blessing believe there was ever a real conversion to God without this giving or yielding of the will to God's will? All say, No. Well, heory calls this justification, but what ore can we ever do? We have given p all; we have nothing more to give, r consecrate. God requires no more. But, says one, there is a second consecration necessary, as is proved by so any witnesses. I answer, Because hey have taken the sacrifice from the ltar, and must do their first work over gain.

I have had many years' experience and some of it very bitter) on this subect. It took me a long time to undertand the truth, but I now know wheref I affirm. There is a shorter and ore direct way to sanctification than o frame a ladder and point out the teps one by one; just one short step, nd one alone, can bring you there, whether you be sinner, church member, r minister. Submit your wills to God's will; let God choose for you, and then follow where he leads. But ow can I do this? Just as you have old the sinner, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Believe when God says he will direct thy steps, if you trust in him and acknowledge him in all your ways. Read Prov. 3:5, 6, "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." Believe it. You can search yourself by the text. Are you willing, yea, anxious, that God should direct you in everything, in dress, where you go, and in what you say and do; and to say, whether in sunshine or shadow? All is well. If you are sure you are willing to be directed by God, believe he will, then take the first step you see and go forward, trusting and stepping, stepping and trusting.

Again we read in the Bible, "God is a very present help in time of need." Venture out on that, fearing nothing; in short, believe all the promises, but be sure you comply with the conditions. Look at yourself and see that you can make yourself no better with all the steps and efforts that you can make, for all your "righteousness is as filthy rags." Every moment you wait to prepare, you are further away from God.

If your all is not this moment consecrated to God, where are you? Did God ever accept half an offering, and the rest retain for the offerer's own use? Think of Ananias and Sapphira. If you were ever converted to God you made this entire consecration, for you could not become a Christian without it. Then if your will, and of course your all (for your will stands at the head of your all), is not this moment consecrated to God, it is because you have taken the sacrifice from the altar; and will God accept you in this condition? Why, do you not see that you are rebelling against his will? and yet do you hope you are a Christian?

What better are you than one who has never made a profession, when the apostle says, without "holiness" no man shall "see the Lord"? Do you still claim the name of Christian? But you say, I try to do my duty, and sometimes enjoy meetings, and am happy. So do many Spiritists, and others who are deceived. Try yourself by the word—"If you have not the Spirit of Christ, you are none of his." (Rom. 8:9.) You can know for a certainty if you have this Spirit, for you will assuredly bear the fruits thereof, which are "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." "For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, and righteousness, and truth." Do you manifest these fruits? Is your peace unbroken by opposition, scoffs, or ridicule, or by petty trials at home in your family? Dig deep and lay your foundation sure.—H. A. P. Gilbert.

Another Annual Visit.

Perhaps it will interest some of the dear ones whom I so recently met to learn that I arrived safely home to-day and found all glad and grateful, with myself, to our kind heavenly Father for my return to mingle again with loved ones at home. I arrived in Cincinnati three weeks ago yesterday, called on several friends of like precious faith, among whom were Prof. Brown and wife, and Br. Shipley, whom I found strong in "the faith once delivered to the saints." At Cumminsville, my son's home, I found them all well and happy to again see their mother. I had a joyous interview with several friends, particularly with Eld. Beardslee and his accomplished wife, who both rejoice in the blessed hope of a soon-coming Savior.

We heard that an Advent sermon was to be preached in the First Baptist church in Cincinnati on the coming Lord's day, and of course we who so much desire the return of the "absent Nobleman," hastened to the place where the glad tidings of our Savior's coming was to be preached by a reputed Baptist minister. We were much pleased with many things said in the sermon, some of which I will repeat. He remarked to his audience "that there were several reasons why they were not informed on this glorious subject: one was they had expected light from the pulpit, they had expected instruction from the ministry; but the ministry had been silent on this point, had wholly ignored and passed it by. Another was that among those who had investigated these precious truths, there had been persons of extreme views who had set the time for the Savior's coming, and the time passed away without their prophecy being fulfilled, and hence they were disappointed, and many became disgusted and laid the whole subject aside as unworthy of their attention." And here let me say, I felt the force of these remarks and knew them to be true; and I hope that those honest and earnest but too sanguine brethren will never let the cause again suffer by stating positive time, as it can do no good and may do much harm in the future as it has done in the past. But let it be our aim to live in constant readiness for our coming Lord.

Much more of importance was said in the sermon that I cannot now notice. I took the good man by the hand at the close of the service and rejoiced with him that I had heard an Advent sermon from a Baptist pulpit in Cincinnati, my own native place.

The next day I went to South Pendleton, where I met Dr. Tibbets and his faithful wife, and the two sisters Lowry, who are so untiring in their labors of love for the cause of truth and the spread of the gospel. Oh! what a feast of fat things I had with those dear ones and others, also, as we together talked of our glorious inheritance and the setting up of our Savior's kingdom on the new earth.

I met Sr. Ronett, a French lady, once a Roman Catholic, but now converted to our faith. She is one of the happiest Christians I ever met, and is trying to shape her business so as to make a large donation to the Advent cause. May the Lord enable her to carry out the good design of her benevolent heart. Her delight in the truth of the Bible is beyond description, and she has strong faith that her husband, who daily bows with her in prayer, will soon walk with her in the light of God's countenance as shining through the sacred page.

We had an Advent prayer meeting at the Doctor's, where we could all freely express our views of those precious Bible truths so dear to us. The blessed cause is spreading in South Pendleton, under the living and persevering labors of the friends there. I hope yet to see an Advent church in their midst, and I think another visit like the one made by Br. Himes will bring it about.

But the time for parting came, always so painful to the dear children of God. We hope soon to meet in our Father's house, never more to be separated. Returned to the city, and met other dear friends, where the word of the Lord was also precious. I learned some things there that made my heart rejoice, particularly the fact that a prominent Baptist minister told his congregation from the pulpit that "there was no immortality out of Christ taught in the Bible;" and that he invited one of our prominent brethren to unite with them, saying, "the day had come when these questions must be met from the pulpit." Another minister resigned the pastoral care of his church that he might be free to preach the Lord's coming, and as he did so crossed his hands before them, saying, "I am now untrammeled, and feel free to preach these blessed truths; but I will remain with you if you wish until you can obtain a supply for the pulpit; and if you will not let me preach the truth here, I will preach it in the streets." I learned they would not accept his resignation, but called him again, and I trust the good faithful servant of God may now let the precious "word have free course and be glorified."

Surely such glorious news as this will comfort the hearts of the dear ones scattered abroad, who are toiling on under many privations, endeavoring to spread the glad tidings of the Savior's coming, and to rouse a slumbering world. I supplied myself with with a large bundle of tracts which I scattered broadcast as I went, and had numerous interviews with many intelligent persons, which, according to their own admission, threw more light on the sacred page than they had ever seen before. Thus it is our privilege as Christians to "sow beside all waters," leaving the result to who has said his "word shall not return to him void, but shall accomplish that whereunto he has sent it."

Stopped at Holton over the Sabbath and heard two good sermons from Dr. C. H. Cass, which cheered my heart. Then taking my seat in one of Nahum's chariots I was soon in my own home, in sight of the Volga church, so dear to my heart. Mary A. Tibbets.

The New Holy Alliance.

The meeting of the three Emperors—of Germany, of Russia, and of Austria—now holding in Berlin is an event which may well attract the attention and arouse the curiosity of Europe. Perhaps there has been no congregation of crowned heads of greater significance since the Great Powers assembled themselves together, more than fifty years ago, in the name of the "Holy and Undivided Trinity," to secure the permanent establishment of such prerogatives of despotism as had survived the earthquake of the French Revolution and the fiery whirlwind of the Napoleonic wars, that came after it. They did their work well, being wise in their generation; and it endured for a good while. But, though they could impose their will upon the kingdoms of the earth into which men were divided, their power ceased at the frontier of the kingdom within men's breasts, from which all external principle and powers proceed in the last analysis. They could not silence the still small voice which, issuing from the recesses of that kingdom, was heard prophesying the downfall of the great Babylon which they thought they were building to endure forever. And in due time decrees went forth from that kingdom within overturning dynasties, changing the outward face of Europe, annulling treaties, repealing laws, and making a very different world from that which had been ordained in 1815. And the signs of the times are still threatening in their aspect,

——"with fear of change
Perplexing monarchs."

And France is the or[illegible] of this new Holy Alliance, as [illegible] old one. Though t[illegible] Europe from another wa[illegible] no the only reason why the emperors have come together, it is certainly a prevailing one. The incapacity under which the French suffer of holding their tongues has made it notorious that they are only waiting for an opportunity to recover their lost provinces, and to wrest the frontier of the Rhine, at least, as a compensation of their defeats, if not to extort an indemnity from Prussia, within the gates of Berlin, answerable to the tribute they have themselves been compelled to pay. The union of Prussia, and Austria to the league with Italy, to establish the new map of Europe as projected by Bismark, and to combine to frustrate any attempt of France to disturb it, would present a front of resistance that even French audacity would hesitate to encounter. Such a combination of the Great Powers will undoubtedly secure the peace of Europe from any infraction in that direction for a long time, and perhaps until the thirst for revenge has been quenched by time and material prosperity. Peace is what Bismark needs most of all to consolidate his new empire, to give time for whatever of old jealousies and hatreds have survived the common glories of the French War on the part of the mediatized monarchies and duchies which have been devoured by their mightier neighbor, or are all ready for his maw, should they show any symptoms of revolt against the state of humiliation to which they have been reduced.

The fact is that Bismark is suffering from a plethora of prosperity, and requires time for the treatment and regimen which will give to the German Empire a wholesome average of political health, such as may secure to it strength and longevity. For this he must have peace, which this union of sovereigns will secure to him for a season, at least. For he has invoked a warfare which he may find it more difficult to bring to a triumphant issue than that which was ended a year and a half ago. The campaign on which he has entered must be fought out on very different fields from those of Gravelotte and Sedan, where needle-guns and Krupp's artillery will have no power over the decisions of the day. We think he realizes that it will be a hard struggle to wrestle with the rulers of the darkness of this world and spiritual wickedness in high places than against flesh and blood. He has begun the war with all the energy of his nature which he put forth against the insolent threats of Bonapart. He has suspended Monsignor Namczanawski, the chaplain general, and is in open warfare with Monsignor Krementry, the Bishop of Ermeland, whom he threatens with deprivation of his temporalities—if, indeed he has not already carried his threats into effect—in both cases for obeying the Pope, rather than the Emperor. And what is more than these things, and all that logically follow from them, he has banished the Jesuits, and all religious orders analogous to the Society of Jesus. No one knows better than he what a dangerous and wily foe he has thus arrayed against him; all the more dangerous because they rule over a domain which the secular arm cannot effectually reach The conflict is one that will be watched with the deepest interest from all quarters of the world. It may be that he is to furnish the complement of the Reformation of Luther, and reduce Romanism to the condition of a quiet sect, not concerning itself with matters outside of its own pale. But this cannot be done without a deadly resistance on the part of the Infallibleists. If this combination of earthly monarchs should help to overthrow the despotism which rests on supernatural foundations, and which still wields such power over human beings, it will better deserve the title of the Holy Alliance than the one which went before.—Independent.

The Good Religious Journal.

It cannot be a weather-cock simply telling which way the wind blows, a cold and uninterested informant of what men are saying and doing in the church and world. It must have its own opinions and convictions. It must act the part of critic and censor. It must expose pretense, charlatanry. It must lift up a warning voice whenever the interests of truth, the welfare of the churches, the honor of Christ are at stake. It must be free and untrameled, tied to no clique or corporation, able to utter the truth at all times, independent and fearless. Like the pulpit, the press must "cry aloud and spare not." It must be on the watchtower, not simply to observe how the battle rages and report accordingly, but to learn where best to dispatch its own missives, to deal its own sturdy blows. Thus it becomes a vast power for good. Truth is encouraged and established, sham is detected and discomfited.

Of course, as with the pulpit so with the newspaper, its weapons should not be carnal but spiritual. As an advocate of Christianity, it must speak the word of truth and soberness. It must ever maintain a high tone of Christian courtesy and charity. Here the question arises whether the religious newspaper may make use of satire. Some good people deny this, contending that satire is beneath the dignity of a Christian journal. But we think that this sort of weapon, sharp and pointed though it be, is perfectly legitimate. It has often served a most valuable purpose in exposing popular forms of sin and folly. In a mild form Addison and Steele, in the pages of The Spectator, made it the instrument of correcting the fashionable follies of their day. The Provincial Letters of Pascal, famed the world over as models of elevated thought and pungent style, prove that truth is not degraded by employing satire in her defence. A purer, sweeter, nobler spirit than Pascal's never lived and yet he was a prince among satirists. And th[illegible] old prophet Elijah—how sple[illegible]e overwhelmed the pretensio[illegible]e false prophets with a torr[illegible]f derision and scorn.

Satire is not indeed to form the staple of a religious newspaper. It is a weapon for occasional use. But there are times when it must be drawn from its scabbard, and divide between the joints and marrow.—Christian Era.

Peace With God.

An English minister, named Toller was preaching from the text, "Let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me." In commencing his discourse he said: "I can convey the meaning of this passage so that everyone may understand it, by relating what took place within my own family within a few days. One of my little children had committed a fault for which I thought it my duty to chastise him. I called him to me, explained the evil of what he had done, and told him how grieved I was that I must punish him for it. He heard me in silence, and then rushed into my arms and burst into tears. I could sooner have cut off my arm than have then struck him for his fault; he had taken hold of my strength and made peace with me."

The man who goes into his closet often and prays in sincerity, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me; and lead me in the way everlasting," will be very apt, when he enters a place of prayer, to seek a seat near the leader, where the fire on the altar of the heart is kindled up into a sacred flame; while he who mourns over his leanness of soul and unfruitfulness of spirit, will drop into a seat in the farther corner, like a spy, where he can see every one, and be unnoticed by those present.

Immortal Goats.

Let those who claim for man an immortal soul on account of his thinking and reasoning faculties consider well the following account of two reasoning goats:

"At Ardinglass, in Red Bay, near Glemarn, in Ireland, two goats happened to be moving toward each other over the brow of a dreadful precipice, on a path so narrow that it was impossible for them to pass each other, and still less practicable for either to turn around, as the least attempt for that purpose would have precipitated them from the rock, which is there four hundred feet perpendicular. In this crisis they looked at each other with steadfast attention for a length of time, as if they were deliberating how to extricate themselves from this difficulty, which at length they easily effected by one of them laying prostrate on the ground whilst the other walked over his body, each afterwards, pursuing his course with the greatest composure."

Here is an instance of goat intellect, which demonstrates the fact that animals do think. And if man is immortal because he can think, then why not, on the same principle, claim immortality for the goat.

C. C. Marston.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 8, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON of GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

WE shall not soon forget the remark by a a brother of Holden, Mass., that he was never so glad in all his life as when he learned that the devil and all his works are to be destroyed—literally. How many seem to be really distressed at the idea of a clean universe. They can't bear the thought of a dead devil and extinct sinners, extinguished sin. But it is good news. Thank God it is to be so.

WE are told that a preacher who has made considerable fuss over materialist quotations from Scripture, recently quoted Eph. 4: 18 in proof of a proposition uttered by him to the effect that men now have "the life of God" "in them." The verse reads: 'Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them.' Shall we therefore conclude that the good brother holds that ignorance is 'the life of God?' That is what the passage says was 'in' men.

WE judge from a communication in the last Crisis that the advocates of 'the '73 time' purpose establishing a new paper to disseminate their views. Br. J. B. Cook speaks of 'cumbrous and expensive movement toward separate action,' and deplores the 'new departure.' Let us hope, rather, that if there be a new paper, devoted to a specialty, it may be conducted in such spirit as not to 'cause divisions among' us.

P. S. Since writing the above we have received a copy of the paper referred to. It is called The Watchman's Cry, is edited by Br. S. W. Bishop, and is to be published every week, on Wednesdays, at Meriden, Ct. The subscription price is one dollar a year, and those who cannot afford this sum 'will not be neglected.' The paper seems to be conducted in a good spirit. It promises to be devoted entirely to the subject of prophecy. A reasonable scheme for raising money to sustain the paper and scatter 'time' tracts is presented, and all interested are called upon to give. The editor's address is Box 551, West Meriden, Ct.

A ST. PAUL (Minn.) letter writer gives the following item concerning Spiritist manifestations:

> The most mysterious show that has ever visited St. Paul, was run two evenings last week by Dr. Von Vleck, who figured conspicuously a few years ago in Barnum's New York Museum—and through the eastern cities as a "medium detective." He came to St. Paul unheralded, and apparently by accident, fell into the company of the most confirmed and enthusiastic spiritualists. He with ease and most unaccountable modesty, did all the tricks of Read, Slade, Foster and the Davenports; and the Spiritists went almost wild with delight over his wonderful and startling performances. In fact, they were so intensely and enthusiastically carried away, that they treated with coldness and contempt all investigators who didn't swallow the whole thing without winking. Judge of their surprise and indignation therefore, when the Doctor gave two public seances and announced to the wonder-stricken multitude, that the whole thing was done by legerdemain, slight of hand, and the unalterable laws of mechanism. It seemed for a time as if Bedlam was let loose; and but for the presence of a well-prepared and determined police force, blood would have been spilt. Thinking people begin to conclude that it isn't always safe to bet on physical mediums.

MANNERS AT CHURCH.

Perhaps behavior at church more than at any other place may be justly accepted as the measure of one's refinement. I suppose it will be granted by all that well-bred people everywhere endeavor to conform to the following rules.

1. They try to be in attendance at the time named for the services to begin. They have too high a regard for the proprieties of the place and for the rights of others to enter church after the service begins and thus to disturb the whole congregation.

2. They will neither whisper nor giggle, nor read papers, nor post their pocket journals, nor turn about in their seats every time the door opens to see who has come in, nor as a general thing will they go to sleep during service.

3. They will look at the preacher while he is preaching. They think it quite as impolite not to look at the person who is addressing them in public as it would be to refuse to look at him when addressing them in private. One of the amenities, not to say courtesies, of social intercourse, requires us to give special and respectful attention to the person who addresses us. He who will not do this in public, will be very sure not to do it in private. He who refuses to look at the preacher while addressing him in public on the most weighty and momentous subjects, will think it a trifling thing not to look his friend in the face when engaged in private conversation. As a matter of character, too, the sign is a bad one. Lavater, Fowler and other physiognomists have placed such persons among suspicious characters, as sly, artful, secretive, designing and non-committal. The furtive glance, the averted gaze and cast down look are not usually associated with open-heartedness, candor, courage warm sympathies or noble feeling. But there is still another view of the case. Good listeners help to make good talkers. We might say, indeed, that they are indispensable. The most interesting speaker would soon be dull enough if all his listeners did soon what a few of them do. If none of them would look at him, if all would look out of the windows, or on the floor or study the ceiling, or gaze abstractedly at the wall, or bow their heads on the seats in front of them, or close their eyes, or go to sleep, if all would thus occupy themselves, the effect would be most disastrous. But as a matter of right all may do what any one may do.

If an audience would have the best gifts of a speaker it must give him the best attention. No man can speak well to inattentive listeners. There must be the magnetism kindled by eye meeting eye, and flashing back the intelligence received. There can be little of personal magnetism felt except as it is received or communicated through the eye. Therefore, all who desire to receive the best gifts of the preacher should give him their closest attention while he is speaking. And this too, whether the speaker be handsome or homely, young or old, graceful or ungraceful, briliant or dull. Look at the speaker. Common courtesy requires that you should do this.

J. H. W.

Time, the Vials and Antichrist.

My faith in the speedy coming of Christ is much as in former years. Yet I have not as much feeling, and I believe it is so with most brethren. Evidence will not now produce that quickening of feeling as in the earlier history of the Advent proclamation. But as we are to be judged by "the word," it is well to let feeling pass. The inquiry is often suggested, Why it is that the great Bible truth, that Christ is about to come in his glory to judge the quick and the dead, is so fast losing its power to affect the hearts of his children and that of the world? I can see many reasons; but the main one is this: the truth upon this and kindred subjects has been proclaimed in power; accompanied by the Spirit; the church and the world heard, and were aroused to consider, and deliberately closed their eyes and their hearts, and turned away; and God has in his displeasure turned away from them. Hence his Spirit is being withdrawn from the world. This is a solemn thought, and should be considered by both saint and sinner.

As to time, evidence seems to center around 1873 with much clearness. It is a remarkable fact, and a strong argument, that the 1260 period of Dan. 7: 25, and Rev. 13: 5 should be the key note, both for 1843 and 1873; for its beginning and its ending, without any change of dates or events. Then, as now, the events of 538 and 1798 unlocked the other periods pointing directly to the closing of the 1335 days, when Daniel and his people are to stand in their lot in the resurrection. Now if the vision written out for 1843 was of God, I see not why we are not justified in believing the same vision will now "speak and no longer tarry." The error in writing that vision, so far as it relates to the shorter periods, consisted in this: the 1290 period was placed for its beginning in 508, when the daily sacrifice (or abomination) was taken away, instead of 538, when the abomination of desolation was set up in its place, thus making just thirty years difference, which is now about up. This coincident, I think outweighs many of the technicalities in chronology that may be urged against this conclusion. The whole thing looks so plain and simple, I can but acknowledge it all of God, who is about to justify the faith of his weary and tried children, by conferring upon them the promised crown of unending life. This, to my mind, looks so much like the true light I am inclined to cherish it, and walk in it, leaving results in the hands of him who alone is competent to overrule all for good. If we thus do and find ourselves again mistaken, the Lord will take care of us and give us all needed grace.

I am much pained at the position some of our good brethren are taking in literalizing the periods, making them still future, measuring the duration of some fancied antichrist, around whom the Catholics, the Internationals, and Spiritists are to gather and exercise universal dominion, like imperial or papal Rome, as the antitype of the two-horned beast of Rev. 13, and the scarlet beast or eighth head of ch. 17. They, also (or at least some do), literalize the seven vials, making them all future and prior to the coming of Christ. These and other views of the kind I cannot regard otherwise than dangerous, calculated to lead the church of God astray, by causing them to look for events not to be realized; hence I wish to enter my protest against anything of the kind.

In regard to the beasts of Rev. 13 and 17, if they are future, then the assumption of the late fall of the papal power from her position "as a queen," in the loss of her temporal power, is all a mistake, and is not the event noted in the Scriptures of truth. Now as the Pope himself acknowledges that he has fallen; and is politically dead or powerless, and mourns over that fall, and is calling upon the faithful throughout the world to come to his rescue and restore him, I say if these things are not a fulfillment of the word of God, what can they mean? With these facts standing out before the world in addition to other evidence, both prove the Old and New Testaments before my mind. I must confess it would be a monstrous stretch of credulity in me, to be unbelieving.

As to the vials, with present light there is a difficulty about them not easily solved, but the Lord will make all plain in due time. He is not cramped in the fulfillment of his purposes, nor has he any need of a programme drawn by erring man to work after. All such assumptions will be regarded by him like Dr. Thomas' theory relative to the overflowing of the Russian empire, as Gog and Magog of Ezekiel —a work of supererogation.

Before closing, let me repeat a conversation I had with the Rev. Edward Winthrop, an Episcopal clergyman (now deceased), some twenty years ago. He said: "As different events and different localities were assigned to each vial, they might be poured out in quick succession, and all be in their incipient stages at the coming of Christ, and continue on, and their intensity in their fullness be experienced upon the powers named after the advent, under the third wo, in the days of the voice of the seventh trumpet, where they would all end together in the filling up of God's wrath in the destruction of those angry nations." At the time, the view seemed quite too fanciful for serious consideration; but now I am inclined to believe it not far from correct. That we are now living under the incipient stages of the sixth vial is evident from the fact that the nations are waking up for war, and are now in a state of preparation on a scale of greatness such as the world never before witnessed, just as they are to be under this vial, and according to the whole tenor of the Scriptures upon this subject.

Again. It is plainly taught in the prophecies of Daniel and of Revelation, that the ten kingdoms of Europe will exist in their divided state, partly strong and partly broken, just as they now are, at the second coming of Christ, and are to stand up against him; and that the (papal) beast and the false prophet, the kings of the earth and their armies are to be existing powers in the battle of the great day. Now how can this be if there is to be at that time a literal antichrist, who is to consolidate all these powers into one and be their king?

One writer claims that the ten-horned beast and the two-horned beast of Rev. 13 are both future; and the forty-two months is also literal, allotted to the forthcoming antichrist. Why not literalize and utilize those beasts themselves, and thus make an appropriate team to carry him forth in his wars and works of wonder amongst the astonished and conquered nations of earth? Thus arrayed, Nahum's chariots would be an insignificant affair beside his equippage.

P. ALLING.

From Eld. William Chapman.

God in the workings of his providence has worked wonders in this place. For nearly twelve years I have found a home in the Baptist church, and preached the doctrine of the same; but now preach the Advent doctrine. "Praise the Lord!" Five years ago I became pastor of the Vernon Springs Baptist church. After much study for four years, I was compelled to embrace the Advent doctrine: and, shall I say, much against my will, at first? I knew that to embrace the "Life and Death question," was to accept persecution, to follow me as my shadow through after life, and that the name which was spoken so well of, would soon be idly used in connection with a despised people. Thank God, I have been able to come off more than conquerer, through him that has loved us. I felt that I lacked one thing, and that was truth; and that it was better to give, yea throw away all my Catholic notions, which my late people call orthodoxy, than to sacrifice with truths which must stand firmer than the everlasting hills, my hope of eternal life.

If I ever felt happy, and capable of testifying to the love of God through the one, and only channel, Christ Jesus, I can certainly say with all my soul, that I am absorbed in him, who has enabled me to take up my cross and bear it against friend and foe, through church meetings, and "infallible" (?) denouncing councils. Glory to God! Would that our timid quaking, convinced ministers could feel how good "even cross-bearing is:" though heavy and hard to carry in itself, yet it comes down upon the doomed man with such an everlasting power of love, that he feels but very little of the load; and is enabled to cry not I, but "Christ that dwelleth in me." The thorns may prick, and smart may be felt at every puncture, but this does not destroy peace. His mind will, rather, be carried to that coronation day, in the Kingdom of our God, when glory shall sit enthroned upon his now "suffering brow."

Last Sunday we organized an Advent Church. Thirteen rose to their feet when the invitation was given for those to rise who endorsed the covenant. I was called by them to be their minister. Next Sunday we expect to baptise another. Br Mitson preached the sermon, and Br. Rima gave the charge to the church in a warm and most affectionate address. These good brethren have stood in this county almost alone for the past fourteen years. Br. Mitson deserves great respect, and greater reward in the kingdom for his indefatigable and praiseworthy efforts in this place for so long a time; laboring with his own hands for the support of himself and family, and traveling for miles through the severe cold of our northern climate Sabbath after Sabbath to preach the gospel of the Son of God. Some thought he had the Bible on his side; others that he had too much Bible in his sermons, and still another class thinking he had the Bible to support him, yet thought he might do more good in preaching "eternal punishment," i. e. torment, that it might frighten sinners to seek Jesus! Br. Mitson by God's grace has always felt equal to the task, and with tears in his eyes blessed the Lord for what his eyes had seen on the Sabbath of organization.

For the last two months I have been preaching on the gospel of the kingdom and it is leading people to think, as they have never done before. Pray for us that "the little one may become a thousand" and we be saved in the kingdom.

Crisis, Please copy.

[NOTE. The above letter was forwarded to the editor and "lost in the mail" for about two months, coming to hand just in season for this issue of the TIMES. We deeply regret the delay of such good news. ED.

A Funeral Discourse.

UPON THE DEATH OF EMILY, WIFE OF HENRY RUST, OF GLENCOE, DODGE CO., NEB. DELIVERED AT ALGANSEE, MICH. BY ELD. J. R. PRESTON, AUG. 18, 1872.

"Do ye now believe?" (John 16: 31.)

The announcement of this text may seem strange to-day, as we are called upon to pay our tribute of respect to one well known and loved in life's former associations as an earnest and devoted Christian, and who has recently fallen a victim to the enemy, death. But when we remember how frail our nature is, how liable we are to go with the wind and the tide, and how easy it is to believe, when there is nothing to hinder, and how slow we are to believe that which will make us unpopular or bring us into circumstances of trial, the appropriateness of the text will be seen.

We find it no difficult task to profess ourselves followers of Christ when all by whom we are surrounded are Christians, and are ready to lend a helping hand to us in our inexperience and ignorance of the way of salvation; but when the waves and the gale are against us, our hearts are tried. The disciples loved the Savior and while they looked upon him as the great Teacher, their hearts were light and their cup of joy was full. But when the great truth was spoken: "I go away," sorrow filled their hearts. While their eyes looked upon Jesus, and his words and works delighted them, their attachment to him was unlimited. But now that they were to be left in the world, to all human appearance, alone, their hearts were sorrowful. Jesus said to them, however, "I will come again;" and with this they were comforted. Another word of Jesus perplexed them and made them very serious: The mysterious "little while." "A little while and ye shall not see me: again a little while and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father." The words of Jesus: "Ye are the light of the world," now weighed heavily upon them. The fearful responsibilities connected with their work they now begun to realize. The knowledge they possessed was the "keys of the kingdom," and they were henceforth to be ambassadors for Christ amid scoffs and frowns and bitter persecutions, and to seal at last, their testimony with their blood. And while all these solemn thoughts came rushing into their minds, Jesus explained to them the fact that he came from God and was about to return whence he came, and that though he did return to his Father he would come back to earth and see them again, and that there, their joy should be full, and no man should take it away from them. Then we see that, with his own death and resurrection, ascension and return before their minds, he said—"Do ye now believe?"

We think of the mysteries of death, and the promise of resurrection. We contemplate the glory of that day when the Life-giver shall raise us up from our strange condition in death, and give us life eternal, and we wonler as we meditate—can all this be rue? From our own conviction of he truth of the general revelation of iod's will to man, with which this tands connected, we now assent to his also and with the idea that it is robably correct we get into the habit f talking of resurrection as if it were eally true. But when we look into ie open grave where a wife and mothr is laid to rest, do we then believe?

With the dim light of human reason naided by a revelation from heaven, e would answer, no! The grand nilosophies of the past, have all iled to declare the true way of life. hoyah must reveal it. To the inared record then let us look for a lution of the great question. "If a an die shall he live again?" The an of Uz, in whose mind this queson found place, had death in view. ep by step the adversary had been moving his treasures, and now his e seemed to be set upon. But he d faith in God, and in harmony th his faith—declared his hope: Thou shalt call and I will answer ee: thou wilt have a desire to the ork of thine hands." Truly believg this, and seeing the quiet rest in e grave to be preferable to the sufing he endured, he exclaimed, "Oh! at thou wouldst hide me in the grave, at thou wouldst keep me secret until y wrath be passed, that thou wouldst point me a set time and remember ." (ch. 14: 13.)

Being fully persuaded that he would remembered he said—(ch. 19: 23- : "Oh! that my words were now itten! oh that they were printed in ook; that they were graven with iron pen and lead in the rock forr! For I know that my Redeemer th, and that he shall stand at the er day upon the earth, and though r my skin, worms destroy this ly, yet in my flesh shall I see God: en I shall see for myself, and mine s shall behold, and not another; ugh my reins be consumed within [first].

isten to David, in answer to quess relating to his faith, hope and re; "As for me, I will behold thy in righteousness; I shall be satis when I awake in thy likeness." omon speaks as a third witness, e wicked is driven away in his kedness; but the righteous hath e in his death." (Prov. 14: 32.) l declares that the dead have hope, that for that hope he was called in stion. A hope that knows no disointment is a good hope. The d will realize the object of their e in the resurrection.

ut do you mean to say the clod we y in the dust will be raised? Let Isaiah tell: "Thy DEAD MEN SHALL LIVE, together with my DEAD BODY shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." (Is. 26: 19.) Jeremiah's faith concerning the resurrection is found in these words concerning dead children. "They shall come again from the land of the enemy." Ezekiel says: "Behold, O my people, I will open your graves and will bring you up out of your graves, and will bring you unto your own land." (ch. 37: 12.) Daniel declares that, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." (ch. 12: 2.) Hosea's testimony: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes." (ch. 13: 14.) Jesus says: "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth."

These testimonies are confirmed by Peter and Paul who declare the same glorious truth. Peter rejoices in the hope that was revived in him by the resurrection of his Lord, and Paul follows with the declaration that, that which is "sown in corruption is raised in incorruption." "IT is sown in weakness; IT is raised in power. IT is sown a natural body, IT is raised a spiritual body."

Now since you believe in God, with all these testimonies from his word concerning the resurrection of our loved ones, "Do ye now believe?" Do ye derive consolation from the fact that Emily the wife, the mother, will live again? These are the words with which the Holy Spirit would comfort you: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then, [when they are risen] we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." In that fair land we shall see as we are seen and know as we are known. Yes—

"When we hear the music ringing
In the bright celestial dome,
When sweet angel voices singing,
Gladly bid us welcome home
To the land of ancient story,
Where the dwellers know no care,
In that land of life and glory,
We shall know each other there."

Then as you look upon the resting place of your dead, "do you believe?" you do! Thank God! Soon, in the Paradise of God you will meet her; for Jesus is coming to save his waiting people, both the quick and the dead, if faithful, you will be gathered, with the one now sleeping, to share eternal life with Jesus in glory.

"JESUS CHRIST COMING IN THE FLESH."

The Common Version of 2 John 7 reads: "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist." Macknight thinks this was designed as a warning against the errors of Basilides and "all the heretics in the first age to whom the fathers have given the name of Docetæ or Phantasiastæ." "These false teachers affirmed that Christ was a man in appearance only, consequently that his death and sufferings were not real, but only in appearance." They also denied, of course that he literally arose from the dead and ascended into heaven; and thus they did away entirely with his atonement and vicarious sacrifice. We question, however the propriety of confining the text in its application to teaching respecting the first advent of the Messiah.

The American Bible Union version reads: "Who acknowledge not that Jesus Christ came in the flesh." This is rather more indefinite in application than the common version. "I think," says the Rev. A. R. Fausset, A. M. in the Critical and Explanatory Commentary, that "the Greek present participle [erkomenos here used] implies both the first and the second advent of Christ. He is often elsewhere called the Coming One (Greek, Matt. 11: 2; Heb. 10: 37)." The Rev. E. Bickersteth gives the same view in his "Family Expositions." After citing the passage, he says:—

"This is in harmony with the 4th chapter, 1st and 2nd verses, of the Epistle, with this difference, that there the Greek word rendered 'come' relates to a past event; here it might be more properly rendered, 'Jesus Christ coming in the flesh,' which may be viewed in both aspects—as relating to his incarnation which is past, and to his return which is future. This is the truth which Antichrist either openly denies, or inwardly disbelieves. It is the upholding of the great doctrine of Jesus come in the flesh, ascended into heaven, and coming again to judge the world, which especially marks the faithful witness of the truth of God. This description of Antichrist comes home directly to the church of Rome: all its falsehoods have a bearing on this leading error, denying the human and sympathizing feelings of Christ, setting Him aside, looking on Him as a hard judge, needing to be propitiated by his Virgin Mother, making her the tender and compassionate mediator.' 'This is a deceiver and an Antichrist,' or rather, emphatically—the Antichrist. We have at present chiefly seen its first form, denying that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, because the doctrine of the second coming has been as yet so feebly proclaimed in the church; but let it be freely and fully set forth and the infidel objection will arise, 'Where is the promise of his coming?'"—pp. 184–5.

Twenty five years have passed away since this was written, and the second antichristian teaching has (as Mr. Bickersteth expected) been more fully developed. To say nothing of Infidels, Shakers, Universalists, and Spiritualists, there is sad evidence that many members of professedly Orthodox churches "confess not Jesus Christ in the flesh." Whatever faith they may have in the literality of his first coming to obey, suffer and die, it is manifest they have little or none with reference to his coming again with glorified "flesh," personally, visibly and gloriously to reign on the regenerated earth. If it is antichristian to deny the literality of Christ's first advent, it must be equally so to deny the literality of the second.—Advent Herald.

Getting Up.

We not unfrequently hear those who are engaged in the Savior's service saying theirs is "up hill work." They say this by way of expressing their discouragement. They would greatly prefer work of a different character. It would be well, however, for all who are in danger of making such a complaint, to consider what other kinds of work are possible, and to choose accordingly. There is "down hill work," and "work on the level"—these seem the only other two possible. Both of these are easier than "up hill work". No doubt of it. But they have other characteristics that go along with these. Work on the level will never bring the worker higher in the world; and down hill work will just as certainly carry him lower.

Up hill work is difficult and trying, but it has another characteristic. It is the only work that can issue in placing one really on the hill top, or even a little higher on the hill. There is a great law or set of laws, which join together the labor and patience of climbing, and the reward of getting higher on the hill. This is not a law affecting our positions materially merely, but as truly affecting it morally and spiritually. It is just as essential to our rising to positions of real eminence, as regards moral influence and spiritual power, that we undertake and persevere in up hill work, as it is essential that we climb in order to ascend the mountain. It is also just as sure that we shall rise morally and spiritually if we rightly and perseveringly climb, as it is sure that we shall at last reach the hill top if we keep steadily the path that toilsomely ascends.

Are you, then, dear friend, engaged in some up hill service to the Lord Jesus Christ? Has he given you something to do that seems wonderfully up hill? Are you tempted to think you might find something far more easy that might still be his service? Then do not, we beseech you, forget that all work in his, or in any other service, by which you can ascend is up hill. All such work is toilsome and slow of results; but it is not on that account to be shunned by any means. Far from it. It is on that account rather to be preferred. The true hero will accept it, and cling to it all the more gladly that it is up hill. He does not sing "Excelsior" and jog along the plain at his ease. Neither will you if you have the true hero's spirit. Whether it is in your own heart and with it—or in your family and with that—or in some other relationship, and with other men—you will accept the very sorest, hardest, longest travail, and that because it is such alone that takes you higher and higher in your Lord's esteem, and higher and higher, too, in influence for good in the world. If you only consider this carefully, it will go a great way to encourage you in the path of life. It will explain to you how others are getting along so much more easily than you—in that respect in which they do so, they are not rising as you are. If their Lord has called them to Christ as he has called you and pointed out this hill-path to them as he has done to you, they are not following as he calls them. Follow you on, and the glory which they only see who reach the hill top will be yours.—Sel. from John Kirk, by A. A.

From Sr. A. S. Butters, Le Sueur Co., Minn.

There are only a few of us in this part of Minnesota, but we are trying to let our light shine. We do not have regular preaching; but Br. Miller called on us once last spring, and Br. S. C. Wellcome comes as often as he can. He organized a little church here. We keep up our prayer meetings. We could not keep alive without them. We are waiting for the coming of the Lord, and striving to live so that we may be accepted when he comes. Dear brothers and sisters, let us be faithful a little longer. It seems that Jesus must soon come to reward his people, and take to himself those that are looking for him.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. C. E. Barnes has resigned his charge at Salem Mass., and is now at liberty, and can be addressed as above for the present.——Br. John Ridley called at our office this week on [illegible] way to Maine, for his family. He will settle in Manchester, Iowa. The West is obliged to Maine for contributing so desirable a laborer.——Br. E. N. Bliss' P. O. address is Sherman, Wexford Co., Mich. He will attend to calls for preaching in that region.——Br. Preston writes that four have been baptised since the Southern Michigan Camp-meeting.——We hear that Eld. Josiah Litch is in the West, and preached at Reading, Mich., Sunday, Sept. 29.

The Times.

AT HOME.

- - - The tax upon Government clerks and officials for political purposes is now styled "Civil Service Irrigation."

- - - The oil producers of Pennsylvania, are on a strike—refusing to pump any more oil until prices shall advance. The increase in the price is already $1.00 a barrel.

- - - Mrs. Fair, the notorious murderess of Crittenden, at San Francisco, has had a new trial and has been acquitted, though there can be no possible doubt of her guilt. Thus law and justice are set at naught.

- - - This is a high day with our Jewish citizens, being their New Years day, marking 5,633 years in their calendar since the creation of the world, when the "morning stars sang together for joy." Upon this day is celebrated the "Feast of the Trumpets," second in importance only to the great "Feast of atonement," which will occur on the 12th of this month.—Chicago Journal, Oct. 3.

- - - During a recent storm in Detroit, a negro, who was running along the street, was struck by lightning. He was stunned by the shock, but came to his senses again, as he was being lifted into a wagon, and asked, in wild amazement: "Why, do they have wagons in heaven?" He evidently thought that he had been translated, as Elijah was, in a chariot of fire.

- - - Our remark about the improved moral condition of Chicago a few weeks since, is not, we are sorry to say, warranted by subsequent facts. Things are rather getting worse. The moral sense of the community demands the closing of the liquor saloons, whence the vast mass of crimes spring—but political policy forbids this: "after election" we may have a reform; but it won't do to close saloons before that time. Pray, what are the morals of a contest in which neither side dare utter an opinion whether the flood gates of perdition should be open or closed?

ABROAD.

- - - Sept. 20, for the first time since Victor Emmanuel took possession of Rome, the Pope ventured beyond the limits of the Leonine city. His self-imposed captivity is becoming, evidently, irksome.

- - - A Geneva dispatch says: The removal of the Catholic priest, Mermillod, here by the Swiss Government, causes some excitement. His Bishop resists the right of the secular power to remove a clergyman, and maintains his allegiance to the Pope as superior to all human laws.

- - - The Pope, replying to a deputation which visited him on the anniversary of taking the plebiscitum in Rome, declared that the triumph of the church would assuredly come, if not in his lifetime in that of his successors.

- - - The departures from Alsace and Lorraine of inhabitants who decline to assume German citizenship are upon an immense scale. It is estimated that 88,000 emigrating Alsatians will take up their residence in Nancy alone, while large numbers will go to other places. Eighteen thousand persons have left Metz the last fortnight to seek homes under French jurisdiction. The population of that city now numbers only 10,000.

- - - The theater has become as much of a political institution in Rome as it ever has been in France. The popular plays of to-day are filled with unmeasured abuse of clergy and church. They have suggestive titles: "The Mysteries of the Spanish Inquisition;" "Beatrice Cenci;" "The Nu of Cracow Buried Alive," and "The Mysteries of the Old Police." The first of these dramas is a great favorite. The whole machinery of the Inquisition is placed upon the stage. The thumbscrew and the rack are put in operation; the victims, shriek, faint; the inquisitors sit calm and pitiless. The actor who personates Torquemada is said to be in actual danger of death at the hands of his infuriated audience, like the man who played the part of an English spy on the Dublin stage. The Pope has protested against these plays, but in vain. The tie between the Roman Pontiff and the Roman people seems to be completely sundered. This means that the people will relapse into a gross materialism, from which only education can rescue them.—Chi. Tribune.

- - - Spain seems to be drifting towards chaos with a rapidity that must delight Don Carlos as much as it disgusts Amadeus. Buckle believed that devotion to church and King was the curse of the Iberian Peninsula. This curse certainly exists no longer. Zorilla's sneering statement, that some religion must be maintained "for the sake of our wives and daughters," shows what the feeling about the church is. Amadeus is caricatured in a thousand ways. The Queen is fairly vilified. The Royal carriage has been hissed. Yet, although Spain no longer reverences church or King, she is going from bad to worse. The law seems to be powerless. Murders and burglaries are unpunished, and (may our sentimental brethren mark the fact) grow more frequent, day by day. So many communion services have been stolen from the churches (a fact in itself very significant) that special permission has been gotten from Rome to use cheap utensils on the altars and put the costly ones in places of safety. Meanwhile, political animosity is as fierce as ever. An opponent is held up to scorn in the papers as a "cuttlefish," a "crab," a "pastry-cook," or a "Lazarus." The latter almost eclipses the elegant epithets that the present campaign has added to American political literature.—Chicago Tribune.

- - - The Honolulu (Sandwich Islands) Gazette of August 21, supplies the following:

On the evening of the 13th inst., the people of Hilo and other portions of Hawaii were startled by the sudden appearance of an eruption at the summit of Mokuaweoweo. At first, in Hilo, so intense was the light of the eruption, that before the exact cause was discovered the inhabitants were alarmed that a fire had occurred in town. The following extract of a letter from Rev. Mr. Coan gives a description of the first appearance of the eruption:

"All Hilo was startled last evening by the cry of fire. Looking to the summit of Mauna Loa we saw a gorgeous pillar of red light standing upon the top of the mountain and illuminating those hights. It is a grand eruption, but, from our point of observation, we could see no evidence of a flow. We conclude that it is in the great crater of Mokuaweoweo. It is cloudy to-day, and the mountain is veiled. When we can get a view in the daytime we shall be able to determine its locality. I regret much that Prof. Kneeland and party could not have seen this pyrotechnic revel of Mme. Pele. But the old godess is quite capricious and utterly independent of us all."

Captain McGregor, of Kilaue, informs us that upon the passage to Kona last week he saw the light of the eruption at night in the channel, between Maui and Hawaii, though through the midst that hung over the mountain it looked more like a fiery red star than a volcano eruption. Upon reaching the coast of Hawaii, however, he found that there must be a grand commotion in the crater of Mokuaweoweo, as the top of the mountain presented a magnificent illumination, a column, apparently of lava, being constantly visible above the mouth of the crater. Some severe shocks of earthquake, we have been informed, have been felt in Kono, Kau, and Hilo, recently. It is not all certain that this eruption in the summit of Mauna Loa is the precursor of a lava flow from the sides of that mountain. We are informed by those who have taken great pains to inform themselves upon the subject, that similar eruptions have taken place frequently, and after continuing for a time have subsided. It is possible, however, the accumulation of lava in the crater of Mokuaweoweo may be so great as to force its way through some weak point in the mountain-side.

The Gazette, in its issue of August 28, gives some additional particulars, saying: "Our latest advices from Hawaii inform us that the eruption still continues in Mokuaweoweo, at the summit of Mauna Loa. A column of fire or lava is constantly being thrown up several hundred feet above the summit of the crater, presenting, in the night, a most imposing spectacle. The people living around the base of Mauna Loa are in momentary expectation of a lava flow from the sides of the mountain. When it is considered that the floor of the crater is something like 500 feet above the rim, and that the column of lava is estimated to be thrown something like 200 feet above the rim, it must be thrown up at least 700 feet. The column also must be immense, as it can be seen distinctly from all sides of the mountain, which, in the night, lights up in grand style. The eruption reached its grandest dimensions about eight days before our informant left the coast of Hawaii, since which time the column of fire had not perceptibly diminished."

85- N. N. Whiting

The Christian Life.

A Cure For Scandal.

Ruth would like to know what can be done to stop scandal in a church.

We suggest to her that enough cotton in both ears would prevent her hearing it, and the filling of her mouth all day long with the praises of God would render it impossible for her tongue to spread it. This would suffice for her personally. She, however, we suspect, rather wants us to suggest a remedy for the habit of scandal in others. Really we do not know of anything short of the grace of God. While hearts remain unrenewed, tongues will be full of bitterness; and in gracious people while corruption remains, there will be a measure of mouth disease too. "Dogs delight to bark and bite, for 't is their nature to." None can rule or tame human tongues except the Omnipotent himself. Solomon talked of hot coals of juniper, and such like fiery remedies, but we question whether they would be effectual even if they could be applied. One rule we endeavor to follow with regard to gossip, viz.: let the thing die a natural death. If any one reports of us that there is a dirty pool near us, we go in another direction, but never dream of sitting down on its margin to take long sniffs, neither do we indulge in the practice of stirring it, and poking a pole to the very bottom of it. We told a friend lately, who said that it was our duty to interpose in the squabbles of another church, that we did not carry a brush in our pocket to scrub all the pigs we meet with, and we fancied that if we did we should soon get some of the mire on our own hands. Scandal is like the hydra which lives by being killed, and multiplies itself with every cut you make at it. It is like a very bad house to let, which is ill-drained, has a leaky roof, and is generally out of repair; it is best let alone. If dogs are asleep don't wake them, they may bark; and if they are barking don't interfere with them, for they may bite.

"But surely it is our duty to put out the fire of strife!" Yes, but what is the best way? Will you put it out by heaping on more fuel? Will poking the fire damp it? Why, even pouring oily words on it will not quench the flame. Very few people have wisdom enough to deal with scandal aright, and these generally prefer the method of letting them burn themselves out. Be deaf, be blind, be dead to gossip, and it will grow disgusted with you and select a more sensitive victim. To bring matters before a court of law, or even before the church, is to honor the gossip and to lower yourself. "What are the wild waves saying?" They are saying more sense than the tongues of rumor: worry yourself about the rough music of the roaring sea if you will, but about tongues, male and female, concern not your heart, O Ruth; or, sapient reader, be thou equally insensible thereto. When a bull offered to toss a little party who were crossing a meadow, Courage was for fighting the irate monster, Folly talked of taking him by the horns, Enthusiasm thought of jumping on his back, Credulity tried the virtue of a suddenly opened umbrella, and Obstinance dared old Taurus to interfere with him, but Prudence got over the stile into the next field, and I went with him, and mean to do the same next time. Shall I help you over the gate, Miss Ruth?—John Ploughman.

"Somebody Must be in."

Here is a little incident which tells, better than a dictionary can, the meaning of the word "disinterestedness." The martyr spirit that leaps into danger to do a good deed, is the farthest removed from selfishness, that a human being is capable of.

The late Archdeacon Hare was once, when tutor of Trinity college, Cambridge, giving a lecture, when a cry of "fire" was raised. Away rushed his pupils, and forming themselves into a line between the building—which was close at hand—and the river, passed buckets from one to another. The tutor quickly following, found them thus engaged; at the end of the line one youth was standing up to his waist in the river; he was delicate, consumptive looking.

"What!" cried Mr. Hare, "you are in that water, Sterling? you, so liable to take cold!"

"Somebody must be in," responded the youth; "why not I, as well as any other?"

The spirit of this answer is like that of all great and generous doings. Cowardice, and coldness, too, says, "O, somebody will do it," and the speaker sits still; he is not the one to do what wants doing. But nobility of character, looking at necessary things, says, "Somebody must do it; why not I?" And the deed is done.—Sel.

Correspondence.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

KANSAS.

MONDAY, Sept. 23. Spent part of the day in Girard, where I called on Eld. Munson, and Br. Sidwell. Both Sr. M. and Sr. S. have been sick. Sr. Sidwell was given up to die a few days since, and on hearing of my coming, said, "I want Eld. Himes to attend my funeral." She had greatly desired to see me before she should die. God has had mercy upon her and has raised her up. Our season of divine song, and prayer in the sick chamber to-day will not soon be forgotten. God was with us by his solemn presence to bless the sick one, and give new inspirations of life and joy.

Returning to Columbus, Br. Sanford with Dr. Childs and their families accompanied me with their teams to Bush Creek, eight miles out on the prairie, near Baxter Springs. There was a Sabbath School Convention at Baxter, which affected our meeting so that we thought best to give it up. On our way home, in the dark, our carriage was upset and broken, and five of us more or less bruised, but no bones broken. The accident occurred near a log shanty, the residence of some Freedmen families from Arkansas. Dr. Childs being acquainted with them, we called and made repairs, and waited for the moon to rise to light us the rest of the way home.

Here we held a meeting. I spoke from the first promise (Gen. 3: 15), and opened up the subject of the fall and the restitution. We had much prayer with many songs of praise, and with thanksgiving for the preservation of life and limb, amid the fall and crash of our carrirge. Dr. Childs being with us attended to business that needed attention. He is a Christian man, and withal full of courage, and has words of cheer for all, either in sickness, accident or misfortune. He removed to this place some years ago from Anna, Ill. He is now the chief physician in all this region. He rides day and night all over this country, and is acquainted with every road and path, with the creeks and gullies.

ELDER N. N. WHITING.

TUESDAY, Sept. 24. To-day I heard first of the death of Prof. N. N. Whiting. He was seventy-eight years old, and came to the grave as a "shock of corn fully ripe." He was a member of the Baptist church, and a minister, and also a Professor in one of their institutions of learning. He was not a showy or brilliant man, but rather meek, humble, retiring, yet bold for God and truth. He was a ripe scholar and an excellent linguist. He was among the ablest of the men who translated the New Testament, for the American Bible Union.

In 1840 he was a minister in Williamsburg, L. I., and on hearing lectures on the Lord's speedy coming, embraced the faith. He was an essential help to us in Biblical criticism, and otherwise as a preacher in New York, Brooklyn and Williamsburgh. He held the faith of the near coming of Christ until he fell asleep. He never embraced what is called the "life and death" theory, but to the last held to the conscious state of men in death, and the eternal suffering of the lost. But he taught that the reward would come at the judgment and not at death.

In my last visit with him we had some plain and kind talk on the subject. Our friendship ever remained unbroken. On parting, he said, "always call; there are but few of us, of the 'old stock' left." Well, he sleeps in Jesus, with Father Miller, Galusha, and many of my early co-workers. And soon I may sleep if the Master does not come.

In the p. m. we took old Shiloh tent, now remodeled, and in company with Br. Dunbar, rode out to Boro, eight miles. The wind is terrific, and the air is full of dust. No tent can be kept up with the winds as here for the last three days. But they don't always blow like this. They have calm and good weather in the summer months.

At night went to Cherokee, and spoke in the Baptist church. The people there are much prejudiced against us. I spoke on the faith and hope of the gospel without any reference to the belief of others, and was well received.

It will try ones strength to travel over these prairies in wind and dust, and storm, visit and talk by day, and preach every night, getting no rest until near midnight. I love the work, and enjoy it. I have the sweet satisfaction that some good is done, and the kindness and sympathy of the people helps to sustain one amidst these labors. Better than all else, is the presence and aid of the God of our salvation.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 25. To-day we put up old Shiloh Tabernacle, in Boro. Dear old tent, under which so many sermons had been given by Br. D. S. Clark (who had charge of it), and others; and so many souls converted, so many saints comforted, and the glorious gospel of the kingdom proclaimed. The storms of heaven, with the common wear and tear, had made a wreck of the roof, and affected it otherwise, and so it was laid by. A few months ago it was proposed by Br. Gibson, and those having it in charge, that if any brethren needing a tent, would repair it and put it into the field it would be given to them for this object. And so it was given to our infant and struggling cause in Kansas. we took it to the original makers in Chicago, who put it into shape again, and now it stands in Southern Kansas. Br. Raymond and others who joined with him in the original purchase did not anticipate that it would become a Kansas Mission tent. It has been the means of much good, and there is "a blessing in it" yet.

Leaving the tent we started to fill an appointment some miles out. But our guide became bewildered in the multitude of prairie roads, we lost our way and after six hours riding at last reached home, disappointed in our object, but feeling we had done the best we could. Br. Sanford was to be present at the same meeting; so we have hope the congregation was not entirely disappointed.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 25. The tent being all ready for service, I spoke from Heb. 10: 32–39, showing that the reasons of our hope are reliable, and "we should not cast away our confidence." At the close about all the members of the church testified for the truth in this our first tent meeting in Kansas. It was good to be there.

At night I spoke on the out-pouring of the Spirit from Is. 44: 2–5, and the conversion of souls. Our meeting is well begun. Many of the people in this neighborhood have been under the influence of the Christian connection, but are now much interested in reading the word of God in the light of his coming kingdom.

FRIDAY, Sept. 27. Spoke at night on the first angel's message to the world. (Rev. 14: 6, 7.) I showed that it was a universal message, to be given in every language, and to all nations. And as the peculiar form of the message given by Father Miller in 1830–1843, was local and partial, it could not be more than an element in that message. He gave a part of the great message, and so far as he proclaimed the hour of judgment and the speedy coming of Christ he gave the truth, but the item of the time was not true, or the Lord would have come. But the message of the near approach of the Lord was true, and it will speedily be fulfilled, and we are to continue the proclamation till the opening heavens shall reveal the Son of God.

The brethren in this part of Kansas take this view of the subject and are resolved to sound the trumpet in this portion of the great field to the extent of their ability.

While I was speaking the gathering storm culminated into a thunder tempest, with rain; but I finished the discourse, and Br. Sanford and others followed in support of the views given, and they resolved to organize for the good work of sounding more fully the message of the Lord's coming.

Our tent being fully supported by stakes and cords, stood the storm and kept us entirely dry during the service. At the close most went home through the storm. The storm increased with great fury. The heavens were ablaze with the flashing lightnings, and the thunders shook the earth. The rain fell in torrents, and flooded our tent. We found some dry places under the canvass, but the floor was over shoe in water. Old "Shiloh" never went through such a storm, or came out of it better. We had a restless night, and watched with interest for the morning, and was glad of its dawn.

The storms of life will soon be over. The morning will dawn ere long, and endless day succeed. The Lord hasten it in its time.

SATURDAY, Sept. 28. Had three services to-day, notwithstanding the rain of last night, and the showers to-day. The Lord smiled and gave us peace. I spoke of "perfect peace," and of being on the "Lord's side," with some results which I trust will be lasting. The week has closed in peace and good cheer to the waiting ones. Soon creation's week will end, and the glorious rest will come.

SABBATH, Sept. 29. A beautiful day dawns after the storm. The elements have "rocked themselves to rest," and now the people say we are to have settled weather. May it be so.

I spoke to a large gathering on the kingdoms of the earth, and their overthrow at the second advent, and of the "kingdom which shall not be destroyed," to succeed. Many questions were asked with much zeal, and desire for light. The "sleep of the dead," and many passages which seemed to teach a contrary doctrine were quoted by our opposers. All were met with success, and much light elicited. In the p. m. the subject was continued with deep interest, and the work goes bravely on. The church in Bero are much cheered. At night we gathered about the Lord's table, and spent the entire evening in the service. It was one of the most precious seasons of communion. Many had never enjoyed the service in this way before. Nearly every one spoke from a full heart.

From G. E. Merrill, Worcester, Mass.

I am expecting a better life than the one I now enjoy, when Jesus comes. This one is made up of trials, crosses, temptations, sickness and death. But the "better life" I expect to have will not be so. It will be a life that will never end. I want to be there. With the poet I say:

"Fly swift around ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

Yes, it will be a welcome day to all that love and obey God.

Much is said and written on definite time. I love the coming of Jesus, for it is the only hope. It is the hope of the church. While I love the coming of Jesus, and believe it to be near, even at the doors, I cannot believe in definite time as it is presented at the present day. I believe God has appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world. I can't believe, however, that those of our brethren who are preaching definite time have got the true time for that event.

1. Because they do not agree as to the time. The largest number are very sanguine that he will come in '73. Some are as sanguine that he will come in '75, and a few believe that he will come in '80.

2. I believe all God's children will, when the time is made known, know it. And as there are a great many who are God's children that do not know it, I therefore conclude that the true time is not known yet.

3. It seems to me when we arrive to the true time, there will be no quibbling and contending about some few and little differences that we may have, but we shall let these things all go.

4. When the true time is given, it will be given outside of the "virgins;" and as all who are preaching time claim to be "virgins," I therefore conclude the true cry has not been given.

We read: "And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." Some say that this cry has been made; but I can't believe it; for when it is made (as in the parable), all the virgins or saints will trim their lamps, or be ready to go in to the marriage, and then the door will be shut, and there will be no mercy for man. Since the time has been preached and passed, there has been mercy, and there is mercy still. Then the cry has not been made, but is to be made in the future. When it is made, every child of God will understand and know it, no matter where they are.

We are commanded to "Watch, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of Man cometh." If we obey the command of our Savior, when the cry is made we shall not be found waiting, but will hail the cry with joy, being ready to go in with Jesus to the marriage, and the door will be shut. I think it is right to look over the prophetic periods, but not to be so sanguine about things we are not sure of. In my opinion we shall get something that we shall be sure of. The Lord help us when the true cry is made, to be found with the "wise virgins."

From D. F. Quimby, Assyria, Mich.

There is something so glorious in the thought that our best friend is coming to visit us, and finish for us a work he has long since promised to perfect for us and the dear ones who have been worn out in the service of the blessed Christ, and have fallen asleep in him, I say there is something so glorious in the thought of this visit, that one can hardly look for anything else to cheer and gladden the mind. But faith sometimes is less strong than at others; and the struggling creature who groaneth within himself, waiting for the adoption, to-wit, the redemption of the body, looks around to behold what the Savior hath wrought, and lends a listening ear to the voice of other "weary travelers" who are struggling on their way, and is sometimes cheered by the victories achieved through faith in the mighty Deliverer.

Br. P. Holler, of Nashville, came into this dreary waste where there had been previously no cry made, and commenced holding meetings last fall. These meetings were occasional, and were attended with varied success. In the winter he held a meeting of days, and a number became interested in the story of Jesus and the resurrection. God began a work in hearts long since supposed to be closed against all gracious influence; and your correspondent was led to deep and earnest inquiry, "What must I do to be saved?" Prayer was resorted to in secret places, but the answer of peace came not. But, thank God, the people with whom I boarded had attended the meetings, and Br. H. came, as a wise man, to look after the seed he had planted, and then I had an opportunity, through the unchanging mercy of God, of telling that I had resolved, at the loss of everything if need be, to be a Christian. This, to all persons, unexpected announcement comforted and encouraged the servant of Jesus, and he called me the next Sabbath to take part in the public services of God's house. We then repaired to the water, and four who had resolved to seek after God were baptised. There I promised God to be his alone, and declared to those assembled at Br. Holler's next appointment, I, too, would thus own Jesus.

Bigotry and superstition are giving way, and the people are searching the Scriptures to see whether these things are so. Pray for us, that the mighty Deliverer, the Prince of peace, may reign in our hearts, and that we may be ready when Jesus shall come.

rom Wm. Branch.

Leaving Michigan I came directly Minnesota, to attend the Q. M. for he St. Paul District, which was held a grove near Armstrong Station. n taking the cars at Minneapolis, I ll in with Br. Collins, on his way to he meeting. Brn. Geo. W. Miller, aymond and others were there also. he meetings were good, though not well attended from abroad as had een expected.

The soldiers of the cross were rengthened, and some new ones stepped up and enlisted as volunteers in he service of the Lord. I like to see eople volunteer than be drafted. God rant that these may fight till the final ictory is won and they are called to ear the crown of unfading glory in od's kingdom.

The Ottawa District Q. M. was held Lombard & Winegar's mill. Here he spiritual life seemed to be quite w until Saturday, when the wheel gan to move, and the meetings were lorious and refreshing. Sabbath afrnoon seventy-three sat down to the ble of the Lord.

Here also some new ones made a art for the everlasting kingdom of od, and some who had been in the ckground renewed their covenant.

I am now in Sparta, where I preached last Sabbath, and am invited to reain over the next. I do not know t where I shall locate, or whether I hall return to Michigan.

There are so many calls, I hardly now which to heed, inasmuch as I annot respond to all. The cry is for ore laborers. And I would say to ose who are already working in the spel harness, Keep the harness on, nd work faithfully, for time is ineed short; and it becomes us to put rth every effort in God's cause if we ould hear the "Well done!"

Brethren and sisters all over the nd—wake up! Jesus is soon comg, and you should be in readiness to eet him as your Savior. Let the rich nd the poor, the high and the low, the reat and the small, the white and the lack, the master and the servant, all, LL, remember that there is "another ng, one Jesus," and let them prepare meet him when he comes in the ouds of heaven. Amen.

rom T. W. Richards, Eau Claire Co., Wis.

I am still in the narrow way that ads to life and glory, and it seems to e to be narrowing up, which is trying e multitude of professors, and, ineed, but very few in comparison are ving as is required. I feel the imortance of an entire surrender of ALL. ime, talents, and everything must be the altar, and this is and has been y position for several months, and I m happy. I have not attained to he state that many have experienced, ut as I have done all that I can do in he matter, if my dear Savior sees fit keep me just as I am, it is all right. We are the purchase of his blood, and erefore not our own; so whether we ave joy or grief, storm or sunshine in ur pilgrimage let us rest assured that y cometh in the morning. We must ot always take feeling for religion. xcitement is not religion. The fruit f the Spirit is love, joy, &c.

I took pains a few weeks ago to go nd see a sister that claimed to be anctified. In the prayer meeting her oice can be heard far and near; and here are some more that claim to be anctified that are very noisy and boiserous, and exhaust themselves so that fter a meeting they cannot speak a oud word.

I went to see the sister, for I am nxious to learn the way of life more erfectly. I went to learn and be comorted. I stepped into the house as hough I was going into the house of od. In the course of our conversaion we talked on the coming of Christ. This was too much. She said it was one of our business when he came, ut we should be ready for death, as we should then go to him; and traightening up in an excited state, he pointed her finger at me exclaimng, "You will be dead and rotten in your grave before that day comes!" It was too strong meat for her, and so I left, being well convinced that all the sanctification to be relied on is in belief of the truth. Having this hope, I am preaching pretty much every Sabbath, and intend to labor more the coming winter.

Let us trust in Jesus. I am well convinced he is coming soon, and I believe we shall have time on it; and I shall accept the time when I see it. But let us watch; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh. The Bride is getting ready, and the devil is working amongst the multitudes. Everything is getting ripe for eternity.

From Lina A. Richardson, Wayne Co., Neb.

I wish to make you acquainted with our situation here and ask if there can be any thing done to help us.

We have been here two years and are alone in the faith of the second advent of Jesus. We have done all we could in our feeble way to spread the truth. One or two have been converted, but were sprinkled instead of being baptised, and joined the only society in the county. We do not like to see the fruit of our labors disposed of in this way for the want of help. Not that we wish to be sectarian; but to see them disobey God by being sprinkled because the Methodists tell them "there is no material difference" is more than we like to bear when we know how plainly God's word speaks on the subject.

The outsiders are very anxious to hear; and if there was a good minister of the Gospel truth that could divide the Word as it should be, and meet the objections (they are the same as are always brought forth) of the others, there is every prospect of a church that will praise God in a very different manner. The Presiding Elder occasionaly comes to preach and every time preaches a sermon against the Adventists. They are doing all they can to injure us and the cause.

But no more of this lest I weary you. With regard to financial matters I cannot say much, as yet. As I told you, we have been here only two years, and of course, have seen hard times and have not yet an overplus to help ourselves with. But we will do what we can. We have plenty of good victuals though not many nick-nacks and will do all that is in our power otherwise. Can this cause be laid before the Conference and see if something can be done? We feel that time is short, and every opportunity should be improved. The door is opened here: is there no one to enter?

From C. C. Marston.

My late discussion at Rochelle with Mr. Hull, on Spiritism, was not devoid of good results. The Lord helped me to maintain his truth. Mr. H. is a ready speaker with a good memory, but he gave no new light on the subject in dispute. Our proposition was: Resolved, That Spiritism is a Satanic delusion. I showed this by noticing the doctrines and tendency of the system. If the doctrines are satanic, then the system must be also. That the doctrines are Satanic was easily and clearly shown, and that too, by allowing their own oracles to be the witnesses. I inquired into the tendency of the system, and found upon its own testimony, that it was towards the downfall of all pure and moral principles. This was also very clear evidence in favor of the Satanic character of the system.

I then turned to the Bible and showed that the foundation of the system was rotten—that the "cardinal doctrine," and main proposition of the whole thing was false. That the whole thing was false. That the whole system was based upon the lie that was told in Eden by Satan, the father of all lies. Immaterialism is the foundation of Spiritism. Immaterialism is not true, therfore Spiritism is a fraud and delusion, and the work of Satan.

From E. N. Bliss, Wexford Co., Mich.

I am in my feeble way telling the people about the Lord's coming, to give life eternal to his children, and destroy the ungodly. Our little church in White Water is still alive. In June two Seventh-day preachers came there and remained some six weeks. They did not tell their faith when they came; but on the first Saturday went off into the woods with Bibles and Hymn Books and remained all day. However it came out at last, and they got two of the members to commence Saturday keeping. But on the whole we have to thank them, for our own preaching was never more acceptable than now, and but few care to hear more from them.

I attended our Q. M. at Dayton, Newaygo Co. We had an excellent meeting. I stopped with the church in Denver and held twelve meetings. The Lord gave me great liberty in talking upon the blessed Bible. I had to walk 180 miles in my trip to and from the Q. M., besides 100 more in my visit to White Water. I camped out two nights, in the woods, beside a log. They were good places to think of the blessed hope; and as I looked up through the trees, I could say with the poet,

"Come and reign, come and reign
Jesus on thy throne;
And oh! it fills my soul with joy,
To know we're almost home."

Any who wish my labors can address me at Sherman, Wexford Co. Mich. I should like to hear from the scattered ones in Northern Michigan.

Spirits in Prison.

1 Peter 3: 18; 1 Tim. 3: 16; "Put to death in flesh, made alive in spirit;" "Manifested in flesh, justified in spirit." Here flesh and spirit denote the two different states in which Christ was and now is. He was manifested in flesh; he was justified in spirit: he was put to death in flesh; he was made alive in spirit. Flesh and spirit are opposites, the one representing his condition on earth, that in which the mystery of godliness was manifested, and put to death; the other, that condition in which he arose, was made alive and justified, that is, acquitted of the charge of being a sinner, which charge was brought against him by the Jews. He was after his ascension no longer sarx, flesh, but pneuma, spirit.

Peter says, that he was put to death in flesh, that is, while wearing a fleshly nature; but made alive in spirit, that is, when he was made alive he no longer wore his fleshly nature; but he was and is pneuma, spirit, that is, he assumed that nature and glory which he had with the Father before the world was. In this spirit-nature he went and preached to the spirits in prison, that is, in that nature called by Peter pneuma he went and through Noah preached to the spirits in prison, the antediluvians. The idea that the term pneuma, 1 Peter 3: 18, means Christ's spirit separated from his body, has no support whatever. This notion has led to all the confusion existing in the minds of interpreters.

The dative pneumati is found Ezek. 37: 1, to denote that condition or state in which the prophet was when he saw his vision. So in Rev. 1: 10, John says: "I was in spirit on the Lord's day." To be in spirit is to be in a state free from the laws of flesh. In flesh, that is, in the ordinary condition in which men live, they cannot have visions of heavenly things. Hence, pneumati, in spirit, denotes that condition which is no longer subject to the laws of flesh. Christ, on leaving the world, passed into the condition known as pneumati, in spirit.

Putting the article the before the word spirit, and writing the same with a capital S, has destroyed the sense of many a passage.

Paul, to the Philippians, seems to set before us the opposite condition in which Christ was and is, with much clearness and fulness. "Who being in the form of God (morphee theou) thouht it not robbery to be equal with God, but divested himself, taking the form of a servant (morphee doulou) being formed in the likeness of man (homoiomati anthropoon), and having been found in fashion as a man (schemati) he humbled himself, having become obedient to death, the death of the cross."

Now if we read: Put to death in the form of a servant, but made alive in the form of God, we should have the exact sense of Peter's words. Put to death in flesh, made alive in spirit. For, before he came into the world, he had the form of God, and in that form, that is, in spirit, he through Noah preached to the antediluvians.

The idea of Christ's going to hades to preach is without support in either Scripture or reason.—H. P. Anderson, in Christian Standard.

The Church of Christ has become extensively secularized. Once it was indeed a peculiar body. It required no reference to written documents to ascertain whether a man were a Christian. Every adherent to the true faith was a "living epistle known and read of all men," all "took knowledge" of him that "he had been with Jesus."

But, alas! how different in our day "How is the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed!" The line which should clearly divide the church from the world has become indistinct, and the two classes would almost appear to be blended in one. Their pursuit of the vanities of earth appears equally earnest and unremitting; and their love of self and the pleasures of life equally strong. It It would seem that the mass of professors are trying the fearful experiment of determining with how little true godliness a man may obtain an entrance into the kingdom of heaven. —Sel.

Our Young Folks.

Robin Redbreast.

Little Robin Redbreast,
At the early dawn,
Uttering in music,
Pouring forth in song,
Praises and thanksgiving,
That all through the night
God hath brought it safely
To the morning light.

Little Robin Redbreast,
When the day is done,
Echoing still the music
That the day begun,
Grateful for the gladness
Of the sunny bowers,
Fearing naught of evil
Through the midnight hours.

Little Robin Redbreast,
Let me learn of thee
Gratitude and praises,
Faith and constancy—
When Life's day is ending,
Night of death draws nigh,
Like thee, meet the shadow,
Trusting fearlessly.

SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES.

None of us can ever be too careful in dealing with God's Holy Word. There were some quite good people once who chose this for a motto: "The Scriptures mean all that they can be made to mean." And even some of the ancient Jewish fathers, called Rabbins, said there was not even an apex of a letter which did not contain a mountain of meaning. What we want to know always is, however, just that and nothing more which the Spirit of God intends to say.

We must be very careful to quote the exact words when we attempt to give a verse in the Bible. A most excellent woman once told me, when she had lost a little son, that, "as her Heavenly Father had said," she knew "the Lord tempereth the wind to the shorn lamb." Now she thought this was in the Old Testament somewhere. But it is only in an old book called "The Sentimental Journey," by Laurence Sterne. And I once saw a Thanksgiving proclamation, written by a governor, which had in it (so he said) these "words of the prophet"; and then he quoted from Shakespeare: "Now is the winter of our discontent." It is wrong to make such blunders.

Sometimes, also, we may be mistaken in the meaning of what the Scriptures say. A little lad was seen by his mother washing his hands several times one Saturday forenoon at the penstock in the backyard. She feared there was trouble, and asked him what he did it for. He replied that there was to be a base-ball match that afternoon, and he wanted to be chosen by the big boys on one side or the other. But she could not understand what this washing so much had to do with that. When he told her he had learned in the Sundry-school this verse: "he that hath clean hands shall be stronger and stronger." Now you can easily find this sentence in the Book of Job; but it does not mean, surely, that little boys can get stout enough in a few hours under water to mate with big boys at base-ball. His teacher in the class should have explained it a little.

But even some teachers go wrong, and it gives much trouble. A minister told me the other day that one of his best workers prayed that the "dear Lord would take care of the little ones, and protect them from the ravages of the Lion of Judah." I wonder if he knew what he meant.

But more than anything else we must believe all the Bible says. Moses says the waters of the Red Sea were divided, so that they stood up as a wall on either side. Now it would be foolish for us to go to all the learned books, and study to find an account of some wind, or some tide, or some eddy which would explain how the waves flowed back and let the Israelites get across. God did this miracle in behalf of his people.

Just as foolish it would be for us to try to explain any other of these wonderful works. You remember Jesus told Simon Peter to cast his hook for a fish in the Sea of Galilee, that in its mouth he might find silver for tribute. Now it seems to me positively wrong for any one to say he only meant to have Peter go and catch a fish, then sell it, and bring the money to him.

There was a boy on my grandfather's farm, rather dull, but very honest and reverent. One of my uncles, in my hearing, once said to him:

"David, you surely do not believe that story in the Bible about Jonah's swallowing a whale! Why, a man's mouth would not possibly stretch enough for that."

Poor David Bruce! He did not see the perverse puzzle of the question: but brave soldier for the truth he was, and courageously he replied that God could certainly make a man's mouth of any size, and perhaps the whale was not very large. He got the miracle wrong, you see; but his spirit was right. He believed every thing he found written down in the Bible.

But then, on the other hand, we must be careful to reject as God's word everything which the Bible does not say. I have seen a commentary which attempted to find everything you can think of in the name of people in the Old Testament. For example, the author discovered the verse where Abraham is said to have, in his later life, married a woman called Keturah. Now Keturah means "sweet odor." Then he went on to say that odors in the Bible meant graces or beauties of character, well-pleasing to God. So he concluded that since this father of the faithful had Keturah he became eminently sanctified. All this may have been true of the patriarch before he died; but that text proves nothing about it. The simple-minded reader, like you and me, would only understand from it that the good old man took another wife in his advanced age; which in many respects is a different thing from growth in grace. All such foolish and far-fetched explanations of the Bible must be rejected.

I wonder how many of my young friends know what those two columns in fine print running down in the middle of each page in polyglot Bibles mean. They are called "marginal references," and are exceedingly valuable for one who is really searching the Scriptures. I can hardly explain their use to you without having you at my side. Ask some one who lives with you to show you how to use them. It helps us much, always, to compare one passage with another.

Supposing you are reading the 16th Psalm. You find David saying: "Neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." Why are those two words (Holy One) begun with capital letters? Your column of marginal references directs you to the 2d chapter of the Acts. There you learn that King David was not speaking of himself, but of the Son of God. "He spake of the resurrection of Christ." When you know that, how different the Psalm seems to you!

[The young readers of THE TIMES will please make a note of this, and remember that David in this Psalm speaks of the resurrection, and not of the state of the dead. In spite of Peter's plain declaration many people think that David spoke of the state of Christ in death, and not his resurrection from death. Peter meant what he said, and said what he meant. ED. TIMES.]

It used to give me some trouble in my boyhood to find that Scripture texts seemed to contradict each other. The way in which I earliest came to notice this was by some one's replying to my nonsense: "The Bible says, 'Answer a fool according to his folly.'" I admitted that; but said I: Yes, the Bible says, 'Answer not a fool according to his folly.'" All this was true, and yet God's Word never really says a thing and then takes it back. There is a time when we should answer a fool according to his folly, and there is a time when he deserves no answer at all. Just so there are occasions on which all of us should bear "one another's burdens," and there are occasions on which we are to let "every man bear his own burden." We have a right always to limit Scripture by Scripture in this way. And we may be assured the Bible never contradicts itself anywhere.

I am making too long a letter. Again I thank my two little friends for correcting my mistake; and I wish they would watch me carefully all the time. But it would be better to study God's Word carefully than mine. There was once a large and powerful city, called Thessalonica; and there was a little village, called Berea. The inhabitants of the one were wealthy and educated; of the other, poor and illiterate. But think what fine testimony God caused to be written of these two: "These Bereans were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the WORD with all readiness, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so."—C. S. Robinson, in Independent.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 8, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope; but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication,

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ Do NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

Post Office Address.

P. A. Smith, Jacksonville, Fla.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

The Faith of St Paul.

The immediate demand for this work so far exceeded our anticipations, that the first edition was exhausted ere we were aware. The second edition is in preparation, and will be ready soon. Orders will then be promptly filled.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

Notice.

Having closed my stated labors at DeKalb, I wish to say to brethren in destitute regions that I am at liberty and will attend to calls wherever my labors may be desired. My P. O. address until further notice, is DeKalb, Ill. S. B. MAREY.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No. 373 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post-paid, for 20c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 35 sheets, 50c.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

G W Rickard D Keeler W A Miller D S Burson W J Bursell C M Shepard J Rhoule C T Russell jr I E Southwick E Burrs L Record T Martin G Dawson J T Bowyer N S Hemenway E Wise M B Geer J Stone E Shepard J Allen R Lewis A Lewis H S Snyder E N Corzine P A Smith C J Benjamin W Johnston S C Wellcome C C Marston E W Perry S P Whitney A J Kirk W E Brown J A Smith S D Brown W P Barr W Covey I C Wellcome J Lyle A H Briggs D Thomas J Parker W Hashbanger N Harwood S Walters G W Farrier H S Angell F Udell C A Stewart C L Jones A Armour T J Bishop P Hitchcock J A Holton M M Maxwell E Wheeler W Ingmire S R Breed M D. G W Cline C H Williams E J Barrues I K Lombard J Handlin J R Preston C Burkholder C C Chadwick.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

J A Smith P A Smith L Record G Dawson J T Bowyer N S Hemenway E Wise M B Geer J J Warren A Lewis H S Snyder E N Corzine J Eaton.

Express.

W E Brown.

Obituary.

CUNNINGHAM.—Died at Cross Plains, Wis., Aug. 24, 1872, Br. Matt Cunningham; in his 64th year.

He leaves a beloved wife and a large family of children, also a numerous circle of friends to mourn his loss, but not without hope. The glorious Life-giver, hath conquered death and brought to our vision a world of fadeless bloom, where husband and father shall live to die no more.

Services at the grave by the writer. Sermon by Br. Haseltine. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

FARRAL.—Died at Cross Plains, Wis., Sept. 5, 1872, Sr. Elizabeth Farral; in her 17th year.

She leaves a weeping companion to sorrow in her absence, who less than one year ago chose her as the partner of his joys and sorrows so "long as they both should live." But he is, so soon, compelled to give her the parting hand, until Christ shall break the clods of the valley, and bid death's captives live to die no more. May this be sanctified to the salvation of the husband and good of all.

Services by the writer, from Heb. 11: 13.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

Book Notices, Etc.

THE HERALD OF LIFE announces its removal from New York City to Springfield, Mass. The reasons announced are, better mail facilities, economy, and the fact that its patrons are mostly in New England. The Herald is edited by Brn. L. H. Thorne and W. N. Pile, and its specialty is the non-resurrection of those who die in their sins.

THEY RISE: Suggestive Inquiries Concerning the Resurrection of the Dead, as taught in the New Testament. By D. A. Dryden. Cincinnati: Hitchcock & Walden.

We have not seen this work, and cannot speak of the merits of its argument. From others we learn that it takes the ground that release of the soul from hades is the resurrection. The fact that such a work by a Methodist minister should issue from a Methodist press is certainly significant.

The publishers of the ILLUSTRATED CHRISTIAN WEEKLY make a special offer of their elegantly illustrated weekly from the first of Sept. to the close of the present year, together with a finely engraved new Map of Palestine printed in colors, to any person on receipt of seventy-five cents. It is encouraging to know that this latest and best effort of the American Tract Society to stem the tide of corrupt literature by "overcoming evil with good," is meeting with well-merited success. Accept this offer, directing to the Illustrated Christian Weekly, New York.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE—an admirable weekly magazine. We know of nothing equal to it in its field. The number for Sept. 21 contains the usual amount and variety of the most instructive and interesting reading to be found in the whole range of foreign periodical literature of the day; including part two of a remarkable series of articles on The Belief in Immortality, an instalment of Off the Skelligs, by Jean Ingelow, a notice of Charles James Lever, etc., etc. The subscription price of this 64 page weekly magazine is $8 a year, or for $10 any one of the American $4 magazines is sent with The Living Age for a year. Littell & Gay, Boston, Mass., Publishers.

THE INQUIRER: Protestant or Catholic, Which?

The above is the title of a 46 page tract by I. C. Wellcome. It treats of the principles which underlie Roman Catholicism, the history of their introduction into the early church from pagan philosophy; presents the Scriptures and belief of the primitive church on these points, giving quotations in proof from history, and the fathers. The reformation under Luther is examined, the doctrine of the reformers with extracts is stated. The relapse of the Protestants to the Roman doctrines is developed, and tendency of the present-day Protestantism is shown to be clearly toward Roman Pagan Spiritism. The antidote is pointed out in the primitive doctrine of man's mortality. The quotations from ancient and modern authors are very valuable. Price, single 10c, per doz. 75c. For sale at THE TIMES office.

POCKET DICTIONARY.—Webster's Pocket Dictionary in its present shape, is a great improvement over previous editions and all similar works. In the first place it is neatly printed, and bound in morocco, with gilt edges. Then it contains 200 pictorial illustrations, which give a much clearer idea of the meaning of many words than could possibly be conveyed by the usual definition. The little volume, while being no larger than an ordinary pocket-book, embraces in its vocabulary a careful selection of over 18,000 of the most important words of the language, with definitions sufficiently clear, though necessarily brief, to meet the ordinary wants of any one requiring its use. Prefixed to the work are tables of money, weight and measure, abbreviations, words and phrases from foreign languages, rules for spelling, explanations, etc. It is in fact a most valuable little book, and is doubly worth the dollar it costs. It is very beautifully and substantially bound, with tucks and gilt edges. The Publishers, Iverson, Blakeman, Taylor & Co., 138 and 140 Grand Street, New York, will forward it by mail on receipt of One Dollar, or it can be bought almost anywhere.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

The churches in Iowa that wish me to visit them will please write me at Manchester, Iowa.

ISAAC ADRIAN.

Notice.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at Norwood Park, Cook Co. Ill., commencing Tuesday, Oct. 15, 1872. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

To Western Friends.

We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work be properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 15, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object.

D. MATHEWSON,
WM. SHELDON,
WM. MCCULLOCH,
DANIEL S. CLARK,
O. S. KNAPP,
FRANK BURR,
H. G. MCCULLOCH.

To the West.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that the Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work. WM. L. HIMES, Business Agent.

Notice.

Any delegates to the W. A. C. P. A. on the 15th, who may wish to remain in Chicago over the Monday night previous will please call at 23 North Sangamon St., and I will gladly accommodate them among our friends. Call early, or write to me that you wish to stay, so we may know how many to provide for.

FRANK BURR.

Notice.

My health continues very poor, and my cough is no better. I have no hopes of speedy improvement sufficient to enable me to resume public labor. I am compelled therefore, reluctantly, to ask a postponement of the proposed debate at Greenfield, Iowa. It will be physically impossible for me to attend it at the time agreed upon. I will, the Lord willing, attend to it as soon as my health will allow.

DANIEL S. CLARK.

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR
SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

[illegible]

BR. LAWVER writes that he will not be able to accompany me to Arkansas. I regret this very much. But I shall go alone. Late letters from that State are of a cheering character. Br. Rosebraugh says—"Ask the brethren to pray for us, and help us in our infancy and weakness in Arkansas."

[illegible]

Brookfield, Oct. 8, and over Sabbath, and not Oct. 6, as in former appointment.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour. God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors. JOSHUA V. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. W[illegible]GTON.

Meetings at the Advent Ch[illegible] chapel on Green St., near Madison, every [illegible], forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. [illegible]. Prayer-meetings at the chap[illegible] [illegible]esday and Thursday evenings. Traveling b[illegible]ren are invited to attend.

Amboy, preaching the first a[illegible]bbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 [illegible] Lutheran chapel. C. C. Ma[illegible]tor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, [illegible], and every four weeks until furth[illegible]

Hope S. H., Broughton, 1[illegible]ster S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, [illegible]

Round Grove, 10½ [illegible] every four weeks. A[illegible]EBUX.

Lanark, Nov. 4, 5.
Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Elida, Nov. 8–10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.

C. C. MARSTON.

Being unavoidably engaged in another field at the time, Br. S. E. Mabey, of Amboy, will fill my appointments as follows:

Ackerson's S. H., 10½ a. m., Oct. 13.
White Rock, 3 p. m., same day.
Rochelle, 7½ p. m., same day.

C. C. MARSTON.

The next Q. M. of the DeKalb District will be held with the church in DeKalb, commencing Thursday eve. Oct. 17, and holding over Sunday.

H. G. McCULLOCK, Sec'y.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MAREY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Equality, Gallatin Co., as Br. Ashley may arrange, Thursday eve., Oct. 24, and continue until Nov. 2.

Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., Saturday eve., Nov. 2 and over Sunday.

Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.

Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Sunday.

Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawver may arrange.

WM. MCCULLOCK.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

INDIANA.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of the Indiana Conference will be held at Union Mills, LaPorte Co, commencing Friday, Oct. 18 and continuing several days. The change in time from the first announcement is to enable brethren to better arrange for the Association Meeting. A general attendance is desired.

E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

The first Q. M. of the North Missouri and Southern Iowa Conference will be held with the Corydon church, at the Chester S. H., four miles east of Corydon, Wayne Co., Iowa, commencing Friday, Oct. 11, at 7 p. m.

As this is our first Q. M., we would like to see as many of the brethren and friends as can meet with us. We would be glad to see Eld. N. C. Miller, and as many of the ministers as can come. Br. Gibson is expected.

L. Z. LOTSPEICH, Sec'y.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The first Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa, Machester District, is to be held at Six Mile Grove, in Horton Township, Bremer Co., commencing Thursday, Oct. 10, at 7 p. m. and holding over Sunday. All the friends of Jesus are invited to be there, to work for God and the salvation of precious souls, for whom Jesus died. Br. I. Adrian is expected to be there, with the tent, if the weather will permit.

M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Thursday eve., Oct. 10.

Alma City, Waseca Co., Saturday eve., Oct. 12, 7½ o'clock.

Freedom, Converse S. H., 10½ a. m., Oct. 13.

Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2½ and 7½ p. m.

Kasota, Thursday eve., Oct. 15.

S. C. WELLCOME.

Windom, Cottonwood Co., Sunday, Oct. 13 and over the 20th, as Br. Patten may arrange.

I shall go by way of Owatonna and Mankato. Any wishing me to call can address me at Windom up to the 20th. WM. J. BURRELL.

St. Charles, Vowle S. H., 7.30 p. m., Oct. 19.
Utica Station S. H., 10.30 a. m., Sunday, Oct. 20.
Dudley S. H., 2.30 p. m., same day.
Enterprise, Page S. H., eve., Oct. 20.

S. C. WELLCOME.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUSE.

ARKANSAS.

The second Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Arkansas will be held in Flatwood, Izard Co., Nov. 20, and over the Sabbath. The churches will appoint their delegates in good season. And brethren isolated will please come and report the state of things in their region. Eld. J. V. Himes will be with us and help in the good work. Come brethren and sisters, let us have a grand rally for the truth.

S. ROSEBRAUGH,
J. B. BROWN.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.

S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., Oct. 10–13.
East Troy, Oct. 15, 16.
South Creek, Oct. 17. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

NEW YORK.

Wallace, Steuben Co., 2 p. m., Oct. 19, and over Sunday, the 20th.
Springwater, eve., Oct. 21, 22.
Savannah, Wayne Co., Oct. 23.
South Butler, Oct. 24–27.
Marion, Oct. 29, 30.
Lockport, Nov. 3.

P. S. If any of the above conflict with other appointments, or should not be desirable, please notify me in time at South Creek, Bradford Co. Pa., by Oct. 16. I will visit other places in New York State, if desired, until Nov. 20.

J. T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Blenny St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 25, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $800, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $20. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following

REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding..........................50c
Morocco " 75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT, Box 436, Concord, N. H.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,

1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

Advent Christian Times

“Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.”

VOL. X.—NO. 11. CHICAGO, OCTOBER 15, 1872. WHOLE NO. 442.

Advent Christian Times.

HADES.

THE HADES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

We have seen the view which the Old Testament gives us of Hades, as synonymous with the grave, as the region of death, as the receptacle of the body and soul of those who once had life but now are dead. We now proceed to consider the light in which the New Testament speaks of Hades.

And here we are met by an assertion, sometimes very confidently made, that since the resurrection of our Lord from the dead the souls of believers do not go to Hades at all, and that moreover our Lord descended to that region, probably during the period of his own lying in the grave, and did so for the purpose of bringing out of it the souls of all believers who had died before his resurrection. According to this opinion the souls of believers since Christ's resurrection, instead of going to that Hades to which the souls of believers before it went, ascend up to heaven, to where Christ is seated at the right hand of God, and there, in the enjoyment of life and glory, await the period of resurrection, when they shall rejoin the bodies raised in incorruption. Hades, on this view, is only for wicked souls since the resurrection of Christ.

In proof of this several texts are confidently quoted from various places in the New Testament. We do not deny that some of these texts have much apparent force, or that if they existed alone the opinion above advocated would derive very strong support. The texts however having this apparent force, when viewed by themselves, are exceedingly few in number. We do not think that there are more than three or four verses in the whole range of the New Testament which seem to have real force in this direction. However, three or four verses are not to be disregarded, nor will we disregard them. We think it is best however to present first the positive side of this question as it appears to us to be taught in Scripture. The only safe way of study, in our judgment, is first to take the general teaching of Scripture. If we come first to some particular passages, and refuse to go beyond them until we are fully satisfied of their truth, we do not think any certainty can ever be attained on any subject in Scripture. Particular texts will ever appear to speak one way to one mind, and perhaps another way to another mind. If they will not leave this debatable ground unless they are agreed as to its special bearing upon this question, we believe that they must only differ from each other forever. The true way is to take the general sense and analogy of Scripture. This can only be taken by an extensive and pains-taking research of it as a whole. This taken, they will bring it to bear upon the disputed passages, and surely, if we believe in the plenary inspiration of the Bible, we will be compelled to see that the general sense of Scripture must rule the interpretation of a few disputed passages. This shall be our mode of action. We will first present what appears to us the general sense of Scripture, and with it in our possession we shall expect to have the only key that can unlock the sense of the disputed places.

The proposition then which we propose to establish in this chapter is that believers since the resurrection of Christ go to Hades exactly as they did before that event; that they do not consequently ascend to heaven on death, either in soul or body, but still, in a condition of entire death, await the second coming of Christ and the resurrection in order to enter on and enjoy life of any kind. Our proposition is, that Hades is for believers since Christ's resurrection exactly what it was for believers before it.

If the reasoning of our last chapter be correct, it by itself decides this entire question. If Hades be, as we there showed, identical with the grave, there can be no doubt that Hades still exists in full power for believers in Christ, since no one contends for a moment that the grave has been abolished for believers in Christ, or will be abolished until the day of resurrection. The identity of Hades and the grave proves beyond any question that Hades exists in power for believers since gospel times as much as it did for believers before them. They who would uphold the contrary must first overthrow the reasoning of our last chapter.

They must also do a great many other things which we utterly defy them to do. They must prove that death since the resurrection of Christ means a very different thing from what it meant before his resurrection. Death, before the resurrection, meant the going of the body and the soul to Hades or the grave. Death, if this opinion be true, must mean the going of the body to the grave, and the ascending of the soul to heaven. One of the most important words in Scripture, one the most commonly used, one on which all reasoning as to the redemption of Christ must rest, must be thus shown to have two distinct senses in different parts of God's word. All through the Old Testament, and up to the time of our Lord's resurrection, it had one well-known, well-established, uniform sense. Since that event it came to have a widely different sense! Who can credit such a thing? Who can admit a view which would involve such embarrassment? Are we to suppose that death means one thing in the epistles of Paul and another in the writings of the Prophets? But Paul himself will admit of no such thing. He freely quotes the prophets speaking of death, and he never allows us to suppose for one moment that he means one thing and they another. The death which Paul declared would be abolished was the very same death which Isaiah and Hosea declared would be abolished.[1] And we therefore utterly reject a theory which would make death a different thing in different parts of the word of God. That word throughout speaks of it as one and the same thing; and we utterly repudiate a theory for which it affords not one solitary word of countenance. Death is throughout Scripture the same thing, and therefore wherever the souls of believers went before the resurrection of Christ, there they have gone since.[2]

Again, this theory lies open to the fatal objection that it not only alters the meaning of death in the two great divisions of the Scripture, but that it virtually abolishes death for the believer. God said to Adam, and through him to all born from him, “in the day that thou eatest thou shalt die:” and Paul declares that the consequences of Adam's sin have visited all mankind, believers and unbelievers alike. Satan contradicted God, and said that man would not die.[1] Now really we must say that a theory which teaches that man in what is called death only changes life here for a better life in heaven denies that the man who has made this change has truly died. It is true he says that the body dies. He makes this out, however, to be a positive advantage to the man. But the true man, the soul, has not, according to him, died at all. It left a clog and a mar to enter upon a far better and more glorious life. The theory we oppose is a theory which holds that believers do not truly die, when the Bible says they do truly die.

Again, this theory lies open to the grave objection that it supposes death to produce two persons out of one. We hope we will be excused when we say t[illegible], on the authority of Scripture, t[illegible]an, the person, in death rests in the g[illegible] Our opponents may repeat a hun[illegible]d times the saying—“Oh, the body is [illegible]he grave!” But we will say what Scripture, whenever it speaks, says, that the man is in the grave: “devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.”[2] Well, then, we have, on the authority of Scripture, one person in the grave. But here comes the theory we oppose, and says, the same person is in heaven! Then there are two persons made out of one. There is one Stephen in the grave: and there is a second Stephen in heaven: and still, there is but one Stephen after all! But where does the Bible tell us that death converts man into two? And certainly, unless it does, we are called upon in the name of our common reason to reject a palpable absurdity. We are glad that Scripture nowhere calls upon us to accept such contradictions.

But Scripture itself disavows such a theory. In their endeavor to escape from the palpable absurdity of creating two persons out of one by the operation of death, the theorists we contend against assert that there is truly but one person. The body they say, is laid aside for the time, and is not the man: the soul on death is the true person or man. Now we leave these theorists to explain away the numberless Scriptures which speak of man as laid in the grave, and turn to their theory that there is but one true man, the surviving soul. This surviving soul, they say, has gone to heaven. Then according to them, the true man has gone to heaven. Paul has gone to heaven, and John, and all the rest of the true believers! But what says Scripture? Speaking of one of the most eminent believers, one who since the resurrection of Christ has, according to our theorists, been taken out of Hades and brought up to heaven, inspired Peter, speaking of him after the resurrection of Christ, said: “David is not ascended into the heavens!”[1] What are our theorists to do with this passage? How are they to explain it away? They say, “Oh, David here, means David's body!” Well, what of that? Do they not see that in saying so they only overthrow their own house of cards? If David means David's body, then David's body means David: i. e., Scripture obstinately persists in calling that body David which these men say is not David at all. If the soul of David at death were truly David, and if this soul had ascended into heaven, then it would be true that David had ascended into heaven. But Scripture denies that he has so ascended, and in so doing insists that the body of David in the grave was David himself. If we will accept Scripture, the soul is not the man, but is the life of the man. When the man has it he is a living man, and when he is without it he is a dead man. But to separate the man or person from the body, Scripture does not permit us for a moment to do.

But, leaving those contradictions in which the theory we speak of involves its supporters, we will go to the plain testimony of the New Testament. We will show these two things: first that the New Testament teaches us that Hades exists for believers since Christ's resurrection just as it existed for believers before that event. Secondly, that the New Testament gives us exactly the same view of it that the Old did, viz., as a place of death, and the receptacle of the dead bodies of men, i. e., as identical with the grave.

We think it is to be taken as an indisputable fact, readily proved from the general testimony of Scripture, that the death of Christ was in every respect identical with the death which all his people die, since his resurrection as before. He tasted our death for us all. We do not think it here requisite to establish this from reference to special texts. Scripture throughout speaks of his death and that of his people as one and the same, and it is incumbent on those who would maintain any material distinction between the two to prove it by direct testimony of Scripture. In one respect only, and that respect does not concern the nature of his death, but its duration only, did the death of Christ differ from ours. It was that it should continue for so short a time, that his flesh should not see corruption. Yet this even was especially noted in prophecy.[2] But in the proper elements of death itself the death of Christ was the very same as that of all his people. It follows therefore, in direct and essential consequence, that as it was a main part of his death that his soul went to Hades, and remained there until his resurrection, so it is a main part of the death of all his people from the beginning to the end of this age that their souls go on death to Hades and remain there till resurrection.

But the nature of resurrection, as it is expressly defined in Holy Scripture, proves beyond a doubt that the soul of every one of Christ's people is in Hades up to that event. What is meant by resurrection in Scripture? Let us hear the Apostle Peter defining it on the day of Pentecost. It is not merely raising the body out of the grave, but it is also bringing the soul out of Hades. Peter's word's are—“He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in Hades, neither his flesh did see corruption.”[1] It will perhaps be replied that Peter here only speaks of the resurrection of Christ, and that consequently his definition of resurrection need not apply to that of his people. But this answer does not suit the case, for we are expressly told in many Scriptures that the resurrection of Christ is identical with that of his believing people.[2] But since they are identical it follows that on resurrection the souls of his people come out of Hades just as the soul of Christ did on his. It is strange doctrine which would teach that believers since the resurrection of Christ resemble their Lord neither in death nor resurrection.

HENRY CONSTABLE.

---

[1] 1 Cor. 15: 54; Hos. 13: 14; Isa. 26:19.
[2] Rom. 5: 12-14.

[1] Gen. 2: 17; 1 Cor. 15; 22; Gen. 3: 4.
[2] Acts 8: 2.

[1] Acts 2. 34.
[2] Ps. 16: 10.

[1] Acts 2: 31.
[2] Rom. 6; 5; Cor. 15: 20.

Germination.

We hear much now-a-days about germs, germinant principles, and so on. Not content with doctoring divinity, learned (?) men have begun to doctor nature, shutting their eyes, and blindly leading the blind. Look at this: “Nothing but the germinant principle of the grain sown enters into the new grain.” What do you call that? I call it a l-i-e.

Plant a separate “germinant principle” and make it grow, and I will retract. It never was, never will, never can be done.

What is the truth regarding germination? First, “That which thou sowest is not quickened except it die.” Die does not mean rot: rotten seed does not grow. Die means lose life. The seed must be ripe, it must have ceased growing and dried up, it must first die; and,

Second; be buried. A certain degree of heat, moisture and darkness is essential to germination; this is secured by burying the dead seed in the ground. What then? Then the seed absorbs moisture, the starch is changed into sugar, and the contents of the seed become a milky pulp, and swells, till the point of the root pierces the shell downward, and the future stem comes forth upward. The milky pulp is the food of the embryo plant; a set of vessels like veins exist which convey the, now fluid, contents of the seed to the plant. Similar is the process of hatching a chicken from an egg—all that is left in either case is AN EMPTY SHELL!

Do our “germinant principle” wiseacres eat the eggs and hatch the germs! Do they grind the grain and sow the germ? Why not? I believe they know better, but in order to sustain a false theology they have to corrupt the inspired illustration of the resurrection.

“Nothing but the germinant principle of the grain sown enters into the new grain. Nothing but the germinant principles of the old body enters into the new body.” There's the argument! It is not that people may eat the eggs, and save the seed-corn, that would be practical,—but that “THERE IS NO RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.” Shame on the miserable sophistry!

“There is no need of this speculation [about germinant principles] the apostle's account is plain.

A. ARMOUR.

Era please copy.

"Waiting for the Adoption."

(Rom. 8: 23.)

Waiting amid the shadows
For the blushing of the dawn,
Waiting amid the darkness
For the sunlight of the morn;
Waiting, because th' appointed age
Has not told out its years,—
Waiting, because a groaning earth
Has not wept all its tears.

Toil-worn and very weary,—
For the waiting time is long,—
Leaning upon the promise,—
For the Promiser is strong.
Waiting, because some straying sheep
Are on the mountains still,
They must be sought, and found, and saved,
It is the Father's will.

Waiting, 'mid cruel taunting,
From many a scorning foe,—
Chilled by the bitter night winds
The lamp of faith burns low;
Waiting, because a patient God
Is pitiful and kind,—
The seeking Shepherd may not leave
One halting lamb behind.

Waiting, 'mid angry billows,
For the breaking of the light,—
Heart-sick, and sad, and fretful
With toiling all the night!
Waiting, because the Master stands
To watch the rising tide,
And he would have us cast the net
Upon the other side.

Waiting, while skies still blacken
With storm-clouds hanging low,
Eyes fail with looking upward
To find the emerald bow.
Waiting, because the Master's eye
Is on the ripening grain,
Th' impatient sickle must be stayed,
Waiting the "latter rain."

Waiting, with hands still busy,
Chiding the tears that fall,
Stopping sometimes to listen,
If haply He should call.
Waiting, because the mighty stream
Flows on with ceaseless tide;
There's room within the palace halls,
The open door stands wide.

Beguiling waiting hours,
With rapturous thought of home,
Breathing a yearning whisper,
"When will the Master come?"

* * * * * *

Hark! get thee to the mountains,
There is a sound of distant song,
The Bridegroom King is coming,
For his bride has waited long!

—British Herald.

Sanctification! What is It?

To minister peace and comfort to those who, though truly converted, have not laid hold of a full Christ, and who, as a consequence, are not enjoying the liberty of the gospel, is the object I have in view in considering the important and deeply interesting subject of sanctification.

I shall, therefore, proceed to quote a few leading passages from the New Testament in which the doctrine is unfolded. These passages will teach us two things, namely, What sanctification is, and how it is effected.

1 Cor. 1: 30—"But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." Here we learn that Christ "is made unto us" all these four things. God has given us, in Christ, a precious casket, and when we open that casket with the key of faith, the first gem that glitters in our view is "wisdom;" the second is "righteousness;" the third is "sanctification," and the fourth is "redemption." We have them all in Christ. As we get one, so we get all. And how do we get one and all? By faith. But why does the apostle name redemption last? Because it takes in the final deliverance of the believer from under the power of mortality, when the voice of the archangel and the trump of God shall either raise him from the tomb, or change him, in the twinkling of an eye.

Will this act be progressive? Clearly not; it will be done "in the twinkling of an eye." We are in one state now, and "in a moment" we shall be in another. In the brief point of time expressed by the rapid movement of the eyelid, we shall pass from corruption to incorruption; from dishonor to glory; from weakness to power. What a change! It will be immediate, complete, eternal, divine.

But what are we to learn from the fact that "sanctification" is placed in the group with "redemption"? We learn that what redemption will be to the believer in the future, so sanctification is to him now. In a word, sanctification, in the sense in which it is here used, is an immediate, a complete, an eternal, a divine work. The one is as immediate as the other. The one is as complete and independent of man as the other. No doubt, when the believer shall have undergone the glorious change, there will be hights of glory to be trodden, depths of glory to be penetrated, wide fields of glory to be explored. All these things will occupy us throughout eternity.

But, then, the work which is to fit us for such scenes will be done in a moment. So also is it in reference to sanctification, the practical results of the thing itself, as spoken of in this passage, will be continually developing themselves: but the thing itself is done in a moment. I do not wish to lower the standard of personal holiness; but I am fully convinced that a superstructure of true, practical holiness can never be erected on a legal basis; and hence it is that I press 1 Cor. 1: 30 upon the attention of our readers. It is to be feared that many who have, in some measure, abandoned the legal ground in the matter of "righteousness," are yet lingering thereon for "sanctification." I believe this to be the mistake of thousands, and am most anxious to see it corrected.

The passage before us would, if simply received into the heart by faith, entirely correct this serious mistake. All intelligent Christians are agreed as to the fundamental truth of "righteousness without works." All freely and fully admit that we cannot, by any efforts of our own, work out a righteousness for ourselves before God. But it is not just so clearly seen that righteousness and sanctification are put upon precisely the same ground in the word of God. We can no more work out a sanctification than we can work out a righteousness. We may try it, but we shall sooner or later find out that it is utterly vain. We may vow and resolve, we may labor and struggle, we may cherish the fond hope of doing better to-morrow than we have done to-day, but, in the end, we must be constrained to see, and feel, and own that as regards the matter of sanctification, we are as completely "without strength" as we have already proved ourselves to be in the matter of righteousness.

And oh! what sweet relief to the one who has been stumbling along the path of personal holiness to find, after years of unsuccessful struggle, that the very thing he longs for is treasured up in Christ, and is ready to his hand this moment, even a complete sanctification to be enjoyed by faith!

Such an one may have been battling with his habits, his lusts, his temper, his passions; he has been making the most laborious efforts to subdue his flesh and grow in inward holiness; but alas! he has failed. He finds, to his deep sorrow, that he is not holy, and yet he reads that "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Not, observe, without a certain measure or attainment in holiness, but without the thing itself, which every Christian has from the moment he believes, whether he knows it or not.

"Salvation." Oh! what a glorious word! And yet perfect sanctification is as fully included in the word "salvation" as is "wisdom, righteousness and redemption."

We did not obtain Christ by effort, but by faith; and when we laid hold on Christ we received all that is in Christ. "Christ is all and in all." "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." Again we read, "And ye are complete in him." "For it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." Salvation is a golden chain which stretches from everlasting to everlasting, and every link of that chain is Christ. It is all Christ from first to last. Glory be to his name.

All this is as simple as it possibly can be. The believer's standing is in Christ, and if in Christ for one thing, he is in Christ for all. I am not in Christ for righteousness, and out of Christ for sanctification. If I am a debtor to Christ for righteousness, I am equally a debtor to him for sanctification. I am not a debtor to legality for either the one or the other. I get both by grace through faith, and all in Christ. Yes, all—all in Christ.

The moment the sinner comes to Christ, and believes on him, he is taken completely off the old ground of nature; he loses his old legal standing and all its belongings, and is looked upon as in Christ. God only sees him in Christ and as Christ. "As he is, so are we in this world." There is but one standing for every child of God, every member of Christ. Their knowledge, experience, power, gifts and intelligence may vary, but their standing is one. Whatever of righteousness or sanctification they possess, they owe it all to their being in Christ. If they have not a perfect sanctification, neither have they a perfect righteousness. But 1 Cor. 1: 30 teaches that Christ is made both the one and the other to all believers. It does not say we have righteousness and "a measure of sanctification". We have just as much Scriptural authority for putting the word "measure" before righteousness as before sanctification. The Spirit of God does not put it before either. Both are perfect, and we have both in Christ.

If I reason from what I am in myself, instead of from what I am in Christ, I must arrive at a wrong conclusion. We are very much disposed to reason upwards from ourselves to Christ, instead of downwards from Christ to self.

Again the apostle Paul, in the verses preceding 1 Cor. 6: 11, draws a fearful picture of fallen humanity, and plainly tells the Corinthian saints that they had been just like that. "Such were some of you." This is plain dealing. There are no flattering words—no daubing with untempered mortar—no keeping back the full truth as to nature's total and irretrievable ruin. "Such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified, in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

What a striking contrast between the two sides of this "but." On the one side we have all the moral degradation of man's condition, and on the other we have all the perfectness of the believer's standing before God. This truly is a marvelous contrast. The moment in which they received Paul's gospel, they were "washed, sanctified and justified." They were fit for the kingdom; and had they not been so, it would have been a slur upon the divine workmanship. The most inexperienced believer is "clean every whit," not as a matter of attainment, but as the necessary result of being in Christ. "We are in him that is true." Could any one be in Christ, and at the same time be only half sanctified? Assuredly not. He will, no doubt, grow in the knowledge and experience of what sanctification really is: he will enter into its practical power, its moral effects upon his habits, thoughts, feelings, affections and associations.

Let us give Christ all the glory, and trust in his word. "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption. That, according as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." THOMAS HOWELL.

San Francisco, Cal.

An Excursion in Theology.

ONE Sunday afternoon I came down to the verandah and found in progress an animated discussion between a Second Adventist on one side and representatives of several religious bodies, notably a Presbyterian, two or three Episcopalians and a Roman Catholic, on the other. The Second Adventist, partly in answer to questions, was unfolding the principles and grounds of his belief, referring to the Scriptures with great freedom, often by chapter and verse, while his opponents were suggesting difficulties, both Scriptural and inherent. It was curious to see the Protestants and the Roman Catholic, like Pilate and Herod again, reconciled for the moment, at least, in opposing views to which they felt a common repugnance; but the accord was not to continue; gradually, as the diversity of views became apparent, all professing to be drawn from the Bible, the Roman Catholic led the discussion to the familiar position, "We need an authoritive interpreter, the church." The spell was broken; the Protestant allies could not see the necessity, and the discussion was presently at an end. What the effect of our own private heresy might have been, if broached, may never be known, yet it would probably have added a further disturbing element to a discussion already vexed.

But what were the views of the Second Adventist? In some respects antipodal to those of our Spiritualist friends. Life in a future state, not precisely immortality, for that belongs only to God and to Christ, is a special gift to the Lord's own. We are now living a purely animal life, and at death we become absolutely dead, soul and body. The penitent thief is dead; all who have died, both good and bad, are utterly dead. At an early day the present order of things will close. Heaven, the only heaven spoken of as man's abode, is literally and materially here, just above or on the earth; for in Genesis we read of the firmament separating the waters above from those below. The earth is not to be destroyed by fire, but only renovated. The mountains will cleave asunder and the Mediterranean flow over and water the deserts of Arabia. Christ is now with God in that "light which no man can approach unto;" "whither I go ye cannot come;" but in that blessed future they will both, in some way, dwell with man. The Bible knows of no conscious state between death and the "first resurrection," namely, of the just. All are asleep, in Jesus or in death.

This gentleman has attained to a wonderful familiarity with the Bible, though he seems to take every word of it in the most literal and material sense. It is certainly very striking what new meaning many difficult passages exhibit when interpreted by this theory. The glowing pictures of the prophets, Paul's ecstasies, the Apocalyptic vision, fall naturally into their places as related to this divine drama. The conversations of Jesus with the Jews recorded in the earlier part of the Fourth Gospel, notably in the fifth and sixth chapters, and his parting words to the disciples, perhaps all appear in a new and distincter light when read with this controlling idea.

—We find the article from which the above extract is taken in the Liberal Christian, a Unitarian journal. The writer goes on to urge the world's day-dream of a good time coming, in this present world. We quote the first part to show that a somewhat popular journal can give a candid notice of Adventism. We have seen nothing as fair as this since Dr. Quint wrote in the Congregationalist. ED.

Solemn Facts.

We are taught in the Scriptures:

1. That in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. (Tim. 4: 1.)

2. Unclean spirits were to go forth to deceive the nations just before the coming of Christ as a thief. (Rev. 16: 14–16.)

3. Iniquity was to abound and love wax cold when the end was near. (Matt. 24: 12.)

3. Evil servants were to say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and eat and drink with the drunken, just before the judgment day. (Mat. 24: 48.)

5. Men were to be saying peace and safety, when sudden destruction is coming upon them. (1 Thes. 5: 1–3.)

6. The world was to be careless at Christ's coming as when destroyed by the flood in Noah's days. (Mat. 24: 37–39.)

7. Men were to be sinful and secure as they were at Sodom's overthrow. (Luke 17: 28–30.)

8. In the last days scoffers were to come, walking after their own lusts, saying, Where is the promise of his coming? (Pet. 3: 3, 4.)

9. The Church were to be slumbering and sleeping before the Bridegroom came. (Mat. 25: 1–5.)

10. Christ was to come suddenly as the lightning's flash. (Mat. 24: 27.)

11. Fearful sights and great signs from heaven were to foreshadow his approach. (Luke 21: 11.)

12. There were to be great earthquakes in divers places. (Luke 21: 11.)

13. There was to be distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves thereof roaring, near the end. (Luke 21: 25.)

14. The nations were then to be angry and prepared for war. (Rev. 11: 18; Joel 3: 9–16.)

15. Many were to run to and fro, and knowledge was to be increased, at the time of the end. (Dan. 12: 4.)

16. The gospel was to be preached in all the world, and the end was then to come. (Mat. 24: 14.)

17. The Church were taught to be ever looking for that blessed hope of Christ's appearing. (Tit. 2: 12, 13.)

18. They that are ready will then go in to the marriage of the Lamb. (Mat. 25: 10.)

19. Therefore Christians ought to be always watching for the coming of the Lord. (Mark 13: 32–37.)

20. And sinners are commanded to repent and prepare to meet their Judge. (Acts 3: 19; 17: 30, 31.)—Sel.

Not a Necessity.

But endless misery is a necessity; in no other way can God keep the universe in order. How is this fact ascertained? Has God told our friends? Practically it does not keep this small part of the universe in order; evil triumphs over good; bad men continue to defy the terrors of God. Further, if God be all powerful this can not be a necessity. God might choose this method of government, but is not compelled to use it. Indeed it is of all methods the least calculated to attain its ends; severity of punishment, making no distinctions in crimes, in other words unjust punishments, which most men can see are unjust, never restrain from evil. When men were hung for sheep stealing, more sheep were stolen than when the law was modified. The punishment being altogether out of proportion to the offence, men convince themselves that they will escape. And in regard to eternal punishment, which men think they don't deserve, they easily persuade themselves they will not receive it. And indeed the penalty is so awful, so utterly disproportionate to the offence, that the creed which insists upon endless misery as the fate of the unrepentant, teaches that by an act of faith in Christ, the greatest sinner may escape the penalty of his wrong doing and at once enter heaven. The only danger before the sinner is that he may die before he repents. But even if death seize him before he has formally confessed his love of Jesus the Roman Catholic Church teaches that he may escape by means of masses for the dead, and Protestant Churches express a hope; some word is remembered which seemed to express Christian faith, some act which hinted at its possession. Practically, theoretically, the doctrine is ineffective.—Cor. Star in the West.

Social and Public Hypocrisy.

Error, sin and selfishness always favor a covert and hidden life policy: truth, virtue and humanity a revealed, open, outspoken course. Silence is the sign of death; the word the proof of life. Ignorance, sensuality and crime are always hushing the truth to sleep, and smoothing down the counterpane, walking about on tip-toe, darkening the windows and making an artificial night. If they make any noise it is like the frightened bird's, to divert attention from her own nest; or, like the Pharisees, praying loudly in the corners of the streets, while their confederates are silently robbing and murdering in the recesses of the dwellings. Polished ignorance, refined sensuality and sublimated crime are like their coarser sisters, and are in unconscious league with them. They are all in favor of washing the outside of the cup and platter that nobody may suspect the poison within; of grassing over and whitening the sepulchres that it may not be noticed what dead men's bones are striving to tell. They object to explorations and light, the application of costly tests and laborious lustrations. They grudge the money it costs to bring murderers and robbers to light.

If there is plague or cholera or fever in the city they would bribe the venal portion of the press and Board of Health to suppress the truth, that the visits of traders might not be diminished. Society is with them a thing to be managed; and truth is to be given, not like food, but like medicine—by grains and scruples and under professional direction—not with every meal, and at the option and measure of the appetite. It is true, religious Phariseeism is not the crying sin of our day—but social Phariseeism is. We are not so much wishing to pass ourselves off for religious people, when we are not; but to pass ourselves off for respectable people, and people of good social standing, when we are not. Nobody is respectable who is trying to seem anything he is not, whether it be richer, wiser, better or more pious. He is so far forth a hypocrite. And he may be this by concealing his convictions and opinions, his conduct and behavior, his circumstances and means. If he think customs, institutions and practices weak, wicked or injurious, and fail to say so; if he disbelieves popular creeds and continues to support them; if he see his neighbor practising vices and follies and smiles treacherously on his guilt; if he perceives others to be dealing with him under a mistake as to his resources, and holds his tongue; if he live, luxuriously at the cost of those who confide in him, he is, in every case, a hypocrite.

Our comunity is full of social Phariseeism—of smothered fact and hollow pretension, and hood-winked reality. We are not in the habit of believing the truth safe, reality the policy of society, fact the basis of life. There is an amazing delicacy in the exposure of the simple truth. It must be covered up in a dozen wrappages before it can appear in safety and honor.

It is the hardest thing in the world to get down to the unyielding, bare reality. In an age which boasts of its courage and frankness, there is little dependence upon what rumor or society says. Visit the houses of fashion, and you know not whether you are seeing and admiring the property and tastes of your host, or what is hired or mortgaged. Walk in the most quiet and orderly streets, and you do not know that gamblers and women of shame are not watching behind the drawn blinds of decorous houses. Buy the best reputed stocks in the market, and discover, at the time you ask your dividend, that you have got an unlawful certificate. Entertain a stranger of talents and parts, and a few months reveal his letters of introduction to be forgeries.

And thus hollowness and fraud and hypocrisy can go on, and the respectability and virtue and sincerity of the community make no outcry, protest or exposure! And why? Because it is troublesome, costly and vain. What is the use, we say, of complaining of what can't be helped? Yes; but why cannot it be helped, except that we made ourselves parties to the iniquity and hollowness and corruption years and years ago, and did not protest and complain then when it would have cost us some stoppage in our business, our ambition or our ease? We were willing there should be no inconvenient stir then; willing not to be noticed and observed much in our own concerns; willing to wink at small sins and follies and to countenance moderate pretences and hypocrisies! But we never thought it would come to this. And so we held our tongues when we should have thundered, and smiled when we should have frowned, and cheered when we should have groaned, and read what we should have thrown into the fire, and voted for what we should have protested against, and imitated what we should have denounced. And so we have kept the truth in leading-strings! So we have lost courage, conscience, inward impulse, faith in goodness, faith in God. See how it has gone with us through this suppression of conviction, this covert, hidden way, along which our moral feelings have grouped.

Not merely in public concerns have we missed our mark, but in the education of our children and in the prospects of domestic virtue and happiness have we darkened our homes..... Suppose we had spoken out from the first against the extravagance, the ostentation, the vanity and folly of street-dress, and fully indulged our instinctive aversion and heartfelt ridicule at the ballroom attire in which what should be modest women appear, on the wasteful hospitality, the ruinous risk, the bankrupt extravagance of our social fashion, should we now have come to think it hopeless to correct what civilized Europe, not to say Christian morality, regards with mingled laughter and indignation? Had we expressed in time our derision for the extravagant absurd manner in which children are dressed—curled and flounced and made miniatures of grown-up fashion—their health exposed by uncovered limbs, their vanity stimulated, their simplicity flung to the winds—should we be in despair about a coming generation worthy to claim their own grandmothers, or perpetuate virtue, prudence and domestic peace? No! we have no business to cover our convictions, repress and hide out testimony, whatever the cost of expressing it may be, against the sins and follies of the world and of the age. And we are reaping now the consequences of our silence and our complicity with wrong.

For if we cover the truth and hide the testimony of our consciences against the sins and perils of our time and place, we may be sure that they will force themselves into the light by the fearful consequences they carry in their dark bosoms. Silence, the compromising temper, the winking at wrong, the evasion of responsibility, the neglect of criticism—all are acting upon the vice and ignorance and spiritual darkness and depravity of this community as the wadding and ramrod act upon the charge of a cannon, pushing it into closer and darker quarters, only to increase its explosive and destroying power. For this is one of the most alarming peculiarities of the present state of things among us, that we are professedly a moral, respectable people, having a great regard for appearances, generously sustaining churches and charities, putting down lotteries, gambling-houses and haunts of shame, closing drinking shops on the Sabbath, sustaining a costly police, and in short clothing ourselves in garments of apparent virtue and purity. And what does this external pretension and polish of the surface amount to? The drinking shops that are not found in are now found under or adjoining the places of public amusement; the gambling is carried on in spots which the police can pretend not to see or know. A new market, a street railroad, the grading of the street, any measure, in short, claming to be for the public benefit, connot be examied into closely. It is the rottenness of the state, this shining outside and filthy interior which is so alarming. If our vice and corruption and wickedness were not associated with external decency, respectability and energy it would be less critical. But when we are associating on equal terms with men who may be plotting our ruin, when the community owes many of its triumphs and much of its enterprise to men whom it suspects of being in league with villians, to what a pitch of peril have we not arrived.

It is idle to say we have no duties and no powers under such a state of society. Our past negligence and selfish avoidance of responsibility have complicated and increased our difficulties, without in the least diminishing the necessity of relief, or changing the mode of cure. There must be no more pleasant self-delusion about the actual perils and depravities of this hypocritical state of society. Psetense, externality, mere surface honesty, hypocrisy reign. We must begin to call things by their right names. We must dash down the disguises, wash off the paint, tear open the forgeries, probe the secrets. We can and we must arouse ourselves, and see that these things go no further. Every man must call his brother to the rescue. We must deal plainly with our own faults and sins, and place ourselves in position to talk effectively and act decisively in regard to the sins and follies of those about us.—Liberal Christian.

"The Seals Opened:

Or the Apocalypse Explained." By Enoch Pond, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary, Bangor.'

We are very glad to see this new effort to expound this portion of the Sacred Word, especially as it comes from the post-millennial side of the Second Advent question, and by an acknowledged ability in the Orthodox School. It is evidently true that Dr. Pond has obtained much light on "Revelation" since he wrote up a review of Mr. Miller thirty years ago. In the preface of his book he says:—"Years ago I flattered myself that I might interpret the first five chapters and the last three; but all between seemed dark and mysterious. In the midst of unexpected visions and symbols I was confounded, and could see nothing clearly."

When the Jesuit and German method of interpreting the book was published in America, and endorsed by Prof. Moses Stuart, of Andover College, it fully aroused the Dr. to "a new and earnest attention." We remember it to have produced the same effect upon the minds of many others; and it is not strange that Mr. Pond should feel alarmed for the safety of Orthodoxy when such a strong man in its school as Mr. Stuart, who forty years before wrote a warning to the American churches against "German Neology," had now come to endorse it himself in order to meet the pressing scriptural arguments of Second Adventists. The Dr. speaks in high terms of Prof. Stuart, as his friend and associate, and then enters at once upon the work of refuting his labored and absurd comments on the Apocalypse, as also those of Prof. Cowles, which by the way are scarcely worthy of notice: many of our striplings have done this over and over again. It is gratifying, however, to see how easily Mr. Pond demolishes the efforts of Mr. Stuart who places the writing of the Apocalypse and the fulfillment of all its symbols prior to and at the overthrow of Jerusalem and the Jewish polity.

The position claimed for this book is, that, "avoiding the theories of Rationalists and Roman Catholics on the one hand, and of the Adventists on the other, the plan of interpretation which we have pursued is the same which has been held by the great body of evangelical ministers and Christians in America and in England for the last hundred years." With this start, we might expect to find the Adventist's views avoided or demolished; but to our surprise, we find their views on the principle of interpreting symbols, their application of them, heartily endorsed, and much history quoted to show the fulfillment of the events of the "seals," "trumpets," and "vials," so similar to the positions of Advent publications that one would incline to take him for an Adventist. On the trumpets, he is very clear, applying the first four to the calamities on the Eastern Roman empire—very familiar to our boys and girls. The fifth and sixth trumpet he applies to the conquests of Mohammed and the Turks, adopting and defending at length the year-day theory, giving its use in Dan. 7, 9, and 12, and giving a partial interpretation of those chapters. Thus the Dr. "runs well for a season," and his book, we think, will do a good work among Orthodox people in enlightening them on many points they have much neglected.

We find, however, that Mr. Pond has not given special attention to the chronology of the world. He says, in computing the times of Daniel and John, that the papal beast "arose about A. D. 756, and 1260, years added to this will make the millennium to commence in A. D. 2000, or, in the six-thousandth year of the world." Here he adopts Usher's Chronology, which has been shown by Messrs. Miller, Clinton, Bliss, Dr. Hales, and many of the English and American writers, to be quite inaccurate.

There are some very curious opinions in the book, as, that the four beasts (living creatures) of Rev. 4: 6, are cherubim, and that "the cherubim is a superior class of angels," and that "holy angels are redeemed souls." See page 40. Spiritualism, really. There is much valuable matter in the book. The two chief errors which perplex its author and lead him to "see men as trees walking" are, that the dead saints are in heaven, in the full enjoyment of reward, where they are to live forever, instead of being raised from the dead to reign on the new earth; second, that Christ is to reign in spirit and not in person in the millennium. A careful reading of the book will cause the Bible doctrine to shine the clearer.

I. C. Wellcome.

Perfect Peace.

Words are inadequate to express the sweet comfort which perfect peace affords those who can testify to the precious love, through which they were enabled to view the true light of the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Glory to God that my eyes were opened to see the plain and legible teachings of his blessed word. It is perfect peace, indeed, to realise that we are passing on our way to the great Celestial City. A city of light and love. The abode of the saints and the true inheritance, promised through the atonement of the blood of Jesus.

Here is no peace, outside of the study of God's word, and the deep meditation of things to come. Direct faith in the Son of God enables us to rest under the consoling assurance that we are indeed at peace with our Maker. We ought to consider that we tarry here but a brief period, and it matters little "what we eat or wherewith we are clothed;" our main object should be to have an eye single to the glory of God.

Sweet peace comes to the sinner when he has found acceptance with Jesus. Prevailing peace to the soldier of Christ as he wars on, fighting manfully against the adversary of his soul. And perfect peace is to him who has searched into the unsearchable riches of God's holy word. Many deem their views of the Bible correct. They enjoy a sort of peace which overcomes their understanding. They labor under delusion to a great extent. I speak from personal experience, and can sympathize with those now probed to the very core by the existing Platonic perversions. Would to God they might embrace the "peace which passeth all understanding," and the true light of the revelation of the mysteries to come. Is it not perfect peace to the earnest Christian to know that he is bound for the New Jerusalem? that he is to be a bright and a shining light in the new earth? that he may sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—near the throne, and praise with them the Lamb of God, who saved him through his blood?

Yes, brethren, such is the peace of my understanding. I long for the day that shall enable me to view Jesus with my naked eye. Oh! the transporting, joyful peace we shall share when Jesus comes. Then can we perceive the glory of his power, the "peace which passeth all understanding." God grant us peace in that hour.

How many of us are there in readiness for the solemn scene, should it come in a moment? Can we not consecrate ourselves anew to Jesus? We are assured that none but the pure in heart shall enter there. Let us put on the "whole armor of God," stand for the truth and proclaim the advent of Jesus as "nigh, even at the door."

Robert V. Philip.

Prayers for the Dead.

My attention was drawn to the letter from your correspondent "L," published in the Witness, in which he inquires, in what part of the Scriptures the Jews were instructed or commanded to pray for the repose of the souls of the dead.

Having some knowledge of the Hebrew laws, rites, &c., I thought I would take the liberty of replying to his query.

As regards the customs of saying prayers for the repose of the soul upon the recurrence of the anniversary of a parent's death, as was the intention of Mr. Nathan, it is not biblical but is a later ceremony, the origin of which may be found in the Talmud and Rabbinical writings, works held sacred by the Jews. The name of this prayer in Hebrew is Kadish, a word which from its Syriac-Chaldaic style, was undoubtedly composed in the time of Ezra, and the great Jewish synod, which was held about the time, when the building of the second temple was commenced.

For the enlightenment of "L," and any other of your readers who may be interested, please insert this letter in the next issue of your enterprising little Witness, and confer a great favor upon yours, &c.,—An Israelite, in New-York Witness.

First Look into Hell.

Do you hear that growling thunder, rolling from one end of hell to the other? The Gates of hell are opening.

When the Gates of Hell had been opened, St, Frances with her angel went forward. She stood on the edge of the abyss. She saw a sight so terrible that it can not be told. She saw that the size of hell was immense. Neither in height, nor in depth, nor in length, nor in breadth, could she see any end of it. Is. 34. None shall ever pass through it. She saw that hell was divided into three immense places. These three places were at a great distance from one another. There was an upper hell, and a middle hell, and a lower hell. Wisd. 17. "Night came upon them from the lowest and deepest Hell." She saw that in the upper hell, the torments were very grievous. In the middle hell they were still more terrible. In the lowest hell the torments were above all understanding. When she had looked into this terrible place, her blood was frozen with fright.—The Sight of Hell; a tract by Rev. J. Furniss.

The Bible Class.

2 Tim. 4: 1.

"The Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." At here, is translated from kata, the usual meaning of which (with an accusative case) is according to, (as, according to one's mind, according to a command.) It is rendered in many ways, as after, through, and over thirty others. It occurs over 300 times, (with an accusative,) and is only seven times rendered at. The foundation is rather small to be made the basis of a theory.

But Griesbach, Lachman, Tischendorf and the Sinaitic MS. read kai (and) for kata; following which the Bible Union version reads: "I charge thee before God, and Christ Jesus, who will judge the living and the dead, AND BY his appearing and his kingdom."

The above facts may be found in the Critical Greek Concordance, published by Br. Hastings, which I would strongly commend to the members of the "Bible Class." It is a whole library in itself: a reference to it may throw a flood of light on a passage, and if it does not, it gives the satisfaction of knowing that you have the original rock to build on; and not, as in the above, a doubtful rendering of a more doubtful reading.

A glance at the Greek Concordance would prevent any one claiming holiness and sanctification to be two different things, as hallow and sanctify, and holiness and sanctification, are only different renderings of the same words.

Any English scholar can use the Concordance, can find the original for any word in the New Testament, and see every place it occurs, and all its different renderings, and any various reading in the standard critical editions of the Greek Testament.

A. Armour.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 15, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES........EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the Divinity of Christ, as "the SON OF GOD;" the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

As the Editor allows a reasonable latitude of discussion, he will not become responsible for the sentiments of correspondents in any case.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's names, not necessarily for publication, but as a pledge of good faith.

As we go to press brethren are arriving to attend our Annual Meeting; but as yet no business has been transacted. Next week we shall give a report of the proceedings.

A WRITER in the Watchman and Reflector, who says that 'our views should conform to truth and not truth our views,' declares that with 'good old Father Miller' 'it was a preconceived idea,' that this world would end about 1843, and 'he determined to prove it from the Scriptures.' Nothing could be further from the truth than this statement Br. Miller only reached his conclusions after long and patient investigation. There is not a semblance of truth in the charge that he first constructed this theory, and then made the Bible—play the tune he had composed.

IT is said that 'in the tower of the Summit House on Wachusett Mountain, Princeton, Mass., there are four different colored lights of glass. You look through the blue glass on one side of the tower and everything has such a blue and wintry look you almost feel an involuntary shiver, although in sultry August. You look through a green glass on an adjoining side of the tower and you see spring represented in all its lively hues and feel its freshness imparted to your own spirits. On another side, through a differently tinted glass, you see summer, in its seared and sultry aspect; and looking through still another, you see nature painted in all the rich and golden hues of autumn. And yet you have scarcely stirred out of your tracks during this time. How very materially our views of truth are often modified by the media through which we gaze at it!' Each reader can make their own application of this lesson.

'A PROMINENT clergyman, now dead and gone to heaven, put out a book,' &c., &c. So says a late writer. A 'prominent clergyman' wrote a book some centuries ago, in which he declared that no man save the One had ever ascended to heaven, where God resides. Another 'prominent clergyman' of the same age insisted that David had not 'gone to heaven.' Since their day a new line has been established—the Hymn Book route. It is by it that people get to heaven when they die. The Bible route is quite out of fashion. A popular song in a Washington Freedmen's asylum says:

"All de good people when dey die,
Hally-lu-ce-yah,
Goes ter lib in de happy sky,
Hally-lu-ce-yah.

"Oh! when I die, I go up dere,
Hally-lu-ce-yah.
An' walk wid de angels in de air,
Hally-lu-ce-yah."

—Most people now-a-days prefer this trash to Scripture; will believe a negro melody rather than the testimony of inspired apostles.

THE Interior styles the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance appointed to be held in New York next September, an "Ecumenical council," such as Rome has not assembled in recent times, at least, and it will do something to more purpose than to declare 'infallible' some weak old priest, or vote the 'Immaculate Conception' of a woman born under the universal conditions of human generation, or attempt to turn back the shadow on the dial of time to the thirteenth century, by enacting some stupid syllabus against light, freedom and progress. And yet this same Protestant Ecumenical Council makes the foundation errors of Romanism, without which the system would fall to the ground tests of fellowship. We refer to the dogmas of eternal torment and the natural immortality of the soul. And Mr. Birks, one of the British members, got into trouble simply by suggesting some alleviations of the horrid doctrine.

Singularly enough, an officer of this same Alliance called Prof. Ives' attention to the subject, handing him Mr. Constable's Nature and Duration of Future Punishment, resulting in the Doctor's conversion, and the republication of the book in this country, where still others are being converted. Surely this is a new application of Sampson's riddle—'Out of the strong came sweetness; out of the eater came meat.' Out of the 'Alliance' has come one of the most helpful forces among the many employed in this reformation.

THE PRAYER GUAGE.

The church, and, to some extent, the world were recently startled by a proposition from certain English Scientists to establish a prayer guage in one of the London hospitals, to test the efficacy of petitions addressed to the throne of heaven. The proposition, in brief, was, that the patients of a certain ward should be prayed for during a term of weeks, while the rest of the sick folk should be left to nursing and medicine and such like natural (or unnatural) appliances. If at the end of the time appointed the patients treated by prayer should be found in the best conditions, then—we believe that was the implied condition—the scientists were to acknowledge that there is power in prayer; while, on the other hand, if the sick treated by nursing and medicine developed the most favorable conditions, then prayer should be denounced as a useless, if not positively pernicious practice.

Scientific men should have been the last to propose such an absurd trial. If there is power in prayer, that power is subject to law, like every other force in the universe; and in any given case the essential conditions must exist before the power can be manifested. The same apostle who healed multitudes of the sick at the same time, on another occasion left one of his companions sick, to be cured by "natural" means. From this we naturally infer that the power to heal the sick was subject to conditions; and what these were is to some extent, but not fully known to us.

Although this desired test of the efficacy of prayer is manifestly unfair, we are glad it has been published. It will set the church to thinking upon a most important subject. A more intelligent conception of the true nature and office of prayer would do away with a great deal of formalism and cant, and give us a purer devotion and more of the "power of godliness."

Meanwhile, as the papers say when "the end of the world" is mentioned, "let no one be alarmed." Christianity has stood numberless assaults from foes without and errorists and blunderers within, yet still survives; and this "flank movement" upon one of its essential features will prove a failure, also. We can't help suspecting it was contrived with the expectation that the church must in this nature of the case decline the challenge, and so give an opportunity for their opponents to cry—"They have no reliance in what they profess to believe."

Just how many will be deluded by this "opposition of science falsely so called," we cannot presume to say. No doubt many will be hardened in unbelief, to a greater or less degree. Yet it does seem that none but those given over to believe a lie can be deluded by sophistry so transparent.

WE wonder that the Spiritists should join the ranks of the scoffers concerning the proposed "prayer guage." Consistency is by no means a virtue of theirs, but we hardly thought their anxiety to condemn the church would be so great that they would condemn themselves also, rather than miss the opportunity.

A writer in the Cincinnati Commercial having challenged Spiritism to submit to certain tests, one of their journals replies:

> This learned M. D. desires to impose his own conditions on mediums, consequently may fail in obtaining the tests desired. While all the above requirements can be performed by the spirits through different mediums, six or seven skeptics, intent on establishing their own plan whereby tests shall be given, might be so positive as to destroy all conditions required by the controlling spirits.

But in the very same paper, in allusion to the absurd plan for a 'prayer-guage' to test the power of faith, the editor says:

> Notwithstanding propositions have been made to test the efficacy of prayer with that of physic or medicine in general, the various churches shrink from the proposition, thus showing conclusively that they have no reliance in what they believe.

All the objection the church has to the 'prayer-guage,' is that the scientists propose arbitrary conditions. Whatever other scoffers may say, Spiritists, dodging every test where they cannot dictate the 'conditions,' had best be quiet. If the action of some in the church shows conclusively "that they have no reliance in what they believe" (?!), what shall we say of the continual dodging of Spiritists proves?

THF VEXED QUESTION.

A late writer who claims that sanctification is a "second blessing," observes:

> At the campmeeting at Sea Cliff Grove, there was a test taken which should convince the most skeptical of this higher life. A request was made for all who had received this blessing after conversion to rise. Several hundred rose up. Then all those who had received it at the time of conversion were desired to rise; not one responded.

—Now we confess that this does not convince us; at least the fact does not carry conviction in the direction the writer expected. It only convinces us that the masses spoken of were not intelligently converted. To illustrate: this same writer observes:

> Sanctification makes a man childlike. He has no self-will. His will, which is the last thing he will give up, is swallowed up in God, and he can say, "Abba Father."

—But does not conversion make one child-like? Did not Jesus say—"Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven"? Yet here are "several hundred" who are said to testify that they did not become as little children when converted, but a longer or shorter time afterward, when they obtained a second blessing called sanctification. It follows, then, that they were not properly, or thoroughly converted in the first place. Jesus says the converted become as little children.

We are told further that giving up of the will is included in sanctification; and it is implied that one may be converted and the will not be given up. But our Lord taught his disciples to pray—"Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." And converted persons have been praying this prayer ever since. Now when converts pray 'Thy will be done!' they either mean what they say or they do not. If they mean it, they give up their own will. If they are indifferent or deceived, or use the words formally, then they are not truly converted.

But why argue the point? Conversion with an unsubdued, unsanctified will is an absurdity. There can be no conversion without a yielding—an honest, complete yielding of the will to be swallowed up in God's will. "Ye are not your own: ye are bought." How much will of his own has a purchased servant? How then can one say, I am the servant of Christ, while yet his will is not given up?

The true "higher life" begins in conversion. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." This leaves the subject holy, fit for the kingdom of God. If the work be genuine, growth commences immediately; a process of development to continue through eternal ages. Why talk of "second blessings," as if there were conversion, a "second blessing," and then the resurrection. True there is a second blessing; but there are third blessings, and fourth, and fifth, and so on without limit. They "are new every morning." They are fresh, and fitted for the occasion as our necessities arise. And there is no one of them that makes any future blessing unnecessary. When we ask, and receive, we must still ask again, and again.

The feature of the sanctification movement now agitating Adventists to which we object is, that so many who are urging the duty of sanctification do it in an obscure way that mystifies the subject, making what should be plain, decidedly misty. Many who have been living in the fifth chapter of Romans, are bewildered and perplexed. At the late camp at Amboy we conversed with not a few who were thus troubled. Their difficulty arose from forgetting Paul's injunction not to measure ourselves by ourselves, or compare ourselves among ourselves. They hear those whom they have looked upon as patterns of piety relating the story of a second conversion; and instead of examining to see if the thing described as now attained is not something they already enjoy, they reason if Br.— needed such a second work, surely I need it to. And if one commences hoping for that they already possess, naturally they will become perplexed. But when they learn that this grace is simply the grace in which they stood when first they sang from the heart—

"I have given ALL for Christ, he's my all," that it is just this, no more, no less; the light shines again, and unruffled peace is once more theirs.

On the other hand there are those who in some sense kept back a part of the price when they were converted; not intentionally, but ignorantly. They did at the time the best they knew; and the offering was accepted as far as it went. Now when they have learned that there is more of religion than what they supposed; when they learn that the Christian must be childlike, and his will swallowed up in the Lord's will, and that the peace of God is a river, and not to be enjoyed as a succession of showers with day times between, they should not be too hasty in supposing that every body's experience is like their own. They have at last learned what many knew and enjoyed from the first.

Those who object to the theory of sanctification now urged so prominently, are accused of lowering the standard of essential Christian character. But this is not true. But the charge does lie against those who make it. They teach that men can be converted and not be pure in heart, without giving up their wills, without becoming as little children without sanctification. But the Bible doctrines of conversion, as we understand it, includes all these, as essential. Which then, is the higher view: that which requires all to be put on the altar from the start, or that which makes the sacrifice in these stages? Certainly the latter may not claim preeminence.

CHICAGO.

Just at this time Chicago is more than ever filled with the spirit of the great Babylonian monarch. And there is scarcely room for wonder that it should be so, and that her inhabitants, who one year ago sat in ashes, should to-day, as they look over the achievments of the year, exclaim, "Is not this great CHICAGO which we have rebuilded?" Surely humanity never had better basis of material success for self-laudation than here.

Only those who saw Chicago before the fire, and immediately after its destruction, can form any adequate idea of the terribleness of its fall, or the grandeur of its restoration. And no wonder that it is so, when the testimony of those who have been daily witnesses of the process of reconstruction, all testify that language fails them to fully tell the story of either the one or the other.

We will give our readers a brief glance at some of the leading facts of the history; for our space requires that we devote but few words to the topic. Commencing in the evermore famous Mrs. O'Leary's barn, fanned by a fierce gale of wind, the fire assumed the aspect of a dangerous conflagration before the fire engines nearest the scene could reach the place. The story of how it overcame all human opposition, and burned its way through the heart of the city to its northern limits until it burned out, has beeen told a thousand times and we cannot relate it here. More than a million of dollars have been expended simply in clearing away the ruins. In doing this the remains of not less than two hundred human beings have been discovered; and the many anxious inquiries, even to this day, for persons who were known to have been in Chicago before the fire who have not been heard from since, is conclusive evidence that many more than that number perished in the ruins.

As to the losses of those terrible hours that can be reckoned in dollars—the figures cannot be set lower than two hundred millions; while of those that looked upon the scene of ruthless destruction, nearly one hundred thousand persons were left without house or home, and most of them without food, household furniture, bedding, or any other clothing than what they wore away from their burning homes. But before the fire had run its course, supplies were on their way to the sufferers. Car load after car load of food and clothing and other supplies came from every direction. And besides these, direct contributions in money were forwarded from every quarter of the globe, until the contributions, in all, reached the astonishing figures of $7,119,250. The winter was both long and hard; but the world's benevolence so alleviated its hardships that the actual suffering probably did not exceed that of preceding seasons under ordinary circumstances.

The work of rebuilding commenced the day after the fire in the shape of small, temporary buildings for offices. Very speedily other structures, and some of them of the most substantial character, stores, warehouses and dwellings, were commenced. Much was accomplished during the winter. But since spring opened, the progress of rebuilding has been something almost fabulous. One journal states that for four months the amount of building has been equal to the finishing of ten large four-story buildings for each working day, which is perhaps not far from the truth. The "South Side" alone shows six hundred and thirty-seven new buildings of brick, stone or iron, costing from $20,000 to $2,500,000 each. The substantial, the useful, the ornamental have all been studied. Regard for the first shows itself in the quality and quantity of the materials employed, giving solid foundations and heavy walls. The second includes heating apparatus, arrangements for light and ventilation, fire-escapes, &c. The third is shown in variety of architecture and adornment that should be seen to be appreciated. Over $40,000,000 have been invested in the last twelvemonth in buildings of all descriptions.

The population of the city has increased largely, and so has its trade and commerce. Never before was so much grain and provisions handled in one season as during this of 1872. Different branches of business show an increase of totals for the year, exceeding any previous annual statement by from twenty to forty per cent.

While time continues, this progress will continue. The city is not occupied alone in the work of restoration; it is growing at the same time. Its trade, commerce and permanent population are still increasing in the ratio of the years before the fire.

But with all this prosperity, succeeding such suffering and such losses, iniquity not only abounds, but, as elsewhere, is on the increase. Men's hearts are full of evil thoughts, and the fruit is such as we might expect. Crime in all its phases, from murder down, has become so common that the public have been startled from their absorption in business, and in meetings called for the purpose have attempted to devise some means for its repression: but the tide of iniquity flows quite unchecked.

A greater conflagration, followed by a greater restoration, awaits our planet. Then the destroying fires will cleanse and purify. When their work is done, not one polluting trace of Satan or any of his works shall be found. God's city will then be here, the capital of his kingdom, the earth renewed. May its day soon dawn.

A Glance at the Situation.

QUERIES, STRICTURES, ETC.

It is now over ten years since I first became acquainted with the Advent people and their position as a religious body. Upon short acquaintance I became thoroughly convinced that they were possessed of valuable knowledge, which they had gained from God's word by prayerful study. I was satisfied that they had light on religious subjects which was valuable and important, and before identifying myself with them, I had fully embraced the doctrine of immortality through Christ and other related truths. I felt to rejoice in the light, and do still rejoice in it. I gladly took the position of a disciple, willing and anxious to learn.

On many points my mind is now perfectly at rest, but at no time have I been satisfied that I had learned enough. I am still a disciple, willing and anxious to learn. Prophecy was an inviting field, and I have been and I am now an anxious inquirer after light in this most important and profitable study. But with all my convictions I have ever tried to exercise judgment and reason. I have never been of that class who are willing to accept the conclusions of others without being first convinced by their arguments. And of late I have been reviewing my course of study in the matter of prophecy. I have been asking myself, how much and what have I learned in the past ten years in this direction?

I am surprised that with all my study I have learned so little. That is, there are so few of the great prophecies of Daniel, and especially John, that I can satisfactorily explain and apply; and yet I do not think I dissent from my Advent brethren very much, that is, wherein they as a body are satisfied. Some of our representative men have been constrained to unlearn some things as well as myself. But I am not at all discouraged by the result of my review, but more than ever anxious to learn. Neither do I write to discourage, but to stimulate, if possible, others to more thorough investigation. Now, brethren, let me put a question to you. How many chapters of prophecy can you explain and apply with the same satisfaction and confidence that you do the second and seventh of Daniel? Can you discourse upon the seals, trumpets and vials of Revelation with the same power that you do on the four universal kingdoms? If not, why not? "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." Are you justified in preaching that which does not satisfy your own mind? I would not insinuate that this is done, but I do know that expositions of prophecy are given from the desk and in print by some that overthrow much that I have learned from the Advent people, although it may be that these expositions are perfectly satisfactory to those speakers and writers.

Now, brethren, do not pronounce me a "sore head" until you hear all I have to say. If I know my own heart, I do want the truth, and I have no hobby which is endangered. Let me particularize. I have a work in my possession which is commended by our papers and our preachers, entitled "Good Tidings." Now if the positions taken in this work be correct, I find myself compelled to give up as totally false expositions which I supposed were considered by all students of prophecy, in all branches of the Advent people, as clear and conclusive. I refer to the application of the seven trumpets I supposed that all were satisfied that the fifth and sixth trumpet covered that period of history in which Mohammedanism arose and flourished, and also the rise and progress of the Ottoman Empire. I thought that there was no dissenting voice in that school of interpretation which we have followed. But this must all be laid aside if the sixth seal was not opened until about 1793, or 1780. The trumpets do not sound until after the opening of the seventh seal, so if that seal is not opened until after 1833, the year of the falling stars, then the trumpets must be all in the future. And if this is so, is it not vain to talk of the sixth vial as being poured out? Are not the vials, also, necessarily crowded into the future?

In this section of country we have this summer had two discourses on the "seals," from the chart, giving the same exposition as that in the work above referred to. The application of the four angels of Rev. 7, to the alliance between England, Russia, Prussia and Austria, is out of harmony, also, with our old views. Now I may be all wrong, and it may be that those writers (whoever they may be, I know not) may be able to harmonize the whole matter. But I cannot do it, nor can any of my acquaintances.

The space of time between the first and second advents is divided in the Apocalypse into twenty-one periods by the seals, trumpets and vials. Now according to the above authority the sixth seal covers that period from 1780, the year of the dark day, until 1833, the year of the falling stars, and perhaps longer. So that now we would be under the sixth or seventh seal. How then can the second advent be close at hand with fourteen or fifteen periods in the future. If the first six periods cover 1872 years, how long before the twenty-one periods end? A school boy would say in 4,680 years hence. For if six periods cover 1872 years, twenty-one will cover 6552 years.

And then what of the typical six days of creation? That idea must be discarded. And what of the 2300 days? The fact is if we are living under the sixth or seventh seal, I must go back to the alphabet; I must unlearn quite a little. Now, what I would like, is, that some who take this position, and preach and publish their views, or endorse them, would harmonize these things for the benefit of myself and others that I know have the same difficulties in their way.

William Morphy.

Lewis, Iowa.

REPLY TO BR. MORPHY.

The difficulty in this case arises from an assumption, for which not a shadow of testimony is adduced. That assumption is, that the trumpets, seals and vials of the Apocalypse symbolize twenty-one consecutive periods, of equal duration, extending from the first to the second advent. We never knew before that any Adventist, or, indeed, any body else ever entertained such an idea. Before the objections offered can obtain, there must first be shown in opposition to the common and almost universal opinion, that the Apocalypse is a consecutive prophecy. If it be consecutive prophecy, as is claimed in the above communication, then we have not yet got through the fifth chapter: for in it is pictured the time when every creature in heaven, on earth, under the earth and in the sea unite in praise to God, which manifestly, can be only after the extinction of sinful creatures. Adopt this 'consecutive' theory, and you are shut up to the conclusion that the judgment and extinction of evil precedes nearly the whole drama of the Revelation, which is absurd.

The scene here presented is clearly anticipative, looking forward to the time when the saints "shall reign on the earth." Then in all this universe not one discordant note will mar the harmony of earth's first and only "everlasting kingdom."

But passing this, we come to ch. 7. And whatever dispute there might be concerning ch. 5, there is no room for question here. The "multitude no man could number," gathered from all ages, nations and tongues, stand before the throne of God, the other side of their "great tribulation," beyond hunger, beyond thirst, beyond tears, and "he that sitteth on the throne" dwelling among them. This is descriptive of the new earth state beyond controversy. Then, if the theory of consecutive fulfillment be correct, all of the Apocalypse succeeding this passage is yet in the future, and to be fulfilled in the new earth! Surely such an idea cannot be seriously entertained.

We have cited enough to show that the commonly accepted conclusion is correct, namely, that the Revelation is not a panoramic view of history, but a succession of symbolic tableaux, some of which are consecutive in their fulfillment, while others are cotemporary, and illustrative and demonstrative one of another. The proper relations and chronology of each symbol is to be ascertained by careful study, comparing Scripture with Scripture, and with history. This is why there is so general agreement as to the great outlines of prophecy, and confusion in the versions of minor predictions. Upon an outline map one can readily recognize continents from their written description far more easily than the minor geographical divisions can be pointed out. One needs to know but the rudiments of history to apprehend what kingdoms and powers are sketched in Daniel ch. 2 and 7. But there must be more of research, more comparison of prophecy with prophecy, to apprehend ch. 11, and still more to understand the Apocalypse.

Above all let us not fall into the Rabbinical notion that it is lawful to get out of Scripture all that can be got out of it. Allowing that the "twenty-one periods" of the Revelation are consecutive sections of time, on what ground may we affirm that they are of equal duration? What testimony is there but that seven of them might be twenty centuries in fulfillment, and the remainder be fulfilled within a century, or even half of that time, or less? On the same principle some have endeavored to introduce equations of time into Dan. ch 2, making the relative proportions in length of the different sections of the image mark the relative duration of each period of history symbolized by head, breast and arms, etc. Those who do this, however, never take into account the length of the arms, nor do they observe that the third section of the image includes (see the marginal reading) the belly and thighs; and they are oblivious of the fact that the feet of the image cover a period of time as long perhaps as is included in all the rest of its form.

We trust our reply fairly covers the ground of objections presented. We have shown that the imagery of John is not panoramic, but a series of tableaux; and the evidence that each seal, trumpet and vial is of precisely the same duration as each of its fellows, is wholly wanting.

How to be "Kept."

Not so euphonious a title as might be, but it is the Scriptural idea as expressed in 1 Pet. 1:5. It is the "abiding" in Christ as mentioned in John's gospel.

Having been cleansed by the Spirit through faith, there is still another thought, and that is how to remain in this condition of purity and to "perfect holiness," or "have our fruit unto holiness." The condition of holiness is not a condition of absolute perfection, as though a person never could be tempted again, or one in which there is no possibility to sin. Jesus was holy and pure all his life, yet he "was tempted in all points like as we are." No one is out of danger from sin in this life, even though he may be pure in all things. Yet the battle ground is no longer inside with indwelling foes, but the inside powers resist outward foes, and this resistance is in the strength of the Lord and the "power of his might," and not by our own will. When the enemy comes in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord lifts up a standard against him. (Is. 59: 19.)

It is a state of warfare and rest combined. We rest in Christ, and Jesus conquers for us and gives us the victory. We "fight the good fight of faith" not the bad fight of works. We "cease from our own works as God did from his." God now works in us to will and to do of his own good pleasure.

Thus, we are "kept by the power of God, through faith." We do not keep ourselves but God keeps us. Therefore to be kept we must not look to ourselves but "look unto Jesus." We must watch, but it is "watching unto prayer." We do not watch to keep quiet the dispositions of our nature, but we watch to keep out any evil Spirit. All within is pure and peacable, and we need not watch lest evil rise up within, but lest it influence us from without, and thus get within again. This is only done on our part by constant prayer. Prayer is but the utterence or emotion of faith, and by it we keep with God, and then God keeps us.

Again Christ says, "if ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love." (John 15: 10). The Spirit of God is not a spirit of idleness, but of work, and is ever prompting to labor, and duty becomes a privilege, and a labor of love. Any neglect on the part of those in whom the Spirit dwells, to obey its promptings, leaves an open door for the entrance of evil in the flesh, and then the person is not kept in perfect peace. But by prayer and watchfulness on our part, we may be kept by the Spirit free from sinful lusts. Prayer and watching are the fruits of faith, but the fruits of the Spirit are "love, joy, peace, longsuffering," etc., (Gal. 5: 22, 23.)

Thus we see in brief, that to be kept, we must continue to exercise the same faith that we did to obtain the keeping power; otherwise we grieve the Spirit and quench its power. As we receive Christ, so we must walk in him. Also, we must watch against outward foes lest they obtain a foothold in the flesh again. Also we must not shrink from any position or occupation the Lord directs for us.

This article is necessarily shortened more than I intended on account of many cares that press upon me at present, but I may yet write more upon this glorious subject, if the Lord will.

Frank Burr.

Economy in Sacrifice.

I have been reminded of a late editorial item in The Times, by an incident at one of the late "holiness" campmeetings. The item referred to related the experience of a young lady who "felt that wearing jewelry was dragging her down to perdition;" whereupon she "took it all off and gave it to her sister!" The Methodist Recorder says:

One of the peculiar incidents of the late National campmeeting at Urbana, Ohio—a meeting held in the distinct interest of the Inskiparian interpretation of Methodism—was the sale of the jewelry abandoned by the converts. It is said that, near the close of the meeting, a number of gold rings, bracelets, etc., were taken from sundry fingers, wrists and ears, and thrown sacrificingly upon the auction-block, and bid off at the highest figures to the unsanctified, the proceeds to go into a fund for promulgating the doctrine of perfect holiness. Now, we have no particular relish for gew-gaws, whether of gold in the ears, or capital letters to names; but it does seem a little odd that these articles of jewely should have been put into circulation, at a price, for outside flesh, to tempt, to foster foolishness and to glitter on in wanton ornament, at the beck of the unburdened perfectionists! Why not have taken a hint from Moses with reference to such gawdy trinkets, and cast the golden calves into some less offensive shape? It seems a little lame in the theology, to say the least, to deliberately let those little idols slip off into the world, unbroken and unrebuked!

Gaius.

To Whom it May Concern.

Br. Orrock:—The following, cut from No. 57, "Proceedings of The American Antiquarian Society," p. 44, —it being a part of the Report of the librarian, Hon. Samuel F. Haven,—will explain itself. I have now furnished this valuable library at Worcester, Mass., about one hundred and fifty volumes of Advent papers, stretching from 1843 to 1872, and embracing all those most valuable, viz.. "The Advent Herald," "The Voice of Truth," the "World's Crisis," and the "Bible Examiner." They will be found useful for reference and historical use. Mr. Haven says:—

"The large proportion of chaff to the modicum of grain in most periodicals is no reason why the grain, if sound and nutritious, should not be saved, if it can be made accessible; while it explains the necessity of more care for its preservation than individuals are likely to exercise on their own account. It has recently been deemed expedient to purchase for our library a large collection of documents and papers printed for the religious denomination called Second Adventists, which, originating in 1843, now numbers eight hundred preachers and from one hundred and fifty to two hundred thousand members. If their distinctive doctrine proves to be correct, a history so soon to terminate will not pay for the attempt to preserve it: but otherwise an assorted and classified collection of a hundred volumes of the chief doctrinal and statistical organs of that sect, from its formation to the present time, will become curious and instructive; for it contains not only a full exposition of the faith of the sect, but elaborate discussions upon the forms of materialism and other question now agitating the churches. The collection is the result of twenty years' effort, on the part of one of their most intelligent preachers, to prepare a comprehensive memoral of his denomination, and cannot now be duplicated. A contribution of similar material, of which this is the crown and completion, was made to the library by the same gentleman a number of years ago.

"It is not too much to assert that a thoroughly life-like and accurate history of a period cannot be written without examination of its periodical literature."—D. T. T.—Advent Herald.

A curious and interesting papyrus has lately been interpreted in England, found in a mummy-pit in Egypt, which throws new light on the Mosaic narrative. It was found by Mr. A. C. Harris, who is one of the decipherers of hieroglyphic inscriptions of the day. It is said to be the finest, longest, best written, and best preserved of all papyri ever yet discovered. Dating from the end of the reign of Rhamses III—the Rhamsinitus of Herodotus—it is at least three thousand years old, and contains important revelations touching the political, religious, and literary history of that time. It is a proclamation or address to his own people and all the world, reciting his own deeds and those of his father and grandfather, and notably concerning the religious revolution of their times, which he had himself ended by the re-establishment of the temples of the ancient Egyptian worship. The revolution in religion in question agrees in point of time with the earlier residence of Moses in Egypt, and was probably his attempt to establish or revive the worship of One God. The resistance to this innovation and its final abolition agrees with the time of the Exodus. The Scripture narrative derives from this papyrus both confirmation, illustration, and explation. Dr. Eisenlohr, the professor of Egyptology at Heidelberg, who went to England expressly to examine this papyrus, has published at Leipsic a paper containing a translation of the hisitorical results of his examination, entitled "The Great Harris Papyrus, containing an important contribution to Egyptian history and a testimony 3,000 years old to the religion established by Moses." We trust we shall soon see this important work in English.—Independent.

The Christian Life.

Prayer.

O, my Father!
Take me,
Make me
Pure and holy, all thine own;
May each changing moment find me
At thy footstool,
Near thy throne!

O, my Savior!
Cleanse me,
Fill me
With thy precious love divine,
May no earthly idol lure me
From that sacred
Cross of thine.

Holy Spirit!
Woo me,
Draw me
By thy gentle cords of love,
Comfort, guide me, safely lead me
To my rest in Heavenly love!

The Scuttled Ship.—A Fable.

A storm, great as that which was encountered by Jonah, threatened as noble a vessel as the merchant service could boast. The scene is beyond my power of pescription. The waves dashed against her like battering rams. The wind blew and shrieked, the thunder trumpeted, and pealed, and roared; the lightning darted like arrows. It was a terrible night. But the captain and his crew stood bravely at their several posts. Towards morning the storm subsided. The sky grew clear. The wind sank. The captain congratulated his men. But to the horror of all a new danger threatened, the ship was evidently filling with water; in a few moments it must go down. They looked at each other in blank dispair. At that moment a madman(who they had forgotten was below) leaped on deck with a prodigious axe in hand, yelling he had done what the storm could not do. The truth flashed on their minds: the madman had scuttled the ship. But, alas! they knew it too late.

Churches of Christ, storms threaten you, fearful storms; your enemies without are legion—by God's grace you will weather these storms, and defy all your foes, if you keep the madmen of pride, jealousy, malice, worldliness, covetousness—in a word—if you keep "the old man" securely chained. —Sword and Trowel.

A Witness For Christ.

The following anecdote was related a few weeks ago by a speaker at a public meeting:—

The other day Mr. Bradlaugh was lecturing in a village in the north of England, at the close he challenged discussion. Who should accept the challenge but an old, bent woman, in the most antiquated attire, who went up to the lecturer and said, "Sir, I have a question to put to you."

"Well, my good woman, what is it?

"Ten years ago," she said, "I was left a widow with eight children, utterly unprovided for, and nothing to call my own but this Bible. By its direction, and looking to God for strength, I have been enabled to feed myself and family. I am now tottering to the grave; but I am perfectly happy, because I look forward to a life of immortality with Jesus in heaven. That's what my religion has done for me; what has your way of thinking done for you?"

"Well, my good lady," rejoined the lecturer, "I don't want to disturb your comfort, but——"

"Oh, but that's not the question," interposed the woman; "keep to the point, sir; what has your way of thinking done for you?"

The infidel endeavored to shirk the matter again; the feeling of the meeting gave vent in uproarous applause, and Mr. Bradlaugh had to go away discomfited by an old woman.

A Good Wife.

Archbishop Secker, in his Wedding Ring, has the following, which is worth reading twice: "Hast thou a soft heart?—it is of God's breaking. Hast thou a sweet wife?—she is God's making. How happy are those marriages where Christ is at the wedding! Let none but those who have found favor in God's eyes find favor in yours. Husbands should spread a mantle of charity over their wives' infirmities. Do not put out the candle because of the snuff. Husbands and wives should provoke one another to love; and they should love one another, notwithstanding provocations. The tree of love should grow up in the midst of the family, as the tree of life grew in the garden of Eden. Good servants are a great blessing; good children a geater blessing; but a good wife is the greatest blessing; and such a help—let him seek for her that lacks one; let him sigh for her that hath lost one; let him delight in her that enjoys one."

Praying Ground.

Praying Ground is situated in the "valley of humiliation," as it stands related "Godward."

Pride and vanity find no foot-hold among the elements of real prayer. Self abasement and a deep sense of unworthiness pervade the mind of the suppliant. So deeply has this spirit prevailed in some instances, that the petitioner "would not lift up so much as his eyes to heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner." This "valley of humiliation" is considered a place peculiarly safe; especially when we remember that it is written, "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." How many mishaps to character and piety might have been avoided, had this safe anchorage-ground always been occupied! An Indian once attempted to cross a lake in a canoe with a bush for a a sail. But it so came to pass on the passage his boat was upset. On reaching the shore, he was asked how it happened that he was overturned. His reply was, "I carried too much bush." So we have sometimes thought, while listening to elegant, wordy prayers, that the petitioner carried "too much bush" to reach the port in safety. Then we may add with emphasis that praying ground is humble ground.

But praying ground also has its true elevations. Near at hand to the "valley of humiliation" are the "highlands" of faith, on whose delightful summits the sun never sets. Here the atmosphere is wonderfully bracing; here the soul discerns things invisible to mortal eye. Here the spiritual perceptions become remarkably acute.

Signs of refreshing are often experienced before the hand-sized cloud appears above the horizon. Faith is quick of sight. It has the power of discerning omens of good, where to the natural vision all is cheerless and forlorn. Faith sees the darkest cloud of God's mysterious providence countermarked with the shining attributes of Jehovah's goodness. Praying ground, then includes a trusting, child-like faith. Every prayer is "unsavory" to God and unprofitable to men, that is not "mixed with faith." Too often is this essential element of successful praying forgotten by those who profess to thank the Lord that they are "on praying ground

Correspondence.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

KANSAS.

Monday, Sept. 30. There is a difference of opinion among Christians on the subject of the highest status of Christian blessedness. Some taking the ground that there is no such thing as perfection, or a state of uniform blessedness; while others take the opposite view.

The Quietists profess to attain a state of perfect blessedness in quietude and solitude, in a cessation from all work. Perfect rest in Christ. Another class of perfectionists claim that they are saved in Christ, enturely and perfectly, and indulge in what would be sin in others, and violate the law of God with impunity. Others, like Wesley, claim to enjoy a state of Christian perfection, while adhering strictly to the law of God and the example of Christ, in an entire consecration. This is the higher life of God in the soul that all Christians should seek to attain. But with this state of blessedness there are trials often deep and overwhelming. No condition in mortality is exempt from trials.

The apostle Paul, whose attainment of the higher life was as perfect as any one can attain, had constant trials. He had a "thorn in the flesh, and the messenger of Satan to buffet him." He also had "great heaviness and continual sorrow in his heart for his kinsmen according to the flesh." Whatever blessedness he enjoyed, it was mingled with sadness and suffering. And as with the apostle Paul it will be with all who love Christ to the end of the world.

Jeremiah, who was sanctified from the womb, had his trials. He said: "Wo is me, my mother, that thou has borne me, a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth." (Jer. 15:10.) His whole life was one of conflict. He was the weeping prophet. "Oh, [said he] that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." (Jer. 9:1.)

The Psalmist also, a holy man, had his deep trials. "Have mercy upon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble: mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, my soul and my belly. For my life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing: my strength faileth because of my iniquity, and my bones are consumed. I was a reproach among all mine enemies, but especially among my neighbors, and a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without fled from me. I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like a broken vessel. For I have heard the slander of many: fear was on every side: while they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away my life. But I trusted in thee, O Lord: I said, Thou art my God. My times are in thy hand: deliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me." (Ps. 31:9–15.) Here the good man was in deep trial. And oftentimes the better the man the greater the trial. But, like Job, we should feel, and say of God, "though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

This p. m., at the tent, I showed what it was to be a Christian, and pressed the unconverted to come to Christ. And the church backed up the appeal. At night, by request, I spoke on the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, giving our views. At the close one soul came to Christ.

This service closed the first series of meetings in Shiloh Tent, in Kansas, and was altogether a good meeting. The church has been greatly revived, and the whole community stirred up to look at the great truths of the gospel.

I enjoyed the hospitality of Brn. Dunbar and Hunter, leading men of the town, and prominent and reliable Adventists.

Tuesday, Oct. 1. We took down the tent and brought it to Columbus, and by night had it ready for meeting, It was pitched on the prairie, before Br. Sanford's door. The people here feel kindly toward us, and we look for a good hearing.

Wednesday, Oct. 2. Last week we had heavy winds, in which no tent could be kept up. But a calm has succeeded, with the most beautiful weather, so that in this respect we are favored of God, who "holds the winds in his fist."

In the p. m. I spoke from Mk. 14:1–8, showing how much Christians can do when they really set themselves to work; and called on all to go into the work of bringing souls to Christ. At night spoke from Jer. 14:7–10, showing the present absence of religious power in the community, conversions few, deadness in the church, and want of courage among both ministers and people to stand up for Jesus, while the wicked are bold, active and defiant. So like the prophet we may well pray, "O the hope of Israel, why art thou as a stranger in the land?" Some were stirred, and at the close covenanted to unite in the work of God, to save souls, and prepare them for the hastening judgment. Some faithful testimonies were given.

Thursday, Oct. 3. We have had a hot south breeze from the Gulf, attended with a strong gale, so that we had to lower our tent during the day. At night the wind went down, so that we had a calm pleasant evening, and one of our best seasons. I spoke on the completeness of redemption. "I have blotted out thy sins;" "covered thy sins;" "will remember thy sins no more;" "washed;" "scarlet" made as wool; "crimson" like snow; saved, cleansed. "Happy is that people whose God is the Lord." The Lord comforted many hearts to-night by his word.

Friday, Oct. 4. Bibleclass in the p. m., subject of future punishment as taught by Jesus in the gospels. Some were convinced that the place of punishment was gehenna, and the punishment itself death, in the destruction of both soul and body in gehenna. (Mat. 10:28.)

At night I spoke from 1 Tim. 1:12–17, and showed from the prophecies that Jesus was the Christ. The attendance and interest was good, but no breakdown on the part of the unconverted, as we hoped. How hard to get men to come to Christ. Yet we must work on in hope. God will save some.

The climate here is singular. In the day the wind blows a gale, so that we have to lower the tent. At night it is calm and genial as mid-summer, and the people sit an hour and a half in perfect comfort.

Some of our hearers deny baptism altogether, some contend for sprinkling, some for immersion for the remission of sins. But the true idea is given by Dr. Kendrick in the following words. He says baptism has a fixed and definite place in the believer's life. It stands at the threshold; it belongs to the starting point of the life and nowhere else. It is to be performed once, and once for all. It is not a duty of the professed believer; it is the specific outward mode in which its subject becomes a professed believer.

Saturday, Oct. 5. Brethren met in convention, at Br. Sanford's, to consider the importance of the organization of a State Conference. The cause is small and weak, and brethren are scattered. It was thought best, however, after a full consultation, that the churches are to be organized into a conference with a view to consolidate their power and strength for good. And so they are now organized into an Advent Christian Conference for Kansas. And Eld. Silas B. Mabey, of De Kalb, Ill., has been invited to labor among them. It has been a hard labor to bring things up to this point; and they will have to work hard to sustain it. By the help of the Lord they can, and I trust they will sustain it. There is a tremendous tide of worldliness and apostacy against them; but, clinging to Christ and the faithful word they will live.

The weather has changed, and as we have a good hall, we struck the tent and held meeting in the hall to-night. I spoke on the "blessed hope." We had a solemn and effective meeting. Two men came out on the Lord's side. All hearts were cheered. The Lord blesses his people. The week of toil has closed up in hope. How fast the weeks roll away. How fast we are hastening to the judgment; very soon all will be settled with us for eternity. And it becomes us to watch and be sober, while the "end of all things is at hand."

I received a note from Br. Sidwell, of Girard, this evening, saying that Sr. Munson was dead. She was a dear saint, and faithful to the end. Br. M. has the sympathies of the brethren in this hour of trial. The Lord bless and sustain him.

Sabbath, Oct. 7. The storm has passed over, and we have a pleasant day for our closing service in Columbus. We have had unusual attendance and interest for this place. The church here has been greatly strengthened, and enlarged. Three were added to-day, and others are coming in; the tide has turned in favor of the truth. Br. Sanford and his fellow-laborers are much encouraged.

I spoke in the a. m. on the prayer of the thief on the cross, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." When thou comest. Not when you go away, but when you return. Jesus said, "Amen. I say unto thee to-day, thou shalt be with me in Paradise." And he will, when Jesus comes the second time.

In the p. m. I discoursed on the bright prospect of the coming of the Lord, and the filling the whole earth with his glory. At night we had the communion; solemn and glorious season. And now we come to the saddest part—the parting, mid smiles and tears, and the God bless you! in the hope of meeting again when Jesus comes.

Monday, Oct. 8. At an early hour took leave of Br. Sanford and househould, who have been very kind and hospitable to me. God reward them, and let them see that their labor and sacrifices are not in vain in the Lord. Br. S. was the first to invite me to Kansas, and has ever stood by me, and now more than ever. The cause is coming up, and with the help of Br. Mabey and others they hope to see enlargements. All depends on the blessing of God. We will hope in his mercy, and expect great things. "Open," says God, "thy mouth wide, and I will fill it."

At an early hour took the cars for Brookfield, Mo.

Where I Stand.

1. Negatively, not in the error propagated in Eden, when Satan said, "Man shall not surely die." I confidently believe God when he said, "Dust thou art and into dust shall thou return." Modern phraseology is different, but the subject matter is the same. Modern othodox preachers virtually say the same thing Satan declared to be true in Eden; for with them death is the gate to endless joys.

2. Not in the teachings and doctrines of demons, as set forth in our day by modern Spiritists, for this whole system of falsehood is denounced in the prophetic word.

3. Not in the doctrines and commandments of men; for they are vain. But I stand on holy ground, on a good foundation, in the enjoyment of Christian liberty, in the faith of the gospel of Christ, in one Spirit, striving together with all God's saints for the faith of the gospel. I stand in his grace and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

Having deliberately taken this position, I can not maintain it and stand by inactivily, but by fighting for it day and night to the end. This being the case, my Heavenly Father has given me sufficient armor to defend myself against all foes, visible or invisible. Hence I stand with my loins girt with truth, my breast with righteousness, my feet are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, my arm bears the shield of faith, my head a helmet, even the hope of salvation.

My offensive weapon is the word of God, the sword of the Spirit. My vigilance is sufficiently aroused to watch and pray.

Like the great apostle of the Gentiles, I fight not against flesh and blood, but against the wiles of the devil, principalities, powers heathen rulers, demons. These were prominent opposers in Paul's day, and are so now. But I find other foes in our day, the greatest of which is a cold, formal, spiritless and powerless church. Hence the great perils of these last days. The church is so constituted that men of the basest passions not only live in but rule it. Our duty as men of God, is first to get out from among them and be separated, and then take a true Scriptural stand, and, armed with God's armor, fight them to the end.

M. Beck.

From S. C. Wellcome.

A few weeks ago, with my wife, I took passage for St. Paul,(which by the way is one of the most flourishing cities of the West,) where we met Br. Crawshaw of West St. Paul, who took us to his place, about 6 miles out of the city, in the neighborhood where Br. E. T. Himes made it his home some two or three years. Here we found warm friends, of the Advent cause, Br. and Sr. Crawshaw, Br. Libby, and family, Dr. Jarvis and wife, and others. Br. Edwin had a pleasant home here and a large place in the hearts of the people, for every one that knew him seemed to love him and his family. Here he sowed seeds of truth, faithfully laboring to cultivate the soil; and though not living to see the fruit of his labors fully developed, yet he saw many brought to Christ, and the judgment will reveal the fact that a great work was accomplished through his instrumentality in this section. We could hardly speak of him with-tears coming in the eyes of his old ıds so dearly did they love him.

Ve spent the Sabbath, Sep. 1, with r people speaking to them three s, and visited two or three days h them, and was about to return to field of labor, when I was summon- o attend the funeral of a little one Br. Churchill, of Cottage Grove. funeral was at the Baptist church Newport, just across the River. Ve had a solemn time. There was rge circle of Br. Edwin's friends; a church which he organized, and are still looking for "that blessed a." He often stopped with Br. rchill while in Cottage Grove, and dearly beloved by them.

ere I was invited to stop over the bath, which I did. I spoke to them urday eve, and Sunday the brethren sisters from West St. Paul came ss the River in a skiff and met h us, coming some four miles. I a grand time talking of our hope e future, as well as present engage- ts.

At West St. Paul and Cottage ve we found a whole-souled people, love the cause and are willing to e sacrifices to sustain it. They lly gave me of their substance suf- nt to defray all our expenses du- the trip. God bless them all is prayer. We took the cars to Hast- , intending to take a boat for Wi- a; but having strange impressions ad news from home, we kept on train, and arrived at St. Charles in time to attend Sr. Cheatham's ral. And so unexpected was the nt that we were almost overcome. as led to say, truly, God moves in ysterious way, and more fully im- sed with the fact that while we to be led by the Spirit, if we fol- its teachings, in connection with teaching of God's word, we shall eft in the dark as to duty.

now had appointments west 130 s, and had to leave next day to at- l them. Preached at Havana, atonna, Medo, Shelbyville, and Ka- . My Br. M. was with me at lbyville and preached. The Lord with us in all our meetings. Some rose for prayers on my pre- is visit have been blessed. At Ka- six arose for prayers, some of m professed to have found peace. netimes I feel that the Spirit of God eing withdrawn from the earth; rejoice that it is still doing its e work upon the hearts of some. ! for greater power to spread the message before it is too late.

m P. Alling, Norwalk, O.

Recently we were favored with a f visit from our old friend and ther in Christ, Dr. Josiah Litch, ch was interesting, though in some pects painful. He preached three or r times in the vicinity, and once in the tist meeting house in town. He s severe in his remarks against our ws of immortality, in one discourse; erwise his sermons were interesting highly instructive; and none ld suppose from his public remarks t any change had taken place in views relative to the speedy per- al coming of Christ. In a private rview, he stated he believed the iods of the prophecies of Daniel and velation were all literal days, and lied to an antichrist or an anti- istian power yet future, represented the hegoat and the little horn of niel ch. 8, and spoken of in ch. 11: to end of chapter. Also the two sts of Rev. 13, the beast of ch. 17, the ten kingdoms, including the le horn of Dan. 7: 15, were all in the ure.

He said he had written a book, now ng stereotyped, upon these subjects. admitted, it the periods were sym- ic, and the vision written out for 3, was of God, it would surely ak in 1873: no mistake. Prior to king this statement, he remarked, t his experience of 1843, was pre- us to him, and no amount of money other consideration could induce to part with it, and virtually admit- that that movement was of God. ese statements I find difficult to monize; and the inquiry is often gested as to why and how is it t so strange a change has come r one once so honored of God in using the world, by the proclama- n, "Behold he cometh." The word the Lord surely is not yea and hat was Bible truth then, is eq[illegible] true now: hence the change n him, or in us. Question. How s the vision written? Was it sed upon the literal or symbolic erpretation? Br. L. as well as our- ves, knows it was the latter. Hence is in the wrong. Again: it is written the "time of the end many shall run and fro and knowledge shall be in- eascd." Are we not living witnesses to the fact that those days have already occupied some 45 or more years? If this prophecy has now occupied so many literal years, how can it be again reenacted and fulfilled in so many literal days? I love Br. Litch and most earnestly desire to see him again with us in proclaiming the whole truth; but if he has cast away his confidence and professed theory to a "thus saith the the Lord!" it is hard to exercise faith in his behalf. We must leave him in the hands of the Lord.

I learn that Dr. Seiss, Mr. Wm. Newton and others of that class have adopted the same literal day theory and it is evident, that this error is soon to be one of the most formidable obstacles we shall have to meet. Hence the importance of being on our guard.

[There has been a persistant paving of the way for the introduction of the literal day theory among the Adventists. The time is not come to press it openly, but there are evident preparations for it. If people can only be led now to adopt premises of which futurism is the logical result, the conclusion will be the more readily adopted hereafter for having been reached by easy stages. Let us beware of the first false steps in errors of interpretation. ED. TIMES.

From Valentine Seaton.

I am taking your paper and prize it very highly. I belong to the Methodist church, but am a believer in the Advent faith. Our minister, knowing my belief, gave me a book entitled Man all Immortal. I consider it most absurd. The author tries to prove his position mostly by poetry and the words of dying men. I want something to give him the true light from a Scriptural standpoint. I am not a good talker, and cannot argue the case with him. Methodism reigns supreme here. They are very devoted and good people in the main; but in matters of theology are far from the true light as, I think, it is set forth in the Scriptures. We are very much in need of a strong teacher of the Advent faith here, and then I should not be alone in that belief.

From Esther E. Smith, Montcalm Co., Mich.

This first day of the week I have spent in reading THE TIMES. It is a comfort to one in a distant country, where we do not get the gospel preaching. For sixteen years we have lived here, as it were in a wilderness, without hearing one sermon on the coming of Christ. For twenty-five years I have been a member of the Disciple church. I have been attending other meetings; but in four weeks I did not hear as much sound doctrine as is contained in one number of THE TIMES. My heart is warmed by it. I feel that the Lord is good to me. When I read of his work going on in other parts of the country, I am led to say, Oh! for a closer walk with God here in this place, that there may be a revival among us. Oh! that some minister would come here that would preach the word. We want the truth that will stand in the coming day.

From Sr. M. E. Osterhout.

I think I prize the paper next to my Bible. It is the only pure and truthful preaching I get. There is but one Advent family here, at Green Bay, that I know of. They attend the Methodist church with me. We attend the Bible class, and try to speak a word for the Master and his glorious appearing, when we can; but we are not allowed to express our views as the others do. My prayer is that God may cause the scales to fall from their eyes, that when they read and study the precious truth they may understand.

I am trying to put on the whole armor of Christ, and have my lamp trimmed and burning, that I may be ready to meet the Bridegroom when he comes. Oh! what a glorious meeting that will be. How I long sometimes for the fellowship of those of like precious faith with myself. But, praise the Lord, we shall soon be gathered together in our Father's kingdom. I love now to read the testimonies of the brothers and sisters; by and by we [illegible] meet face to face. Glorious

From Willard R. Chandler, Maquoketa, Iowa.

I am still striving to serve the Lord in my weak way, and with patience overcome all trials and troubles, that I may eat of the tree of life and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. The blessed hope buoys me up and encourages me to new action. My spiritual strength was greatly renewed at the Amboy Campmeeting. Although the journey there and the time spent was attended with considerable expense, yet I do not begrudge the money. I think money spent in the service of the Lord is never lost.

I am trying to do what I can to spread the truth by the way of circulating papers and tracts and to revive the work in this place. Some four years ago Br. P. S. Buck and my father, through the help of the Lord, raised and organized a church here of some sixty members. At this day only a few are trying to live in view of the judgment and rouse up the rest that have fallen into the lethargetic state that is so prevalent in these last days among those professing Christianity. Satan truly has done a great work in the tearing down of this church. Br. Marston was here last fall, and some roused up for a time. We will not give up this field to Satan, but trust in the Lord for fruit, that our labor may not be spent in vain. Oh! let us work together in trying to convert sinners and in the building up of God's cause in the land, and not let our ambitions rise to such a hight that Satan will get envious feeling into our hearts; for Jesus has said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Satan is now doing all in his power to eradicate Christianity, because he knows his time is short. He is wheeling his reserved forces into line. Therefore, let us "keep our bodies under subjection," that we may be found doing the will of our heavenly Father at Christ's coming, and that then we may "enter into the rest which remains for the people of God." Praise God for such a hope!

From John W. Porter, Chippewa Co., Minn.

I have this evening been reading THE TIMES, and have read all the sheet contained, and feel like writing to you. I suppose you will not remember me: but I recollect you, though it is a long time since I saw you, and many changes have transpired since that time. Yet the Lord has kept me alive, and has blessed me; and I think you, too, have had your cup full many times.

But what I wish to speak of particularly now is a little experience, showing how much good may be done by a little act, or small efforts. It happened that I traveled on the cars at one time with Sr. Fassett, and the result was that a little tract fell into my hands. I read it; and after I got home my wife sent for a specimen of THE TIMES, and you sent it three months. After that time I felt I could not do without it. After reading my papers I sent them out to my neighbors, and to any one that would read them: and the result was that others came to the same conclusions I had reached. I have Whitmore's work, that Edwin (now dead) sent me, and I keep it circulating, for I find many that wish to read. And what will be the full result of the tract the great day alone can tell. I see the fruit all about me. Br. Edwin wrote me he would come and see us: but death has claimed him, and he lies in the grave. But his influence will preach until the end of time.

From John Mc'D. Mitchell, Arkansas.

Dear Brethren in the Lord: A few names of us have been cast out of the Baptist church of Pleasant Plains, for simply believing the truth of the Bible, or as they call it, "heresy." But I can say as Paul did, As they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers; believing all things that are written in the Scriptures of truth. They can cast us out; but we feel that we are not forsaken of our God, who will bring all things into judgment, and will give to every man as his work shall be. I rejoice that I am liberated from the bondage of tradition, and have ceased to believe the dogmas and doctrines of man. I can heartily enjoy the doctrine of the Bible, and the views that the Adventists hold forth to a dying world. Yes, brethren, I heartily endorse the position and doctrine that Br. Himes delivered in his address on the tenth of December last, which I find recorded in THE TIMES of Dec. 26. In reading of the position we occupy, and the duties we owe to our God, to ourselves and to our fellow mortals, I could not help but give the sympathizing tear.

Brethren, pray for me. Pray that our little church may be dedicated to the Lord, and that we may prosper in these ends of the earth in believing the truth as it is in our blessed Master. Oh! that the truth may abound more until it reaches every nation, tongue and people, for Jesus' sake. The truth is taking rapidly in these parts. Br. Crosby preaches the word every time in its purity. He tells them to prepare for the coming of the Lord, for the time is at hand.

A great many refuse to receive our faith, because, they say, it is a new doctrine. But when they come to examine it they find it is the doctrine of our Lord Jesus Christ, and older than they imagined.

From Cassius M. Booth, Fremont, N. Y.

How thankful I am that the time is soon coming when God shall wipe away all tears and there shall be no more death, sorrow nor crying, ne [illegible] y more pain. How thankful I am for such great and precious promises, and for his kind and watchful care over me. Let us all awake out of sleep and put on the whole armor of God, and let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. (Gal. 6: 7–9.) Let us be followers of God as dear children, and walk in love as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us; and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. (Eph. 5: 1, 2, 11.)

Paul says, "If any man think he standeth, let him take heed lest he fall." My prayer is that God may help me daily to take heed lest at any time I might fall by the wayside. Pray for me.

From S. B. Mabey, Jr.

Again the Illinois State Campmeeting has closed, and the brethren and friends have scattered to different parts of the land. Some perhaps have parted with friends never to meet again.

The commemoration of the Lord's Supper, at the close, was a very impressive season, reminding one of the time of the general gathering of all God's people to celebrate the "marriage of the Lamb," when not a few, as they who met on the eve of his betrayal, nor to meet and part again, to go out to toil amid earth's scenes and conflicts; but a glorious assembly of the church of the first-born, the living made immortal, and the sleeping saints made alive to die no more, and all caught up to meet the Lord in glory.

The hypocrite's hope will perish then. The vain imaginations of men will flee away. The charms of earthly things which to-day bind so many and fetter the slumbering, lukewarm professor, will soon be broken by the presence of Christ in his majesty and glory. Let the prayers go up from every believing heart, that there may be a rally on the part of Christians everywhere to the help of the Lord against the mighty foes of the darkness of this world in its every form, that there may continue to be raised up and called out a sanctified and consecrated people, who will continue to live in that holiness, without which none shall see the Lord.

Let us pray and labor for a sanctification to God, that manifests itself in "labors oft," in privations and sacrifices without number, if need be, for Christ's sake. For a sanctification in holiness (the gift of God), which will take away the last vestige of covetousness and idolatry, pride, and selfishness and stinginess from the hearts of those who possess it.

The lack of this vitalizing power is bringing drouth upon many churches and persons professing religion. They say they do not enjoy religion, do not feel any interest in the salvation of their friends and neighbors—and the reason is because they do not strive to enjoy, do not pray nor labor. Says the apostle (Rom. 6: 22), "But now being made free from sin and become the [illegible]ants of God, ye have your fruit [illegible] holiness, and in the end everlasting life."

Oh! for the latter rain of divine grace, the gift of the Spirit, which is so freely communicated, when desired, to the believing heart. Oh! that it might be poured out upon the faithful laborers in the cause of God, in every department throughout our land.

The Office of Reason in Religion.

Dr. Hodge' says the Independent, acknowledges the proper function of reason in the study of revealed theology, and that he does not fail to affirm the authority of the revelation which God gives us in the primary intuitions of our moral nature. "Reason," he tells us, "is necessarily presupposed in every revelation." "If it be affirmed that the soul is immortal, or [that] God is a spirit, unless we know the meaning of the words, nothing is communicated to the mind." "In believing we affirm the truth of the proposition believed. But we can affirm nothing of that of which we know nothing. The first and indispensable office of reason, therefore, in matters of faith, is the cognition or intelligent apprehension of the truths proposed for our reception." "In the second place, it is the prerogative of reason to judge of the credibility of a revelation." "Nothing is incredible but the impossible." We can believe on adequate grounds, what we cannot explain; but "the impossible is incredible." At the same time, "reason, in pronouncing a thing impossible, must act rationally;" "its judgments must be guided by principles which commend themselves to the common consciousness of men." "Men may abuse this prerogative of reason," "but the prerogative itself is not to be denied. We have a right to reject as untrue whatever it is impossible that God should require us to believe. He can no more require us to believe what is absurd than to do what is wrong." "In the third place, reason must judge of the evidence by which a revelation is supported." (Pp. 49–52.) And, if the revelation comes to us in a written record, must not reason employ itself in the interpretation of the record? Dr. Hodge implies this everywhere—especially when he speaks of a supposed conflict between the ascertained facts of nature and the revelation given in the Bible. "It is unwise in theologians to array themselves needlessly against the teachings of science. Romanists and Protestants vainly resisted the adoption of the Copernican theory of our solar system. They interpreted the Bible in a sense contradictory to that theory. So far as in them lay, they staked the authority of the Bible on the correctness of their interpretation. The theory proved to be true, and the received interpretation had to be given up. The Bible, however, has received no injury, although theologians have been taught an important lesson; that is, to let science take its course, assured that the Scriptures will accommodate themselves to all well-authenticated scientific facts in time to come, as they have in the past." "The theologian acknowledges that the Scriptures must be interpreted in accordance with established facts." (P. 57.) Surely, then, reason has much to do as the interpreter of the recorded revelation.

Alsace and Lorraine.

The exodus of Alsatians from their native country is a spectacle which cannot be regarded without a feeling of profound sympathy for these unhappy people. The provinces during the war suffered all that the other French provinces did, and contributed their quota of men and money; and now comes the additional hardship, consequent upon the ceding of Alsace and Lorraine to Germany, of either abandoning their nationality as Frenchmen, or removing from the provinces altogether. The circular issued by the Germans ordered that all persons domiciled in the ceded provinces must not only have registered themselves as Frenchmen, but must have actually transferred their domicile to France, by the 1st of October, or they would be regarded as Germans, and become liable to the German law in its whole extent, including the obligation to do military service. The Germans have not spared the feelings of the people of these provinces in the least, nor mitigated their severity by applying the laws gradually. On the other hand, they enforced them at once, and the enrollment for the army is already in operation among those who have not left the provinces. Those young men who can show that they served in the French army, or Garde Mobile, before December, 1870, are exempt from the German service, even in time of war; but all others must serve. The foreign dispatches have already intimated that thousands are leaving. Some of them will go to France, and some to Canada and the United States. The fact is a hard one, which has been imposed by necessity. The provinces have been ceded to Germany, and the German authorities at Berlin profess to believe that another war must come between Germany and France; consequently they are determined to have nothing French in Alsace or Lorraine which will embarrass them at such a time. That the Germans have the right to exercise their authority is clear; but the harsh and peremptory manner in which it has been exercised will enlist the sympathies of the whole world for these fugitive Alsatians, who have abandoned home and friend, and severed the ties which connect them with their native soil, rather than consent to be unwilling instruments of the German power. Their fate is a hard one, and, while all have to acknowledge the fact that Alsace and Lorraine are parts of Germany, still, as in the case of Poland, these wandering, homeless people will always have the sympathy of the world.—Chicago Tribune.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 15, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]
TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS, A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH, N. FIELD.
EDITOR OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
JOSHUA V. HIMES.
TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications for the paper to Joshua V. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Address all Business Letters to William L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

☞ Make Postal Orders and Drafts payable to Wm. L. Himes.

☞ Business and matter for the paper may be sent in the same envelope, but write all appointments, notices, letters and communications for publication.

☞ EACH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER.

☞ Matter for publication should be written ON ONLY ONE SIDE.

☞ DO NOT FAIL to comply with these suggestions.

We will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

The Faith of St. Paul.

The immediate demand for this work so far exceeded our anticipations, that the first edition was exhausted ere we were aware. The second edition is in preparation, and will be ready soon. Orders will then be promptly filled.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No. 275 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post-paid, for 20c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 50c.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

H F Cordell
J M Hoffman
W Cornell
A C Parmer
S J Brewster
A Farrow
C H Hendrix
L Morton
A Perry
M Barnes
H Fink
A Cambell
J Gillis
M Lyons
C W Smith
M R Carey
J Stone
E C Andrus
J R Turner
J Scarce
W Wyatt
G C Stephenson
S A Alley
J O Parker
S E Pearl
M M Traugh
J D Plackette
H Munger
J M Palmer
J W Taylor
M A Potter
E W Huson
B Ballord
N Morgan
S J Kirk
A Atkins
M Johnson
P Hitchcock
M Burlingame
J Storkwall jr
D O Hink
C R White
M A Tibbets
S K Gibson
A Freeman
W Erwin
C E Kimball
J T Tucker
O T Adams
G Dean
J Halcrow
M A King
J T Onsley
W Morphy
L Sherman
E Lambkin
W S Payton
J Vanderventer
A DeLong
A D Hindman
D W Rook
C A Rush
J Carver
E Rice
H Hall
E McNutt
B Whitney
W T Gilbert
A Anthony
J P Densmore
Paw Paw Mich (no name)
J Burbank
J W Thomas
T L Scott
S C Wait
J S Ames
A Freeman
J D Palmer
D Clow
A P Lorton
H Patten
M Pierando
L D Weaver
J H Whitmore
J Scarce
N Field
C C Marston
O R Fassett

To Correspondents.

C. R. WHITE. It was received. Thank you.... M. A. TIBBETS. It came safely. Tracts are sent. The article will appear.

Marriages.

CLINE—HODGKINS.—In Massena, N. Y., Sept. 26, at the residence of the bride's father, by Eld. C. Pike, John E. Cline and Miss Mina E. Hodgkins, both of Massena.

KING—COLLINSON.—In Lynn, Knox Co., Ill., at the residence of the bride's father, Sept. 22, by Eld. C. W. Smith, Mr. Samuel C. King and Miss Mary C. Collinson.

Obituary.

HAYES.—At Rochelle, Ill., Sept. 29, 1872, Georgia Hayes: aged about 7 months.

Words of comfort to the many weeping friends, from Isaiah's prophetic declaration, as quoted by Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 55—"Death is swallowed up in victory," by the writer, assisted by Eld. H. G. McCullock.

C. C. MARSTON.

BERRY.—Died near Baileyville, Ill., Sept. 11, 1872 Br. James Berry: in his 66th year.

He thus leaves his kind companion after over forty years pleasant pilgrimage together. She, with their children, mourn his absence, yet not without hope; expecting that they who sleep in Jesus the Lord will bring with him. Being an early settler in that part of the State, he had a large circle of friends who attended.

Services by the writer. Text, Rev. 14: 13—"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

S. E. MABEY.

Book Notices, Etc.

THE INQUIRER: Protestant or Catholic, Which?

The above is the title of a 46 page tract by I. C. Wellcome. It treats of the principles which underlie Roman Catholicism, the history of their introduction into the early church from pagan philosophy; presents the Scriptures and belief of the primitive church on these points, giving quotations in proof from history, and the fathers. The reformation under Luther is examined, the doctrine of the reformers with extracts is stated. The relapse of the Protestants to the Roman doctrines is developed, and tendency of the present-day Protestantism is shown to be clearly toward Roman Pagan Spiritism. The antidote is pointed out in the primitive doctrine of man's mortality. The quotations from ancient and modern authors are very valuable. Price, single 10c, per doz. 75c. For sale at THE TIMES office.

Notices, Etc.

To Churches in N. W. Mo. and S. Iowa.

As I contemplate making a visit West, I wish to give notice to brethren that I can, perhaps, arrange to give them a call going or coming home, if they will write to me immediately. Direct to Amboy, Lee Co., Ill. After Oct. 20, direct to Columbus, Kan.

SILAS B. MABEY.

Notice.

Dr. Leonard Tafel offers his services to clergymen and students of the ministry of any denomination in learning to read Hebrew. He will open a course of fifteen days, beginning on Nov. 11th, 1872, at his residence, No. 3 Hamilton Park, Staten Island, N. Y. During this course he will read with the students the thirty chapters of Genesis, comprised in No. 1, giving at the same time lessons in Grammar. He will give two lessons a day of one and a half hours each, devoting one hour to Translation and one-half hour to Grammar.

Students desiring to enter this course will please apply to Dr. Leonard Tafel, care A. J. Tafel, No. 148 Grand St., N. Y. Students in Philadelphia desiring such a course of instruction may apply to Rev. L. H. Tafel, No. 626 Arch St.

Post Office Address.

P. A. Smith, Jacksonville, Fla.

The Times.

AT HOME.

— — Thanksgiving day—Thursday, Nov. 28.

— — Wm. H. Seward died at his residence in Auburn, N. Y., on Thursday, the 10th inst.

— — Dakota Territory found itself an 'earthquake region' last Wednesday. The shock was light.

— — Prof. Fiske, of Harvard, predicts that at 'an inconceivably distant' period of time the earth will fall into the sun, and be dissipated into nebulous matter. Possibly the Galilean fisherman, Peter, knew as much about the earth's future as Prof. Fiske. At any rate we have more faith in his prophecies.

— — The October elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Nebraska were triumphs for the administration. The result in in Indiana is very close, the Liberals obtaining a small majority. It is generally conceded that this settles the question that Gen. Grant will be re-elected, although some of Mr. Greeley's friends insist that his chances are yet good.

— — It is a curious fact that as the settlements spread beyond the Mississippi, rains increase both in frequency and in the amount of water. Many beds of streams, which were uniformly dry in summer only ten years ago, are now full through the year. Travelers say the Laramie plains were once destitute of vegetation; now they have a luxuriant growth, and will raise large crops of wheat. Denver was built on the banks of an extinct creek, perfectly dry. Now it is full of water and needs to be crossed by bridges. Salt Lake is seven feet higher than ten years ago, and it is steadily increasing. The vast plains which engineers once pronounced uninhabitable, and streams and springs, may yet become great States, the home of a crowded population.—Exchange.

ABROAD.

— — A recent coal mine explosion in England caused the almost instant death of some forty souls.

— — At the recent elections in Rome the Papal party after the greatest effort, obtained but 1,700 votes out of a total of 8,000 cast. This speaks a volume as to the position of the Holy Father at home. No wonder his friends have urged him to go elsewhere.

— — The English papers are discussing the decision of the Geneva Arbitration, and, though there is no disposition to avoid it, there is a current of adverse criticism which indicates that arbitration as a substitute for war is not to be accepted without protest.

— — Mr. Spurgeon, in the course of a recent address, said he was thinking about calling the preachers together and having a strike; and said he was quite sure that a large proportion of the ministers of all denominations did not earn anything like as much as the men who laid the stones of the building they were assembled in.

— — It is a remarkable fact that Germany is not recovering from the effects of the late war as rapidly as France. Her taxation is, of course, somewhat lower; and her Treasury is filled to overflowing with the tribute money of her victim. Nevertheless, the prices of all commodities are steadily rising. Rents have increased enormously. In Berlin, this increase has driven thousands of families from their homes. They are camping out in and around the city. Prussia is more a nation of soldiers than ever before. The war showed the superiority of her system, and it is being mercilessly enforced. To escape military service and heavy taxation and want, thousands of men are emigrating to America. The Imperial Government has just issued a circular, threatening to classify emigrants as outlaws, and maintain a rigid surveillance over them. This is said to have had no appreciable effect in checking the exodus.

— — Advices from Europe state that emigration from Alsace and Lorraine is more extensive than was supposed. Plapeville, a small town on the frontier, has been entirely abandoned. At Luneville, 2,000 to 3,000 Alsatians arrive every day. It is calculated that Metz, which had formerly a population of 46,000, does not now contain more than 15,000. A Strasbourg letter says: "It is not that you notice the marvelous change which is taking place in the two provinces so much by visiting small towns and villages, as by remarking the scenes on the railway between Strasbourg and Paris. The influx is surprising. The life stream seems to flow on as if it would never stop. Oddly enough, Sunday is chosen by many thousands as the period of their departure, and on such a night the railway station at Strasbourg presented an extraordinary spectacle. In their anxiety to procure tickets before others, men hustled and women screamed, and vociferated as only German-seeking people can vociferate. For be it noted that the majority speak the language of the Teutons. They talk German with no uncertain sound. The crowd was composed of men in blouses, ruddy-faced women, and, lastly, children, in whose faces we could trace a wonder at what it was all about, this strange flitting from their sunny village homes by the river or mountain side."

Appointments.

TO MINISTERS.

If ministers sending appointments will comply with the following requests, it will go far to prevent delays and mistakes,

1. Write upon a separate slip of paper.
2. Write names of places and dates VERY plainly.
3. Write your appointment in the following order.

(1) Name of the place. (2) The time of service. (3) The date, or day of the month.

4. Send in good season. Appointments must reach us Monday morning to go into the paper the same week.

A brief, clearly stated appointment is better than any long one.

THE EDITOR'S TOUR

SOUTH AND WEST.

I propose, by the blessing of God, without whose aid we can accomplish nothing, to visit and preach in the following States, as noticed below:

ARKANSAS.

BR. LAWYER writes that he will not be able to accompany me to Arkansas. I regret this very much. But I shall go alone. Late letters from that State are of a cheering character. Br. Rosebraugh says—"Ask the brethren to pray for us, and help us in our infancy and weakness in Arkansas."

MISSOURI.

Brookfield, Oct. 8, and over Sabbath, and not Oct. 6, as in former appointment.

CALIFORNIA.

Some time in December I shall go to California and Oregon. It is my intention to visit such places as shall open to me, where I may help the Advent brethren, or plant churches. My headquarters will be San Francisco; address No. 6 Municipal Court Building, care of C. A. Sumner.

Between this date and the first of December all letters from California and Oregon should be addressed to 25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

I will be pleased to hear from any persons in the above States, as to any openings for missionary labor, or any desire for help among Adventist brethren on the way out, on the line of the C. B. & Q., B. & M. R., and Union Pacific Railroads. I shall also call on my way out, if it be practicable, in Colorado, and Salt Lake. Will be glad to hear from any in those States.

It will be seen that my labors will be in the missionary field for some time to come, which will require some aid from the friends of missions. I trust in God to open the hearts and hands of his stewards to aid me in this good work. One good brother has provided me with help towards my Southern tour. God bless him.

And now I wish to hear from all interested in any of the above places. I would like to hear from my old friends that I visited many years ago in California, so I may know what is wanted, and, so far as able, make provision for it.

I make a special call upon all the friends of this important missionary tour, to implore the Lord's blessing upon it, and the unworthy laborer, that the Lord of the harvest will remember him, and the people to whom he may preach the Word of Life. We can do nothing without help from above. But "through Christ strengthening us we can do all things."

With my present health and vigor, and a heart burning with zeal in the missionary work, I hope by the Lord's help to do more than in the best days of my youth. Like my namesake of old, I can say, "my eye is not dim, or my natural force abated." And though I may not live to go over the River with the hosts of the Lord, yet I will work, by God's help, until I get to the Fords of Jordan.

Brethren in Christ looking for the coming kingdom, let us awake to the great missionary work. Let us seek by every and all means to save some. And let us preach the full gospel of the kingdom, to prepare a people for the Lord's coming, for he is nigh, even at the doors.

JOSHUA V. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Afton, Oct. 27.
Squaw Grove, Nov. 3.
Galva, Nov. 9, as Br. Runquist may arrange.
Milroy, Nov. 10. C. W. SMITH.

White Rock, Ogle Co., Union chapel, 3 p. m., Nov. 10. Subject: The Gospel Hope.
Morn. and eve. at Ellda. C. C. MARSTON.

I will preach at Br. Morse's S. H., eve., Oct. 19.
Lovejoy S. H., Sunday, 11 a. m., and 3 p. m.
Eve., same day, at Trading House, near Br. Wright's.
At Beamersville, 11 a. m., and 2½ p. m., Sunday, Oct. 28. S. E. MABEY.

Genoa, every Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.
Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Lanark, Nov. 4, 5.
Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Ellda, Nov. 8-10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.
C. C. MARSTON.

The next Q. M. of the DeKalb District will be held with the church in DeKalb, commencing Thursday eve. Oct. 17, and holding over Sunday.
H. G. McCULLOCK, Sec'y.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Equality, Gallatin Co., as Br. Ashley may arrange, Thursday eve., Oct. 24, and continue until Nov. 2.
Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., Saturday eve., Nov. 2 and over Sunday.
Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.
Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Suday.
Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawyer may arrange.
WM. McCULLOCK.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

INDIANA.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of the Indiana Conference will be held at Union Mills, LaPorte Co., commencing Friday, Oct. 18 and continuing several days. The change in time from the first announcement is to enable brethren to better arrange for the Association Meeting. A general attendance is desired.
E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.
Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.
Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

MINNESOTA.

Windom, Cottonwood Co., Sunday, Oct. 13 and over the 20th, as Br. Patten may arrange.
I shall go by way of Owatonna and Mankato. Any wishing me to call can address me at Windom up to the 20th. WM. J. BURSELL.

St. Charles, Vowle S. H., 7.30 p. m., Oct. 19.
Utica Station S. H., 10.30 a. m., Sunday, Oct. 20.
Dudley S. H., 2.30 p. m., same day.
Enterprise, Page S. H., eve., Oct. 20.
S. C. WELLCOME.

MISSOURI.

The fourth Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa A. C. Conference will be held with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co., commencing Friday, Nov. 8, and holding over Sunday. We look for a good representation from all the churches in the District.
H. BILLMIRE, Pres't.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

ARKANSAS.

The second Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Arkansas will be held in Flatwood, Izard Co., Nov. 20, and over the Sabbath. The churches will appoint their delegates in good season. And brethren isolated will please come and report the state of things in their region. Eld. J. V. Himes will be with us and help in the good work. Come brethren and sisters, let us have a grand rally for the truth.
S. ROSEBRAUGH,
J. B. BROWN.

WEST VIRGINIA.

The next annual meeting of the West Virginia and Southern Ohio A. C. C., will be held with the Hays Fork A. C. Church, commencing October 19, and holding several days as the Lord may direct. The churches connected with the Conference are requested to appoint delegates. Brethren, arouse! Let us awake from our lethargy, and come to our annual feast, to strengthen each other's hands for the warfare. Pray for the success of Zion.
S. P. WHITNEY, President.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., Oct. 10-13.
East Troy, Oct. 15, 16.
South Creek, Oct. 17. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

NEW YORK.

Wallace, Steuben Co., 2 p. m., Oct. 19, and over Sunday, the 20th.
Springwater, eve., Oct. 21, 22.
Savannah, Wayne Co., Oct. 23.
South Butler, Oct. 24-27.
Marion, Oct. 29, 30.
Lockport, Nov. 3.
P. S. If any of the above conflict with other appointments, or should not be desirable, please notify me in time at South Creek, Bradford Co. Pa., by Oct. 16. I will visit other places in New York State, if desired, until Nov. 20.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 8, Range 2, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.
Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Farm for Sale.—A fine Farm of 200 acres, in Central Wisconsin. Well situated, and worth $50 an acre. Address J. S. Ames, Kenosha, Wisconsin. [all w4

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.
Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.
N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $15. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.
N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.
Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee-Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

POCKET HYMN BOOK
With Music.
COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.
"Hymns of the Morning"
is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding	50c
Morocco "	75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.
TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.
A liberal discount to agents.
This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.
For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 496, Concord, N. H.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 12. CHICAGO, OCTOBER 22, 1872. WHOLE NO. 443.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

Which of the Three.

TORTURE, PURGATION, OR DESTRUCTION?

This is the issue challenged by Mr. Randles [1] in all the fervour of Methodism. We can have no hesitation about prosecuting the inquiry, and no doubt as to the result.

The voice of revelation pronounces fire to be God's agent of doom upon the wicked. Water destroyed the world of beauty and bounty and life in Noah's day. But the heavens and the earth are kept in store, reserved unto fire, against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. (2 Pet. 3: 5–7.)

As literal water destroyed "the world that then was;"—the "cosmos" of living things and beings, the "cosmos" as a habitation of man, the "cosmos" as the grand decoration and ornament of God's creative wisdom; so literal fire will burn up the very heavens and earth which are the material basis of the "cosmos," in the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. "The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein," the "cosmos," shall be burned up. All these things shall be dissolved." (2 Pet. 3: 10, 11.) Literal fire is here named and meant: and with this language the uniform tenor of Scripture agrees. What then does this burning element establish, Torture, Purgation, or Destruction?

Throw living things into fire and it tortures them; because it destroys them. But it tortures only by destroying. Put material things, such as silver and gold, into fire and it purges them; because it destroys their dross. Material fire brought to bear as God's last judgment upon men will do one of three things: it will torture them, or purge them, or destroy them. If the last judgment of God be only fire-like, still it must torture like fire, or purge like fire, or destroy like fire.

The rationalistic claim to resolve fire into a metaphor will not stand. Fire is so commonly used in the judgment passages, and its work of destruction so literally avowed in the same, that we cannot accept it, even where used as a symbol, for less than a fire-like operation. We must interpret the symbol, or the simile by the literal action of fire.

What then is the action denoted by fire in all the judgment passages of Scripture?

1. "Every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." (Mat. 2: 10, 7, 19; Lk. 3: 9; Jno. 15: 6.) A tree is neither tortured nor purged, but destroyed by fire. Men spiritually fruitless will be dealt with in the same unsparing way. Either by literal fire, or by a fire-like judgment, they will be destroyed.

2. "He will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." (Mat. 3: 11; Lk. 3: 16.) The wheat will be purged from the chaff and dust, but the chaff will not be purged. It will be destroyed by an all-devouring, irresistible fire. The righteous will be dealt with as the wheat, and the wicked as the chaff. How completely is chaff destroyed by fire! So completely and suddenly will the wicked be consumed.

3. "Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them." "As the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire." "The angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire." (Mat. 13: 30, 40, 42, 49, 50.) The wicked will be burned up, "as" the tares are burned up. The marked difference of the two cases is this: the wicked will meet their doom in the full exercise of consciousness and be overwhelmed by it with terror, vexation, and grief.

"There will be weeping and gnashing of teeth." A doom truly and inconceivably awful!

4. "Hell-fire," or the fire of Gehenna is frequently mentioned by our Lord. Did he describe it as a torturing fire, a refining fire, or a consuming fire? The ground of appeal in each place (Mat. 5: 29, 30; 18, 9; Mk. 9: 43–48.) is this:—It is better to part with a member of the body—an eye, a hand, a foot—than to lose the whole body by the destruction of Gehenna. The plucking out of an eye, the cutting off of a hand or a foot would be temporary suffering and permanent loss. The Savior takes no notice of the suffering, but bases his whole appeal upon the loss. He does not say, It is better to enter into life having suffered the pain of amputation; but, It is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed. "It is better for thee to enter into life with one eye" only—with that amount of privation or loss—"than that thy whole body should be cast into hell." The antithesis suggested is the loss of a member or of the body, that is to say, a partial loss or a total loss. The fire of Gehenna was not a torturing fire, nor a refining fire. Its office was to consume and destroy. The heathen fire kindled there in more ancient days was so abhorrent to the heart of God (Jer. 8: 31), that he repudiated all sympathy with it.

5. Nor is the "worm" a symbol of anything but destruction. It and the fire consumed "carcases," (Is. 66:24), which, as they have no feeling, can symbolise no endurance of pain. If the one dies not and the other is not quenched, we should understand by such persistence the continuance of God's judgment from age to age, consuming all that will walk in the broad way to destruction.

6. "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Is this an emblem of torture? Many have thought so for two reasons. First, the fire is everlasting. Second, it is said in the Revelation of St. John that "the Dragon, that Old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the Beast and False Prophet had been cast; and that they [three, the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet,] shall be tormented day and night for ever." Ought we, on the ground of this bold impersonation and hieroglyph, to set aside the common prosaic meaning of fire, and to forget the destructive mission which the consuming element is so uniformly employed to denote? That would be to subordinate the rule to an exception; and also to make the obscure and hyperbolic set aside what is plain and literal.

Then as to the word "torment." The passage certainly denotes the loss of power, of liberty. It means absolute prostration, impotence. The dragon had been bound a thousand years in the bottomless pit before. But he escaped from that "prison." Now, however, there is no escape. His power is completely gone, and for ever.

We do not know, therefore, that John, in his revelation, is speaking of the same judgment as that which our Lord describes in Mat. 25: 41; and if he is, he looks at it under a widely different conception.

7. "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?" (Lk. 9: 56.) What sort of fire was this? real, or metaphorical? What did the fire called for by Elias do upon the two captains and their fifties? (2 Ki. 1: 10–15.) Did it purify them? No. Did it torture them? No. It "consumed" them, swift as the lightning, clean as the fire on Mount Carnel "consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood and the stones and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench."

8. Our Savior recites the judgment on Sodom. "The same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all." (Lk. 17: 29). If we want to know the meaning of "destroyed," we have only to consult the history of that judgment. (Gen. 19: 2.) Every man woman, and child, every living thing, and the city itself, were blotted out. And if we want to know the meaning of "everlasting fire," we may with advantage listen to what Jude says upon this memorable overthrow. "Even as Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities about them are set forth for an example, bearing a penalty of eternal (or everlasting) fire." This fire is eternal in its consequenses, but not in its existence. Abraham saw the fire: it was not some metaphysical abstraction. "The smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace." But the fire soon spent itself, and the country subsided into a lake.

9. By such facts as these we may understand what Paul means when he speaks of the Lord Jesus coming with his mighty angels, and "in flaming fire (1 Thes. 2: 7–9) dealing avengement to them who know not God, and obey not the gospel: who shall pay for penalty everlasting destruction, proceeding from the countenance of the Lord, and from the glory of his power,"—flashing upon them from his visage, breaking away from the effulgent dazzling glory of his power.

10. And from the same facts we may understand him when he again says: "For our God is a consuming fire." If he had meant a purifying fire, or a torturing fire, it would have been perfectly easy to say so. But he meant and said a "consuming fire."

"OUR GOD IS A CONSUMING FIRE."

11. "Death and Hades were cast into a lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 14.) At the beginning of the revelation, the Lord Jesus says: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of Hades and of Death." The keys of Hades, the prison-house of the dead; the keys which Death, the monster jailor of that prison, used in putting and keeping men there. But the prison and the jailor shall, when the end comes, be cast into a lake of fire. Not to be purged. That idea is utterly forbidden. Not to be tortured. How can the grave or Hades be tortured. How can death be tortured? But they can be done away with as effectually as chaff, dead trees, dried branches, and bundles of tares can be destroyed in a furnace of fire. Hades and Death are poetical impersonations here, just as the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet are poetical impersonations four verses previously. The sense is, they shall be destroyed; which is also the sense of the next verse: "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 15.)

"This is the second death" (Rev. 20: 14), death after the general resurrection and the last judgment; a death which dispenses forever with the work of death, and with the office of Hades; which eternally wipes out every form of death as existent fact: a death by which the death state, whether physical or metaphysical, natural or spiritual, will have passed away. There will be nothing left in God's universe to which, or to whom the word death, in any sense, can be applied. "There shall be no more death" existent or occurrent, "for the former things," all of them, and death among them, "have passed away."

CONCLUSION.

It is said by the Torturists that the doctrine of destruction, as taught by the letter and the symbols of Scripture, carries with it no motive to repentance, and no deterrent from sin. Reader, what think you of that opinion? The doctrine in question teaches a resurrection and a judgment for all men. You must stand before God, and with him review life, with him examine and judge your own conduct under the full blaze of eternal truth, of perfect rectitude, and of divine love? Have you sinned against truth, and rectitude, and love? and died impenitent in spite of gospel grace? Then what shame will cover you! What remorse will seize you! What despair will overwhelm you! There will be the saved with Christ; because they have loved him. From them you will be separated: because you have slighted him, and neglected his great salvation. There will be for them in prospect, yea in possession and begun fruition, eternal life. Behold the saints, arrayed in white robes, with palms of victory, crowns of triumph, and harps of praise. Symbols all, say you? Never mind: the realities will be far better. They are the declared sons of God; to dwell in the prepared mansions; in the Holy City; never to die; nor hunger; nor thirst; nor grow old; nor bear bereavement; nor feel sorrow: to pluck life from the tree of life; to drink life from the river of life. Life, life; eternal life with Christ and with all holy natures. A strong, happy, holy life: full of great thoughts, of pure joys, of noble employments, of boundless prospects: hallowed with every endearment. What amiable society; what thrilling fellowships; what varied knowledge; what high discourse; what limitless research; what inconceivable discoveries! Life in perfection without a drawback! Life in full tide without a pause! Life or ever and ever!

Seeing the gates of all this close against you; feeling that you have only yourself to blame for the exclusion; anticipating the awful doom when the assize is over:—is there nothing terrific in all this? Nothing to make you dread sin, and earnestly desire to escape from its consequences? Can you rationally and calmly throw away eternity, an eternity of bliss, pure and perfect, for the sake of grasping a few forbidden and spasmodic joys on earth? Will you brave the frown, the rejection, and curse of the Almighty, for the mean pleasures of sin? If the love of God in providing so great salvation by the death of the cross; and the grace of God in bringing it so near by the ministry of his providence and Spirit; and the patience of God in waiting so long for your acceptance of it; cannot win your heart; then are you, in the judgment of every healthy concience, worthy of destruction—"self-fitted for destruction:" and I know not that any terror, or anything whatever short of a miracle, could prevail with you.

The judgment day will be no momentary ordeal. "The books will be opened," and the dead, the risen dead, will be judged out of those things which are written in the books, according to their works. If this description is bodily figurative, still it denotes at least a process, which will involve time; time for every man to think upon his life, to compare it with the law of truth and right, of gratitude and love; time to perceive its moral obliquities, and perverse absurdities; time to see and acknowledge the righteousness of the penalty. Not till every man is judged by his own memory and conscience, by angels and saints as well as by the Omniscient One, will that Great Day close. So that abundant space and occasion will be given for "wailing and gnashing of teeth."

Flee to Christ now, that he may befriend and bless you in that day with

"ETERNAL LIFE."

So far as Mr. Randles goes with us against the Purgation theory, we hold his book to be valuable and invincible. So far as he contends for eternal torture, we hold him convicted of unfaithfulness to Scripture by his own canon of interpretation. But we hope to return to this subject by glancing at other features of his argument.—Rainbow.

—I OFTEN wished I could be a Universalist, just as I used to wish I could own a whole toy-shop; but there are so many lions in the way. I do not find God so careful to save individuals as he ought to be, if he were a Universalist. He creates and destroys myriads of individuals of every species of living thing, as though no individual,—and I had almost added, no mass of individuals,—were of the slightest final value, while at every step we see him caring for the whole as jealously as he cares for himself.—Northwestern Review.

A faithful brother once remarked: "Whenever I go to the house of God praying for the preacher I always get a good sermon."

---

[1] For Ever: an Essay on Eternal Punishment. By Rev. M. Randles. London: Wesleyan Conference Office.

Backbone.

When you see a fellow-mortal
Without fixed and fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others;
Walking in their cast-off shoes;
Bowing low to wealth and favor,
With abject, uncovered head,
Ready to retract or waver;
Willing to be drove or led;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back;
Show your spine has nerve and morrow—
Just the things which his must lack.
A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone
Than this, backbone.

When you see a theologian
Hugging close some ugly creed,
Fearing to reject or question
Dogmas which his priest may read;
Holding back all noble feeling;
Choking down each manly view;
Caring more for forms and symbols
Than to know the Good and True;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back;
Show your spine has nerve and morrow—
Just the things which his must lack.
A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone
Than this, backbone.

When you see a politician
Crawling through contracted holes;
Begging for some fat position,
In the ring or at the polls;
With no sterling manhood in him;
Nothing stable, broad or sound;
Destitute of pluck or ballast;
Double-sided all around:
Walk yourself with firmer bearing;
Throw your moral shoulders back;
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which his must lack.
A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone
Than this, backbone.

A modest song and plainly told—
The text is worth a mine of Gold;
For many men most sadly lack
A noble stiffness in the back.

—Sel. by D. Matheson.

HADES.

THE HADES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

But the Apostle Paul in his description of the resurrection of believers in 1 Cor. 15; expressly tells us that Hades continues to keep its victory over them until the period of their resurrection, i. e. until the second coming of Christ. It is indeed sad to hear good men asserting of death what Paul says of resurrection from death. How constantly is it said when a good man dies,—"Oh death, where is thy sting? O Hades, where is thy victory?" (1 Cor. xv. 54–5.) But what mistaken Platonic divines teach of death, Paul does not allow to be true until the resurrection from the dead. When does Paul tell us the victory over Hades over the people of God is exchanged for its defeat? It is "when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality," it is "then" and not before that the victory of Hades over believers is changed into its defeat. Paul here then does not allow us to believe that the people of Christ are free from Hades since his resurrection: they have in his resurrection the pledge of their freedom from it, but the freedom itself they will not obtain until their own resurrection. If we are content then to follow the teaching of St. Paul, we must hold that the theory which tells us that the souls of believers since the resurrection of Christ do not go on death to Hades, but go to heaven to the right hand of God is a mere dream of man, a poetic fiction derived from Plato but not from the Bible. The case of believers since Christ's resurrection will of course determine another point sometimes put forward, but which we will not take the trouble specially to discuss, as it is determined by the case before us. It is with reference to believers before the resurrection of Christ, of whom it is sometimes said that the Lord at his resurrection took them out of Hades, just as he did not allow believers since that to enter it at all. If believers since Christ's resurrection go to Hades, of course no one will contend that believers before it were taken out of it. Indeed we know of no earlier authority for this fiction than the apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus. Such are the sources of too many of the opinions which now are accepted truths in Christendom.

The effort recently made to get rid of Paul's testimony here, by saying that Hades is an error in the manuscript, and that the word used by the apostle was "death" (thanatos), is wholly unavailing. The great preponderance of authority is on the side of the reading of Hades. But we have the nature of the passage itself full proof, if manuscript authority were insufficient, that Hades is the word used by the apostle. The passage fortunately is, as every annotator allows, borrowed from Hosea 13; 14, with just so much change of language as to suit the place in the chapter in Corinthians. The sentiment and ideas of Hosea, the structure of sentence, and, so far as the place would admit of, the very words themselves, are borrowed by Paul from the prophets Hosea. Hosea's words are, "O Death I will be thy plagues; O Hades, I will be thy destruction:" which Paul plainly copies in the paraphrase,—"O Death where is thy sting? O Hades where is thy victory?" To suppose that Paul in this passage departs from the sentiment and meaning of Hosea is perfectly inadmissible, and therefore Hades must have been the word used.

Paul's teaching in 1 Cor. 15. is reiterated by our Lord himself in the book of revelation. He is comforting his apostle John, overcome by his divine presence. His words of comfort are,—"Fear not; I am the first and the last. I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forever more, Amen; and have the keys of Hades and of death." (Rev. 1. 18.) The teaching of Christ here is very plain. He refers to his own death, when his body was in the grave and his soul in Hades. He refers to his own resurrection, when his body left the grave and his soul was delivered from Hades. He does this to comfort the mind of his apostle John, and so of all believers, that what he had done for himself he would do for them. He conveys this comfort in the words, "I have the keys of Hades and of death." What is this but saying, "I will open Hades and the grave for my people, even as I opened them for myself?" And hence we are taught that for believers in Christ since his resurrection, Hades still has the very same existence and power that it ever had, that it truly reigns over them as death reigns. The words of Christ are but the reiteration of the sentiment of Paul,—"O Death where is thy sting? O Hades where is thy victory?" The sting of death would be removed, and the victory of Hades changed into defeat, when, in the morning of resurrection, Christ uses the keys of death and Hades, and lets his prisoners of hope free forever.

And now, having shown from the New testament that Hades continues to receive the souls of believers since the resurrection of Christ, just as it received them before that event, we will proceed to show that so far as its notices of Hades extend it gives us the very same idea of it that the Old Testament gave us, viz., as a place of death, and as identical with the grave. As the allusions to Hades in the New Testament are very few in comparison to the number of allusions to it in the Old, we cannot, of course, expect so much information about it. In truth it was not wanted. The Old Testament had fully informed its readers about Hades. If there had been any change made in Hades then, it would have been the part of the New Testament to speak fully and explicitly of this change. But where no change was made, there was no room in the New Testament for any further information where the fullest had been already given. We accordingly find no descriptions in the New Testament of Hades, such as we find repeatedly in the Old. In but eleven places does the New Testament allude to Hades. The references to it in the Old are six-fold more numerous. Yet in these few references we find allusions to Hades of such a kind as show beyond any question that in the mind of the Spirit which inspired the writing of the New Testament, Hades was the very same place and state since the resurrection of Christ that it was before.

In no less than three places out of the eleven where it occurs, Hades is associated with death exactly as we saw it to be in the Old Testament. "I looked," says John, "and behold a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hades followed him." And in the same way we find Death and hades twice afterwards associated together in this book. (Rev. 9; 8; 20, 13, 14.) So far from life being associated in the New Testament with Hades, Death is its corresponding idea. But we have in one of these passages if possible a plainer testimony to the truth of our view. In the account of the judgment which precedes the "new heaven and the new earth" of the eternal age, we read that "the sea gave up the dead" which were in it; and "death and Hades delivered up the dead which were in them." (Rev. 20: 13.) Even from this passage, as it occurs in our Authorized Version, we could show, as we showed from repeated passages in the Old Testament, that Hades is the receptacle of the dead bodies of men as well as of their souls, i. e. that it is identical with the grave. For, hades contains the dead even as the sea contains the dead. Now we suppose that every one will allow that what the sea contains are the dead bodies of those who have been drowned in it. If so, then Hades also contains dead bodies. But what our translation only enables us to gather by induction, the Greek of the Apocalypse, if properly translated, expressly states. We suppose that our translators did not well see how they could place dead bodies in Hades. Hades was with them the receptacle of souls in a condition of full sensation and life. Accordingly they shroud the original Greek under the expression "the dead," which they think may both cover the dead bodies in the sea and the living souls in Hades because these latter had once belonged to the dead bodies. But the Greek word here used, nekros, signifies properly and primarily a dead body. So it is used throughout the New Testament (Mat. 10: 8; Mk. 12: 26; Lk. 7: 22; Jno. 12: 1; Acts 5: 10; Rom. 4: 54), except on some rare occasions where it is used in a secondary and figurative sense for the dead in sin. (Mat. 8: 22; Lk. 15: 24.) Its use in this secondary sense is indicated by the context, for the phrase is always applied to persons known to be possessed of physical life. But when not thus used it signifies a dead body. The senses Liddell and Scott's Dictionary gives for the term are: 1. "a dead body, a corpse;" 2. "a dead man as opposed to one alive." It gives no other sense for the word used as a noun. Its meaning then is the dead body of a man. But Hades, according to John, contains dead bodies of men, and therefore Hades is with him identical with the grave. We thus see, what we might have expected to see, that Hades in the New Testament is the same as Hades, or Sheol, in the Old: that it means the grave; that it contains the bodies as well as the souls or lives of men, of the just as of the unjust, that it is the region of death.

We cannot leave the subject of this chapter without adverting for a moment to an objection confidently made at times against our entire argument. It is this. Hades is a Greek word. It is said then that in the Greek language it has one primary invariable meaning, viz., a place of departed living souls. Such, it is said, would be the meaning which every Greek speaker would as a matter of course, apply to it when used. Hence it is asserted that when we find it in the Septuagint used as the translation for the Hebrew Sheol, and when we find it used in the New Testament, we are to take it in this invariable sense, and that consequently the use of this term at all indicates that the souls in Hades were alive.

Now certainly if Hades had in the Greek language but one meaning, and if the above were that meaning, there would be considerable, if not absolutely conclusive, force in this argument. But a little consideration will show us that we cannot by any possibility suppose that either the original or the invariable sense of Hades was a place of living souls.

Hades was a term in use in the Greek language from the time of the formation of that language. It was in use as long as the word psyche or soul, was in use. It was on all hands allowed that on death the soul went down to Hades. It will therefore appear evident that on the meaning attached by a Greek speaker to the term soul, on what he supposed would happen to the soul on death, would be his meaning for that Hades to which the soul went. If the Greek speaker supposed that the soul survived death and went to Hades he would mean by Hades, a place of living souls; if he did not believe that the soul survived death he could not possibly have supposed Hades to be a place of living souls but must have identified it with the grave.

Now on this plain ground we insist that the original sense of the word Hades with Greek speakers did not mean a place of living souls, for the simple reason that the original belief of Greece, as at all times the prevalent belief among its educated classes attest, was that the soul was mortal and did not survive bodily dissolution. For this we have as good a testimony as we need desire in the Grecian historian Herodotus. He tells us that the original faith of Greece was that the soul was mortal: that the idea of its immortality was derived from Egypt: he tells us that he knows the names of the first Greeks who introduced the novel idea: while he leads us to the opinion that it was in his time an idea by no means generally received. His words are,—"The Egyptians are the first of mankind who have defended the immortality of the soul. They believe, that, on the dissolution of the body the soul immediately enters some other animal, and that after using as vehicles every species of terrestrial, aquatic, and winged creatures, it finally enters a second time into a human body. This opinion some among the Greeks have at different periods of time adopted as their own; but I shall not, although I am able, specify their names." (Euterpe 133.)

Now it is quite plain from this that Greece originally held no such doctrine as that the soul of man survived his body, and Herodotus leads us very plainly to see that he held no such idea himself. In the time of Socrates and Plato we see that it was not a general opinion, for the entire argument of Socrates in the Phædo is to convince his friends of this very matter upon which they were at least very skepucal. But hence it follows as a necessary consequence that Hades did not originally signify with any Greek speaker a place of living souls, and that such was never its universal sense. We have no doubt that originally it meant the grave: that it came next to signify the God of death, Pluto: and that, by a further modification, it was supposed to signify Pluto's realm where he was supposed to rule over shadowy souls in some sort of existence. In those latter senses the word is usually used by the Grecian poets, to whom it afforded a lively exercise for their imagination, though few of them probably believed a word of what they said about it. We have in existence but very few Greek writings in prose where we find the term used. Had we the writings of Epicurus, we would doubtless find it used by him as equivalent to the grave. As it is, it is difficult to find places where it is thus used. There are however some, and writers of the first authority in the Greek language acknowledge that the grave is a true and proper sense for Hades in Greek.

The first Greek classical dictionary of the present [illegible] that of Liddell and Scott. [illegible] following as the meaning [illegible] Hades: "In Homer, Pluto, the G[illegible] nether world; 2. the nether world, the grave, death," The only lexicon specially applied to the Septuagint Greek is that of Schleusner. It gives the grave as one of the meanings of Hades. It explains the expression "oi en Hadon" as "qui sunt in domo sepulchr," "those who are in the house of the grave." Archbishop Usher, whose learning is undoubted, and who does not at all agree with our view of Hades as the grave, is yet compelled to acknowledge that it is constantly used by Greek writers in that sense. Thus is one passage in his "Answer to a Jesuit," chap. 8. he says, "As for the Greek word Hades, it is used by Hippocrates to express the first matter of things, from which they have their beginning, and into which afterwards being dissolved they make their ending." This is very different from the idea that Hades meant with all Greek writers a place of living souls. Hippocrates held the Epicurean view, and makes Hades to be that lifeless substance out of which he supposes man to have been made, and to which he thought he would return in death forever, being annihilated. In another passage Usher says that Hades is taken for a tomb in that place of Pindarus:

Hatenthe de pro domaton Hœroi lachontes haidan Basilees esoi enti.

"Other sacred kings have gotten a tomb apart by themselves before the houses, or before the gates of the city. And therefore we see that Haidas is by Suidas, in his lexicon, expressly interpreted ho taphos, and by Hesychius, tumbos taphos, a tomb, or a grave." In another place, referring to several passages in the Old Testament, Usher says, "In these places where in the Hebrew is Sheol, in the Greek Hades, in the Latin Inferni, or Inferi, in the English Hell, the place of dead bodies, and not of souls is to be understood." To the examples of the use of Hades for the grave given by Usher we will only add one more. It is from Æschines, Agam. 678: Haden pontion pephengontes, "having escaped a watery Hades, or grave."

It is sometimes said in opposition to our view, that if Hades meant "the grave," we should sometimes read of a hades of brick, marble, &c., and also that we should find it often in the plural number. This objection is readily disposed of. Hades is, at least generally, used in the Greek as a generic term, i.e., as a term comprehending under it a variety of species or kinds. It is used precisely as its English equivalent "The Grave" is used when this latter term is supposed to signify, not any particular grave, but the state of sepulture in general. When "The Grave" is thus used as a generic term it is never spoken of as made of this material or of that, because it comprises tombs and graves of whatever material they are composed: neither is it, when thus used generically, ever used in the plural. Just so, since Hades is in Greek a generic term, at least generally such, we do not, when it is so used, read of it as composed of any particular material, nor do we find it in the plural number. But we are far from saying that it might not at times be so used. We should say that Pindar would certainly, if asked, have told us of what materials the royal hades or tomb was composed which he speaks of as before the houses.

There is, then, nothing in the usage of the Greek word Hades to prevent our giving it the meaning which we see given to it in the Scripture, viz., the grave. HENRY CONSTABLE.

—Rainbow.

Lazarus and the Rich Man.

This passage containing the narrative of Dives and Lazarus is one of considerable importance, and is worthy of candid consideration, not alone because of the truth it contains. It is hardly necessary to say that there is a great diversity of opinion as to what it teaches, some understanding it as a simple narration of actual occurrences, while others think it a parable. One of the two it most certainly is—history or a parable.

I do not understand it as a history, because a resurrection would be necessary to make it so, to say the least; as we find three literal men brought to view: Abraham, with a literal bosom, organs of speech, voice that could be heard "afar off," etc. Now Abraham died, and was buried in the cave of Machpelah; and if this is to be understood as a history, then he must have been raised from the dead; else Lazarus was "carried" to the cave of Machpelah and laid in Abraham's bosom there. But Jesus is the "first fruits of those that slept."

"It came to pass that the beggar died," "and was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom" the same beggar that was "laid" at the rich man's gate, that ate the crumbs, died, and was "carried" by the angels into Abraham's bosom.

The rich man also died, and was "buried." If this be a history, then that which in the case of the rich man was carried to burial, was in the other case carried by the angels. We follow the rich man, and we immediately find him employing or alluding to various members of his body: he lifts up his "eyes" and sees "Lazarus" "afar off." He calls to Abraham to send "Lazarus" to dip the tip of his "finger" in water and cool his "tongue." If this is indeed a history, then it follows that in hell (hades) the whole man is found—soul, body and spirit, and that before a resurrection: and, also, in "Abraham's bosom" the whole man is found, capable of being sent to the five brethren to warn them. And all this before a resurrection and before a judgment!! each one obtaining his reward as soon as he died!

But when does God reward men? is it at death? Let us see: "The Lord knoweth how....to reserve the ungodly unto the day of judgment to be punished." (2 Pet. 2: 9.) "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works." (Mat. 16: 27.) "Then shall he say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." When shall they hear this? Ans. "When the Son of Man shall come in the glory of the Father." (Mat. 25: 31, 34.) It follows from these positive declarations that a resurrection and judgment must precede rewards, both to the good and to the evil.

"But," says the objector, "it is not meant that Lazarus was taken away bodily, that he was literally carried, but his soul was borne away." But the record says he was "carried." And if this is history, it means just what it says. It does not say one word about a soul or spirit. If it was a history of events that had transpired, and the body only of the beggar died, and his soul was carried away by angels, it would have said as much. The strong probability is that the burial of the poor man would have been mentioned as well as that of the rich man. But no burial is mentioned. On the other hand he was "carried by the angels." When I say that "John Jones died suddenly in the streets of Galesburg, and was carried to his home by his friends," every one understands that the person of John Jones that had died, was "carried."

But what does the story teach? It says he "lifted up his eyes in hell." In giving an exposition of this passage and conclusion, I will say that I understand it to be a parable; and that hades, here rendered hell, is never in a single instance used for the place of final retribution, but signifies the place of the dead, both good and bad. Jesus himself went down into hades. (Acts 2: 31.) David, "being a prophet," "spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hades." Hades is found eleven times in the New Testament, and is rendered grave in 1 Cor. 15: 55, in the text, and hell in the margin. In Rev. 20: 13 it is hell in the text, and grave in the margin. Hades corresponds with the Hebrew sheol, and Peter (Acts 2: 31), in quoting from Ps. 16: 10 renders sheol by the Greek hades.

In the story of Dives, hades is used in its parabolic or figurative sense, and harmonizes perfectly with the general scope and tenor of the parable. This parable is the last of a series of five found in the fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of Luke's gospel. These five parables are so intimately connected, and blended together that it is hardly possible to understand and apply one of them without the aid of the rest. In these five parables we have an outline or sketch of one of our Savior's most powerful discourses.

By turning to Lk. 15: 1–3 we find who were the audience that received this discourse: "Then drew near all the publicans and sinners for to hear him." "And the Pharisees and Scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." Our Savior spoke to two classes; the object of each class in listening is also noted. The publicans and sinners "drew near to hear him." These publicans were Jews who had accepted office as collectors of customs or taxes due to the Roman government, and who had been excommunicated and cast out of the synagogues in consequence of becoming servants to a foreign power. By doing this they lost caste among the Jewish rulers, and were considered by them as Gentile dogs, not worthy of the least consideration and respect.

The "sinners" also were Jews that did not belong to either of the three religious sects among the Jews—Pharisees, Sadducees or Essenes. It is supposed by some that these "sinners" were Gentiles; but this, I think, is a great mistake. Jesus said of himself, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Mat. 10: 6.) These publicans and sinners came near expressly to "hear him," that they might receive a benefit from his teachings. Cast out and isolated from their people, although living among them, they did not have those strong prejudices against Jesus that were found among the Scribes and Pharisees. They felt their need of a physician; they realized that they were unworthy; and hence when Jesus came performing miracles and signs and wonders before the people, and preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God to them, mingling with them, entering their houses and eating and drinking with them, taking their little ones in his arms and blessing them, it is no wonder they came "near to hear him."

The Pharisees and Scribes, on the other hand, were proud and haughty, aristocratic and overbearing, in the extreme. They rejected Jesus because he did not come to them as a mighty conqueror, as a rich and powerful prince to deliver them from the Roman yoke, and establish them as the head of nations. And when he taught the poor publican and sinner, eating and drinking with them, alleviating their mental suffering, and giving them cheer and hope, they were angry beyond endurance, and sought in every way to "catch him in his words," murmuring and finding fault with all his ways, and endeavoring to effect his ruin.

Jesus now directs his discourse directly to the Pharisee and Scribe. "He spake this parable unto them," saying, "what man among you, having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which was lost until he find it. And when he hath found it he layeth it on his shoulders rejoicing." Returning home he "calls his friends and neighbors, saying, Rejoice with me, I have found my sheep which was lost." The object of this parable is to show the Pharisee and Scribe, in the most direct manner, how unfeeling and sinful their present treatment of the publican and sinner was, and how inconsistent and heartless they were. If any one of them having a hundred sheep should lose one, he would have no rest until it was found, and in the most tender manner brought home a subject, rejoicing. But when one of these poor publicans and sinners (a lost sheep) would return back into the favor of God by faith in Jesus as the great Physician and prophet of God, they were ready to move heaven and earth to hinder them. Nevertheless (Jesus informs them), though they might deride and find fault, and hinder, yet, "I say unto you joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than ninety and nine [of you] just persons" [in your own estimation]. (v. 7.)

The same thought is followed out in the parable of the lost piece of silver, showing what an earnest effort the woman would make to find the smallest piece: yet they would utterly neglect these poor wretches who were starving and perishing in their very midst. He then makes this forcible application: "Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." (v. 10.) This was equal to the forcible inquiry—"If the angelic hosts around the throne of Jehovah, are so filled with joy and rejoicing, when one of these vile sinners repents and turns to God through faith in me as God's Son, should you not also rejoice and be exceeding glad?"

In the next parable (that of the prodigal son), he shows them that they would deal with a natural son, who was sunk in extreme degradation, just as God was now dealing with these publicans and sinners. In order to illustrate this truth perfectly and plainly, he supposes a father who had two sons, the youngest of whom, when of age, said to his father, "give me the portion of goods that falleth to me." (Among the Jews, the oldest son was heir and steward to his father's estates, while the younger sons received such a portion as the Father chose to give.) After the father had divided his substance with the younger son, his child soon gathered his portion together, and went into a far country. Right here began his downward course. Among the Hebrews it was considered very degrading for any Jew to go among the Gentiles and make his home with them. By so doing they lost caste, and became Gentiles. But another step downward is taken: he "wastes" his substance "among harlots" in "riotous living." Still his degradation is not complete. He is reduced to servitude to a Gentile, and this Gentile sends him to "feed swine," the most abominable occupation known to a Jew; and in this condition he feeds upon "husks that the swine did eat." Here the picture of his degradation is perfect.

Now, will his haughty, aristocratic Pharisee father receive his son again in case he should think fit to return? He has never sent a messenger after this erring son, never an epistle, or a loving message, or an invitation to come back. No, no; his pride would not permit such a thing. But will he receive him again? Yes! A "great way off" sees his deeply erring yet repenting child, returning, clothed in rags, covered with filth, emaciated by hunger, cast down and dejected. All his pride vanishes in a moment. He only remembers now that yonder poor wretch is his son, the child, perhaps, of his old age, and his bowels of compassion yearn over him, and he has compassion, and runs and falls upon his neck, kissing him, even before the son had confessed his great fault. This is the way they would treat an erring son; trying in every way to show that all the dark past is forgotten.

The Savior's application is, "Will not God deal as kindly and lovingly with these publicans and sinners as you would with this erring son?"

He again presents the picture of their sin against the publican and sinner, by showing how the elder son (the Scribes and Pharisees) received his brother. When he comes home, and hears the general rejoicing, he is angry and will not come in. When the father comes out and entreats him, he answers—"Lo these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment....but as soon as this thy son has come, who hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf." No one can fail to see that this elder son is the haughty, self-righteous Scribe and Pharisee; and the younger "son" (he would not be a son if he was a Gentile) was the publican and sinner. (To be continued.) Geo. W. Hurd.

Holiness.

A great deal is said about holiness; well, I am not surprised at that. If Christians are to think and talk about any thing I should expect them to think and talk about holiness. But they talk so differently. One man declares that "the doctrine of holiness, alone, can save the church." But when I ask him, What do you mean by holiness? Do you mean that any body is perfect, absolutely sinless? he says, "No, I don't mean that. We don't pretend that any body is absolutey perfect, only God is that."

"But what then do you mean?"

"O I mean that men must be entirely sanctified."

Well, now you have taken a new phrase, that puzzles me as much as the other. I turn to the dictionary and find that sanctified means "made holy," and so the reasonable interpretation of "entirely sanctified" would seem to be made entirely holy. But you say, "No, that is not it, for none but God is entirely holy."

My dear friend, if we are to get out of endless confusion we must come to definite agreement as to the meaning of the words we employ. Nothing can be more desirable for the followers of Christ than to find words which they can agree to use to express our common faith. It is, I think, one of Satan's devices to fasten upon sections of Christ's church words and phrases which others of his followers cannot adopt. In this way he contrives to keep us from showing a common and united front against the enemy. Now why should we continue to yield him this advantage against us, when there is no need of doing so; when we may with painstaking, unite upon the use of words which do express our common faith?

I think the difficulty arose, at first, from the perversion of the simplest lesson God has given us. These lessons are at once simple and comprehensive; very high and yet level to the comprehension of a child. Thus God says; "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." It has been Satan's part, from our first parant's day until now, to represent that God does not mean all he says, and that he will not do all he theatens. He persuaded Adam of this to his ruin. Be it ours to make sure Satan shall not persuade us that God does not mean what he says in his first great commandment.

We are all familiar with Satan's comments on the word of God. "Of course," he says, "you are to obey the commandments, but when you love God you are to love him in a very high, and peculiar, and mysterious way, not as you love your parents and children, brothers, sisters and friends; not at all, that is different; that is mere natural love, and too commonplace to offer to the great God. Such love as that would be belittling and unworthy." And so he thrusts upon your mind a vague and misty notion of some unreal kind of love as the only love proper to be given to God, while the real, substantial, intelligible love, which everybody comprehends, is to be kept, for relatives and friends about us. Nothing could be more shrewdly fitted to the great adversary's aim to make God unreal, and to shut him out of human hearts. God says, and Jesus echos it, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart." That's the great first doctrine of the Bible; that is God's doctrine; His lesson, brother, to you and to me, and to every other brother, everywhere—a lesson plain to every understanding, and does not admit of two readings. He says, so plainly no words could make it more plain, I must have whole-hearted love. Every man, woman and child can give his whole heart's love to our Immanuel, to God in Christ. Every one who does this will make a total consecration of himself to Jesus. He will set himself apart for Jesus. He will write upon himself and upon all that he has, "Holiness unto the Lord." He will do this because he has received the Holy Spirit, the Comforter; for the Comforter, when thus received, takes the things of God and Christ and shows them to his entertainer; and among these things is the disciple's sonship. Jesus has made us sons and heirs.

Once receive this gift, his free gift, and the child-nature will assert itself. As a loving child you will not fail to go to your Lord with every thing. You will be a witness for Jesus and your testimony will harmonise with that of every witness. You cannot claim sinless holiness, but you can and will claim whole-hearted love; ay, and full assurance of faith and of hope. You may not claim full perfection, but you can claim present and full salvation, both from the law and from the dominion of sin. You may in God's own words declare, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Here is ground on which we can all stand, on which we all owe it to our Lord to stand, while we make common cause against all who go about as Satan's emissaries, representing that God does not mean what he says when he demands that we love him with all the heart, soul, mind and strength. He declares, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." The great majority of those who connect themselves with the church of Christ aspire to no such type of peculiar life. They have no sentiment of priesthood, no conscious call to stand between the living and the dead. All who know themselves to be thus called of God, are bound by every obligation the grace of God can accumulate upon them, to be living witnesses for him that his whole people are called to come out from the mixed multitude of formal worshipers, and assume the station and service of faithful, devoted soldiers of the Lamb.

All improvement in this direction must begin in an improved knowledge of Jesus. "This is eternal life, to know the only true God and Jesus." "This knowledge is in the highest degree a matter of fact knowledge, and he who would acquire it must dilligently study the facts of our Lord's history. Search the Scripture, he says, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me. It is the loving study of this dear Lord, in his teachings and in his life, that sanctifies us. And so he prays, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." —J. W. Kimball, in Watchman and Reflector.

The Temporal Power of the Pope.

Can it be restored? A plan for the purpose has been matured. A dispatch from Dublin says that a secret meeting of the League San Sebastian was recently held in that city, when a conspiracy was organized for the purpose of restoring the Pope to temporal power. The foreign members of the League in France, Italy and Spain are acting in concert with their brethren in Ireland in the movement, and were represented at the conclave. A definite plan of action was agreed upon, but the details are necessarily kept secret. Private instructions have been transmitted to numerous prominent adherents of his Holiness on the Continent, and it is understood the new movement has a very powerful following, both in Italy and France.

Probably Mr. Bismarck may have something to say about this conspiracy, the Emperor of Germany and the King of Italy may also have a voice in the matter. So far as man can foresee the future, there is no fair prospect that the Pope will again rule the kingdom and States of Europe with the sword of secular power. He must be content to bind the ignorant with the chains of gloomy superstitions until the game of priestcraft shall be played out.—Christian Observer.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 22, 1872.

THE MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION.

Up to the hour of going to press we have not received the minutes of the meeting last week. They will no doubt arrive in season for our next issue.

EACH of our correspondents will oblige us greatly by reading the remarks found in the Business Department, directly under the list of officers of the Association, and strictly complying with the requests there presented.

A CORRESPONDENT says: Tracts sown grow subscribers to the papers. Larger works grow preachers and writers; and these again help the papers. 'Good words are worth much and cost little,' and, moreover, like 'curses come home to roost.' Help to circulate good books and tracts, by word and by deed.

AFTER all that has been said about P. O. Addresses, scarcely a day passes that our mail clerk does not come in with a letter, saying, 'Do you recollect where 'so-and so' or 'such-a-one' lives? Happily we can remember in a great many cases. In others we cannot, and so the letters must go into the 'Reference File.'

MR. GALTON, in the Fortnightly Review, asserts though it may be an instinct of the universal human heart, in seasons of distress, to pray, it's all of no use, the prayer is only 'a voice convulsively sent out into space, whose utterance is a physical relief!' A little personal experience would help Mr. Galton to a vastly different opinion.

FOR some months we have published a standing request to ministers in regard to their appointments. About one in four have complied with our directions, to whom we are really obliged. We shall now drop the notice, hoping that every one sending appointments will take pains to comply with our suggestions. We are glad to receive appointments any way; but twice glad when they are written orderly and clearly.

A SUBSCRIBER renewing his subscription to the Religious Telescope casually remarks: 'The tobacco crop is large in our region. As soon as it is out of the way, so that the people can attend meetings, we expect to give our time to the Lord.' This good Christian and his neighbors, says the Independent, who believe in seeking first the tobacco crop and its profits, and after that the Kingdom of God, differ from a good many others only in the frank confession of their faith.

SAID Edward Irving: Blessed consummation of this weary and sorrowful world! I give it welcome, I hail its approach, I wait its coming more than they who watch for the morning. Over the wrecks of a world I weep: over broken hearts of parents, over suffering infancy, over the unconscious clay of sweet innocents, over the untimely births that have never seen the light, or have just looked upon it and shut their eyes for a season until the glorious light of the resurrection morn. O, my Lord, come away! Hasten with all thy congregated ones. My soul desireth to see the King in his beauty and the beautiful ones whom he shall bring along with him.

THE Christian Standard says of Acts 3:20, 21—'It is given as a motive to repent and turn to God. (1) That your sins may be blotted out. (2) That times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord. (3) That the Lord himself may come, whom the heavens must receive until the times wherein all things will be restored. The time of our Lord's second advent is the time when all things are to be made new—new heavens and a new earth; the last enemy, death, will be destroyed—for Christ must reign until he has put all enemies under his feet, and the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.'

DR. Laurens P. Hickok is a D. D. and a LL.D. He has put forth a work entitled 'Humanity Immortal.' We suppose the good man believes the body is a part of humanity, hence it is immortal—is it? Here is a sample of his style: In speaking of the spirit of man after death as a free citizen of the ethereal universe, he says:

> It (the spirit) uses the living light of its own (spiritual) body in working on and through the light about it at its pleasure. It changes the equilibrations of diremption in its own forces to any measures of excess on any side, and so has locomotion in the ethereal universe at will, in any direction, and with any measure of velocity.

WE alluded lately to an article in a Boston paper in which Father Miller was unjustly reproached. The following correction has since appeared in the same journal:

"COLORED GLASSES."

To the Editor of the Watchman and Reflector:

Allow me to correct a statement of one of your correspondents to the effect that "good Old Father Miller" conceived the idea that "this world was coming to an end about 1843, and then determined to prove it from the Scriptures." Your correspondent is mistaken. Mr. Miller's opinion that Christ would come about 1843 was a conclusion which he at first unwillingly reached after some years of patient study of the prophecies. In this case your correspondent either drew upon his imagination for his illustration, or he used "colored glasses." NEMO.

DR. WM. LAMSON calls James Freeman Clarke to account for uncharitable language towards orthodox teachers, and says:

> I know of one, could name him, were it proper, differing widely from me in theological belief; one who has written much that is controversial, but all whose writings are characterized by the very opposite spirit to that on which I have commented. If he has occasion to speak of the belief of an opponent it is not a carricature but the belief itself which he holds up. And this fairness has added immensely to the force of his arguments. Would that all controversialists, especially all preachers, had this spirit.

—We suggest that some of our orthodox opponents learn this paragraph by heart, and put it in practice when talking, preaching and writing about Adventism.

INSANITY.

That all forms of mental and moral disease are symptoms of a morbid condition of the brain, is now as well established as any fact of science. The elaborate researches of Prof. Shraeder vad der Kolk and other European observers, have shown most clearly that the brains of patients who die insane idiotic, or imbecile, give evidence, on microscopic examination, of diseased conditions sufficient to account for all the symptoms they may have exhibited. Insanity, being then a symptom of disease of the brain, is not found among the inferior species, who have little or no nervous system, and only exceptionally among the higher orders of animals. It is comparatively rare among wild and barbarous tribes. As would logically be expected, its manifestations are most frequent and most severe in civilized communities, and among the intellectual and refinement. It was never so common as at the present day, and it appears to be rapidly increasing and multiplying its phases, in direct proportion to our progress in art, in science, in literature, in trade, in finance, and in all the departments of modern activity through which the brain is so constantly harrassed and overworked. While we escape or recover from many of the inflammations and fevers that decimate the savage tribes, and are on the whole, healthier and longer-lived, we are yet afflicted with a thousand phases of insanity to which they are comparative strangers. —Dublin University Magazine.

—We cannot vouch for the statements of the above extract. We only quote it to ask a question: Inasmuch as disease of the brain causes insanity—is sufficient to account for all symptoms exhibited—does it not look at least as though mind was a brain-product, and not a separate entity using the brain as a tool, or instrument of expression! If mind were a separate, conscious, intelligent entity, would it be the slave of a diseased organ? The facts in the case demonstrate that if mind is a separate entity, then it is subject to the brain and not master of it. The conditions of the brain determine the conditions of the mind; and to this rule there are no exceptions.

TAFEL'S INTERLINEARY TRANSLATION.

We first called attention to the proposed Interlineary Translation of the Old and New Testaments by Doctors Leonard, Rudolph, and L. H. Tafel, some years since, and expressed high hopes of its useful character, should it be published. We commended it to our readers, and had the pleasure of forwarding a list of subscribers to Dr. Tafel. We have now received Part I. of the work, and upon examination we find no reason to revise the opinion we formed from an examination of the specimen pages furnished with the prospectus.

We confess to a shade of disappointment in looking over the pages of Part I. when we found that the same Hebrew word was not always rendered by the same English term. We were hoping for absolute uniformity in this respect, for we consider it a matter of no small importance. The object of an interlineary translation is to give the unlearned reader, so far as is possible, all the advantages of reading the Scriptures in the original tongues. Where the Greek or Hebrew terms bear several senses, the common reader should have the privilege of "private judgment" as to the sense intended in any or every case, as much as in determining the meaning of a paragraph or entire chapter.

We wrote at once to Dr. L. H. Tafel, of Philadelphia, calling attention to the fact that in Part I. he with his coadjutors, had, in several instances, employed various words in rendering one Hebrew term. Our letter called out the following response:

PHILADELPHIA, October 14, 1872.

MR. W. L. HIMES, Dear Sir:—I have received your valued letter and am much obliged to you for it. As far as the translation of nefesh is concerned, your criticisms are to a great degree correct, and though you may not understand exactly how the difference in translation occurred, it may serve to your better appreciation of the work to state it. The original meaning of the verb is "to breathe," and as my father wished to mark the inmost meaning of the word, he translated it breath. There are however three words in Hebrew that signify breath or breathing, nefesh, ruach, and neshahmah, and while it is necessary to give the primitive meaning of the Hebrew words, it seems at the same time necessary to distinguish these various roots, which may be very similar in their meaning, while yet divine reason compelled the use of different words. So while nefesh in its fundamental meaning is breath, still, because we have ruach and neshama, which require this same word breath for their translation, it may seem the best in the end to adopt the word soul for nefesh, breath for ruach, and breathing for neshama. The hesitancy in the choice was produced by the necessity of giving strictly fundamental ideas, and again, the necessity of distinguishing as far as practicable in the translation all the roots. Another reason is, that in Number One there was no one as yet who had undertaken the particular business of watching that the same word be always rendered the same way. In the Second Number I have undertaken that task, and though I cannot promise that my eye shall be infallible, still I shall use my utmost endeavor to insure sameness of translation. One difficulty which we have to encounter is that a part of the manuscript is always in the hand of the printer, and can, therefore, not be consulted because we are not able to have duplicates written of the whole. Still we shall do what is our power to insure sameness of translation.

As to the translation of ruach, in Gen. 7:22, you find there nishmath, (from neshama,) and ruach together, while both signify breath. It might have been rendered "breathing breath," but it is questionable whether this translation would have been much preferable to "breathing spirit," because in the latter every one sees at once that there are in Hebrew two different roots used, while in the former translation the superficial reader might suppose but one. Spirit is nothing but the Latin for breath.

While I have given you the reasons for the imperfections you have indicated, I nevertheless do not doubt that they are imperfections, and it is probable that they will be changed if another edition should be called for. It is some encouragement to see that there are persons who like to have the Word of God exactly as it came from his mouth, and who are solicitous that no foreign breath shall come in between. I have sometimes feared that my father's rendering might be charged with being literal to incomprehensibility, and that many would prefer a little more yielding to the English idiom. I am glad that in your case it is not so, and find in your letter encouragement to make the translation as literal as possible.

The work is one which I hope will bring the Lord nearer to many of His children, and if the expenses of printing will be borne by the subscribers, we shall be sure to complete it without looking to any reward but the satisfaction of a useful work performed.

Yours fraternally,

L. H. TAFEL.

We give the above letter to our readers as the best possible commendation we could print of Doctor Tafel's work. We are sure such a translation will be an invaluable addition to the library of every Bible student, and we heartily commend it to all. Had we the Hebrew type we would give our readers some specimen pages. Meanwhile, we advise any who wish a valuable addition to their library to send two dollars to Dr. L. H. Tafel, 625 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Penn. The parts will be published about once in three months, and subscribers are not called upon to pay for any part until it is ready for delivery.

We admire the spirit of the able translators, as manifested in the letter we have quoted entire. Let us as a people do our full share in sustaining such an excellent enterprise. He must have a large list of subscribers to ensure even the expense of publication. Let those who are able to do so, and who do not care for the work for their own use, subscribe for a copy and present it to their preacher.

ANNIHILATION——IST——ISM.

These long, harsh-sounding words of Latin origin are just now much used in orthodox literature, though the last two are not given in the latest Webster. It is plain that they are not used because they are euphonious or easily spoken or easily written, or because there are no other words that could express the writer's meaning. They are used simply because it has been thought necessary to use them. The verb annihilate is the one word in the English language which in its etymological and philosophical sense means to reduce to nothing. Philosophy has used it to express an impossibility. Thus Lord Bacon gave utterance to the famous opinion which has ever since been undisputed, that, "It is impossible for any body to be utterly annihilated." Taking advantage of this everywhere prevalent opinion, the writers and speakers opposed to the doctrine of the destruction of the wicked, have diligently sought to convince their readers and hearers that the theory they were opposing was not only unscriptural but unphilosophical also. They have taken no pains to distinguish between the primary meaning of the word annihilate and its secondary meaning; nor with a few honorable exceptions have they so much as mentioned the fact so well known to them that the secondary sense of the term equivalent to the word destroy is the only meaning which the word can have in theology.

There is, therefore, a reproach in the word "annihilationist," because it is generally held to mean one who believes in the impossible. It is in vain that we ask our opponents to fix the meaning of the word so as to make its use unequivocal. They will do no such thing. The word would then lose all its distinctive value to them. The epithet in the expression—"He is an annihilationist," is thought to be too expressive of withering contempt and scorn to throw away or to define. No respectable writer would say that his opponents believed in annihilation in the etymological and primary sense of that term, but many highly respectable writers use the word in such a way that their half-educated and ignorant readers have a sort of pitying contempt for the people whose dense ignorance is supposed to allow them to entertain a belief utterly repugnant to all sound philosophy. It is useless, too, to ask our opponents to accept and use the words we give in the statement of our belief. They know very well that we have a doctrine that we can express in Scriptural terms, and that we choose to thus express it. They would much rather coin a word of equivocal meaning, than to use a legitimate word of fixed meaning. Thus they prefer the epithet "annihilationist," to that of "destructionist," though the latter word is given in Webster and defined to mean "one who believes in the final destruction or complete annihilation of the wicked."

Mr. Samuel C. Bartlett, confessedly the ablest advocate in America of the doctrine of eternal life in hell, in the preface to his work entitled "Life and Death Eternal," "owns up" in this fashion: "We have commonly employed the term "annihilation" to designate the cessation of existence which these writers advocate. We are aware that many of them object to the term as not being fully expressive of their mode of stating and arguing the case. We would only say that we can not be debarred t[illegible] convenient, indeed an ind[illegible] out of deference to their p[illegible]fere[illegible], then, let it be understood and acknowledged that the advocates of endless misery consider the use of the equivocal word 'annihilation' as indispensable to their argument. What a confession is this! "How are the mighty fallen!" Why is the word "annihilation" indispensable to the advocates of eternal torment? Simply because their argument is too weak to stand alone. It has neither the support of Scripture nor of reason. They know very well that a fair use of unequivocal terms would be fatal to their theory. It is therefore considered "indispensable" to use a word that has a certain odium attached to it from its philosophical use as expressing an impossibility. Error fights best in the dark, truth succeeds best in the clearest light. Error can not stand the test of a clear definition. It may be good partisan policy, it may be shrewd management, it may be thought ingenious for theologians to persist in using a hateful and odious epithet when speaking of opponents; it may be even "indispensable" to their success to do this, but it is neither ingenious, nor fair, nor manly, nor courteous.

A theory that can not live without such base support ought to die. Suppose we should retaliate in kind? would our opponents think us fair or courteous if we were to designate them as "endless miseryites" or "eternal tormentors"? But these terms more fairly express their doctrine than the term "annihilationists" does ours. The meaning of the former can not be mistaken. They can have but one sense—the primary. Not so the latter: the primary sense of their favorite and indispensable nick-name is grossly misleading. Its secondary sense only is allowable in theology, but they are careful not to say so, for then the word would be harmless, the poison extracted and the term no longer "convenient and indispensable." We should think our cause weak indeed if we considered it "indispensable" that we call our opponents "eternal tormentors." The term would be universally an odious one, and according to Mr. Bartlett it would be the more valuable on that account. But we can afford not to use it. No advocate of endless misery would thank us for calling him an "eternal tormentor"; and we who believe in the final destruction of the wicked do not thank our opponents for calling us "annihilationists". Both the terminology and manners of our opponents need mending. J. H. W.

MY JOURNAL.

Returned from Missouri to attend the Annual Meeting of the Publishing Association, to be held at Norwood Park. This will be an important meeting. If we as a people continue in unity, and work with zeal, we shall continue to prosper. God has been with us, and he will bless our sacrifices and labors with success, if they continue. He will not forget us. We all need a daily baptism of love, the divine moving power in all Christian duty. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." With this divine element largely enjoyed, a child of God has great power for good. Such a disciple of Christ is a living aggressive power.

SATURDAY, Oct. 12. Dr. Boons, a Prussian brother, late of Athol, Mass., called on us to-day. He is an Adventist who lets his light shine. He carries a package of tracts with him, and sows the seed as he goes along. Such men will not fail to do good. He is on his way to California, and will be a useful man there.

SUNDAY, Oct. 13. Preached in Chicago to-day for the German brethren in their chapel on Chicago Avenue. In the evening we had baptism, closing a very enjoyable day. This people love the truth, and will maintain it. I dined with Ernest Meyer, formerly of Leipsic. He is a genial spirit, and well posted in the truths of the Bible, and a man of general intelligence. He is one of the pillars of the German Advent church in this city.

A good number gathered at the Park on Tuesday morning. It was deemed wise to adjourn until evening. But the brethren met at three o'clock and held an informal meeting. Many subects of interest were talked over with much good feeling and interest.

At night the Association proceeded to business. There was much discussion concerning the Association and other collateral questions on which there was some difference of opinion. Various schemes more or less practicable were proposed, but no action was taken. It may be best to leave well enough alone.

Wednesday, Oct. 16. The day was spent in earnest efforts to harmonize the elements that were not in accord, either as to the organization of the Association, or its future policy. It was finally agreed that the present basis be acquiesced in until something giving promise of better things could be assured. The officers were then elected, and the Association placed in working order for the coming year. The new Board will be a unit and no doubt work successfully. The new editor, having long worked in this department, will be at home. Let all the readers of The Times give him their sympathies and prayers. And let us hope that The Times may prosper in his hands.

I shall continue "My Journal," and do my best to make it more interesting and useful to my readers. And now let all our friends acquiesce in the new arrangements, and give them their entire influence.

The last meeting was one of great unity and love. The closing address of the President was a most eloquent as well as sensible discourse. He urged the necessity of continued love and unity in our work. His words cheered and comforted us all. He told us he was an Adventist out and out, and we should always know where to find him. He had given himself to the West and the Western interest, and he should work for its harmony and success.

Joshua V. Himes.

Adam and the Tree of Life.

A. A. P.'s reply to the question, "Was Adam created mortal or immortal?" suggests a criticism or two, on the relation which Adam sustained to the tree of life before and after he sinned. We cannot better come at the subject than by quoting the text: "And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever: therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man: and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden, Cherubims and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life." (Gen. 3: 22–24.)

Here we notice that the tree was prohibited to Adam after he sinned. "And the Lord God said.... Now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life," etc. This prohibition was therefore not before the act of disobedience. The word had gone forth, "Of every tree thou mayest freely eat but of the tree of knowledge." The prohibition before the sin was then only and exclusively of the eating of the tree of knowledge commonly called, on that account, the forbidden tree. After the prohibition the tree of life was guarded by a flaming sword and the reason for this caution is, "Lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life and eat and live forever." "Also"—after having eaten the other. The sense of this reason is evidently that the adverb "forever" modifies both verbs "eat" and "live;" thus teaching that the perpetual use of the tree of life was essential to perpetual life. Man must have eaten forever to have lived forever. What then with reference to the nature of the man when created, and his relation thereby to the tree of life before he sinned?

1. He was susceptible of death.
2. He was not subject to death.
3. He was not thereby inherently immortal.
4. He had all the advantages or results of immortality.
5. All this because of his relation to the tree of life.

This on this wise. The tree of life was to him all that immortality could be as to its results, as it prevented all the results of a nature susceptible of death, and so kept Adam from being subject to death. The name of the tree indicates this. "Tree of Life!" How significant! The life was not in the man inherently, then, but the tree possessed life-power. Its fruit was medicinal. What wonderful power it was made to possess even to keep the man who continued eating it in perfect health, and hence free from all pain, disease and death! Other fruit might preserve life awhile, but nothing else could absolutely keep health and life in him.

In saying, therefore, that Adam was not immortal, as some do, reference can only be had to his inherent nature, as he had all the advantages of immortality as long as he had access to the "tree." In saying, again, that he was not mortal, reference can only be had to the fact that he was subject to death, being kept from dying by the tree.

Then free access to the tree of life, such as the word teaches Adam had, was absolutely essential to him while in the garden, and a separation from it must result in death; so that all it became necessary for God to do, to inflict the death penalty, was to keep the sinner away from the tree.

Hence we learn that Adam's constitutional make-up was not changed by eating the fruit of the tree any food which prolongs his life beyond the period when he would die of starvation without food. Nor was it changed, either, by the death sentence. Adam was all the while liable to such a sentence, both in his nature and in his circumstances as a free moral agent, and hence he could not have been created inherently immortal, nor have become so by once eating the fruit of the tree; for in either case all possibility of the infliction of a death penaly would have been precluded, and his circumstances and constitution would have been out of harmony. Mark this also, (for herein is a strong proof that the sinner cannot be undying under any circumstances,) a continued, uninterrupted access to the tree would have had the same results. Hence, God took the tree away from the man, or, better, drove him from the tree, lest he.... eat, and live forever. Man left alone, without inherent immortality and without the tree of life, must die; and this is the true idea of mortality in its nature and results, even to die one's self, untouched, unforced, without violence, by inherent tendencies. Some beings evidently will not thus die—the Devil, for example. If he ceases to live he must be destroyed by the interference of exterior force.

Another point: We say a "continued" access to the tree was necessary to this end. Proof: If once eating of the tree of life after the fall would have insured immortality and changed the nature of the man, then it would have had the same effect before the fall; and Adam could have simply resorted once to that unguarded tree, of which he had been told he might "freely eat" as of all other unguarded trees, and then having "freely" eaten, or even tasted, he could have defied God and have thwarted all the death penalties that might be threatened him. His immortality (imparted not inherent) would have been a grand shield to break into shivers all the arrows of death, though hurled by the hand of the Almighty! So in fact it would have been after he sinned, by his continued eating, as the results would have been the same, even though his nature was never changed. Hence the reasonableness of guarding the tree effectually and forever after the fall till the restoration. Notice, now, the strange incongruity and mysterious paradox between guarding a tree that could have imparted immortality by once eating, or even by continued uninterrupted eating after the sin had been committed, and leaving it unguarded and free of access before.

In harmony with what we have written, and as a beautiful closing up of this argument, we quote the following gem of rare beauty from the pen of Jeremy Taylor: "Whatever had a beginning can also have an ending and shall die, unless it be daily watered from the stream flowing from the fountain of life and refreshed with the dew of heaven and the wells of God; and therefore God had prepared a tree in Paradise to have supported Adam in his artificial immortality. Immortality was not in his nature, but in the hands and parts and in the favor and superadditions of God."

These sentiments are precisely what we are maintaining. We would call special attention to those words which show the necessity of man's nature being "watered" and "refreshed," and that word "artificial" also, as descriptive of the immortality or undying state the man was in by the use of the tree. "Artificial" seems just the word, and Jeremy Taylor was just the man to fit it in its place; for if artificial, then not natural; if not natural, then not inherent; and if not inherent, then not inherited nor created with the man, nor imparted to him by any change effected in his nature by the "Tree of Life."

L. C. McKinstry.

—Banner.

Henry Ward Beecher as a Beginner.

It was my lot at first to be placed in a village with a mere handful of inhabitants in one of the Western States. I conceive it to be one of the kindnesses of Providence that I was sent to so small a place. I had but one male member in the church, and I wished him out all the time I was there.

I practised public speaking from the time of my sophomore year in college. I was addicted to going out and making temperance speeches, and holding conference meetings, so that I acquired considerable confidence, being naturally very diffident. When I went to the seminary I still kept up the habit, practising whenever I had the opportunity. At the end of my three years' seminary course—six months of which, however, were devoted to editoral work, a loss of time to my studies which was afterwards made up—I went to a small town in Indiana, the last one in the State toward Cincinnati, on the Ohio River. It had perhaps five or six hundred inhabitants. It had in it a Methodist, a Baptist, and this Presbyterian church to which I went. The church would hold, perhaps, from two hundred and fifty to three hundred people. It had no lamps and no hymn books, It had nineteen female members; and the whole congregation could hardly raise from $200 to $250 as salary. I took that field and went to work in it.

Among the earliest things I did was to beg money from Cincinnati to buy side-lamps to hang up in the church, so that we could have night service. After being there a month or two I went to Cincinnati again, and collected money enough to buy hymn books, I distributed them in the seats. Before this the hymns had been lined out. I recollect one of the first strokes of management I ever attempted in that parish was in regard to these hymn books. Instead of asking the people if they were willing to have them, I just put the books into the pews; for there are ten men that will fight a change about which they are consulted to one that will fight it when it has taken place. I simply made the change for them. There was a little looking up and looking around, but nothing was said. So after that we sang out of books. Then there was nobody in the church to light the lamps, and they could not afford to get a sexton. Such a thing was unknown in the primitive simplicity of the Hoosier time. Well, I unanimously elected myself to be the sexton. I swept out the church trimmed the lamps and lighted them. I was, literally, the light of that church. I didn't stop to groan about it, or moan about it, but I did it. At first, the men-folk thereabouts seemed to think it was chaff to catch them with, or something of that kind; but I went steadily on doing the work. After a month or so two young men, who were clerks in a store there, suggested to me that they would help me. I "didn't think I wanted any help; it was only what one man could do." Then they suggested three or four of us taking one month each, and in that way they were worked in.

Now, while I was there, I preached the best sermons I knew how to get up. I remember distinctly that every Sunday night I had a headache. I went to bed every Sunday night with a vow registered that I would buy a farm and quit the ministry. If I have said it once, I have said it five hundred times, that I spoilt a good farmer to make a poor minister.

I said a great many extravagant things in my pulpit and preached with a great deal of crudeness. I preached a great many sermons which, after six months, I would not have preached again. I frequently did as many young men do, shaped into a general truth that which was truth only under certain circumstances, and with a particular class of people.

I was a greater reader of the old sermonizers. I preached a great many sermons while reading these old men, and upon their discourses I often founded the framework of my own. After I had preached them I said to myself, "That will never do; I would not preach that again for all the world." But I was learning, and nobody ever tripped me up. I had no Board of Elders ready to bring me back to orthodoxy. I had time to sow all my ministerial wild oats, and without damage to my people, for they knew too little to know whether I was orthodox or not. And it was, generally, greatly to their advantage, because people are very much like fishes. Whales take vast quantities of water into their mouths for the sake of the animalculæ it contains, and then blow out the water, while keeping in the food. People do pretty much the same—they don't believe half that you say. The part that is nutritious they keep, and the rest they let alone. This early ministerial training does not hurt them but it is invaluable to a young man who is getting the bearings of his new station, and learning how to handle the ship that his God has given him to sail.

Something Wanting.

How many are looking for something they do not find! Not only out there in the world, where the feverish multitudes are rushing to theatres, operas, seaside, mountain-top, parks, and foreign lands, seeking what they never grasp, but in the palaces of Zion, and in the vineyard where Eschol grapes are looked for, are there many who are not satisfied.

Something is looked for in sermons that often is not found.

"How do you like our new pastor?"

"Well, he is a capital preacher; learned, critical, logical, witty, and quite earnest too—on the whole, I don't see how we could have done better in selecting a pastor. Our congregations are good; and, when the weather becomes cooler, I think the house will be crowded. And yet there is something lacking in our pastor's preaching. I can hardly tell what. I am so cold and unmoved under it all. I suppose the fault is in myself."

"What do you think ails our church? We have a good edifice, large congregations, a good preacher, who is also an active pastor; our finances are in a good condition, the social meetings are well attended, and quite a number have recently professed conversion; and yet there seems to be something wanting. I can't tell what it is exactly. I don't feel right; and I judge, from the expression I see on many countenances, that many others have a like experience."

Ah! that something "that is lacking" in so many churches, and is missing in so many sermons, is a very subtle something and yet very important.

I have seen painted fire that looked as hot as real fire; but it wasn't.

I have seen painted fruit that was rather more beautiful than real fruit; but it did not taste as well.

I have seen a loaf of bread that looked to be as good as the best; but it was sour.

The letter of the gospel is one thing; the spirit is another.

A correct theology is important; the unction of the Holy Ghost is much more important.

Some dishes were meant to be served up hot. But few relish a cold buckwheat cake. A cold religion is no better.

When you go into a cold church, you feel much as you do when you go to the register of a cold morning, and find a current of cold air, coming up from the fireless furnace below. You leave that place without much ceremony.

Kindle the fire of perfect love in the pulpit, and it will radiate its heat throughout the whole church. Leaven the pulpit with this animating cheery unctuous doctrine, and soon the whole, lump will be leavened. Then many a poor soul will say:

"Now rest, my long divided heart."

—Methodist Home Journal.

A Philosopher's Opinion of the Bible.

A learned Swiss writer (Jean de Muller) was deeply engaged in historical studies at Cassel, in the year 1782. Indefatigable in researches, he wrote to his friend, Charles Bonnet, that he had studied all the ancient authors, without one exception, in the order of time in which they lived, and had not omitted to take note of a single remarkable fact. Among other works, it occurred to him to glance at the New Testament, and we give in his own words the impression it produced upon him:

"How shall I express what I have found here? I had not read it for many years, and when I began it I was prejudiced against it. The light which blinded St. Paul in his journey to Damascus was not more prodigious, or not more surprising to him than what I suddenly discovered was to me the accomplishment of every hope, the perfection of all philosophy, the explanation of all revolutions, the key of all the apparent contradictions of the material and moral world, of life and immortality. I see the most astonishing things effected by the smallest means. I see the connection of all the revolutions in Europe and Asia with that suffering people to whom were committed the promises; as one likes to entrust a manuscript to those who, not knowing how to write, cannot falsify it. I see religion appearing at the moment most favorable to its establishment, and in the way less likely to promote its reception. The world appearing to be arranged solely with reference to the religion of the Savior. I can understand nothing if such a religion be not from God. I have not read any book about it, but in studying all that happened before this epoch, I have always found something wanting, and since I have known our Lord all is clear to my sight; with him there is no problem that I cannot solve. Forgive me for thus praising the sun, as a blind man who had suddenly received the gift of sight."—Ernest Naville.

Rev. R. W. Dale, in the London Congregationalist, coins a needed word—Xittoism—to express that manner of preaching which deals with the geography of antiquities of the Bible, instead of with vital truth; and illustrates it with the pertinent story of a dignitary of the Church of England, who, happening to be in London, went one Sunday morning to service at Westminster Abbey, it having been announced that Dean would preach. "How did you like the sermon?" asked the lady with whom he was staying. "Oh!" was the reply, "it was very good. There was nothing to object to; but it was not what I went to hear. I went to hear about the way to Heaven and I only heard about the way to Palestine."

There are several ways of "talking on the subject of religion." Some methods adopted are very much after the fashion of the old lady who was accustomed, while her husband lay wasting under a lingering disease to arouse him in the night, saying, "John, John, you little think of the torments as is preparing for you." Almost equally consoling are the speeches of those estimable but mistaken people who feel it to be their duty to "speak on religion" at the most unfavorable time and place, injuring by their want of tact and judgment the very cause that they would fain present in the most attractive colors.

Those who look for faults find faults and become fault-finders by profession; but those who look for truth and good find that. And if, among all these masters, there has been sent one to be a master on the highest theme of all, a teacher in the realm of our highest life, it seems to be a grave mistake to assume towards him the attitude of a critic rather than that of a disciple.

I won't say the more intellect the less capacity for loving; for that would do wrong to the understanding and reason; but, on the other hand, that the brain often runs away with the heart's best blood, which gives the world a few pages of wisdom, or sentiment, or poetry enstead of making one other heart happy, I have no question.—O. W. Holmes.

Do not be troubled because you have no great virtues. God made a million spears of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forest, but grass. Only have enough of the virtues and common fidelities, and you need not mourn because you are neither a saint nor a hero.

It is remarkable that persons who speculate the most boldly often conform with the most perfect quietude to the external regulations of society. The thought suffices them, without investing itself in the flesh and blood of action.—Hawthorne.

If one only wished to be happy, this could be easily accomplished; but we wish to be happier than other people, and this is almost always difficult, for we believe others to be happier than they are.—Montesquieu.

If Jesus calls you to trial, to suffering, to persecution, bear it patiently. Did I say patiently? No! not patiently merely; do not live in the cellar of religion; mount higher; bear it delightedly, affectionately; thankfully.

Correspondence.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

MONDAY, Oct. 7. (Continued.) Missing connections at Kansas City, I was detained over night. I enjoyed the hospitality of Judge Thomas A. Smart, one of the oldest citizens. He lived here when Kansas City had no existence, but was merely a station on the River for trade with the Indians. He is one of the oldest, and a principal member of the Christian church here. I was treated with much kindness, and invited, at my convenience, to visit and preach to them the gospel of the kingdom. Being in haste to meet my next appointment in Brookfield, Mo., my time with this family was brief, but very pleasant.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8. Came to Brookfield, where I had a warm reception from Brn. Philips, Harrison and others. I find that Eld. N. C. Miller had been here expecting to meet me on the Sabbath, as I first arranged. He preached in my stead, but was greatly disappointed in not meeting me.

The little interest here has been gathered without a minister. The Lord gave them the light, and they have come out and stood up nobly for the truth amid much opposition. I am here to speak words of cheer, and help them in a church organization.

At seven p. m. I spoke in the Universalist chapel, a fine structure and an easy house to speak in. I had a good audience with the best of attention to the word. I spoke on the first and second coming of Jesus. The few who believe were much cheered to hear the gospel of the kingdom.

One of Eld. N. A. Hitchcock's children, Sr. Parker, was out to hear the word, and was much comforted. These lonely and isolated ones greatly value the gospel of the kingdom. Nothing else will satisfy them.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 9. Visited St. Catherines. Br. Y. Higgins lived and labored all over this country a few years ago. Br. A. C. Geer also labored here for a time. He is now in Sullivan Co., while Father Higgins sleeps. The friends here speak kindly of them. There are a few believers here who still hold fast.

I visited Br. Hayden, who married my niece. She, with my other relatives here, enjoys the blessed hope.

At night I spoke again at Brookfield. The subject was sheol, hades and gehenna. I showed that the dead were in sheol or hades, and that at the judgment death and hades would deliver up the dead. Then the wicked would suffer the second death, and the righteous inherit the new earth. (Rev. 20: 13, 14; 2 Pet. 3: 13; Eccl. 9: 10.) At the close we arranged for baptism, ordination and the organization of our Advent Christian church.

THURSDAY, Oct. 10. At nine a. m. we went to West Yellow Creek for baptism, and two brethren, Harrison and Philip, put on Christ in immersion. Both of them have entered the ministry, and promise usefulness in the cause. At three p. m. I organized an Advent Christian church of eight members, heads of families, and more to come in both here and in St. Catherines. Brn. R. V. Philip and Thomas Harrison were ordained for the ministry. May they prosper in the Lord. The field is open wide, and with industry they may build up a good cause in all this region.

At night I spoke on our whereabouts in prophecy, from Dan. ch. 2, showing that the next great event in fulfillment of prophecy is the smiting of the image and the destruction of earthly kingdoms and the setting up of the kingdom of God. This closed my work here. Brn. Gibson and Miller will follow it up.

From S. K. Gibson.

I attended the camp meeting at Chase's Grove, and I enjoyed a good meeting, although the first part was very rainy, which hindered many from coming, yet there was unanimity of feeling and action which made the time pass pleasantly and profitably.

There was some interest manifested, and on the last day there was a large gathering from the surrounding country and towns. I enjoyed the society of old friends, brethren and sisters in Christ, where, in the exchange of thought and sentiment, we were I trust, mutually blessed in the Lord.

There are some true hearted souls in Southwestern Iowa, who intend to work for Christ and push the battle to the enemy's gate. May the Lord bless them abundantly. From there I went to Adair Co., preaching three times at Greenfield and three times at Middle River, where on Lord's day many came in from Dexter and other points for some miles around. I trust good was done. From Adair I went to Salire Co., Nebraska, by invitation of Brn. Markland and De Long, who have faithfully talked the Bible faith among the neighbors until some had a desire to hear preaching. We did not have a great turnout but the best of attention. I preabhed eight discourses in that new country, and one in a sod school-house—the first I ever saw. Thank the Lord, the truth is just as blessed and refreshing there as in any place on earth. The first settlers there are "homesteaders," and have only lived on the land about two years, and nearly one half of them yet live in sod houses. Many of them came in and took homesteads with only money enough to get there, and will "rough it" awhile; but better times will soon dawn on their toil and patience. The land is very fine and rich and will make the best of farms. The railroad company (The B. & M. R. R. Co. in Neb.) will sell land at from $5 to $8 an acre on long time. The government land is all taken in that country that is good, plenty west of there. There may be some claims in that country that could be "jumped." "The great desert of America," as it was called by Fremont, will in a few years, should time continue, be one of the best States in the West. It lacks timber, but the settlers are setting out timber to supply the need.

Lincoln, the capital of the State is a fine city of only five years growth, situated on high rolling prairie, a beautiful site for a large town. It is noted for its salt springs, and creek running into the Platte River. The city is now sinking an Artesian well in the center of the square. They sunk a ten inch pipe to the depth of six hundred feet when they struck a fountain of salt water, which continually flows from the pipe, some claim for it virtues in healing diseases, and go there and drink; it is a pleasant salt, unlike the ocean water.

Inside the ten inch pipe they have sunk another smaller one to the depth of one thousand feet and are still going down for a supply of fresh water. They have some very fine school buildings there, beside their public buildings. The state house in the south part of town and jail further south, out of town, and the Insane Asylum two miles west, a fine massive building on a high piece of ground making a fine appearance.

Crete, a town twenty miles west of Lincoln, only about two years old and containing about one thousand souls, is a fine business point. Some anticipate a large city here in a few years. They are making very fine improvements by way of school buildings and business blocks. There are a good many Eastern men in these towns, who have the true Yankee enterprise; but I could not find any of "like precious faith" to hold up the blessed light of the coming kingdom. I know of but one Advent minister in Nebraska—Br. G. G. Godfrey. He lives at Blue Springs, Gage Co., and will preach the word faithfully. Let isolated ones of Nebraska write him, open the way for him, and give him encouragement. He will help you and do you good.

From Nebraska I came to Hamburg, Fremont Co., Iowa, by invitation of brethren Hamilton and Carman. I found them true men of God and in earnest in defence of the truth. I preached seven discourses and organized them with others into church orders. Some of them have been members of the Disciple church which is now in a low condition in Hamburg, for in trying to kill "soul-sleeping," they have well nigh killed themselves.

It is quite a trial for some to break away from old relationship, and enter into new; but the love of Jesus and his word will move to action in this matter for the true light must shine. God bless the little church in Hamburg. I will also say for the church in Hamburg, to ministers who may chance to pass that way or those who can visit them. Do so and lend them a helping hand. Now is the time they need help, they are weak. Yet there are good omens for the future. They will be glad to see you brethren, and will do what they are able to sustain preaching. Address J. Hamilton or C. Carman.

The Great Theme.

Some are of the belief that there yet remain many signs to be fulfilled before that day can come—that the gospel has not yet been widely enough preached—that the Jews must be restored first, if not converted—that Babylon must be restored and Jerusalem rebuilt, and the Roman empire reconstructed, and what not? But all this is utterly delusive.

The gospel has been carried over all the civilized world. It was so already in the apostle's times. It sounds now in every country under heaven.

As to the Jews and their fate and state, there is not one word in all the Bible to show that they must be restored or anything else before we are to expect the coming of the Lord.

As to other signs, there is not an age since Christ ascended in which they were not to be found. Famines—plagues—pestilences—wars—commotions of people—abounding wickedness—apostasies from the truth—the overthrow of kingdoms and nations—revolutions and upheavings of society—earthquakes and disturbances in earth and sky—all have been here for ages, and have been intensifying as time has run on. And no man can say that they have not all gone as far as was ever meant in the predictions which refer to them. Having looked into this subject with special attention for many years, and scanned the prophecies with no small degree of closeness, we give it as the truth, that there are no signs of the Savior's coming referred to in the Scriptures which necessitate the postponement of that great event for the smallest fraction of time; and that, for all that the Scriptures say to the contrary, it may occur at any moment.

We are also distinctly assured that it will take the world by surprise—that Christ will come as a thief in the night—that when men are crying peace and safety, the great day will break in upon them—that as a snare will it come upon all them that dwell upon the earth, and that with the suddenness of the lightning's flash will it take the unwatchful children of men. As it was in the days of Noah, so it is to be again. The people are to be going on as usual, buying and selling, building and feasting, marrying and giving in marriage, and the whole course of things running on the same as always, and not know until the crisis arrives and the trumpet blows.

Some think there will at any rate be a midnight cry made: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," and that it will then be time enough to bestir and trim our lamps. But it has been this midnight all the ages through, and this very cry has been sounding for more than a thousand years. Every generation has heard it. It is sounding now, and admonishing all professors of Christ's name to be up and ready. There is nothing to prove that it will ever sound for us any more than it has sounded already, and is sounding this very hour.

All these considerations show that there is much fatal error prevailing on this subject, and that great and imminent is the danger of being deluded into a false quiet, and into a fatal unreadiness for that day.

Ponder also the advantages of being on the safe side. Even if the day of judgment should not come for thousands of years yet, we will lose nothing by being ready for it, and looking for it every day we live. If we die in a state of readiness, we will be no worse off on that account. Our particular anxiety on the subject will not hurt us. Our constant waiting for our Savior to come, whether he comes in our day or not, will not damage our Christian zeal and fervency, and we need have no fear that it will rise up to condemn us when that day does come. On the other hand, such a constant expectation of Christ any day or night, and such constant guarding of ourselves that we may be found of him without spot and blameless, is the very thing to keep our piety most alive and active. It is the very thing to break the power of temptation, the delusive charms of this world's blandishments, and the force of wicked lust. For a man to have it before him every day and hour, that Christ may come at any moment, and that just as he is, where he is, and in the very act in which he is engaged, he may be instantly called to meet his God, is so potent an incentive to purity, fidelity, and holiness, that it is the very thing above everything else to keep him faithful and impel him heavenward. He cannot possibly be the worse for it, even if it should turn out that he is hundreds of years beforehand with his anticipation.

But very different does the matter stand in the case of him who counts that Christ cannot come in his day, gives the matter no attention, and is after all mistaken and surprised in unpreparedness. Will it be said that he loses nothing by his miscalculation? Is it not rather to be said of him that he loses everything? Jesus says of such a man that he shall be cut off from the society and portion of the church of the first born, and that in his case there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Great, therefore, is the risk and danger to which people expose themselves by putting off the day of Christ's coming into the remote future. They may perchance be Christians, and be "saved," but they are not Christians according to the primitive model, and their salvation will be only so as by fire, if they are saved at all. At best, they certainly will "suffer loss." They lose the force of a very powerful motive to constant godliness of life—to constant reference to the impending judgment in all they do—and such a disposition of themselves in their going out and coming in as not to [illegible] at any moment or in any situation surprised or unready if the trump of God should sound. They lose this vigorous stimulant to holiness and separation from the vanities and follies of this world; and they also lose much of the real sweetness of the gospel and its blessed hope. And, with all, they expose themselves to the danger of losing their entire salvation.

No wise man ought ever to assume such risks unnecessarily. It is a sin against reason and self, as well as against God. A man ought always to take the safe side of every question, when he has an opportunity to do it. And as long as we have the testimony of God that we do not and cannot know how near or how remote the coming of our Lord may be, it is unquestionably the safe side to be always ready and waiting, should we even be a thousand years beforehand in our expectations. We lose nothing by looking for Christ every day; but if we rest on the belief that he cannot possibly come in our day, we may lose everything. Therefore the exhortations of Christ and his apostles is, to be always ready, with our lamps trimmed and burning and our loins girded, as those who wait for their Lord.

Ponder finally the comforting and composing assurances which the Savior gives to those who earnestly observe his directions and wait for his return.

Whilst others are running hither and thither in the world, finding the Christ coming in this and in that, and bewildered by all sorts of deceptive theories which only draw off the attention from the true hope of the church, these are in the way of life and salvation just as they refuse to hear of any Christ, come or to come, than him whose personal return they await. No one can lead them into the wilderness to find Christ. No man can make them believe that anything is Christ but Christ himself. Jesus has told them that his coming shall be open and conspicuous, carrying its own proof with it, and needing not to be reasoned out by human philosophy and men's stilted theories of interpretation—open and conspicuous, and self-manifest, as the lightning which cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west.

In peaceful quiet they keep themselves and wait. They know that when their Lord comes they will know it. They know too that they need give themselves no concern about how they shall make their way to him when he comes. Where the carcass is, there the eagles are gathered together. And with the same instinct and power from God, where Christ is, when he comes, there they will be also.

The truth is, they have nothing to disturb them. They have only to watch and wait. Christ will attend to all the rest. They are simply to occupy till he comes, doing their duty on earth with a willing mind, and looking for their Lord from heaven. This is their commission, their attitude, and their peace. Beyond this they need be careful for nothing. If he comes soon, the sooner they will enter upon their inheritance.—Prophetic Times.

Our Creeds.

I cannot forget an article that appeared in a late number of the Christian Union headed, "Ought the creeds of Protestantism to be simplified?"

I agree with Mrs. Blake as to the "Why?" And doubtless scores of Christians entirely agree with her.

The word "Ought" having received an affirmative answer, it seems to be a Christian duty and responsibility resting somewhere to determine the How? Will Mrs. Blake go a little farther and suggest How the creeds of Protestantism may be simplified? And will not Br. Beecher give us a few thoughts upon the subject also?

It thrills me with a joy that is almost pain to imagine the general adoption of such a creed, either by a grand church convention or otherwise; for then must come practical results. To illustrate:

In our little town of fifteen hundred inhabitants, we have nine regular congregations. Eight church buildings and the court-house are all occupied. The tenth congregation worships when and where it can. Our preachers are so nearly starved that it is perhaps by the grace of God alone that they are able to stand up in the pulpit at all! Nine-tenths of their time is expended in providing ways and means to keep the soul and body of wife and children together; no thought is bestowed upon their own culture or upbuilding, bodily or mental; hence they do not thrive in either respect. The tenth part of their time is apparently passed in drawing upon a small stock of health, mental culture, and somebody's old theology that was stored away in their bodies and brains some time in the years gone by.

If Presbyterian, they give you to-day what Princeton or Alleghany gave them fifteen or twenty years ago. Such old, musty, dry bread! Good enough originally, perhaps, as leaven to make something new and fresh betimes; but yeast is not bread; and it becomes sour if it is kept too long. It gives forth no sweet-smelling savor, no promise of nourishment to the young and growing mind, or to the hungry world-tried soul; no food to the craving desires of a living Christian's heart. It cannot be appropriated; it cannot be digested; it is swallowed as a disagreable dose that must be taken every Sabbath day, but which men would gladly reject altogether. In fact, it is rejected by the majority, for the attendance at each church is very small. The thin house acts back again unfavorably upon the preacher, who needs that cheering stimulus which comes somehow when the rustling garments of numbers crowd together.

Our music, as a general thing, is enough to drive a musician to distraction! We sometimes wish the choir inside would hush, and let the sweet, swelling voices of the joyous birds outside be our only leaders in that part of the public worship; and yet, in each choir we have one, two, or more sweet singers.

Our churches are always in debt. Every winter we have a "Ring" of "suppers," "Gift enterprises," "Lotteries," and the like. "Ring" seems to be a disreputable word to introduce to good society, but unfortunately it expresses my meaning—for "our church must attend the other suppers, because after a while we shall want them to attend ours." And so it goes on, year after year. The morals of our young people are corrupted, but the end in view is not attained.

But enough of what we are. I imagine if the weight of our many creeds were once removed, that, in the elastic uplifting of many joyous hearts, all the burdens of our church debt would naturally and speedily be removed. These nine badly-contrived, unsightly, poorly ventilated, worse lighted churches might be sold for other purposes, and the money so obtained could be expended to erect one large, cheerful, comfortable building, which in itself should attract and stop the footsteps of every one who would otherwise pass by. Two pastors could assist each other in the duties of the congregation, and their families would be amply provided for. Their salaries would enable them to purchase new books and investigate new and interesting subjects of thought and illustration. The great stream of science and literature that flows untasted across the thirsty but poor preacher's way, may be searched to its cool depths by him who dips a cup of money down among its waters. The parched and fevered lip of many a shrivelled Christian might thus be enabled to sip from the clear inviting waters held out to him, and his soul might rejoice and be satisfied.

I think we might have a real prayer meeting, that Christians, and worldlings too, would love to attend.

We already have in our Sabbath-schools the same "Lesson paper;" why not have all the sweet little voices in town praising God together? Then little Mary, whose "pa" and "ma" are Methodists, will no longer regret that her best friend goes to the Presbyterian school, but will nestle up to her dear Katie, and sing with a happier heart because they are together.

I think if we only could get together, it would be so grand to rise up and recite the same simple creed, and thus show the world that these "Christians really do love one another." I think we may learn from the inroads that the Catholics have already made in our cities, towns, and villages, that it is time to put shoulder to shoulder, brigade to brigade, and close up the ranks; but that is a reason upon which I dare not trust myself to enter. If we only could get together, it would be to this town, and to many others, like that joyous occasion when the Old and New Presbyterians clasped hands and hearts and broke forth into singing, "The year of Jubilee is come."

Yes; let us have one creed. We are looking forward to one heaven, and all have faith in, and love for, the self-same Savior. Why not sing the same songs, in the same church, and encourage each other's hearts by working together in the Sabbath-school, prayer-meeting, and in all those practical ways that tend to build up and strengthen the cause of our one, dear Redeemer?—Green Veil, in Christian Union.

The Two Ways of Life;

CONTRASTING THE RIGHT WAY AND THE WRONG WAY.

The way of kindness, the way of unkindness.

The way of obedience, the way of disobedience.

The way of virtue, the way of vice.

The way of health, the way of corruption.

The right way, the wrong way.

The way of truth, the way of falsehood.

The way of goodness, the way of evil.

The way of honor, the way of dishonor.

The way of morality, the way of immorality.

The narrow way, the broad way.

The way of prayer, the way of cursings.

The upward path, the downward path.

The way of holiness, the way of defilement.

The way to possess the new earth, the way to lose the inheritance.

The way to glory, the way to sham e.

The way of life, the way of death.

The way to be made like Jesus, the way to return to corruption.

The way to sing the song of victory amid the immortal throng, standing within salvation's walls, and surrounded by the brilliancy of God's glory; the way to join in the awful, heart-breaking agony, and wail of despair that rises from the myriads of those who in the mighty conflagration will sink to rise no more.

Let the best way be our way.

G. M. B.

Hell fire.

Now look into hell and see what she saw. Look at the door of hell. It is red hot like red hot iron. Streams of burning pitch and sulpher run through it. Is. 34. The floor blazes up to the roof. Look at the walls, the enormous stones are red hot; sparks of fire are always falling down from them. Lift up your eyes to the roof of hell; it is like a sheet of blazing fire. Sometimes you get up on a winter's morning, you see the country filled with a thick fog. Hell is filled with a fog of fire. In some parts of the world torrents of rain come down which sweep away trees and houses. In hell torrents not of rain but of fire and brimstone, are rained down. Ps. 10., "The Lord shall rain down on sinners fire and brimstone." Storms of hailstones come down on the earth and break the windows in pieces. But in hell the hailstones are thunderbolts, red hot balls of fire. Job 41., "God shall send thunder bolts against him." See that great whirlwind of fire sweeping across hell. "Storms of winds shall be the portion of their cup," Ps. 5. Look how floods of fire roll themselves through hell like the waves of the sea. The wicked are sunk down and burried in that fiery sea of destruction and perdition, 1. Tim. 6. You may have seen a house on fire. But you never saw a house made of fire. Hell is a house made of fire. The fire of hell burns the devils who are spirits, for it was prepared for them, Matt. 25. So it will burn the soul as well as the body. Take a spark out of the kitchen fire, throw it into the sea, and it will go out. Take a little spark out of hell, less than a pin-head, throw it into the ocean, it will not go out. In one moment it would dry up all the waters of the ocean, and set the world in a blaze. Wisd. 16, "The fire above its power, burnt in the midst of water." Set a house or town on fire. Perhaps the fire may burn for a week, or a month, but it will go out at last. But the fire of hell will never go out: it will burn forever. It is unquenchable fire, Matt 5. St. Teresa says, that the fire on the earth is only a picture of the fire of hell. Fire on earth gives light. But it is not so in hell. In hell the fire is dark.—From a tract by Rev. J. Furniss.

Conference Minutes

KANSAS.

ORGANIZATION MEETING.

At the recent tent meeting held with the Bero Church, from Sep. 26, to Oct. 2, 1872, the question of a more thorough organization among those Christians of our State who are "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ" (Tit. 2: 13), was freely discussed by the brethren and sisters present, who with "one mind" joined in requesting Eld. J. V. Himes to assist them in the organization of a Conference in which the isolated churches and our scattered brethren and sisters throughout the State could work together for the advancement of the great cause of human redemption while we "are waiting for the coming." Notice was accordingly given that a convention of Advent Christians would be held at Columbus, Kan., Saturday, Oct. 5; pursuant to which a goodly number of earnest defenders of "the faith once delivered to the saints" assembled at the residence of the writer at 2 p. m. of said day.

On motion Eld. Warder Dunbar of the Bero church was called to preside over, and the writer appointed secretary of the temporary organization. The following preamble and resolutions were then offered and upon motion of Br. C. D. Nichols, unanimously agreed to, to wit:

WHEREAS, The Advent Christian churches of Kansas are at present isolated from each other and feel the necessity of co-operation and want of mutual assistance, and, whereas, there can be no permanent growth and prosperity without unity of action and healthy co-operation among all our ministers and churches, therefore,

Resolved, That we believe it to be the duty of the Adventists here assembled to proceed at once to the organization of a State Conference, trusting that we shall have the heatty support of all churches and the "scattered ones" throughout the State not now represented.

Resolved, That the organization be called and known as "The Advent Christian Conference of Kansas."

Resolved, That we now proceed to the election of officers designated as follows, to-wit: President, Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary.

The following officers were then elected by a full vote and without dissension. President, D. D. Hunter of Bero; Vice-President, John F. Linville of Plowboy; Treasurer Warder Dunbar of Bero; Secretary, Amos Sanford of Columbus

Executive Committee: C. D. Nichols of Columbus, A. M. Sidwell of Girard and J. W. Willett of Parsons.

On motion the following committee on organization was appointed with instructions to prepare and report a constitution at the next meeting of the conference; viz: Amos Sanford and F. A. Childs of Columbus, and J. R. Faulkner of Bero.

On motion of Br. Nichols the Secretary was instructed to correspond with Adventists throughout the State for the purpose of ascertaining their wishes as to where and when the next meeting of the conference shall be held; and it was voted that when this conference adjourn, it adjourn to meet again at the call of the President and Secretary, due notice of the meeting to be published in THE TIMES.

Br. Amos Sanford offered the following preamble and resolution which on motion was agreed to unanimously.

WHEREAS, Eld. J. V. Himes at the special request of the members of this Conference, acting in their individual capacity, has now visited Kansas for the third time at his own expense; and

WHEREAS, Our resources as settlers upon the frontier are limited, and while struggling for temporal existence and are unable to meet his expenses to say nothing of remuneration for his self-sacrificing labors in our behalf and in the cause of truth; therefore,

Resolved, That the thanks of this conference be tendered to Eld. Himes for his timely help, that we will sustain him in his missionary work as God shall prosper us, that our prayers will be offered up for his success in other fields; and that we hope the brethren in more favored portions of the kosmos will remember our brother (whom we may never see again until we meet him in the kingdom), and assist him in the prosecution of his labors while preaching "the everlasting gospel" to perishing sinners.

Br. Himes thanked the conference for this expression of their regard for him. He confidently hoped that if we should never meet again in this life that we would all sit down together in the kingdom. The conference then ajourned.

Let the brethren write freely to the secretar.

D. D. HUNTER, Pres't.

AMOS SANFORD, Sec'y.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

NEPONSET DISTRICT Q. M.

This Q. M. at Toulon, Stark Co., was a success, and the church renewed her strength. We think the permanence of this Q. M. is a settled question and with the same sacrifice continued on the part of the brethren we shall make good headway.

The subject of having a campmeeting in this district, the ensuing season, was discussed, and as it was generally advanced, that as we were a considerable distance from Amboy, the place of our annual gathering, and as such a meeting can be held so as not to conflict in any way with the Amboy meeting; and as there are many who would doubtless attend such a meeting that would not otherwise hear our faith, it was,

Resolved, That this conference recommend that a campmeeting be held somewhere in this district the ensuing season, the time and place of holding such meeting to be determined at or before the annual meeting of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference in January next. Provided, it shall be ascertained by the committee chosen by this conference to be for the good of the cause and the desire of the friends at large

The following Brn. were appointed to ascertain the minds of the friends in relation to this matter in their respective neighborhoods, and report the same to the Sec. as soon as practicable.

Joseph Pine, Ionia; J. C. Shaw, Oneida; Andrew Annis, Milroy; h. Willett, Toulon; J. S. Heath, Neponset; N. Runquist, Galva; J. Helsine, Bishop Hill.

The following was also adopted:

Resolved, That this conference tender its sympathy and co-operation to our Publishing Association at Norwood Park, and that we will earnestly pray for those in charge of its interests that they may have wisdom, strength and means, to still carry forward the glorious work of sowing the good seed, to the end that many may be saved in the way of the Lord Jesus.

We adjourned to the call of the officers, having thought best to hold another meeting.

We parted with bright anticipations of coming rest, and in much determination to "work till Jesus comes."

L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

IOWA.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The third annual session of the Advent Christian conference of Iowa met at Manchester, Sep. 12, F. H. Kenny in the chair. Members present: Ministers: F. H. Kenny, R. B. Duttum, C. W. Pitcher, D. A. Dickenson, H. H. and M. J. Janes, L. S. Hiscox reported by letter. There were six business meetings. Visiting brethren invited to a sitting: there were I. Adrian, A. A. Wilber, J. Ridley, L. F. Cole, J. N. Taylor. Officers for the ensuing year—F. H. Kenny, President; H. H. Janes, Secretary; I. Cooley, Treasurer; I. Adrian, Evangelist.

Voted, To hold our next Annual Conference and Campmeeting somewhere in the Manchester District (probably at Manchester). Time and place to be chosen by the Camp meeting committee—I. Adrian, D. R. Lewis I. Cooly, W. H. Connell, S. Broadhurst, S. D. Townsend, T. Benson, S. Dean, J. Beddow, D. A. Dickenson, A. S. Lewis.

Report of churches showed a little backwardness, yet a determination to live and to do for God. The ministers upon examination were all found with the harness on: battling for King Jesus, as best they could. Every where ears, heart and doors were open, and the calls for help were loud and earnest. Oh! may God send laborers to gather the harvest.

I. Adrian, J. N. Taylor, and Sr. H. A. Plank were admitted into the conference, also the the church at Boylan's Grove.

Report of Q. M's accepted. These had proved a power in the hand's of God for good.

The following preambles and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, We fully believe the day of judgment is at hand, and it behooves us whom the Lord has called out from the world for the purpose of sounding their last note of warning to this dying generation to be at work while the day lasts; and

WHEREAS, We are crippled and hindered in our work by want of means; therefore

Resolved, That we establish a missionary fund to be owned, and controlled by the Annual Conference; this fund to be raised by a freewill offering of each member of the several churches belonging to the conference, collected and paid to the Treasurer of the church in such a way and at such time within the quarter as best suits the convenience of each church. The church Treasurer shall pay the sums collected to the Q. C. Treasurer at each session in each district where it shall be kept subject to the call of the Annual Conference through its Treasurer and Secretary.

WHEREAS, We do mean to do all that lies in our power to save a perishing world ere Jesus comes; therefore

Resolved, That we keep the tent in the field during the tent season; the man who may be chosen to go with the tent, acting as an evangelist during such months as he cannot pitch the tent.

WHEREAS, We wish to do all things in order, therefore

Resolved, That each minister who shall fail to report himself at our Annual Conference either by letter or personal presence; and each church neglecting to report itself either by letter or delegate shall by such neglect forfeit their membership in the Conference, unless a satisfactory reason for such delinquency can be given. This resolution to be in full force on and after the next annual meeting.

WHEREAS, We are always glad to welcome every accession to the ranks of truth, therefore

Resolved, That we will co-operate with, and give our sympathy to our brethren at the Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri, and also, to our brethren of the South Western Iowa and North Eastern Missouri Conference. The Advent people are one wherever found and their work is one. God speed the light, now and always.

A vote of thanks to the brethren and friends of Manchester, and vicinity for their kindness, hospitality and generosity. May God bless them abundantly.

The blessing of God rested upon us; it was indeed good to be there. Three put on Christ: others were almost persuaded to be Christians. The brethren were quickened and encouraged, God was honored and his name glorified.

H. H. JANES, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW YORK.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The second annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Northen Pa. and Southern, N. Y. held at Fremont Center, N. Y. commencing Sep. 12, continuing over Sunday was, we are happy to report, a success. The session was harmonious and characterized by a spirited zeal. There was a good attendance and much interest manifested by those present.

Since the organization of this conference one year ago, we have prospered full as well as our highest anticipations; and we are strong in the faith that the movement is blest of God. Yet we think there is neglect on the part of some: but we hope and pray that all may be encouraged, and that in the future we may all be more faithful; that when the Lord comes we may be ready to enter into that rest that is in waiting for the faithful, watching, praying ones. All the ministers belonging to the conference, except three, reported, and we hope that in the future all will be prompt, and will be at each conference session.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: J. W. Taylor, President; Benj. Butler, Vice President; A. H. Briggs, Secretary; Sylvanus Gardner, Treasurer. It is not necessary that we should make a lengthy report, but we would say that we are hopeful for the future, notwithstanding there are some influences brought to bear against us, (which certainly ought not to be). We will try to meet all opposition in the spirit of our Master, and render good for evil. We were favored with a visit from Eld. E. C. Cowels of, Marathon, N. Y. and Wm. Erwin, of Painted Post. The preaching was harmonious and our conference meetings were of the best.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Our Young Folks.

"Till Seventy Times Seven."

A STORY FOR THE CHILDREN.

"Are not you coming out this morning, Annie?"

"No, I cannot, Nellie."

"Why not."

"Because I have a bad headache, and mama says I must not go out in the sun until it is better."

As Annie said these words she sighed, and gave a very peculiar glance at Nellie.

Nellie pretended not to understand what that glance meant, and she cast down her eyes as if she did not. But she knew very well, for this is what she said to herself:

"Annie wants me to lend her my doll; but how can I do so after the affair of the picture-book?"

Now the affair of the picture-book was this. Nellie lent Annie a very nice book, with colored pictures in it, one day when it was wet. Annie had a little dog that was very fond of playing with books, and of course spoilt every one that he touched. Annie knew this very well, and she ought to have kept the book where the dog could not touch it. Instead of that she carelessly left it on the floor where the dog found it. In a very few minutes Nellie's book was torn to pieces. Annie brought the fragments to Nellie with an apology, but Nellie was so angry at first that she scarcely spoke to her. But afterwards she remembered how very wrong that was; and then she forgave Annie, and told her that she did. But she could not help thinking of the circumstances when Annie gave the hint about her doll.

It seemed as if Annie could almost read her thoughts, for she said, presently: "Have you really forgiven me for that accident that happened to your picture-book, Nellie?"

"Yes really," said Nellie, after a slight hesitation; "and to show you that I have done so I will lend you my doll."

"Oh, thank you, Nellie dear, you are very kind," said Annie, looking as she felt, quite delighted.

"I will fetch her for you at once," said Nellie.

"Shall I send for her?" asked Annie.

"Oh, no; I would rather bring her myself."

In a short time Nellie came back with her precious doll.

"Thank you again," said Annie "The doll will make the time pass so much more happily."

Nellie wanted to ask Annie to be sure and take great care of Dolly, but she thought it would be ungenerous to do so, and therefore she said nothing about it.

Nellie spent the morning in searching for shells; and she found more than ever before, which of course delighted her exceedingly.

But when she had been out for several hours, she saw a sight at which she was exceedingly surprised, vexed, and grieved.

What do you think it was?

It was Annie walking close to the water. In her hand she had Nellie's doll. The tide was coming in, and Annie was deriving some amusement from making Miss Dolly go close to the edge of the water, and snatching her away when the waves were in danger of touching her.

"Annie! Annie! what are you doing? How can you be so very naughty?" cried Nellie; but the water made so much noise that Annie did not hear her. Nellie went as quickly as she could, but it is difficult to walk over shingle. Before she could reach Annie, a large wave came up, and washed over Dolly's feet and the pretty blue silk dress which she was wearing.

Nellie felt so angry that she actually lifted up her hand. She scarcely knew herself whether she intended to strike Annie or to push her into the sea. But she certainly meant to punish her in some way.

But just at that minute the thought of a verse came into her mind, and she remembered that she ought not to be satisfied with forgiving Annie once, for Jesus said His disciples were to forgive until seventy times seven.

Annie had not seen Nellie. So Nellie walked back a few steps. She breathed quickly, and her heart beat violently. But Nellie lifted her heart in prayer for help.

Then she went to Annie.

"Shall I have my doll now, Annie?"

Annie's color flushed her face.

"The sea has just washed over her, Nellie."

"Yes, I saw it; but as it was not your own doll, I think you should not have done as you did."

So much Nellie could not help saying.

"I know it was stupid and wrong of me," said Annie.

"Never mind. We will have a little walk and forget it, and when I go home I must see what can be done with the unfortunate dress."

The sea was beautiful that day, and so was the sky, but even these were not more charming sights than the little girl who was trying to forgive and speak pleasantly to the companion who had injured he doll.

How God Answers Prayer.

A poor Christian woman in Buckinghamshire—I believe near Barkhamstead—was bereaved of her husband after a long illness, and left unprovided for, the only thing of value being a large chest of tools. The husband had only just been buried, when a neighbor, bearing no good character, called on the widow, and presented a bill for work done, altogether beyond the widow's power to pay. The work, which had been done in the husband's lifesime, was paid for by him, and the bill receipted, of which the widow had a distinct recollection. It availed not for her to assert the fact. The payment of the bill was pressed again, and longing eyes cast at the chest of tools. In great distress, the widow retired up stairs to pray, for all effort to find the receipted bill was in vain. While engaged in prayer, a butterfly flew in at the open window down stairs. The window's little child chased it until it flew behind the chest of tools. Just then the mother came in, and the child begged her to remove the box, that he might get the butterfly. The neighbor offered at once to do so; and while he was removing it from the wall, a piece of paper fell down behind, which the widow taking up, found to be the lost bill, receipted as she had said. She was overcome with praise and gratitude to God, who had answered her praver by means of the butterfly; and even her enemy himself had discovered the missing bill.—The Christian.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 22, 1872.

Business Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and ☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

WE will send a copy of the Jubilee Harp, neatly stamped with any name desired, at the following rates: Plain Harps, $1.10, post-paid. Full gilt, $1.25, post-paid. The Jubilee HYMNS, full gilt, stamped, post-paid, $1.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. E. Lee, No. 375 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post-paid, for 30c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $3 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 36 sheets, 50c.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

L D Weaver
A D Hindman
C Alex DeLong
L D Mansfield
J Vanderwenter
E Lambkin
L Sherman
W Morphy
W M Palmer
H Munger
J D Pinckett
M M Fraught
W S Payton
J Smith
J S Lawver
R V Philip
O Stone
F W Haskell
C W Pitcher
A Anderson
A Criner
R Bloss
R Patten
J Spunton
G W Cline
J Hamilton
T G Tilton
J G Richardson
C Richard
A E J Night
J Fletcher
H O Tibbets
B W Keith
A Sanford 2
E S Penwell
A Waffle
F H Burbank
G E Merrill
S Case
J Reed
J F Bishop
S C Wellcome
L Nichols
R Burtenshaw
E D Allen
J W Wescott
D F Fink
F Nokes
S B Mabey
E Kelsy
H Cushman
C E Barnes
H B Seavy
S C Wellcome
J Lowry
W Parmlee
J T Ongley
S W Bishop
J N Porter
R M Rowell
J L Madill
E A Marsh

Books and Tracts by Mail.

L A Richardson
E Stephenson
D. Nafe
O P Davis
G W Myers
S Monett
J Bodient
P Williams
J C Welcome 3
W Roper
N N Thompson
Wm True
E Nordlind 2
A E Fox
L D Weaver
P Allyn
A Boult
L Record
J N Porter
H Seller
T Gale
W M Palmer
M Clegg
A J Lewis
W A Allen
J Read
S B White
P Hitchcock
C Beagle
J McMichael
A Hale
J Stoughton
A Barnes
A F Randall
E E Wheeler
R Russell
J W Thomas
Wm P Burr
A Harwood
S D Brown
G W Cline
J Sober
P Hitchcock
J S Ames
D W Houk
C Churchell
J Handlin
R Whitney
E S Penwell
S C Wait
E S Bowe
L Martin 2
W T Gilbert
S S Babcock
S M Lum
W E Brown
M M Zuney 2
E Lambkin
J Smith
A D Hindman
W S Payton
A B Cushing
J F Huber
C Evans
A M Hunt
R A Keating
T F Fry
W E Brown
J D Gephart
J E Newhouse
G W Cline
A Anderson
C B Hudson
S K Gibson
G C Conell
H Melts
J Hill
J Kern 2
J D Gephart
P L Fry
K F King
G H Summers
R J McPherson
H Davis
M Maud
W Yelleston
E S Bronough 2
E A Bowe
R Rick
Amos Sanford
C W Turner
R V Philip
C Richland
J S Lawver
J Fletcher
C W Pitcher
J F Bishop
M Towsley
E S Penwell
L C Wait

To Correspondents.

R. BURTENSHAW. J. V. H. never held a discussion at Battle Creek with any United Brethren minister or anybody else. As to the other matter, be sure and keep the good spirit yourself.... PETER FRY. J. V. H. says he cannot possibly visit Texas at present. He will do so at some future time, the Lord willing.

Obituary.

NAFE.—Died Oct. 13, 1872, at Mud Creek, Fulton Co., Ind., Floyd A., son of James H. and Sarah E. Nafe: aged 3 years, less 16 days.

Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by the writer, from 1 Cor. 7: 29—"For this I say, brethren, the time is short." E. C. ANDRUS.

SHEDD.—In Galva, Sept. 26, 1872, Br. Adam Shedd: aged 78 years.

He died on his "birthday," going down like a shock of corn fully ripe, all ready for the harvest day. Services by the writer. L. F. COLE.

ARMSTRONG.—In Harvard, Ill., Oct. 21, 1872, Alvin Armstrong: in his 72d year.

Br. Armstrong will be best recognized by our friends when we speak of him as the father of Sr. H. V. Reed, and father-in-law of Br. John Howell. He early became interested in the preaching of the advent and the kingdom of Jesus as at hand, and never lost that feeling. His family are in deep affliction. Remember them. ***

Book Notices, Etc.

THE INQUIRER: Protestant or Catholic, Which?

The above is the title of a 46 page tract by I. C. Wellcome. It treats of the principles which underlie Roman Catholicism, the history of their introduction into the early church from pagan philosophy: presents the Scriptures and belief of the primitive church on these points, giving quotations in proof from history and the fathers. The reformation under Luther is examined, the doctrine of the reformers with extracts is stated. The relapse of the Protestants to the Roman doctrines is developed, and tendency of the present-day Protestantism is shown to be clearly toward Roman Pagan Spiritism. The antidote is pointed out in the primitive doctrine of man's mortality. The quotations from ancient and modern authors are very valuable. Price, single 10c, per doz. 75c. For sale at THE TIMES office.

Scribner's Monthly for November will have an editorial on Father Hyacinthe, in which Dr. Holland strongly defends the priest's recent marriage, and hurls scorn at his protestant revilers. Edward King of the Boston Journal, will give an account of an expedition among the Spanish Revolutionists, which he took in company with Stanly, the Livingstone discoverer. "The Demons of the Shadow is the title of a curious paper by Moncure D. Conway, in which he gives what may be called "The Natural History of the Devil."

Notices, Etc.

Post Office Address.

Geo. W. Miller, Monticello, Minn.

Notice—Kansas.

I intend to be with the churches and friends soon to labor as the Lord may direct. Those who wish me to call on them when I go or come, can write me at Amboy, Ill.; or Columbus, Kan., care of Br. Amos Sanford. My route will be by the K. C., B. & M. R. R., through S. Iowa and N.-W. Mo. SILAS B. MABEY.

Notice.

I expect to leave Chicago for the Pacific coast sometime in December next. My route will be via the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Burlington & Missouri, and the Union Pacific Railways. I shall be pleased to hear from any living near or upon this route who desire a visit from me, and as far as may be practicable I will comply with their requests. Write soon that I may make my arrangements.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Notice.

Dr. Leonard Tafel offers his services to clergymen and students of the ministry of any denomination in learning to read Hebrew. He will open a course of fifteen days, beginning on Nov. 11th, 1872, at his residence, No. 5 Hamilton Park, Staten Island, N. Y. During this course he will read with the students the thirty chapters of Genesis, comprised in No. 1, giving at the same time lessons in Grammar. He will give two lessons a day of one and a half hours each, devoting one hour to Translation and one-half hour to Grammar.

Students desiring to enter this course will please apply to Dr. Leonard Tafel, care A. J. Tafel, No. 148 Grand St., N. Y. Students in Philadelphia desiring such a course of instruction may apply to Rev. L. H. Tafel, No. 635 Arch St.

The Times.

ABROAD.

 An astonishing thing this was at Bucharest, recently. It had been a cloudless and uncommonly hot day, and in the evening, while the inhabitants were out for a walk and the gardens were crowded, suddenly a cloud appeared, and shortly after rain began to fall—rain of an extraordinary description, for the shower consisted of small black worms of the size of an ordinary fly. The streets were strewn with these singular creatures. Cannot the gentleman who manages the weather at Washington give us a little shower of this kind? It would work beautifully into a paragraph, and fill every scientific heart with rapture.—N. Y. Tribune.

 The increasing frequency of sudden deaths in England has excited general attention. The number of such deaths was, in 1851, 5,740; in 1870, 12,428. The medical journals seem to agree that the cause of the increase was the tremendous pace at which men now live. The mental and physical strain involved in a struggle to get wealth or fame quickly ends in heart-disease, and this ends in death. This view is sustained by the fact that such deaths occur, as a general rule, among men between 20 and 45 years of age. A medical review kindly advises Englishmen that these figures "warn us to take a little more care not to kill ourselves for the sake of living."

 One of the most curious phenomena of the day is the sudden revival of pilgrimage in France. Two shrines, Lowdes and LaSalette, which have for some time attracted a few score of pilgrims each year, now draw their thousands. Special trains are run on the railways to accommodate the throngs. The Reds of the great cities hoot at and attack them, but the semi-persecution only inflames their zeal. At these two villages—the one in the Jena, the other in the Pyrenees—the pilgrims are forced to camp by thousands in the open air. They spend their time in praying, singing, listening to impassioned sermons. Miracles are wrought. Baptism in the springs near at hand, the touch of the sacramental bread blessed before the shrine—these cure paralysis, consumption, everything. The almost immediate death of a sick girl who was plunged into the spring at Lowdes does not avail to hinder belief in its healing powers. The girl was wicked; it was God's vengeance. So the pilgrims say, and recount the marvellous cures that they have seen. These cures are not to be doubted. Religious exultation is no mean element in the treatment of certain diseases. The little churches are festooned with crutches, bandages, and waxen legs and arms—mementoes of vanished sickness.

 The Prussian Government has failed to extend any assurance to the Old Catholics that it will become their special champion, or in any way take part in their struggle with the Infallibilists, as an interested combatant, and has steadily refused them any material aid in money or church buildings, which they sadly need in pushing their new form of faith. The government has limited its sympathy for them to regulations which place them on the same footing as the other recognized churches, by acknowledging the binding force of their ministers' acts. The Infallibilist priests are now required to enter on the parish books births, marriages, &c., solemnized by Old Catholic clergymen, when they are requested to do so by them. Beyond this, they do not seem likely to receive any assistance from the government, and will be allowed to paddle their own canoe. The Emperor, who has had so much trouble of late in the jarrings of church and state, has evidently determined to grant them an eternal divorce, and, while he and Bismark manage the affairs of the empire, the churches will have to be content to manage their own affairs as private corporations, in no sense entitled to ask the government for assistance, and in no way be allowed to interfere with it.

 An article appeared lately in the Berlin Post showing that the military forces under the command of the three Emperors who have just left the capital of Germany are considerably more than half of the whole forces of Europe. The effective of the Russian army, without including the garrison troops or the Cossacks of the Asiatic provinces, would reach 1,362,464 men, with 324,760 horses, and 2,084 guns. The Austrian army is placed at 963,051 men, with 133,323 horses and 1,424 guns; and the German effective is 1,052,506 men, with 239,314 horses, and 2,022 guns. These three together would thus compose the enormous total of 3,378,021 men, 696,397 horses, and 5,530 guns. This is taking the armies on the old war footing; but Germany has already—in 1870-71—shown she could exceed the number stated as her effective by nearly 200,000 men. Now, let us take the forces of all the other European States together, and we do not find that they approach anything like the above total. Instead of nearly three and a half millions, they give only 2,143,516 men, and 320,857 horses, and 3,572 guns. The military forces of France on the war footing reach 505,537 men, with 118,939 horses, and 984 guns. Italy has 501,977 men, with 43,472 horses, and 720 guns. England is placed at 470,779 men (of whom only 154,638 can be employed out of the country), 33,642 horses, and 836 guns. Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Turkey and Spain, can dispose in all of 981,864 men, 129,304 horses, and 1,532 guns. According, however, to the new military organization to be adopted in France, the military forces of that power will be increased to 1,300,000 men, and 2,400 guns, without counting the second line of the reserve and the territorial army, which, in case of necessity, might raise the effective strength of the French forces to 3,000,000 men. Obviously, however, these last figures do not, at present at least, represent any real force, although the Berlin Post concludes from them that France would be able, upon necessity, to sustain a conflict with a coalition of three empires.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Afton, Oct. 27.
Squaw Grove, Nov. 3.
Galva, Nov. 9, as Br. Runquist may arrange.
Milroy, Nov. 10. C. W. SMITH.

White Rock, Ogle Co., Union chapel, 3 p. m., Nov. 10. Subject: The Gospel Hope.

Morn. and eve. at Elida. C. C. MARSTON.

At Beamersville, 11 a. m., and 2½ p. m., Sunday, Oct. 26. S. E. MABEY.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Udina, 10½ a. m., Oct. 27.
Coral, eve. of same day. E. H. BURINGTON.

The next Annual Meeting of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference will be held at New Rutland, La Salle Co., commencing Wednesday, Dec. 11, and holding over the following Sabbath.

SILAS B. MABEY, Sec'y.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor

Wyanet, Friday eve. Oct. 25.
Mineral, Saturday eve. Oct. 26.
Neponset, 10½ a. m. and 7 p. m., Sabbath, Oct. 27. S. B. MABEY.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Lanark, Nov. 4, 5.
Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Elida, Nov. 8-10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.
C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Equality, Gallatin Co., as Br. Ashley may arrange, Thursday eve., Oct. 24, and continue until Nov. 2.

Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., Saturday eve., Nov. 2 and over Sunday.

Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.

Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Suday.

Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawver may arrange.

WM. McCULLOCH.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

MICHIGAN.

QUARTERLY MEETING NOTICE.

The next meeting of the Southern Michigan Quarterly Conference will be held at Woodbridge, commencing Nov. 14, and continue over Sunday. Those coming on the cars will leave the train at Reading. Teams will meet trains there on Friday to carry all who come to the meeting.

E. WAKEMAN, Sec'y pro tem.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

MINNESOTA.

Garden City, Blue Earth Co., as the brethren may arrange, Thursday eve. Oct. 24, and over the Sabbath.

Plainview, Wabashaw Co., Saturday eve. Nov. 2, and Sunday, 10 a. m.

Viola, Olmstead Co., Stone S. H., 2½ and 7 p. m., Sunday, Nov. 3.

Alma City, Waseca Co., 7 p. m., Saturday, Nov. 9.

Freedom, Converse S. H., 10½ a. m., Sunday, Nov. 10.

Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2½ p. m., Sunday, Nov. 10. S. C. WELLCOME.

KANSAS.

Hillsdale, Friday eve. Nov. 1.
Columbus, Sabbath, Nov. 3.
Bero, Sabbath, Nov. 10, and onward as Br. Sanford and brethren may arrange.
S. B. MABEY.

MISSOURI.

Hopkins, Tuesday eve., Oct. 29.
Cedar Creek church, Wednesday eve., Oct. 30.
S. B. MABEY.

The fourth Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa A. C. Conference will be held with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co., commencing Friday, Nov. 8, and holding over Sunday. We look for a good representation from all the churches in the District.

H. BILLMIRE, Pres't.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bienny St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

ARKANSAS.

I shall spend the month of November in Arkansas, in such places as the brethren there may deem best. Any who wish to correspond with me can address me at 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

The second Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Arkansas will be held in Flatwood, Izard Co., Nov. 20, and over the Sabbath. The churches will appoint their delegates in good season. And brethren isolated will please come and report the state of things in their region. Eld. J. V. Himes will be with us and help in the good work. Come brethren and sisters, let us have a grand rally for the truth.

S. ROSENBAUGH,
J. B. BROWN.

NEW YORK.

Savannah, Wayne Co., Oct. 23.
South Butler, Oct. 24-27.
Marion, Oct. 29, 30.
Lockport, Nov. 3.

P. S. If any of the above conflict with other appointments, or should not be desirable, please notify me in time at South Creek, Bradford Co. Pa., by Oct. 16. I will visit other places in New York State, if desired, until Nov. 20.

J. T. ONGLEY.

Advertisements.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 8, Range 3, West, Crawford Co., Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $800, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Farm for Sale.—A fine Farm of 200 acres, in Central Wisconsin. Well situated, and worth $60 an acre. Address J. S. Ames, Kenosha, Wisconsin. [all w4

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873 Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers' Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

POCKET HYMN BOOK
With Music.
COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.
"Hymns of the Morning"
Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:
Cloth Binding......................[illegible]
Morocco "......................75c
Sent postage free on receipt of price.
TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT, Box 426, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

GERMAN TRACTS
On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1008 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

LIBRARY AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 13. CHICAGO, OCTOBER 29, 1872. WHOLE NO. 444.

Advent Christian Times.

The Joyful Message.

It is a joyful intelligence that our the resurrection of our Lord has a bearing on the resurrection of others,—that, "according to the Scriptures, he has been raised from among the dead as a first-fruit of those who have fallen asleep."

God is governing this world by the law of association. "Through a man came death: Through a man also comes resurrection of the dead." It is in Christ that the believer is declared righteous, and in him that he receives the spirit of life and holiness and power. In like manner, it is not merely by the agency of Christ, but by virtue of union with Christ that the process of recovery and glorification is carried on to its goal in our resurrection from among the dead. Christ's resurrection is a first-fruit of ours. A sheaf offered unto the Lord as a first-fruit, is taken from a field where more corn of the same kind remains standing. The first-fruit is a part of the whole fruit; even as a first-born is one member of a family where there are other children. We become identified with Christ; but he has first become identified with us, even in death. (Heb. 2: 14.) And so his resurrection is constituted by God a representation, herald, and pledge of ours. Our immediate business is with the joyfulness of the prospect which this law of recovery reveals.

It is joyful because of the nature of the blessing which is thus guaranteed. That blessing is our resurrection from among the dead. The simple intimation of this is fitted to make us leap for joy. Lest any opiate of familiarity or traditionalism should obscure our perception of the charm of this prospect, let us consider what our rising from the dead implies. It implies the triumphant attainment of everlasting life. It is characteristically a resurrection of life. (John 5: 29.) It is the coronation by virtue of which we are to reign in life. (Rom. 5: 17.) It is our final entrance into life. (Mark 9: 43–45.) Moreover it is our admission, as inheritors, and as kings, into the KINGDOM OF GOD. (1 Cor. 15: 50; Rev. 20: 6; Mark 9: 47.) This last cited passage is valuable as showing that entrance into life and entrance into the kingdom are synonymous. Once more, our resurrection from among the dead will be the completion and proof of our being SONS OF GOD. "Even we ourselves WITHIN OUR OWN SELVES are sighing ardently waiting for adoption,—the redemption of our body." (Rom. 8: 23.) "The sons of this age are marrying and being given in marriage; but those accounted worthy to obtain that age, and the resurrection which is from among the dead, neither are marrying nor are being given in marriage; for not even to die any more are they able; for they are equal to messengers, and are sons of God, being sons of the resurrection." (Luke 20: 35, 36.) So then, that resurrection will prove a birth into all the glories of divine sonship! that resurrection will impart an incapacity of death! that resurrection will usher into an age not otherwise to be obtained!—the kingdom, eternal life, unveiled sonship, all welded into one magnificent promise of a Christ-pledged resurrection from among the dead.

No doubt others also will ultimately arise. Ere the solemn "hour" of divine dealing with the dead shall have passed away forever, all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth. (John 5: 28, 29.) But, in the case of those who have rejected Christ as their Savior, and brought upon themselves the speedy destruction of the second death, the relation to Christ as first-fruit can only be secondary, if, as such a relation, it exist at all. They will rise, not as sons of the resurrection, but as its slaves; not to honor but to shame; not to life, but to death; to be destroyed, body and soul, in gehenna. (Mat. 10: 28.)

Our only promise of eternal life lies enfolded in the promise of rising in and with Christ. The popular exaggeration of the separate state, by virtue of which the glory and power of everlasting life are conceived of as entered upon as soon as death takes place, can not be too earnestly deplored. The bright array, the imposing throng, the exulting anthems, the triumphant palms,—these have all been stolen from the final, post-resurrection, state; woven into a story hopelessly inconsistent with other representations which undeniably refer to the intermediate condition. It will be time enough for the Lamb's wife to array herself in her fine linen, when, all her members having been incorporated, it is "given" her so to do. (Rev. 19.) Let the innumerabe multitudie get out of the great tribulation, before you set them waving their palm-branches. (Ch. 7.) God's purpose is to wait until his seventh messenger sounds his trumpet, before he will give the promised "reward to his servants the prophets" (ch. 11: 15–18); and, till then, his "mystery" remains unfinished. (ch. 10: 7.) Just at the present time, it is of unspeakable moment to keep this fact steadily in view. Every great man is, now-a-days, the moment that he dies, being carried, by the messengers of the daily press, much higher than Abraham's bosom; and, to the popular eye, the unclothed spirits of veteran warrior and heroic fireman are depicted as ascending together, in articulate converse, each wearing his own appropriate crown of glory, into the third heavens. This is unbiblical. It is profane. And so the resurrection is needless, the judgment to come is never named! Men deceive themselves that death is no curse, and have no concern to be found "in him" who alone is the resurrection and the life.

Beware, reader, of this popular snare of the adversary. You have no prospect of life everlasting, except that which finds its consummation in a resurrection from among the dead. You have no prospect at all of another life, save that which Jesus Christ gives; and you can have that, only as he wills, in his way. To magnify the peaceful sleep, or even pleasant dreams, of hades into the wide-awake and active glories and joys of the new heavens and new earth, is, from the biblical point of view, an almost childish absurdity. Christ "abolished death and illumined life and incorruption," by himself rising from the dead, and by sending forth the joyful message that he would by and by "transfigure the body of our humbling, conformable to the body of his glory." (2 Tim. 1: 10; Phil. 3: 21.) Adam the first brought death, and only death, into the world,—that is, over and above the present life. Anything beyond, for which, apart from Christ, we are entitled to hope, is merely an extension of our being unto the second death. "The wages of sin is death; but God's gift of favor is everlasting life in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Rom. 6: 23.)

Every man who refuses to be cheated by the spirit of error that is in the world, and who allows himself to look the terrible reality of death in the face; who, conscious that he has wickedly misspent this life, humbly owns that he has no claim on his God for another; who permits himself to see that God never intended man to realize the bliss of his being as a disembodied spirit; who sees no inherent and necessary evil in matter; but who believes Adam's unfallen state to have been "very good," and Christ's risen, yet still enrobed, bodily, condition to have been still better—more noble, more beautiful, more lordly, more divine,—every such man may be expected to have "an ear to hear" what God's joyful message proclaims. It proclaims the redemption of our complete manhood. It tells us that matter and spirit are not necessarily antagonistic: but that, in our own glorified selves, all opposition is destined to be overcome,—the spirit permeating, filling, and controlling the body; and the body yielding and ministering to the spirit. And though that glorified life is not, like this, to be characteristically a "soulish" life (1 Cor. 15: 44–46), yet will the soul-element not be missing. (1 Thes. 5: 23.) Body, soul, and spirit will all be blended in the personal unity of a rich and various being. Each constituent of our nature will be there to celebrate the final triumph of good over evil,—each bringing up, from its previous history, its memories and mementoes of peril and deliverance,—each sharing in the celebration, with its appropriate token and tribute of praise. The body, with its beauty of form, and symmetry of parts, and mutual ministration of members, and expressiveness of countenance; with its eye of light, and fire, and love; its hand of receptivity and service and graceful accompaniment; its foot of speed and pause and leisurely travel; its ear to catch the softest whispers of private converse, or vibrate to the loudest thunderings of congregational melody: its tongue to converse, narrate, inquire, and sing;—the body will be there. And the soul will be there,—with its deep life-consciousness, its emotions, its impulses, its affections; with its thrill and bound of joy, and its delicious draughts of rest and peace. And the spirit too, so feeble, so dormant now; the spirit, animated by God's Spirit, going out to meet and enjoy him who is essentially "spirit;" receptive, as towards him; communicative, quickening, ennobling, and ruling, as towards the lower elements of its being,—the spirit will be there. Over the whole ransomed man, the Divine Kinsman-Redeemer will rejoice, as having lost nothing. (John 6: 39.) How truly grand the Scriptural hope! How joyful the unmutilated message of God's love!

It is further joyful because of the principle according to which the blessing is to be bestowed. When the dwellers in the dust awake and sing (Is. 26: 19), their joy cannot but be the more blissful that they shall find themselves members of a choir led by their victorious Elder brother in the praise of their One Father's name. (Ps. 22: 22; John 17: 26; Heb. 2: 12.) Only by analogy can we judge; and this we know—that one chief factor of all that, in this life, is truly blessed, is the law of association. The mightiest working of this law, of which we now have experience, is undoubtedly the domestic. How dreary life would be, were the meaning of the words father, mother, wife, child, brother, sister, home, unknown! We are all reaping what others have sown, and all sharing what others also enjoy. In this connection, the national sentiment also may be thought of; although it is obvious to inquire whether the national bond ever becomes so strong as when it brings all citizens to feel that they are but one family, or whether the national affection ever becomes so consciously raised as when it centers with sorrowing suspense or bounding joy or grateful indebtedness in one object. Judging from these premises, we are warranted in believing that our beloved Creator has planted the bestowment of resurrection life in the very way adapted to impart the highest zest to it, by arranging to raise us from the dead through the medium of one man—the crown and hero of our race. Every risen one will have started forth into the glorious life at the bidding of one voice. Every eye will be gazing on one and the same deliverer. And each will be conscious that all other hearts are animated by the same impulse of love and gratitude and joy. We shall be the harvest of which our Savior has become the "first-fruit:" we the family of "many brethren" of which he has become the "firstborn." Through this lens of universal fellowship in one joy, received through one channel, from one source, will every ray of redemption pass and be intensified. What our Lord undertook in order to redeem us—how humbly he stooped to a "partnership in our blood and flesh"—how completely he honored the whole creature law to which he volunteered a life-long subjection—with what firmness and Sonly loyalty he resisted every Satanic assault—with what unconquerable love and patience he endured the contradiction of sinners against himself—and how with fearful agonizing he realized what it was to be "made sin" for us by dying in our stead—and how it was thus, only thus, he won the right, according to divine law and eternal fitness, he became our "first-fruit"—all these counts will be numbered and dwelt upon by each member of the immortal throng, and cause the strains of triumph to roll and swell with every augmenting force, beyond all that we can now by any means imagine. But we know it will be so: judging from every analogy within our present reach, we know it must. What of earth-born ties shall then have been lost, will simply have fallen off by virtue of a stronger, closer bond. It is altogether credible that every pure form of associate joy of which we know now, shall then find unspeakably more than its counterpart springing up from the one law of resurrection-life on which our attention is at present fixed. We cannot so much as imagine the blissful details of its operation. We make no attempt. But we know that we shall then be sinless and incorrupt, immortal and glorious, formed for Christ as he for us; and we can believe that our happiness will equal our perfection; and that, while our capacity for enjoyment will be inconceivably enlarged, no craving of that nobler state of being shall be supplied.

JOSEPH B. ROTHERHAM.

—Rainbow.

ANYTHING that a representative Unitarian like Dr. Bellows has to say concerning the character of Christ is of interest to Christains of other denominations. The following argument from prophecy is not strictly new, but very neatly put:

"Could all these peculiar incidents recorded in Isaiah 7, 9, 52, 61, illustrative so singularly of Christ's birth, character, passion, resurrection, be merely coincidences? Any one or five might be, but where are the bold blunders, the predictions that are not fulfilled, and how happen so many to conspire so wonderfully upon his case? Do you say the apostles picked them out of the vast mass of their Scriptures, and applied them only rhetorically to Christ? were they poets and literary mosaic-makers? They evidently believed they applied to him. If they were deceived, did not Jesus leave them in their delusion? Yes! but perhaps he was deluded. Are deluders persons who reject honors, teach veracity and charity, and die for their cause? Either Christ knew that he was not the Messiah or that he was. He claimed to be so. That he falsified, or we must believe his word."—Independent.

DR. BUSHNELL, says the Intelligencer, is credited with the saying that, in his opinion, "the wickedest man in the world is a good man when he gets mad." There is a deep philosophy in this. No one is apt to be more unreasonable, positive and oppressive than one who thinks he is right when he is wrong, and who believes that he is obeying conscience, principle and duty in prosecuting a given course of action or in withstanding his brethren who oppose him. A perverted concience, with the power to persecute for opinion's sake, has been the scourge of civil and religious freedom. Even in minor spheres, some of the worst specimens of human obstinacy and intolerance have been exhibited by men whose motives were good, but whose movements were as crooked and injurious as their narrow views and blundering perverseness could make them. Let such a one reach the point at which, for conscience' sake, he will "call good evil and evil good," and he becomes at once a dangerous character. Paul prayed to be delivered from "unreasonable and wicked men," but "unreasonable and good men" might as well be included in the litany.

ONE of the pests which dog civilization—the more so the further it advances—is the fear of ridicule. Is there any body living who has not often been laughed out of what he ought to have done, and laughed into what he ought not to have done? Who has not sinned; who has not been a renegade from duty; who has not stifled his feelings; who has not mortified his noblest desires, solely to escape being laughed at? And not once, merely; but time after time, until that which has so often been checked becomes stunted and no longer dares hold up its head. And then, after having been laughed down ourselves, we join the pack who go about laughing down others.—Anon.

Trying to Put the Bible Down.

They say some folks are trying
To put the Bible down,
To falsify the prophets,
And grudge the Lord his crown;
Well, they must be a heathen crew!
What is this world a coming to?

Go, Betsy, light the candle,
And hand the good Book here;
It's been our greatest staff and stay,
For many and many a year;
And all its goodly company
No man can take away from me.

And firstly, there's the fly leaf,
That mother writ upon;
She was a saint I know, and died
With Bible armor on:
Thank God! her children learned in youth,
Who was the Way, the Light, the Truth.

She had sore troubles, Betsy,
Sharp as the serpent's tooth—
You've heard me tell the story
Of tender little Ruth—
Our skylark, that from heaven flew,
Whom the base fowler snared and slew.

Ah! Betsey, that was hardest
Of mother's trials, yet
To see, like mildew on the rose,
The blight upon her pet.
But "Oh! God's promises are sweet,"
She'd say, and one by one repeat

The blessed words of Jesus—
And when her lamb returned,
Though soiled with many a sinful stain
Christ's love within her burned;
And the poor penitent on her breast
Forgiven, sank to dreamless rest.

And father—well, he's gone dear,
But many a word he said,
That sober, ne'er had held the power
To bow that gentle head—
But this old Book held balm to heal
The sorest wounds his heart could feel.

And so some folks are trying
To write the Bible down?
Well, hav'n't they tried for ages
With sword, and flame, and crown?
And isn't the rock as firm as when
The Prince of princes died for men?

There's nothing in this world, dear,
Would nerve my old right arm,
Like seeing a puny man stand up
And bring that Book to harm;
I know, dear, what the Master says,
But must I love his enemies?

Thou dear old Book! my mother's stay,
The rest of saints for ages,
The will of God, the love of Christ
Shine from thy deathless pages;
Heaven's peace! what angel could have told
In lines of light, in words of gold?

Here, Betsey, put the good Book up,
Nor tell me ne'er again,
They try to write the Bible down;
It gives me needless pain;
When God himself shall falsify,
And not till then, his word shall die.

—Mary A. Denison, in Christian Weekly.

The Nature of Man.

My subject leads to the study of man's nature to ascertain if he has in possession an immortal nature, or an immortal soul, or an immortal spirit, which forbids the possibility of the execution of the death penalty which God pronounced upon him—"Dying, thou shalt die."

The text which naturally suggests itself for our study, is the one description of man's creation. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." (Gen. 2: 7.)

This text is invariably quoted in proof of man's inherent immortality, or that he had given him in creation, an "immortal soul" to take up its abode within the clayey tabernacle. I think, however, that a critical examination of this passage will disclose that there is nothing in the biblical description here given of man's creation, to demonstrate that he had imparted to him an immortal nature in any sense whatever.

"Living soul." Certainly, immortality is not found in these words, descriptive of what man became on creation. Observe! Not "immortal soul." If man by creation was made immortal why is it not stated here? If there is any place in the sacred volume where it should have been stated, it is in this passage where we have the record of man's creation. The fact that it is not affirmed that "man became" an immortal soul, but simply "a living soul," is fatal to the argument of man's immortal nature received by creation.

The adjective "living," is prefixed to the word soul. Why is this if man is immortal, or possesses a soul immortal per se? The adjective is entirely superfluous; for if man or his soul be immortal, of course, he is a living being, and destined to eternal existence. This, too, is damaging to the argument that man is immortal by virtue of his creation in the beginning.

But the same phraseology is used as descriptive of all living creatures, of even the inferior order of animals, whether on the land, in the seas, or in the air. If the language implies immortality in the one case, then it does in the other, and all living animals, of whatever grade or species, have immortal souls! But few are prepared to take this advanced step in the argument, (though some do). Gen. 1: 20, 30, com. ch. 2: 7.)

Dr. A. Clarke says of "living soul:" "A general term to express all creatures endued with animal life." Prof. Stuart: "A generic term for living creature." Dr. T. J. Conant, in a note to his version of Genesis, published by the American Bible Union, as a final revision, says: "The Hebrew word (nephesh) here rendered soul, includes all beings that have animal life; and hence is applied to animals of the sea and land, in ch. 1: 20, 21, 24, 30. The English word soul, (like the German sule,) originally had this extent of meaning, as in vv. 20, 30, in the margin of the common English version. But, as the word is now used, it would misrepresent the meaning in these passages." Would Dr. Conant advocate this departure from the "original extent of meaning" of the "Hebrew' English, and German?"

"Breath of life." Some find in the sentence, "Breathed in his nostrils the breath of life," proof of man's immortality. But this is mere assumption. Mark, it is not declared that "God breathed into his nostrils" an "immortal spirit." And yet why is it not affirmed if it had been true? Would it not have been stated if true? The fact that it is not thus expressed is again fatal to the argument that man possesses an immortal nature by creation. There was simply the breath of life imparted. Observe, also, not mere "breath," but "the breath of life;" breath, with the subtle element of life added.

Life is inscrutable; and as inexplicable in the vegetable kingdom as in the animal; and in the lower order of animals as in man. There is no more evidence that this subtle and inscrutable principle is immortal in man, than in all living things. Who is ready to maintain that life in the vegetable is an immortal, personal entity, which survives the death of a plant? How many that the life of the inferior order of creatures universally is an immortal personalty which outlives eternally the death of the animal? Why then endeavor to sustain the notion that the life of man is immortal?

"Breath of lives." As in the original the word is plural, some argue that man had infused into him by his Creator, a dual life; animal and immortal. But this is mere assumption without the least evidence to support it, as a reference to Gen. 7: 21, 22, will demonstrate; where the same is asserted of all living creatures, again. The plural noun is used for the simple reason that the life imparted to man on his creation is the same as is common to all living, breathing animals. "They have all one breath," or ruach. (Eccl. 3: 19.

INCONSISTENCIES.

To maintain that God breathed into man an "immortal spirit" on his creation would involve several crude inconsistences.

1st. That all living animals have immortal spirits within them, and this position is now sustained by those further advanced in the discussion of this subject, as they are compelled and driven to take this ground in defence of their theory. Prof. Dodds, one of the ablest lecturers of the age, and who, by vote of the Senate of the United States, was requested to discourse before that honorable body a few years since, thus writes and maintains in his lectures:

"I extend my argument to the whole animal and vegetable creation, and include them in the vast and boundless theme of immortality. I desire it to be distinctly understood, that whenever I use the terms life, mind, or spirit, I mean one and the same thing, differing only in the degrees of intelligence, sensation, or motion, in the individual existence to which I may apply
I hold all life, whether animal table, to be a species of mi italics are his) "in some or ink
the vast chain of being, a onsequently immortal." (Immor lity of the Soul, pp. 39–41.)

To this position all advoca f the theory that "the breath of life" imparted to man on his creation, is an "immortal spirit," must finally be driven. There is no possibility of avoiding it. Let them look this thing squarely in the face.

2d. If God "breathed" into man an "immortal spirit," then he imparted unto him his immortal nature, and in a sense, it is true, as sung:

"Our souls are His immortal breath."

Then I would ask, Can God sin? Is he a sinner? And if so much of God as he has imparted to man has sinned, (and each man from the beginning has a part of God,) then may not God as a being sin? If so, let me ask again, Will God punish himself? Does he punish himself in the present mental sufferings of humanity? Will he punish himself hereafter, either for a limited period or throughout eternity? And, furthermore: Is God irrational? Can God become deranged? In cases of lunacy, does a part of him become insane? May not God then, as a being, be liable to become insane? And if so, what will become of the universe should the unfortunate occurrence take place? Dr. Young sings:

He, the great Father, kindled at one flame
The world of rationals; one spirit poured
From spirit's awful fountain; poured himself
Through all their souls, but not in equal stream,
Profuse or frugal, of the inspiring God,
As his wise plan demanded; and when passed
Their various trials, in their various spheres,
If they continue rational as made
Resorbs them all into himself again,
His throne their center, and his smile their crown.

If "the great Father" poured himself "through all their souls," how could that part fail to continue rational unless God himself is in danger of becoming irrational? And is there any danger that God will cast away a part of "himself" in eternity? Can there be any doubt that he will not in the case of all souls

"Resorb them all into himself again."

And thus make the Platonic doctrine true? Such are some of the varied inconsistencies of the assumed interpretations given to Gen. 2: 7.

My exposition of the passage is sustained by some of the ablest Biblical critics and expositors of both the past and the present, even though they do not agree with us as to man's mortal nature.

Says Prof. Bush: "The phrase, 'living soul,' is repeatedly applied to the inferior order of animals, which are not considered to be possessed of a soul. It would seem to imply the same, therefore, when spoken of beasts……Indeed, it may be remarked that the Scriptures generally, afford much less explicit evidence of the existence of a sentient, immortal principle in man, capable of living and acting separate from the body, than is usually supposed."

Kitto, in the Religious Encyclopedia, in his criticism on Adam, says: "And Jehovah God formed man (Heb. the Adam,) of dust from the ground, and blew into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living animal. Some of our readers may be surprised at our having translated nepheh chayah by 'living animal.' There are interpreters and preachers who, confiding in the common translation, 'living soul,' have maintained there is intimated a distinctive pre-eminence above the inferior animals, as possessed of an immaterial and immortal spirit; but we should be acting unfaithfully if we were to assume its being contained or implied in this passage."

Dr. Bagnel, in the Methodist Quarterly Review, remarks: "Some have supposed that the account of the creation, (Gen. 2: 7,) contains an intimation of the soul's immortality. If it b then the idea is that God infused a ion of himself, of his own divinity, ie human body at the time. But ew will admit this idea. Most of us hink there is more poetry than truth in the line of one our hymns:

'Our souls are his immortal breath.'

If the proof is sought in the phrase 'breath of life,' 'living soul,' these do not prove anything, for both of them are applied, in the first chapter of Genesis, to brutes, and prove the same things concerning them."

The Columbian Bible, in a foot note at the bottom, explains: "Adam became a living soul, that is, a living man."

The Union Bible Dictionary: "It seems as if the most proper idea resulting from these words is, that Adam became a living man." And the Bible Union translators, in a foot note, say of living soul: "A general term for all living animals, on the land and in the sea." To which we must add the the note of Dr. Conant, in the final revision on the sentence: "Breathed into his nostrils," etc. "That is, animated him with a principle of life. The thought is most naturally expressed under the physical form, since the life of the body is dependent upon the breath. It is proper to add, that very able interpretors, whose opinions are entitled to respect, (Delitzch, Lange, Murphy, and others,) suppose these words to express the imparting from God of the spiritual element, in which God's likeness to him consists. Hence, they find here a recognition of the doctrine of threefold nature of man, body, soul, and spirit. (1 Thes. 5: 29.) But admitting the truth of the doctrin may still be questioned whether the o not interpret into the passage m han is fairly interpreted out of i. They admit, moreover, that the Scriptures sometimes speak of man's nature as two-fold, (body and soul,) including soul and spirit under one term. Here there seems to be no more implied than is recognized in Is. 2: 22, where it is said with probable reference to this passage: "Cease ye from man, in whose nostrils is breath." Not as in the common English version: "whose breath is in his nostrils;" for where else should it be? The objection is not to its place in the body, which is the proper one for it, but to its frail and perishable nature. Only breath; so frail a principle of life, and so easily extinguished! Hence, it is added, "For wherein is he to be accounted of?" i.e., Of what account, as a refuge, is he?

O. R. Fassett.

(To be concluded.)

Lazarus and the Rich Man.

(Concluded.)

In the three preceding parables our Savior had shown the scribe and pharisee their great sin against the publican and sinner. He now, in the parable of the unjust steward (Luke 16), shows, not only their sin against the publican and sinner, but, also, their great sin against God. As in the parable of the prodigal son the scribe and Pharisee is brought to view as the elder son, so he is in the parable of the unjust steward, but he is now elevated to the stewardship, the management of the father's estate. The Savior now shows him that "his lord" is aware of his wicked dealing, that he had "wasted his goods," and that he is now about to call him to an account, "for thou mayest be no longer steward." He now paints the picture of their course of sin against God, and also against the publican and sinner, the "fellow servant." When his lord says to him, "Thou mayest no longer be steward," he begins to think, "What shall I do, I cannot labor, this would be too humiliating, and to beg I am ashamed." After thought, he exclaims, "I know what I will do, that when I am cast out of the stewardship they may receive me into their houses. So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said to the first, how much owest thou my lord? And he said, An hundred measures of oil. And he said, Sit down quickly and write fifty. To another, How much owest thou? and he said, An hundred measures of wheat, and he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fourscore." Jesus, by this forcible illustration, shows the proud scribe and Pharisee, 1st, that they, as stewards of God's manifold mercy and grace, were robbing God by withholding his rich blesings, (that were placed for the time in their hands) from their poor and degraded brethren, and were squandering God's substance upon their own ungodly lusts, and 2d, that they were guilty of robbery and murder upon their fellow servants, in that they had caused them to steal from their Lord the fifty measures of oil and the twenty measures of wheat, by which "all of his lord's servants" (v. 5) are made guilty, by which death will come upon them. Now, this steward would rather sink his own soul, and ruin all his fellow servants, than resort to honest toil to obtain a living.

How perfectly the course of the scribe and Pharisee is pictured here! They claimed to be God's peculiar people, and at "no time" had they "transgressed his commands," but Jesus tells them "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." And they "being covetous, derided him," on account of his teachings.

Our Savior next informs them that the law only extended and was binding upon them "until John." "Since then," a new and more perfect dispensation is opened, "the kingdom of God," and that they now, by clinging to the law of Moses, which is dead and from which they have been divorced, are living in a state of adultery, (v. 18) and according to their own law, were subject to death as a penalty for this crime. (Lev. 20: 10; Rom. 7: 3.)

Now, (v. 19) he begins his fifth parable, the object of which is to show the legitimate result or reward given by Jehovah, during time, to both the characters brought to view in his four preceding parables. "There was a certain rich man which was clothed in purple and fine linen and fared sumptuously every day." This rich man I understand to be the same as the scribe and Pharisee, of ch. 15: 2; the "ninety and nine" sheep that did no go astray; the nine pieces of silver that were not lost, and the elder son. The character and condition of all these are alike. They all claim to have lived in perfect harmony with God; that they never were lost or went astray; never at any time transgressed. Hence they stood upon their own righteousness. Their condition was that of opulence and power. They are God's "steward," and sit in "Moses' seat." "The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat, all therefore, whatsoever they bid you, observe and do, but do not ye after their works." (Mat. 23: 2.) Moses was the lawgiver and ruler of Israel; and to occupy "Moses' seat," would be to enforce the law given by Moses. We therefore consider the "rich man" to be a representative of the rich, aristocratic, proud, and hauty Jewish church clothed in regal and priestly habiliments, "faring sumptuously every day," upon the offerings and sacrifices, and upon the immense sums extorted and wrung from the poor.

"And there was a certain beggar, named Lazarus, who was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. Moreover, the dogs came and licked his sores." (vv. 21, 22.) It will be observed that the condition of this poor man is just the opposite of that of the rich man; indeed he seems entirely dependent upon the rich man, but it does not appear that he received the least aid from him. He "desired" to be fed with the crumbs, but instead of bestowing this small aid dines and allows him to die; the dogs even exceeding him in acts of kindness. This beggar I understand to be the same as the publican and sinner, the lost sheep, the lost pieces of silver, the prodigal son, and the "fellow servants." As I have shewn, the publican had been cast out, excommunicated from among the elite, in consequence of accepting office under the Romans, he was considered "a dog," not worthy of the least notice or consideration. The "sinner had never united with any of the three sects that were then known among the Jews, and hence, with the "publican," was considered as among the dregs of the populace. This condition is fully brought out in the parable. Lazarus is made to be poor, diseased, and utterly helpless.

This spiritual condition is that of every man who is not in possession of the Spirit of God. Hear God describe man's natural state: "From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it, but wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores." (Is. 1: 16.) Here we have Lazarus covered with his sores of sin, from the "crown of the head unto the sole of the feet." "They had not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment," but were a stench even in his own nostrils. In this condition he finds Jesus. He draws "near to hear him;" he believes the blessed truths that fall from his lips; he receives Jesus by faith into his heart; his wounds are bound up and closed; the mollifying ointment is applied, and he is healed. This change is represented by death—death to him, ceasing to live as a sinner in opposition to God's commandments and law, and he is carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The word "angel" does not always signify a superior order of beings, but sometimes means a messenger. "The angel of the churches" are simply their pastors or leaders. So in this case, Jesus was the messenger of truth, and grace, and peace to the poor publican and sinner (Lazarus), and by this faith in the Messenger, Christ, he is borne away—becomes a "child of God," a "joint heir with Christ," and being Christ's, he becomes "Abraham's seed," his son, and, as in the case of the prodigal son, the father ran to meet and embrace his lost and erring child, so in this parable, Abraham receives this child (of faith) to his embrace, "his bosom," his heart. By faith "he that was far off was now brought nigh," and immediately enters into the blessings of the Abrahamic covenant and promises.

This scenery, as will be observed, is all laid this side of the judgment, hence the change and blessings consequent upon it, are those enjoyed by the true believer during this life.

The rich man also died, and was buried. A change represented by literal death happens to the rich and haughty Pharisee. In consequence of their rejection of God, God has rejected them; the "stewardship" is taken away, and God says to him, "Thou mayest no longer be steward." The kingdom, with its glory, its purple robes, its majestic power and beauty is taken from him. "It shall not be the same. Exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high, I will overturn, overturn, overturn it (the kingdom), and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." (Ezek. 21: 25–27.)

The priesthood, with its fine linen, its daily and yearly sacrifices, its splendor, and pomp, and glory, its beautiful temple, the joy of the whole earth, with its superb and costly service, are now things of the past; the ploughshare of destruction has been dragged over its site, and "not one stone is left upon another" to tell the sorrowful tale. The rich man has "died," his power is shorn, his glory departed, his very name and memory a stench in the nostrils of God and man.

"And was buried, and in hades, (the place of the dead,) he lifts up his eyes, being in torment." The reader will take notice that this all takes place before the judgment of the great day, and hence can only be understood as an earthly or temporal judgment. This thought will lead us to inquire: What is the torment spoken of? We answer it is a state of mental and bodily suffering as predicted in the prophetic record to fall upon that stiff-necked and hard-hearted people in consequence of their rejection of God; their persistent disobedience and unbelief. In Deut. ch. 28, we find the lawgiver of Israel predicting the awful judgments that should come upon them if they would not obey God. "Cursed shalt thou be in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field, cursed shall be thy basket and store, the fruit of thy body and of thy land, the increase of thy kine and the flocks of thy sheep; cursed when thou comest in and when thou goest out; the Lord shall send cursing, vexation, and rebuke in all thou settest thine hand to do because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me." "The Lord shall smite thee with madness and blindness, and astonishment of heart, and thou shalt grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways, and thou shalt only be oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall serve thee."

There is no one word in our language that will convey to our minds so perfectly the idea of this as the word torment. I need not enlarge upon this painful narrative. The predictions of the prophets, and the narrative of the fulfillment of God's word by Josephus and others, during eighteen centuries, is familiar to all. It is a story of torment. In this torment the rich man wishes to have some relief, and hence he calls to Abraham, his father, to afford him this relief. "Send Lazarus," he cries, "that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue." Now, I ask, what was the first cause of all this suffering? A lack of faith in Christ as the Messiah. What will give relief to the rich man in his suffering? Any testimony, calculated in itself to remove this unbelief. Now notice Abraham's answer: "Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed." This "gulf" I understand to be unbelief, which will remain to them as a nation as long as time continues. Some, here and there one, will turn and be grafted into Christ by faith, but the Jews, as a nation, are "fixed" in their unbelief, and hence the separating "gulf" remains.

But who are the "five brethren?" I believe them to be the ten lost tribes, who were carried into captivity about seven hundred and twenty-one years before Christ, and who are "lost" unto this day. They took with them the Book of the Law; hence, Abraham says, "They have Moses and the prophets"—the only testimony that was given concerning the Messiah; and if they would not believe the testimony contained in "Moses and the prophets," they would not believe one though he "arose from the dead."

GEO. W. HURD.

Preachers' Meeting Notes.

Several weeks ago Rev. D. Dorchester read an essay on the state of the dead at the Mehodist Preachers' meeting in Boston. I heard it. Its object was to disprove the doctrine of the intermediate state as held by some in the M. E. church. He endeavored to show that hades, paradise and heaven were identical, to do away with any opposing argument based upon the fact of the dead being spoken of as going to hades or Abraham's bosom or paradise. He said an objection might be based upon Savior's words to Mary. "I have not yet ascended." This he disposed of with these words, no more and no less: "This evidently refers to the material body of Jesus, and therefore can have no bearing upon the question in hand."

He argued that "the materialistic notions of hades must be discarded, because we are considering a state of pure spirit existence; an immaterial existence; a state of being absolutely void of matter. The spirit therefore cannot have location assigned it in a materialistic hades such as the Jews conceived of. It cannot be confined by material bounds."

The essay, which consumed about an hour and a quarter in its delivery, was then discussed, and was the topic of discussion for several successive Mondays. Rev. C. N. Smith was the first to open the debate for the other side and as between themselves, he got the best of the argument in disproving the doctrines of rewards at death. He argued that when Christ spoke of hades, as he did not attach any new interpretations to the term, he must be understood as using it with the same signification the Jews did, and, said he, they did not regard it as heaven, but as a place of detention. In a word, the Savior used the term and was to be understood as endorsing their views of it. I made bold to ask him if he thought hades was in the interior of the earth, and he said he did not. "But," said I, "the Jews so regarded it, and you say Christ endorsed their opinions, and it follows from that, that it must be in the earth." I think I made a point, and some of those on the other side of the question saw it, too; but he simply replied, "Of course it is'nt reasonable to think Christ endorsed that particular point, but their views generally."

He replied to Mr. D.'s assertion that an immaterial spirit could not be confined within material bounds, by saying, "An immaterial spirit can be thus confined. Have I not a spirit within my material body? and isn't it confined there for the present? and if it can be thus bounded now, can it not be confined within material limits in a future state?" As between themselves, I thought his point a good one.

Another speaker, Mr. McKeown, who agreed with the essayist, endeavored to prove that hades is a generic term including heaven, Abraham's bosom, paradise and hell [gehenna], therefore when the dead are spoken of as being in hades it is no evidence that they are not in heaven or hell [gehenna].

To this an objection was raised by one of the preachers, to this effect: "John says, Rev. 20, that hades was cast into a lake of fire. This can be nothing but a complete and literal destruction; therefore if heaven be in hades, my brother's heaven will be destroyed." I thought the point a good one, but seeing a chance to make another, I was permitted to say that I agreed with the brother in thinking the destruction to be literal and complete; and asked if it did not follow that all that was contained in hades would experience this destruction, and as the wicked, according to his showing, were in hades, would they not, therefore be literally and completely destroyed? He said in reply, "Not at all, for this is a destruction of hades after its occupants have left it!!"

During his argument in favor of "immediate blessedness," Mr. McKeown appealed to the faith of the Methodists as expressed in their hymns, and also to the dying testimonies of Christians. After he had quoted from quite a number, a gentleman present arose and asked if the speaker would quote some of the testimonies of some of the Old Testament saints—Job, David, Hezekiah, etc., He declined doing so, saying his object was to show the belief of the Methodist church on that point!

In a subsequent argument, Mr. Smith referred to the Greek word abussos which occurs in Rom. 10: 7—"Who shall descend into the deep," and said this did not, and could not refer to the grave simply, nor to the simple idea of the state of death; but that it meant the place of departed spirits. I think however, that Paul sufficiently explains his own meaning, "Who shall descend into the deep [abussos]?" that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.

The preachers present I should say were about equally divided in sentiment. The discussions were conducted with great earnestness, but always with a good spirit. Being a believer in neither of the views represented there, the discussion was peculiarly interesting to me.

The weekly visit of THE TIMES, I hail with great pleasure. I like it in all its parts, but particularly its editorial columns. The "talks" you have occasionly had with the "press" have been very interesting to me, and I hope you may soon have leisure for another one. REPORTER.

—Concerning the above discussion Zion's Herald remarks:

The order of the day (the discussion of the Intermediate State), was taken up. Brother Cox said that Scripture should be interpreted by the "analogy of faith," rather than by verbal criticism. The best evangelical theology teaches that saints go to heaven at death. The moral influence of the doctrine of an intermediate place is bad, because the idea of purgatory is derivable from it, and men will not improve the present if there is hope in the future. The general tenor of Scripture does not disclose an intermediate place. Jesus is in heaven, and Paul wished to be with him.

Br. McKeown, having commenced a reply to Br. C. N. Smith, a week ago, finished it now. That Jesus adopted the Jewish view, is an assumption; also, that the Jewish view accords with the negative of this question. Jesus corrected Jewish ideas instead of adopting them. He invested old words with new meanings. The Jewish idea involved either the transmigration of souls, or the non-resurrection of the wicked. What Jesus taught of paradise should be interpreted by the statements of the apostles, rather than by Jewish standards. He closed by criticising Br. Smith's exegesis of several Scriptures.

Dr. Newhall had enjoyed the discussion. There is less certainty in the Scriptures than many think. The crowning hour is dwelt upon, and the intermediate state receives but little notice. Philosophy makes the darkness visible. The crowning hour is at the resurrection, yet virtually at death. The New Testament Scriptures teach the separate state of spirits. The soul also enjoys or suffers, while in the separate state. This is about all that Scripture teaches. The apostles spoke as if the grand consummation was nigh. This the Church of the present day has partially lost sight of. We cannot conceive of place or time in connection with pure spirit.

Playing Croquet.

I believe it a duty solemnly and strictly enjoined upon me to repudiate and use my utmost influence against all evil. Paul says, "Shun the very appearance of evil." And do all that is in my power for the good of my blessed Master's church and the glorifying of my heavenly Father. I trust I am one seeking earnestly for the promised blessing. Therefore, in a kind, courteous, and charitable spirit, I differ from the article found in the last number of the ADVENT TIMES, written by a good sister on the above subject. In viewing objects from different stand-points, of course we behold them in different aspects, and thus we arrive at different conclusions concerning them. My sister looks upon croquet playing and similar games of amusements as very conducive to physical health. Of course, exercise of any kind, if moderately taken, is good for our health, and much better when the mind acts voluntarily from its own volition. But it does not necessarily follow that every thing that tends to the health of the body is right. God has given us bodies, and undoubtedly they require exercise in order to growth and development.

But must we exercise them in something that is unholy? We have vocal organs to speak with: would it be right to exercise them in swearing? We could exercise our vocal organs in misrepresenting and slandering our brethren in Christ, and in a thousand other ways, and yet it would all be sinful. And so with the whole body. Every faculty given us by our Creator, physical or mental, was intended for noble purposes, and it is infatuation in us to say it is not wrong to do so and so, or God would not have given us the faculty.

I claim that these games are sinful for the following reasons: First, because Christ commands us to "pray always." Paul says, "Be instant in prayer," etc., etc. He also commanded Titus to warn the brethren to live soberly and righteously, looking for the appearing of our blessed Lord.

Where is time found for croquet playing if we have the spirit of prayer flowing from us continually, with sobriety, especially while the end is so near.

Second, because their tendency is continually to worse and worse evil. I speak from real experience in my own case. I have spent some time in these amusements, and I have been injured spiritually, but by the grace of God I never will do so again.

Who are the best church members? Those who attend and frequent the ball room, croquet games, etc., or those who do not? I deem it entirely useless for me to say more about the tendency of these practices, for all with much of any experience know they are demoralizing.

Third, we must follow in our Master's footsteps. Will our dear sister show one instance where our divine Master engaged in any such games or miscalled innocent amusements, or even encouraged them? Please give chapter and verse.

I will give a small sketch of our Saviour's life as found in an ancient tradition: "He rebukes with majesty, counsels with mildness, and invites with most tender and persuasive language. His whole address, whether in word or deed, being elegant, and brave, and characteristic of so exalted a being. No man has seen him laugh, but the whole world has frequently beheld him weep; and so persuasive are his tears, that the multitude cannot withhold theirs from joining in sympathy with him."

Fourth, because it does not glorify our Creator. We can find abundance of useful recreation without condescending to demoralizing games. If the minister's mind becomes overtasked from much study, let him sing a song, if he can. If he need more exercise, let him take a Western tour, like our good old Brother Himes, through Arkansas, walking for miles in the wilderness. We want a living, laboring ministry, used to hardship. I was truly pained at seeing an article in favor of the games in the ADVENT TIMES. We see so much of it in our neighbor churches that it ought to disgust us. Believing as we do in the personal and speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, we ought to put away all such, and gird up the loins of our minds, and be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought to us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. In conclusion I would say, I hope this article may be received in the same spirit in which it is given.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us awake to our duties and obligations. Can we not give a cup of cold water or a word of encouragement to some poor wanderer? Can we not sow broadcast more of the precious truth? The Lord preserve us from all evil and finally accept of us in his blessed kingdom, is my prayer.

NELLIE PORTER.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 29, 1872.

'WE must put our fut on it,' said an immaterialist preacher, in Minnesota, of Adventism, in a certain town. They tried it, and about one-third of the church came out as Adventists, a chapel was built, and the society flourishes to this day. We trust our opposers will 'put their fut' on us some more.

MAGISTERIAL tone and 'contemptuous allusions to opponents,' are Prof. Bartlett's 'besetting sins,' says the Advance. It any doubt it, let them read his Life and Death Eternal, especially the page where he tells why he uses the term 'annihilation.' We commend to the Professor Dr. Lamson's advice to Clarke, which we published last week.

THOSE who are perplexed concerning political matters will do well to heed Whitfield's advice to a politician, and carefully consider verse 10 of 1 Peter, chapter 1. None need be disappointed who spend their time in making sure this election. Their's will be an enduring place in the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

EXTREMES meet. Henry M. Cowles, in an essay upon 'the man of sin,' published in the Bibliotheca Sacra, rejects that idea that he ('the man of sin,' not Mr. C.,) is the papacy, and adopts the extreme Futurest Millenarium view of a future, personal anti-Christ, a man who heads the great post millennial apostasy. Oh! the vagarics spiritualizing literalists, and literalizing spiritualizers.

A WRITER in the Advent Herald dares say that Eld. Fassett has boldly proclaimed, that 'It is a slander on the character of God to say that he will eternally punish the wicked.' If by this the writer means to affirm that Br. Fassett does not believe in 'eternal punishment,' we presume to say that he is so blinded by prejudice as to be incapable of fairly stating an opponent's position. Br. Fassett teaches plainly 'eternal punishment.'

OF Prof. Owen, the eminent comparative anatomist, the Independent says: 'He seems also to assert his faith in a future life; but yet he takes what is called the materialistic view of the human soul, denying that it is anything more than the sum of brain impressions. He believes that "the same cause which has endowed this world with power convertible into magnetic, electric," and other forms of force has also added the power of its conversion into vital force.'

A CONTRIBUTOR to the Independent attacks Mormonism with considerable vigor, assailing the Mormon views of God and heaven as the root and source of all that is peculiar to Mormonism. The good brother, no doubt, imagines he is laying his ax at the root of this tree, but he is mistaken. The tap-root of Mormonism is immaterialism. The whole system hangs upon the question whether man is conscious in death; for it is claimed to be a revelation given through a dead man. Those who believe that the dead 'know not anything' need go into no detailed examination of the scheme; they see that Mormonism rests upon a falsehood, a direct contradiction of Holy Scripture and hence cannot be true.

WE can proclaim the great message due this generation in such a sour, pugilistic, braggadocio spirit, as to repel a certain class of candid men, and spoil their inclinations to investigate.

So, truly enough, says an Advent writer in a recent article. And yet, the same author, in close juxtaposition, under the heading of 'a Fruitless Dodge,' says:

> The sickly supposition that ordinary death is the real judgment execution, and that a subsequent judgment will be held to investigate and decide that sinners have already been executed, is too shallow a speculation to blind the eyes even of unwary novices. The efforts to dodge the force, etc., etc.

Let us all mend our faults; and let none become so anxious concerning those of others as to forget their own.

A LATE writer intimates that the Mormon idea that the future heaven of God's people is to be on this earth, is sensual and degrading in itself. 'Their heaven is a material one.' Very well, suppose it is, what then? The Spiritist's heaven is not 'material,' is it therefore spiritual, and holy in its conception? Far from it. There is as much sensuality and animalism in many notions of an immaterial Paradise as the wildest fanatic ever imagined of a more substantial heaven. When one cannot conceive of the material without at the same time associating sin with it; when one cannot think of sinlessness and purity without discarding all notions of anything substantial, or making the attempt to grasp the idea of something material, proves, we say, how poorly they have learned the lesson of creation: for God saw all that he made, and pronounced it 'good.' Nothing that God has made is bad in itself.

10,000 SUBSCRIBERS.

Why not? At our first meeting eight years ago in Buchanan who would have believed the story had the growth of these years been predicted? Have we done so well that we can afford to settle down upon our lees, idle and contented? Have we accomplished so much that we need 'pull long, and strong and all together' no more? Surely not!

Why not, then, every man and every woman, and every child of us take hold of the work of raising the paying subscription list of THE TIMES to TEN THOUSAND NAMES. It can be done, we have no doubt of it. It can be done on the same principle by which Jerusalem was rebuilt. "The people had a mind to work." What is your mind, brother, sister? Is it to work?

Most papers nowadays are offering premiums. We cannot afford to do so. When we can afford to spend from 25 cents to a dollar in premiums, we will make the premium universal, by reducing the rate of subscription just that much, making a cheaper paper; or, what would be better, by enlarging and improving the paper to that amount. So far, all the profits of subscription, and more too, have been expended in sending THE TIMES to the poor, and unto missionary fields.

We need ten thousand subscribers! Next to the Gospel ministry the press is the effective preacher of the word. We are more than ever convinced of this since pressing our scheme of "trial three months subscriptions" to THE TIMES. Large numbers have been converted by the means, while in other cases seed has been sown that only needs watering and cultivation to bring forth fruit. Not all the seed falls on good ground; but that is no reason for not sowing. We should sow bountifully—expecting to loose some by the wayside, and some in the thorns, and some in the shallow soil: the fruit from the good ground bountifully repays all the outlay.

How is it to be done? First, by personal effort. Press men to subscribe for and read the paper. Call their attention to it. If they can't pay down and you know they are good advance the money for them. Try! That is the only way to succeed. And don't give up without trial.

Give the paper to some one for three or six months or a year. Get it into families, and into the hands of thoughtful men and women. Many pay for from two to five or more copies a year; and thus they preach the word, sometimes with surprising effect.

Call attention to the paper by lending your own copy, when read, or sending it to some friend by mail; and when an interest is once awakened, follow it up.

We preachers can do much in this direction. They have better opportunities than any others. Help the paper, and the paper will help you. Make it a business to know whether every family in your field of labor has a paper, and whether they pay for it.

We trust our friends East will help us. Three thousand or more copies of the Crisis are taken west of New York. We wish it were six thousand. Surely the East can afford to take as many copies of our Western paper in return. It would be a vast help for us, for which we should be indeed grateful.

Let us all go to work as never before. The aggregate of the personal efforts of nearly five thousand families for a few months would effect results, by God's blessing, surprising to us all. Let us compel the world to believe that we are a live people, about our Masters business!

OUR ANNUAL MEETING.

For some reason, undoubtedly a good one, the minutes of the late meeting of the Association have not yet reached this office. Most of our readers will be looking for them with interest; and their disappointment may be somewhat allayed by a brief sketch of the proceedings and the results reached.

The chief feature of interest was the attempt to remove those who have managed the affairs of the Association and its paper from their position, and place the administration of its affairs in other hands. That such an effort was to be made seems to have been widely known, and was, to some extent, anticipated by us. But not until after the meeting commenced did we know that our personal friends had been approached by outsiders and urged to attend the meeting to vote us out.

As might have been expected, the case was pretty thoroughly canvassed, both in our public meetings and in private gatherings, until the decisive point of election of officers for the ensuing year was reached, and we confess the result somewhat surprised us; the strength of the opposition was far less than what we had supposed.

We mention this matter merely as a narration of facts. Some of the brethren who wished for a change are among our best brethren; they did what they believed was for the best; they still love us, and we shall continue to love them. A course of mutual forbearance and Christian kindness will lead to a better understanding and bring us all together again. And it is safe to remark here that if some of the labor expended in the cultivation of union with those who heartily despise both us and our faith, were spent in harmonizing our own selves; if the mantle of Christian love, so readily extended to those not of us, were broad enough to enclose our own brethren and sisters, we might again see in the West that glorious unity that was never marred until elements not in sympathy with us entered into our councils.

The Nominating Committee found their task a difficult one, and their conference resulted in a compromise that satisfied neither themselves nor a single member of the Association; and it was speedily apparent that a large majority favored the re-election of the old Board of Officers. Some of these were chosen unanimously; the opposition being upon the offices of Vice-President, Business Agent, Treasurer, Auditor, and the Editor of THE TIMES. The list of officers chosen for the ensuing year will be found at the head of the first column upon the last page of this paper.

The Treasurer, Br. Ambrose W. Tucker, formerly of Minnesota, a special friend of Br. Collins and a staunch Adventist, has made his home at Norwood Park, and will give his personal attention to the business of the Association. Br. Collins intends to remove here this fall or in the spring, and will furnish us all the assistance he can.

Some thought that one person should not hold the position of both Business Agent and Editor; but the chief objection—indeed the only real one—was that opposers would take advantage of it, as an occasion for finding fault. But there were other considerations, financial and prudential, which quite overbalanced this objection. Another year the change may be advisable. Time will tell.

The subject of a change in the basis of membership, the first question that led to any differences of opinion amongst us in the West, was pretty thoroughly canvassed and will no doubt be easily settled wherever a spirit of concession and conciliation, free from personal considerations, shall animate our counsels. But so long as any insist obstinately upon any particular plan, which cannot be adopted unanimously, the best thing we can do is to remain as we are. The present system worked better than any ever introduced among the Adventists, until it was tampered with. An old adage says we should "leave well enough alone." We know of but one better scheme. Of that we may speak hereafter.

Meanwhile the present officers accept their position in no spirit of exultation. They accept the responsibility as a burden to be borne manfully and Christianly; and one and all, President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Auditor, Business Agent and Publishing Committee, we join in asking the hearty co-operation of every friend of the Advent cause who desires its progress in the great field we are called upon to occupy. We ask your prayers, your sympathies, your personal efforts, your material aid. We need your assistance, and we need it now. Shall we have it? Let the response come in pledges, in new subscribers, and in donations to our famishing Tract Fund. Bring all the tithes into the store house. Let us prove our God, and blessings without stint shall be ours: he will add to our numbers and increase our usefulness on every hand.

P. S. The Secretary's "minutes" received since the above remarks were in type, will appear next week.

Editor's Drawer.

In this department we shall consider such questions as may be answered briefly and suggestively. Topics requiring elaborate examination, or extended discussion may not be entertained.

How can 1 Cor. 15: 24, be harmonized with the idea of Christ's reigning through all eternity as King of kings? V. E.

Kingdom is used in 1 Cor. 15: 24, in the same sense as in some of the parables, referring to the world in its present condition. Christ now stands between the world and its judgment as a Daysman or Mediator. When he leaves this position he will deliver up the world to judgment. All things that offend shall be gathered out of it, and then will commence that kingdom of which there shall be 'no end.' (Dan. 7: 13, 14; Lk. 1: 33.) This will not be given up. Its duration is not an indefinite aion or age, but is expressed to be eternal in the strongest terms of which language is capable: it will have 'no end.'

Please give us an exposition of Rev. 8: 29, 30. M. E. O.

These two verses are advanced as proof of the proposition in v. 28, that 'all things work together for good to those who love God.' The foreknowledge, the predestination, the calling, justification and glorification, (Why was sanctification omitted?) are all considered as existing in the plan of God. A portion of this plan has been worked out, as all can see. God's 'own son' has been delivered for our offences. (v. 32.) Who, then, can doubt that the whole of the divine scheme will be accomplished? If he withheld not his Son, will he withhold anything else? Certainly not. We may, therefore, conclude that all things work together for our good, and that the final glorification is as sure as any of the blessings we have received and enjoyed can be. We do not think this passage teaches predestination of individuals. It might be so understood were it the only determining testimony upon the point. But it is modified by the Scriptures. Our 'election' is in Christ; it is our privilege to accept the call, and thus be remembered with 'the elect' in him, and then, by due diligence, 'make our calling and election sure.' (2 Pet. 1: 10.) We may fail and fall; but God's plans know no failure. 'Tribulation, distress, famine, persecution, nakedness, peril, or the sword' are no proof that all is not working well, or for good to the Christian. These, nor anything else can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus. (See context to end of chapter.)

Does not Jude 14 and 15, including,—'The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his SAINTS,' prove that the saints go to heaven when they die? Comp. 1 Thes. 3: 13, and Col. 1: 12. W. P. B.

Not a few blunders in theology have grown out of a neglect to mark Scriptural distinctions in the use of terms. Many read these passages and jump at the conclusion that saints necessarily means the people of God. Saints means sanctified or holy beings; they may be human, or of other orders of intelligences. Angels are called saints in Job 15: 15; Dan. 8: 13. In Deut. 33: 2, it is said the Lord 'came with ten thousand of his saints.' In Ps. 68: 17, these are explained to be angels. By comparing Mat. 26: 27; 25: 31; Mk. 8: 38; Lk. 9: 16; 2 Thes. 1: 7; Heb. 12: 22; Rev. 3: 5, it will be seen that they, and not disrobed human spirits, are the beings who accompany the Savior in his second advent. Hence we conclude the 'saints' of 1 Thes. 3: 13 and Jude 14, are angels. In the latter case there can be no mistake; for they accompany Christ to execute judgment—the work of the angels. (Mat. 13: 41.)

'The inheritance of the saints in light,' (Col. 1: 12,) is the new earth. (Rev. 21). We are here 'made meet' or ready for it; we shall receive it in the restitution of all things; not at death. Death is our enemy, and gives us nothing, unless, indeed, it be a boon to some of us.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. S. K. Gibson has been holding meetings in Hamburg, Iowa. Two were baptised and a church of seven members was organized. Br. Hamilton, and other brethren are greatly encouraged.——The Wayne Co. (N. Y.) tent was pitched at Pineville, in that State. Seventeen were baptised on Sunday two weeks, and a church of thirty-two members was organized. The tent is now at Sodus Ridge, Brn. Miles and Wells preaching.——At its last session the Rhode Island Conference voted to ordain its women preachers. Sr. Ellen Crumb was ordained.——Br. H. B. Sevey writes the Lord is reviving his work in Belgrade and Rome, Maine. Nine have been baptised.——A few brethren and sisters in Washington, D. C., meet every Lord's day and one evening in the week for worship. They earnestly long for a preacher to visit them.——We are pained to learn that Sr. Mary A. Seymour is very sick at her home, with Typhoid Fever, and fears are entertained that she will not live. Remember her and the family kindly in your prayers.

A Voyage to England.

FROM OUR ENGLISH CORRESPONDENT.

MR. EDITOR:—You will be expecting to hear from your English correspondent and of his voyage home. The experiences will be somewhat more personal than I should care to make them under other circumstances; but in my present situation the peregrinations of a single individual is allowable, and often proves of some interest at least; and I think the exciting and terrible grandeur which I have seen within the last fortnight cannot fail to engage the minds of your readers.

Leaving New York on the 14th of last month we took our course for the the Irish shores; but as I have narrated the early part of my experience in your New England contemporary, the Crisis, and as many of your readers are also subscribers to that paper, I shall try, as far as possible, to carry on the story in full from the end of the other, thus avoiding a repetition of the same part of the tale.

Our ship was the famous Anglia, which for three years has made many successful and quick voyages between Scotland and the United States, and vice versa. She is an iron plated vessel of very strong make, built by Henderson & Handyside, expressly for ocean service. She was launched from her docks on the Clyde in the year 1869, and since then has done the company good service. She is capable of great strain, and adapted with the other vessels of the Anchor line to stand heavy seas and gales, and behaves well in cases of storm, mounting the sea-crests with the ease of a duck. This we have proved to our perfect satisfaction: for we have been tested in one of the terrors of the ocean—the dreaded cyclone. For about four days we were pelted by rain-drops, washed by sea-waves, and blown by the winds of heaven; but he whose mercy endureth forever, remembered us and brought us out of our distresses into brighter scenes, clearer weather, and calmer water on our homeward way toward our desired haven. How did my soul then praise the Lord for all his mercy and for his wonderful works to us, the children of men.

But ever in the storm my heart was kept in peaceful repose in our Savior's love, according to that precious promise: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." I thought frequently on the words of the Psalmist: "What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee," and I was very graciously enabled to act on them, saying, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil." Then, in those days, I felt that the Lord who was my trust and song had become my salvation, so that though death seemed to come so near as to blow his icy breath over the warm and gushing geysers of my heart, yet I was "quiet from the fear of evil." For "just over there," in the next conscious moment after the gargle and suffocation of drowning I should be shooting up out of the sea, deathless, luminous, full of joy, in the cherished image of the Savior, when the sea shall give up the dead that are in them. Thus Jesus stood by me. Thus the hope of life revived me. Thus the Father drew a little nearer, that I might boldly say, "The Lord is my helper!"

We were kept down in the cabin, and among the rest of the engagements which employed my time, I wrote three unpretentious poems, one of which I venture to inscribe:

Lord of the main, how terror-grand
  Art thou in thy majestic waves!
And hardy and insane the man
  Who recklessly thine anger braves.

Oh! what are we in this dread hour?
  Who with thy billows could contend?
Show mercy Lord, and by thy power
  From these and every harm defend.

And as we roll upon the deep,
  May care and fear be rolled on thee;
Be every load by Jesus borne,
  Who bore our sins upon the tree.

So glad are we in Christ to-day—
  Glad, having peace with such a power
This majesty is on our side,—
  Well may our stoutest freemen cower.

Lord Jesus in thine arms of love,
  We sweetly and serenely lie;
Safe for the city built above,—
  Safe if we live, or if we die.

But though I thus wrote, I did not expect death; for the assurance was so strong in my heart—indeed I may say the witness of the Spirit—that I could exultingly say, "I shall not die, but live, and declare the wonderful works of the Lord." And this faith was further confirmed to be by reading the account of Jesus and the disciples on the sea of Galilee. He had told them to go over in the ship to the other side. Obedient to this command they launched out and steered for the opposite boundary of the sea. They were, when in the midst of the water, opposed by the storm. High rose the waves; madly howled the winds; and the little bark seemed strained in all her timbers. But she might not go to pieces. That vessel could not be swamped. The disciples could not be drowned. Jesus had ordered them to the other side; and to that side they must go, spite of all the elements of the world, or the furies of the air. Their Master was strong to enable them to obey his voice. And it seemed to me that I had left the States to go to England at the behest of the Savior, and he could not fail to give the power, where he had given the command and the will. So God helped and strengthened.

The second Sunday we spent on board was observed as the first, with this difference, that in the afternoon I preached to the steerage passengers and sailors as well as to the cabin passengers. The texts were from Ps. 86: 5. "Thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee;" with Luke 24: 47, to the saloon passengers; and at half past one to the steerage passengers and crew from John 3: 16: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Shall I attempt a description of the steerage services. It was held in the fore-steerage. The place was certainly not of the most choice description. On either side of me were two or three sleeping rooms. They had no doors, so I could see in. These rooms contained compartments made for the third class passengers. Steerage passengers have to provide their own beds, which are mostly of straw in a plain ticking. The little room in which we were assembled may have been twelve or fourteen feet square. Stools were placed round the walls for the congregation, and a chair was set for me on the top of a hold, which was covered with a hatch. On this hatch was spread a piece of sail cloth, which served very nicely for kneeling on. The company were certainly of the right kind—such as Jesus would have to preach to. They were sons of toil, probably honest hearted, with knotted knuckles, calloused hands, brawny wrists, sun-browned faces, who evidently earned their bread by the sweat of their brow. We commenced with the 13th Psalm in the Scotch paraphrase, and sang some of its stanzas, then we knelt down and prayed and reached heaven, then we read a portion of the record of the word of God, sang again, and heard of the love of God. My heart laid hold on these sinewy men, and I felt a brother's feeling and a Savior's love, as I yearned over them and told them "the old, old story." Eyes were fixed, attention was arrested, and I saw stray glistening tears that had left the fountain of some hearts to sparkle in the eye, as they heard of God's love to them in the Lord Jesus Christ. Meeting over, I invited any to speak with me further on the consolation of heaven, while I was on the ship.

The sail of about four days brought us in sight of Ireland. It certainly was very refreshing to see Green Erin, even though it was through an impeding fog. We saw the ruins of the celebrated pile called Green Castle. Its history may be known to your readers. It was taken in the time of Cromwell, the protector, and there is now a fort built beside it, garrisoned by British troops.

On Friday evening we reached the wharf of the Anchor line, and Saturday morning, in a drenching rain, after passing the custom house officers, we were landed. The rest is the old tale. Made haste to the railway depot, where I met Br. White, of New Bedford, Mass., just leaving for the steamship Europa, on his way back to America. Our greeting was brief but cordial. A day and a half afterwards I reached home, just as "the church in our house" were finishing their morning meeting.

I must say one word more for the Anchor line before closing. Its provisions are good and abundant; its sleeping accommodations are neat, comfortable, and well attended to by stewards; its ships are strong and sea-worthy; its officers are gentlemanly, courteous, and social; and to any reader of THE TIMES who contemplates a passage to Europe, I can freely recommend it as a good route of travel.

But more of interest will come in my next.
W. K.

From Florida.

After suffering with the asthma three or four weeks at home, in Rochester, N. Y., in order to fill my appointments, I started from home Oct. 4, and came in steamer to Savannah, Ga., and had a very pleasant trip; and from Savannah to "No. 7," on the Macon and Brunswick R. R., arriving there the 9th, at midnight. On the 11th I commenced a three days' meeting, under an arbor the brethren had built for that purpose. The meeting continued to increase till Sunday. Although not wholly recovered from my sickness, I preached nine discourses, and the meeting was a success; not one to oppose, but all appeared to be very much interested. One man who had preached for the Methodists, told me that the next sermon he preached would be an Advent sermon, and I believe he meant just what he said. Br. James Keen, from near Lake City, who had been a Missionary Baptist preacher, who received the Advent faith the first year I preached there, has been at "No. 7," preaching this last summer, and had stirred up the people so they wanted me to come and preach to them. I left them with an invitation to come again if I could.

What a field there is for a healthy, well-instructed, faithful Advent preacher to occupy in Georgia! I had an invitation to go to other places, but was not able now. I have sent appointments ahead up on the Suwanee, and and at Stark and Lake, Butler and Providence, in Florida, trusting in the Lord that he will give me strength when the time comes to fill them.

I find, by scattering tracts in new fields, and getting a few to take our Advent papers, they will not rest till they have more preaching if they can get it; for it spoils them for relishing any other preaching. But how few preachers there are to answer their calls; for it is hard for a preacher to earn a living for himself and family, and preach all the time, too.

Brn. Green, of Olustee Fla., and Brs. Keen and Davis, and Mattox, of Ga., are doing what they can to spread the truth of the Bible as we hold it. A man by the name of Peacock, is trying to preach according to his limited knowledge of the faith, but is opposed on the ground of not having license from the Advent body. We feel the need of a conference here in the South, very much, so we can act together.

Yours, waiting for redemption,
P. A. SMITH.

Encouragement to Labor.

"The humble shall hear thereof and be glad. Oh! magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together." And further on in the narrative, the Psalmist says: "This poor man cried and the Lord heard him and saved him out of all his troubles." If the sweet singer of Israel would thus call upon others to rejoice with him, because "one man had been saved out of all his troubles," surely I may send forth the blessed news to the waiting ones scattered abroad, that the Lord has again, in his great mercy, visited the Volga church by the influence of his Holy Spirit, in blessing the word spoken by our beloved brother and faithful laborer, Dr. N. Field, who, for one whole week, preached the word with manifest tokens of the divine favor. Also, Dr. C. H. Cass came in near the close of the meeting and comforted us with one precious sermon on the glories of the new earth. We feasted in the sanctuary day by day, giving ample opportunity in our morning meetings for all the tithes to be brought into the Lord's storehouse, and, as a happy result, according to his word, he poured many rich blessings upon us, which we were glad to receive.

Every evening witnessed a growing interest to hear the blessed Bible truths that fell from our brother's lips, and almost every day and evening brought fruit in addition to the church until fourteen happy souls united with us, thereby giving us strength in contending for the "faith once delivered to the saints." And among the welcome number, I rejoice to tell the friends who know them, that my parents were among the first to present themselves as lovers of our Savior's glorious coming. They have, for many long years, been members of the Christian church, but for months past have been investigating Bible truth, as we hold it; and, to use his own language, "none who will do this with unprejudiced mind, can fail to see the light of these blessed truths, so apparent in the sacred page."

Most of our new members are heads of families, and will, we trust, exert a high and holy influence in the neighborhood. Dr. Field has been signally successful in this neighborhood, but never had such a wide-spreading influence as now. The people came for miles, and gave profound attention to the soul-stirring truths that have been ignored or passed over in silence by the teachers of modern theology; and the last evening the crowd was immense; extra seats were furnished, and still they came until scores stood outdoors, unable to find a place within. It seemed a matter of regret that the meeting must close under such circumstances, when the interest was manifestly increasing; but God's faithful laborers, in the language of Jesus, must visit other peoples, "for therefore are they sent." Thus our very interesting meeting closed after a week of faithful labor, in which doubtless, scores have been convinced of the truth as we hold it, and prejudice has given way to the light of the gospel as recorded by apostles and prophets; and we who have long labored amid superstition and error, are now made to rejoice that God has prospered the work of our hands. Still, pray for us, that many more may be given to us in the ties of Christian fellowship.

MARY A. TIBBETS.

Volga, Ind.

IF you do not wish a man to do a thing, you had better get him to talk about it; for the more men talk the more likely they are to do nothing else. —Carlyle.

The Times.

AT HOME.

‒ ‒ ‒ Early last evening there was a magnificent auroral display, which first appeared in the north, and gradually advanced until it enveloped the whole sky from west to east. The color was of a deep crimson. The spectacle attracted thousands to the streets.—New York, Oct. 15.

‒ ‒ ‒ Robert Dale Owen suggests that the word translated "year," in our version of the Bible, means but a month, so that Methuselah, instead of 969, was but 80 years old. Thereupon, Edwin P. Whipple replies (in the Boston Globe) that this theory makes Shem a father at the tender age of 8 years, and Nahor a grandfather twenty-nine months from his birth. Mr. Owen will probably withdraw his suggestion.

‒ ‒ ‒ The Waterford, N. Y., bank was plundered Monday night by nine men. The cashier lived with his family in the rear of the bank, in the same building. The burglars broke into the house, capturing all the family, binding them and preventing their giving an alarm in any way. The cashier was then led into the bank, and by persuasion of a revolver held to his temple with threats that his brains would be blown out if he hesitated, induced to open the safes, which were then rifled of every thing of value. The loss is heavy and there is no clue to the discovery of the robbers as yet.

‒ ‒ ‒ The bitter alternative to which the French inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine have been forced to submit furnishes one of the most sorrowful phrases of history. They have been forced to forswear their French nativity and become German citizens, or be exiled from their native hills and valleys and the homes of their ancestors. Within the past few months six or seven thousand have landed in New York City alone. Two hundred families are reported as about to settle in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va. Many of them will settle in Missouri. They are mostly poor if not actually destitute of means.

‒ ‒ ‒ We find in one of our most respectable papers a column and a half devoted to the fall fashions for gentlemen's clothing! a full description of the styles of pantaloons and coats for morning and evening, directions as to what kind of cravat to wear in the street and in the house, descriptions of "half dress," "dress" and "business" suits, width of plaits in the shirt bosom, exact shape of collar, and a hundred such silly things! Are we men becoming fools, or fops, or both? Have we nothing better to do than to fritter away time, brains and money on such miserable matters? We believe in dressing well and in good taste, but we do not desire that reputation should be determined by style of coat-tail, or color of neck-tie.—Watchman and Reflector.

‒ ‒ ‒ The utter heartlessness of the violent political press is well illustrated in the death of Mr. Seward. During his lifetime, and especially during the later years, he was the subject of much personal abuse and misrepresentation by the partisan press; with some of the papers no epithets too bad could be applied to him; his motives were assailed and his acts condemned. But immediately upon his death the same papers are full of his praise, ascribe to him the loftiest patriotism and the noblest deeds. But if true now, why not when he was living? Did death so change him, or do his former villifiers speak their honest sentiments? The personal abuse now so common is a disgrace to our national journalism; private characters are assailed in the most shameless manner, and reputations are ruined by the coolest and most deliberate and heartless processes, all that party ends may be subserved. And yet when these abused men die, the very papers that have been busy in slander will trumpet forth their praise. —Ib.

‒ ‒ ‒ The disease which has made such a havoc among horses in Canada and Western New York has also made its appearance as far east as Boston. In Buffalo the omnibuses have stopped running altogether, and in Rochester the street railway companies have been forced to cease business. Of the extent of the malady in Boston we are not informed. The contagious nature of the disease and the rapidity with which it has spread give it an alarming character. At Detroit the importation of Canadian horses has been stopped. The distemper does not appear to be necessarily fatal, but, being imperfectly understood, hundreds of animals have died that might have been saved, it is thought, by proper treatment. The afflicted cities are having some practical instruction as to the value of the horse to mankind, which, perhaps, can only be appreciated through the experience of deprivation. How far the contagion will spread remains to be seen. In New York city every precaution is being taken.

—Since the above was in type this epidemic among horses has spread all over the East. At last accounts it was just invading Nova Scotia. It has made little progress west of Buffalo. In New York nearly every horse is disabled; and some firms talk of using oxen. Nearly all work and travel by teams is suspended, and the losses to business men will doubtless foot up hundreds of thousands of dollars. So far the disease has not proved particularly fatal; but few of the animals have died. It seems to be most violent in rainy or foggy weather. Probably the 'dry time' in the West has been a blessing in this respect.

ABROAD.

‒ ‒ ‒ D'Aubigne, the historian of the reformation, is dead.

‒ ‒ ‒ The Lodnon Telegraph says Count Andrassy has delivered a significant speech to the Austrian delegation. While echoing the pacific declarations which sound so ironical at Paris and Berlin, he allows them only temporary value. The background, he says, does not open a prospect of lasting peace, notwithstanding the imperial fraternity and good understanding among statesmen. He holds that Austria will not be safe till she can trust in her own strength.

‒ ‒ ‒ Australia is now connected with the rest of the world by an ocean cable, which is in working order, and a dispatch from Melbourne, dated the 21st, was published in the London papers of the 22. There are but few more fields for the cable to conquer. A line between China and the United States under the Pacific will probably be the next enterprise of the kind; but as we have telegraphic communication with China round the other way this is not an actual necessity. There are now no localities of great importance to the world of business, or to its social interests, which can not be reached by telegraph from the great centers of civilization.

‒ ‒ ‒ The increasing frequency of sudden deaths in England has excited general attention. The number of such deaths was, in 1851, 5,746; in 1870, 12,428. The medical journals seem to agree that the cause of the increase was the tremendous pace at which men now live. The mental and physical strain involved in a constant struggle to get wealth or fame quickly ends in disease and this ends in death. This view is sustained by the fact that such deaths occur, as a general rule, among men between 20 and 45 years of age. A medical review kindly advises Englishmen that these figures "warn us to take a little more care not to kill ourselves for the sake of living."

‒ ‒ ‒ The harvests in the province of Berri, France, promised, last summer, to be abundant. The crops had been prayed for, and blessed, and sprinkled with holy water, and they naturally grew apace. Suddenly there came thunder and hail-storms. The growing grain was crushed. The peasants of Chatre-Langlin seem to have argued: "We paid the Cure for getting God's blessing on our fields; somebody has cheated us; we'll avenge the wrong on the Cure." They found him at the altar, but speedily removed him to the gutter. Then they smashed altar and priest together, maimed the stone saints sadly, wrecked their Cure's house, and started back to kill him. The police interfered in time to save him and arrest his assailants. He has been nursed back to life, and his foes have been sentenced to a few weeks' imprisonment for "disturbance of public worship."

‒ ‒ ‒ The Prussian government has failed to extend any assurances to the Old Catholics that it will become their special champion, or in any way take part in their struggle with the Infallibilists, as an interested combatant, and has steadily refused them any material aid in money or church buildings, which they sadly need in pushing their new form of faith. The government has limited its sympathy for them to regulations which place them on the same footing as the other recognizes Churches, by acknowledging the binding force of their ministers' acts. The Infallibilist priests are now required to enter on the parish books all births, marriages, &c., solemnized by Old Catholic clergymen, when they are requested to do so by them. Beyond this, they do not seem likely to receive any assistance from the government, and will be allowed to paddle their own canoe. The Emperor, who has had so much trouble of late in the jarrings of church and State, has evidently determined to grant them an eternal divorce, and while he and Bismarck manage the affairs of the Empire, the churches will have to be content to manage their own affairs as private corporations, in no sense entitled to ask the government for assistance, and in no way to be allowed to interfere with it.

The Christian Life.

A Prayer.

Oh! that mine eyes might closed be
To what concerns me not to see;
That deafness might possess mine ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue might always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought might ever rest,
Or be conceived in my breast;
That by each deed, and word, and thought,
Glory may to my God be brought!
But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
On Thee is fixed, to Thee I cry:
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part;
And when 'tis clean, Lord, keep it too,
For that is more than I can do.
—Thomas Ellwood, 1639–1713.

Lost!

Outside a Bristol coffee-shop on a cold drizzling morning in November, stood a ragged, dirty young fellow. He shiverd as the raw, damp wind moaned around him, finding out every hole in his scanty cloths, and fluttering his rags. His bare feet, covered with fragments of shoes, were blue and pinched. Passengers hurried to and fro without a glance at the miserable object. The swing-doors of the coffee-shop opened and shut, letting out the fragrance and warmth within. The young man, as he stood by the door, scanned wistfully every face as it came out and went in. Let us scan his face. Dirty it is, pale and pinched; but it is no common face; it tells a sad and eloquent tale to him who will read it aright. That high broad forehead, sunken eye, finely cut nose, with that thick coarse lip and jaw, tell of good birth and high intellect, degraded and clouded by vice and dissipation. Here is a jewel— which, cut and polished, would be fit for the crown of the King of glory—trodden under foot in the mire of a Bristol street.

The swing-door of the coffee-shop again opened; and a benevolent looking man, buttoning his great-coat across his chest, came out into the rain. Here was the sort of face for which the lad had looked in vain among the shrewd, sharp business faces which had passed before him. "Give me a halfpenny, please, sir; and I'll repeat any chapter in the Gospels which you please to name: I'm starving." The gentleman addressed stopped short, and gazed at the speaker. The living reality, of which you have seen the picture, shivering and wretched sood before him; and, as he took in the youth's probable history, a tear stood in his eye. "You can repeat any chapter in the Gospels, eh? Well, repeat to me the 14th of St John." Every word was uttered correctly. "Now the 27th of St Matthew." The wonderous story of the crucifixion came from the lad's lips like a lesson learned long ago.

"Young man," said the kind voice, as the gentleman's hand was laid, despite rags and dirt, upon the youth's shoulder, "Come in here with me: I do not mean to give you a penny for those two chapters; for I know where that penny will go; come here." He led him into that coffee-shop which had seemed like a palace to him as he stood in the cold rain. The guests drew back, and eyed the stranger customer from a distance; but his benefactor led him on to the most distant corner of the room, and motioning him to a chair, and calling for coffee, and bread and butter, he sat down before him. The lad's ravenous appetite proved that he had not broken his fast for many a long hour. When he had finished his breakfast, he looked up with a warm glow to his benefactor. "Thank you, sir, this is far better than the penny; but you must let me do something else for my breakfast, sir; I haven't earned it." But as he glanced round at the respectable customers, who looked scandalized at a beggar in his rags and dirt venturing among them, he timidly said, "Please let me go, sir; I am not fit to be here; it isn't right that I should sit down with you." "My lad," was the kind answer, "I did not bring you in here to give you a cup of coffee, and then to turn you adrift upon the streets. I want to help you. I want—oh, may God grant it!—to save you. You don't look as if you had many friends in the world. Tell me your story; and if you are to be saved from this life, by God's grace I'll pledge myself to be the man to save you. Only tell me truly who you are, and how you came here."

"Sir," said a low, earnest voice, very different from the beggar's whine, "you know, I can see, something of my story. I was born a gentleman, the son of a clergyman. I can see the pretty vicarage now, covered with ivy and roses, and the green lawn on which I played, a happy child, with my little brothers and sisters. I can see too the old school, and the faces of my school-fellows; and then, and then" —he broke down, covered his face with his hands, and sobbed aloud—"all is darkness and misery." "What then?" said his questioner, kindly; "after the happy school-days, what then?" He dried his eyes: "I went to college, sir, the first boy in the school, proudly thinking that I should carry all before me. I fell in with clever, but wicked companions. I was soon to be found at wine parties, and to be seen giving wine parties in return. I'm sure you guess the rest of my story, sir. I took to drinking freely, and while intoxicated I committed an action which closed the college gates against me. What could I do? Home I would not go after what had happened. I tried one kind of work and then another, my taste for drink getting stronger and stronger as I sank lower and lower; and now, sir, no one will employ me. My character, my respectability, my health my strength gone. All that is left to me is my memory; if I read a chapter or a verse, I can repeat it. That memory, sir, which placed me at the head of the school, would have given me high honors at the university, and might have led me to a high position in life; it might have been my greatest blessing: but now, while it is my daily bread, is is my greatest curse. I remember too well every little incident in my past life. Ah! sir, it is drink that has done it; it has dragged me down from my position in life to be a ragged beggar,—it has broken my parents' hearts,—it has bound me so tight in its chains, that I don't believe that I could burst through them if I would;—and it will land me in hell. Now, sir, you know my story, please to let me go; you can't help me; I don't want to be raised up in life again; I'm a wreck; and am content now to be so."

The listener's eyes filled with tears as he looked on what was indeed a wreck of humanity—the young life before him a hopeless ruin. "Dear friend," said he, "say what you will, I connot go from this house and forget you. You may call yourself the devil's castaway; but it is the devil's castaways whom Jesus came to seek and to save. Hear the words of infinite love, 'Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.' You tell me that you have fallen from your station in life; but the Spirit of God will ret you with princes. Ask God's pardon through the blood of a crucified Redeemer, and then do as one of old did—arise and go to your father." "Never!" almost shrieked the unhappy young man; "I have sworn never to cross my father's threshold again, and I never will. Good day, sir,: you mean kindly; but 'tis too late for me." A hasty step,—the swing-door closed; and when, a moment after, he who would have rescued the perishing one stood in the street, the tall thin form had disappeared.

Reader, this true story is enough to make the sternest weep. We stand by a bed on which lies the corpse of one dear to us; and, as we look on the stiff form, and feel the dead hand, our boasted manliness breaks down, and the rough, hard man sobs like a child. But what is the sight of a corpse, compared with a body and soul chained to sin and to Satan, and hurrying with railway speed to destruction—one who feels he is lost—has made up his mind to be lost? Such a sight is enough to make an angel weep. Where the poor young man, whose story you have heard, is now, I cannot say; he may be burning out the last inch of his life. Oh! pray, reader, that even now that soul may be plucked as a brand from the burning.

And what of the besetting sin which was the devil's bait to lure that soul to ruin? Reader! when I speak or write of drunkenness, I would to God that I had a pen or tongue of fire to speak what I feel. Jeremiah's roll written, within and without, with lamentation and mourning and woe, is but a faint picture of that most miserable place on earth, a drunkard's home. Why, it seems a mockery of the sacred name of home, to speak of the drunkard's home:—rags, dirt, hunger, broken tables and chairs, a black empty grate, a wretched bedstead—the only ornament a black bottle on the mantlepiece, the cause of all this misery. As we speed along in the railway carriage, we are carried over the head of sleeping London. If a giant hand could strip off the roofs of those houses over which we pass, and give us as clear a glance under the tiles as we have above them, what strange sights we should see;—how many a sad life-history would stand out before us, from the first watchfulness of the poor wife for her husband's unsteady steps making melancholy music for her ears as "he comes up the stairs," to the same wretched woman lying battered and streaming with blood from the blows delt by that husband's fists! Oh! reader, most of the crime, and much of the sorrow, which now burdens this earth would be rolled away, if drunkenness could be turned out forever, and temperance could reign instead.

Once again, think of that Bristol coffee-house, the pattering rain, and the thin, dripping, shivering form that stood outside. Now look for one moment at another scene. It is the very same morning, and the very same hour; and the same rain is falling; but it is on the soft grass and damp leaves, instead of the black mud of Bristol street. A silver-haired man, kindly and venerable, is glancing over the Times. The fire burns brightly, and is reflected from the silver on the table; the urn hisses cheerily. Two girls are gazing out on the fast-fading glories of their flower-garden, and watching the rooks as they wheel around the tower of the old church. The paper is laid down with a sigh, and the chair wheeled to the table. "Any clue to poor Robert," whispered an elderly lady, laying her hand on his arm; "I pray, day and night, that God will restore us our poor lost boy." "No certain clue yet," answerd the father, "and yet there is hope. He has been traced to Bristol and lost there. God grant that our wanderer may be given us again, before we lie down with sorrow in the grave! And as to the poison which has ruined our lad, while I have breath I will use it in entreating all the precious souls in the parish to cast it from them,—to give up this cursed drink; for oh, wife! it has caused more broken hearts, it has filled more empty graves, than all the other sins which stain the earth put together."—British Messenger.

Correspondence.

MY JOURNAL.

Thursday, Oct. 17. To-day the Association adjourned. We have been together a few days, and have discussed the question of great moment. We have had differences of opinion, which have been expressed more or less forcibly. We have contended for our views, and to maintain or establish what we severally deemed to be right. But the conflict has brought many of us into a stronger and closer knit fellowship, and has prepared us for work in the future with a better understanding of the elements which make up one body in the West, and the various influences that effect it from within and without.

Brn. Collins and Whitmore remain with us a few days. Br. Collins, as is already known, intends to remove to Norwood Park, but cannot do so, as soon as he expected. And so Minnesota will still be blessed for a time with his valuable counsels and labors. He is in the best health and vigor I have seen him for some time.

Br. Whitmore's visit is extended a few days longer. It has done us good to see his face, and hear his words of confidence and cheer. His heart is with us, and he intends to do all in his power to aid in the work of spreading the truth. As the pastor of the Advent church in Rochester, N. Y., he is greatly beloved. He is earnestly working for what they needed long ago, a chapel. And I hope and pray for their success.

Friday, Oct. 18. Came to Michigan City on my way to the Northern Indiana Q. M. Not making connections I stopped at the Jewell House, formerly kept by Br. Freeman, now of Fort Wayne, Ind. It is still a good house, deserving a liberal patronage.

Retiring to my room, before I slept the following thoughts were my companions:

What is the religion of Christ? And have I it? Is my heart right with God and with man? Am I right with myself? These questions came up in self-examination with vividness.

The religion of Christ consists in loving the Lord our God with all the heart, might, mind and strength, and our neighbors as ourselves. This is the first and great commandment, and includes all other duties. Love is the fulfilling of the law.

Well, have I it? This is a close question; but it can be answered.

"It is worse than death my God to love,
And not my God alone."

Do I love him then with all my heart? Yes my heart says. "Thou knowest that I love thee," and here I set up my rest, the rest of love. And I can say "If ever I loved thee, my Savior 'tis now."

Moreover to enjoy the religion of Jesus is to suffer injuries without a desire to revenge. "Beloved avenge not yourselves. "Vengeance is mine, and I will repay saith the Lord." Like Jesus we must say, "Father, forgive them!" Or, like Stephen, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge!" How sweet and blessed to forgive, when we have the spirit and love of Christ.

Furthermore, it is to be submissive to the will of God. We must love the "law of God and meditate therein day and night." And more especially be submissive to the dispensations of God's providence. David not only loved the law of God, but when Absalom rebelled, and Shimei cursed, he was still submissive. "Let him curse," said he, "the Lord hath bidden him curse David. But the Lord will yet think on me, and requite me for this day's cursing." And so he took the buffetings of his enemies in sweet submission, as from the Lord, knowing that he came short of the glory of God, and deserved the chastisement. "Let the Lord do as seemeth him good." This is the true spirit, and the true religion. I trust I have it. I have no disposition to retaliate, or revenge. I can say, "Father forgive, and I forgive." Blessed be the Lord for grace to do this.

The religion of Christ will lead us to restore the lost, or the wandering. "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye that are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

All that have the spirit of Jesus will seek to restore, and not destroy. I feel that I could do this. I would gladly restore and bless the worst enemy I ever had, and have comfort in doing it, rather than in seeing him crushed before me.

Finally I can to-night bless God for trials, even furnace trials.

"Nearer my God to thee,
Nearer to thee;
Even though it be a cross,
That raiseth me."

Saturday, Oct, 19. Br. Booth met me at LaPorte, and took me to Union Mills. I found Br. Andrus preaching the word to a pleasant gathering.

I found Elds. Preston, Ferriss, Winchell, and others who came to help in the meeting. Br. Andrus is one of the efficient works of the Indiana Conference. This was my first real acquaintance with him. I was glad to find him so devoted and interested. The Lord give us more such workmen.

I put up with Br. Mathewson, at the new parsonage. It is a neat convenient, and comfortable home. I wish all the ministers had as good a one.

At night Br. Ferriss preached on the resurrection as the hope of the Christian, a clear and Scriptural discourse, and many were comforted.

Sabbath, Oct. 20. We have a beautiful Indian-summer day, and the people have come in from all the region, to hear the word of God. Br. Preston spoke to them from 1 Thes. 5: 1–8, an excellent sermon, arousing and cheering the saints. I followed in an exhortation and appeal. The house was full with a blessed interest. In the p. m. I spoke on the prayer of the dying thief. Br. Preston following with a narrative of some chapters in his experience, which was deeply interesting, and affected many to tears. He pointed out many incidents in the life of a traveling minister, illustrative of God's providential dealings.

We had a crowd at 7 p. m. I inquired of them "Who is on the Lord's side?" I had great freedom in speaking, and the spirit of the Lord came down upon us like showers upon new mown grass. Many precious souls felt the power and force of truth and were almost persuaded to become Christians. One came out boldly for Jesus, and others will come. The Lord bless Br. Mathewson and his dear people, more and more.

Joshua V. Himes.

From L. T. Cunningham.

To the Editor of The Times:—I see you give a good straightforward notice of our new paper, The Watchman Cry. Thank you. But the notice by Elder J. B. Cook, in the Crisis, which you refer to, does us injustice. He was on the ground, and attended at least half the meetings and took part in them, and generally with approval. And when the subject of the new paper was discussed, instead of disapproval, he asked to occupy one or more columns to give expression to his views, or thoughts. And after the writer had addressed a large and deeply interested audience on Lord's day, on the subject of prophecy and chronology; tracing the order of events given in Daniel chs. 2, 7, 8, and 12, ending the 1260 days, or "time, times and the dividing of time" in 1798, and consequently the 1335, in in 1873. Br. Cook occupied the stand for a short time in words of approved and acceptable exhortation, which were listened to with deep interest. He afterwards told the audience that they had "listened to a discourse vast in its conception, grand in its application, glorious in its contemplation." But in his notice in the Crisis he "deeply deplores the isolating and divisive 'new departure,'" and talks of "the argument presented at the camp" as "honey-combed" "with such marked mistakes," &c.

We think it would be more acceptable to all lovers of truth if Br. Cook would point out wherein the argument presented at camp was "honey combed" 'with such marked mistakes," and in what consists this "new departure," rather than side thrusts at this most momentous subject. We have given expression to our honest convictions as to the teaching of the Scriptures, on this subject, and we are still engaged in the work. But as yet our arguments have not been met directly only by infidel reasoning, and papal interpretations of prophecy, which were once met and overthrown by the same persons now adopting them. All that hold fast to the great principles of prophetic interpretation adopted by us in the commencement of the great Advent movement, are still interested in their application. And as to our former application of the 1335 years of Dan. 12: 12, commencing them in A. D. 508, by the removal of the "daily" or Paganism thus ending them in 1843. Time has proved that date wrong. The only other event specified by "the man clothed in linen," or the Lord Jesus Christ (see v. 8), is the setting up "the abomination that maketh desolate," (v 11,) therefore the 1335 years must be dated from the setting up of the abomination that maketh desolate instead of at the taking away of Paganism. In this consisted our mistake, in commencing the period specified at the wrong event. We now merely correct this mistake and continue on the same road, and leave others in their "new departure" (if they will persist in them), while we must travel on in the same road on which we started, following the same pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, till we pass over the antitypical Jordan, and land in the everlasting kingdom of God. As to the 2300 yeras of Dan. 8: 14, and the 70 weeks of Dan. 9: 24, we still hold as formerly, that the 70 weeks or 490 years are a part of the 2300; that they were cut off from the 2300-year vision of ch. 8, upon Daniel's people, the Jews, and their holy city Jerusalem. All the difference in our position now than formerly, consists in adhering more closely to the literal interpretation of the language, i. e., when Gabriel said 490 years were cut off from the vision upon the Jews, and Jerusalem, to restrain the transgression, he meant just what he said; that the transgression would be restrained just 490 years. Thus no plot formed against them could result in their destruction while the 460 years lasted, but when the 70 weeks ended the restraint would end: which was a fact, for in A. D. 65, the war began which destroyed Jerusalem and ended the political history of the Jewish nation. 1810 years more from A. D. 65 completes the 2300-years vision, and ends with the justification of Jerusalem the holy (Koh-desh), mountain, or sanctuary. (Compare Dan. 9: 16; 11: 45: with Dan. 8: 14.) The Hebrew word Koh-desh is used in each of these verses. Is what I have said in the foregoing true, or not; if not let it be shown; if true let it be acted upon in season for the safety of all concerned.

Our meeting in Springfield on the time question had the seal of God's approbrtion as not witnessep since 1843-4. Tho-e that were present will bear me out in this statement, for I utter what I solemnly believe. We are engaged in the last great movement that is ultimate in the coming of our Lord Messiah. Therefore weary pilgrims look up, lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh. Amen, Even so come Lord Jesus.

—Watchman's Cry, Please copy.

From N. C. Miller.

Dear brethren in southern Iowa:—To-day you are met in conference and it is not in my power to be with you. So great was my anxiety to meet and confer with Father Himes that I left home for Brookfield, Mo., last week, though one of my children was sick. I failed to see him, and oh! how disappointed I was. I will try to be with you in the next conference. My heart is with you; but I love my family and must care for them. I shall now try to dispose of my little farm and stock, and build a house near the railroad, and so arrange my affairs that I can give myself entirely to the ministry.

I cannot preach and farm too. I must give up one or the other; and in answer to my faith and conscience I must go and herald Christ's coming There are calls from every direction and not time to fill them; and as I look for our King in 1880 at furthest, I must take this step. My family will need bread and clothing, I shall trust to the liberality of my hearers.

Brethren: an honest preacher's heart bleeds many times when he turns from his door to meet his appointments. He sees children without shoes, because much of his time is given to the ministry. The cold winds of winter are coming on, and the question is asked, "Pa, when will I have shoes and a warm dress?" then I turn my ears and hear, "Miller, why don't you come, and sound the alarm of the world's doom to my neighbors?" I am not berating my brethren, for some of them have done all they could. My old church with which I labored nearly seven years that I never said, give me a dollar. But I now see a wide door open, and if I could give myself wholly to the ministry, I could gather into the fold of Christ two or three hundred souls a year, and send many subscribers to THE TIMES.

We must have a tent in the field next spring. I hope Brn. Gibson and Baldwin will see what can be done in Southern Iowa and report at next Q. M. One brother here offers to raise $25 for a tent.

To Br. Hink, I would say, as I could not be with you at your Annual Conference, I will come and spend a month with you this winter if I succeed in my proposed undertaking. I must if possible get free from the world. I know about 40 or 50 believers who are scattered here and there, the results of last winter's labor. I can organize churches in all these places if I can arrange as I propose. Brethren I implore you to meditate on what I have written, and may God direct us all to his honor and glory, is my prayer.

From John T. Ongley.

For the encouragement of the friends of Jesus, I would say that the truth is advancing, although we have to combat error, especially in new places where it has been our lot to go with the glorious message of the return of the Noblemen. In Lycoming Co., Pa., I have to answer questions publicly, asked by a Methodist minister and class leader, and last night in the Baptist Church, East Troy, three preachers and some leading members asked questions, and opposed our views of the coming kingdom, they, holding that the kingdom is already set up, having before stated that it was the church. I called for an expression of those present (after their endeavours to overthrow my arguments,) as to who believed that the kingdom is now set up. About twenty arose. I then told them that they should pray the prayer that the Lord gave his disciples commonly called the Lord's prayer, and then called for an expression of those that felt truly to pray "Thy kingdom come." About twenty-five arose.

As two cannot walk together unless they are agreed, and while a part did not feel satisfied with such a kingdom as was located there, I gave notice of a meeting in the school house in a few days, to organize a church there of one heart; praying "Thy kingdom come!" One of the preachers present that has been connected with them has come out of "the kingdom," (?) and is holding up the truth. Praise the Lord. His truth will stand when the kingdoms of men shall fall. Then "the rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which Christ hath promised to them that love him," will receive their inheritance. Lord, help us not to be ashamed of him and his word, is my prayer.

From Hiram Munger.

BR. J. V. HIMES:—I am visiting with Br. John Megguire Saco, Me. You will recollect him. His house has always been a pilgrim's home, and is yet. Aunt Hannah has cooked perhaps ten thousand meals for brethren and sisters, and has not done yet. They have always taken your papers, from the time you issued the first Advent paper in America until now. We have had a good talk about our journey since we came out of Egypt. These old pilgrims think more of each other than those born in the wilderness this side of the Red Sea. There are but few left of the generation who made that cry; yet I cannot help but believe that some of them will live to go into the promised land.

I am glad you carried the light West, where it is burniming so brightly to help the brethren there. Probably there are off-shoots or suckers there, as well as East, a class that hang around the old hive after they have pretended to swarm, or set up housekeeping for themselves. Yet after they get a paper started or a hive built, they have not influence enough, or members sufficient to support it, and are compelled to get their notices into our papers, and preach in our churches, and, in fact, get more true honey from the old hive than from their own.

You know these things are so; but you are an editor, and some one else had better say them. These folks scold and eat, and eat and scold and find fault with the cooking. Can this state of things be remedied? I am glad God knows who are honest-hearted and true. There are such; and besides these, many in the different churches are looking into the truth. During our last Springfield meeting five or six different societies requested us to send them preachers, a thing that never took place before. One of the oldest Congregationalist churches in our country asked for an Advent minister to supply for one Sunday, and we sent your son, William, he being an Adventist, "dyed in the wool," yet prudent. I was not present, and can only tell what I have heard since. They all liked the preaching, and some would have been pleased if their own preacher had remained away another Sunday, and they have heard more upon the subject. This truth will yet be heard and received by many. I have lived for fifty-two years in sight of this church, and was astonished when they made the request they did, and that others should request Advent preaching, or desire to know more about it.

Some of them were at the great campmeeting in Chicopee Falls in 1842. You will recollect it well; for at that meeting God convicted and converted more souls than at any meeting I ever attended. And some who did not come out never lost the impressions they there received, and I am often asked, "Where is that Himes that came here with the big tent and 'shook us all up:' there was a power in that meeting we have never forgotten." I think their talk shows the seed sown is still sound, though it has not sprouted yet, it may bring forth fruit by and by. When some of the people learned that the young man who had talked to them in West Springfield, Sunday Aug. 28, was your son, it revived their thoughts of your meeting in 1842.

Thirty years ago I enlisted on the side of the truth, and, thank God, I am not ashamed of it. I have seen thousands converted and many make shipwrecks of their faith, others go back whence they came, and many have fallen asleep. I am glad you are still able to sound the cry—"Behold he cometh!" Some, even on the deck of the old ship have another cry. I think they will want to get ashore before she lands; for there is, I believe, a storm coming that will try our faith. But God says he will not leave nor forsake any that put their trust in him.

I expect you have some out West who take your paper and neither pay for it nor own their poverty. This is an important matter. The paper should be sent free to the worthy poor, and those who are able to do so should pay for it, and pay promptly. The ministers can all help in various ways. You may send the paper to—— ———, and if he does not pay for it, I will We can learn who takes a paper, and who does not, and get new subscribers, and we can find out who are able to pay and don't do it, and we ought to let the agents know about such cases. And there are a great many who would subscribe if their attention was only called to the subject. I think God wants us to be frank, honest, and shake off the chaff, and stand for truth, righteousness and godly living in this present world, looking for the blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

From D. D. Reed.

We have just closed a week's effort in this place, in company with Br. Fassett. The church is in a blessed state, looking for Christ's speedy return. Great peace and harmony prevail among them, and the Lord is adding to the church such as love his appearing. Some conversions of late and four baptised. I would that all the Advent churches in the country, might take example from the Vallejio happy band.

They have good religion and God is blessing them abundantly. As long as the church walks uprightly, prosperity will attend that church.

Br. Fassett has gone into a new field to labor. Br. Wilson is soon to go into the "regions beyond," whilst my wife and myself expect to go from here to Calavaras Co. to labor this fall.

Sr. Fassett is now able to preach to the church at Santa Clara. And thus we are all scattered about sounding the last notes of warning, to a lost world. But few will give heed to it. Jesus is soon coming. Let us all be holy. Without holiness no one can see the Lord.

Facts about Baptism.

The word baptize occurs nine times in the N. T. Mat. 3: 11, 13; Mk. 1: 4, 8; Lk. 3: 16; John 1: 26, 33; 1 Cor. 1: 17. Baptized, forty-nine times. Mat. 3: 6, 13, 14, 16; 20: 22, 23; 28: 19. Mk. 1: 5, 8, 9; 10: 38, 39; 16: 16. Lk. 3: 7, 12, 21; 7: 29, 30; 12: 50. John 3: 22, 23; 4: 1, 2; 10: 40. Acts 1: 5, 11, 16: 2: 38, 41; 8: 12, 13, 16, 36, 38; 9: 18; 10: 47, 48; 16: 15, 33; 18: 8; 19: 3, 4, 5; 22: 16. Rom. 6: 3. 1 Cor. 1: 13, 14, 16; 10: 2; 12: 13; 15: 29. Gal. 3: 27. Baptizest once, John 1: 25. Baptizeth twice, John 1: 33; 3: 26. Baptizing four times, Mat. 28: 19. John 1: 28, 31; 3: 23. These five words are merely transferred to our language by changing the Greek for Roman letters and altering the termination, and are from the word baptizo. The word baptism occurs twenty-two times, and is transferred from the Greek word baptisma. Mat. 3: 7; 20: 22, 23; 21: 25. Mk. 1: 4; 10: 38, 39; 11: 30. Lk. 20: 4; 3: 3; 7: 29; 12: 50. Acts 1: 22; 10: 37; 13: 24; 18: 25; 19: 3, 4. Rom. 6: 4. Eph. 4: 5. Col. 2: 12. 1 Pet. 3: 21.

Donnegan defines baptizo; "submerge soak, thoroughly saturate."

Schumer, another lexicographer, says, "properly, baptizo signifies immerse, I dip; I immerse in water because for the most part a thing must be dipped or plunged into water that it may be washed."

George Whitehead: "But baptizo is to baptize; to plunge under water; to overwhelm."

Beza, successor to Calvin, at Geneva, says: baptizo "properly signifies to immerse."

Stokins on the New Testament, says: "it means to wash, to cleanse, because a thing is usually dipped or immersed in water that it may be washed."

Thirty-two Greek lexicons define baptizo, to dip, plunge or immerse; no one to sprinkle; for sprinkling, the original term in Greek is rain or rantizo; for pouring, it is cheo or excheo.

William Tyndale, the first translator of the Bible into English, says: "Plunging into the water signifies that we die and are buried with Christ as concerning the old life of sin."

Martin Luther: "Baptism is a Greek word, and may be translated immerse, as when we immerse something in water that it may be wholly covered," and that "baptism is nothing else with the word of God than immersion in water."

Melancthon: "Baptism is an entire action, to-wit: a dipping."

John Wesley, in his notes on Rom. 6, remarks on the expression, "Buried with him," as "alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion."

Dr. Chalmers, speaking of the resurrection of Christ, says, "We, by being baptized into his death, are conceived to have made a similar transaction. In the act of descending under the water of baptism to have resigned an old life; and in the act of ascending, to emerge into a second or new life."

Sclousner says: "Th[illegible]ho were to be baptized, were anciently immersed."

Prof. Lange: "Baptism in the apostolic age was a proper baptism; the immersion of the body in water."

Calvin: "The very word baptise signifies to immerse; and that immersion was the practice of the ancient church."

The first instance of sprinkling or pouring, so far as history can tell us, was about the middle of the third century, in the case of one Novation, who was about to die, as was thought, and had the water profusely poured around him as a substitute for baptism.

The first mention is made about this time of infant baptism, as something previously unknown, by Tertullian; and he protests against it.

There is but "one Lord, one faith, one baptism;" and as there are examples and commands for water baptism, immersion is the "one baptism."

E. A. MARSH.

Conference Minutes

N. W. MISSOURI AND S. W. IOWA.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

Met at Chase's Grove, Page Co., Iowa, Sept. 6.

Visiting brethren were invited to take part in our deliberations. J. A. Romig was elected President; A. F. Dugger Vice-President; D. Q. Kent, Treasurer, and Philander Nokes, Sec'y. for the ensuing year.

Penn Center church reported 30 members; organized by J. V. Himes, assisted by D. S. Clark. Good prospects; Sabbath-school and prayer meeting regularly; opposition giving away.

Arbor Mill, 44 members; organized by W. W. Cate with 8 members, March 28, 1870. Some opposition; regular prayer and monthly meetings. Greenfield, 12 members; strong in the faith; willing to sustain preaching. Lewis, 8 members, some opposition. Troublesome Creek, preaching by Br. Morphy Maryville, 40 members, want an evangelist Quitman, 52 members; 21 baptised since June 1. D. O. Hink pastor. Noble Township, regular meetings; Preaching by Br. Blanchard. Nodaway "hold their own." Greenland, 23 members, preaching monthly, good interest, getting on well. Saline Co., 25 members, want a minister. Ringold, 14 members, good interest.

Twelve ministers reported personally and one by letter.

On a motion to secure the labors of an evangelist in the Conference, $225 was pledged by the different churches for that purpose.

Br. G. G. Godfrey and E. A. Marsh were received. Brn. M. B. Hubbell, J. A. Romig and William Patten were given license to preach.

Altogether our conference was a profitable season. The ministers seemed to be filled with the spirit, to realize that the end of all things is at hand and the coming of the Lord nigh, even at the door.

PHILANDER NOKES, Sec'y.

S. IOWA AND N. MISSOURI.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

Met Oct. 12, according to previous arrangement. The committee to draft constitution and by-laws made a report which was accepted.

Br. Wm. H. Folsom was elected Vice-President, to fill vacancy.

Br. John R. Lewellen was added to the standing committee to fill out the Board.

On motion the President appointed as a business committee, Brn. S. Baldwin, A. M. Corbit and John R. Lewellen.

The following churches were received.

Corydon church with 67 members; Bethlehem with 12 members; Seymour with 11 members; Brookfield, Mo. with 8 members. Voted to make an effort to secure an evangelist. Brn. Shotsman, Corbit and Folsom were appointed a committee to attend to that business.

Resolved, that we invite ministers of the Advent faith to visit and labor with us. Adjourned.

L. Z. LOTSPEICH, Sec'y.

Our Young Folks.

How Father cured his Horse.

Well, said Reuben, the story-teller, father always wanted a horse, because the folks in Greene lived scattered, and he had so far to go to attend funerals and weddings, and visit schools, you know; but he never felt as if he could afford to buy one. But one day he was coming afoot from Hildreth, and a stranger asked him to ride.

Father said, "That's a handsome horse you're driving. I should like to own such a horse myself."

"What will you give for him?" said the man.

"Do you want to sell?" says father.

"Yes, I do, and I'll sell cheap, too," says he.

"O, well," says father, "it's no use talking, for I haven't the money to buy him with."

"Make me an offer,' said he.

"Well, just to put end to the talk," father says, "I'll give you seventy-five dollars for the horse.

"You may have him," says the man as quick as a flash, "but you'll repent of your bargain in a week."

"Why, what ails the horse?" says father.

"Ails him? He's got the 'Old Nick' in him; that's what ails him," says he. "If he has a will to go, he'll go; but if he takes a notion to stop, all creation can't start him. I've stood and beat that horse till the sweat run off me in streams; I've fired a gun close to his ears; I've burnt shavings under him. I might have beat him to death or roasted him alive, before he'd have budged an inch."

"I'll take the horse," says father, "What is his name?"

"George," says the man.

"I shall call him Georgie," said father.

Well, father brought him home, and we boys were pleased, and we fixed a place for him in the barn, and curried him down and fed him well, and father said "Talk to him, boys, and let him know you feel friendly."

So we coaxed and petted him, and the next morning father harnessed him, and got into the wagon to go. But Georgie wouldn't stir a step. Father got out and patted him, and we boys brought him apples and clover-tops, and once in a while father would say, "Get up, Georgie," but he didn't strike the horse a blow. By and by he says: "This is going to take time. Well, Georgie, we'll see who has got the most patience, you or I." So he sat in the wagon, and took out his skeletons—

"Skeletons?" said Poppet, inquiringly.

"Of sermons, you know. Ministers always carry around a little book to put things into that they think of when they are out walking, or driving, or hoeing in the garden."

Well, father sat there two full hours before the horse was ready to start; but, when he did, there was no more trouble for that day. The next morning 'twas the same thing over again, only Georgie gave in a little sooner. All the while it seemed as if father couldn't do enough for the horse. He was round the stable, feeding him and fussing over him, and talking to him in his pleasant, gentle way: and the third morning, when he had fed and curried and harnessed him with his own hands, somehow there was a very different look in his eyes. But when father was ready to go, Georgie put his feet together, laid his ears back, and wouldn't stir. Well, Dove was playing about the yard, and she brought her stool and climbed up by the horse's head.

"Dove, tell what you said to Georgie this morning."

"I gave him an awful talking to," said the little girl. "I told him it was perfectly rediculous for him to act so, that he'd come to a real good place to live, where everybody helped every body; that he was a minister's horse and ought to set a good 'sample to all the other horses, and God would not love him if he was'n't a good horse. That's what I told him. Then I kissed him on the nose."

"And what did Georgie do?"

"Why, he heard every word I said, and when I got through, he felt so 'shamed of himself, he couldn,t hold up his head; so he just dropped it till it 'most touched the ground, and he looked as sheepish as if he had been stealing a hundred sheeps."

"Yes," said Reuben, "and when father told him to go, he was off like a shot. He has never made any trouble since. That's the way father cured a balky horse. And that night when he unharnessed, him he rubbed his nose against father's shoulder, and told him, as plain as a horse could speak, that he was sorry. He's tried to make it up with father ever since, for the trouble he made him. When he's loose in the pasture, father has only to stand at the bars and call his name, and he walks up as quiet as an old sheep. Why I've seen him back himself between the shafts of the wagon many a time, to save father trouble. Father would't take two hundred dollars for the horse to-day. He eats anything you give him. Sis often brings out some of her dinner to him.

"He likes to eat out of a plate," said Dove, "it makes him think he's a folks."—Evangelist.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 29, 1872.

Business Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association, are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
N. FIELD.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Dives and Lazarus.

The revised and enlarged edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of Luke 16, is in course of publication. It will be more full and conclusive than in its first form. Orders will be filled as soon as it is ready.

New Music.

We have received from Geo. B. Lee, No. 373 Main St. Springfield, Mass., the following pieces of music:

The Song of Redemption; The Watchman's Cry; Beacon Lights; Lift your Voices; Going Home; They say there is a World to Come; The Father's Mercy; Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

The above are all on one sheet, and will be sent by mail, post-paid, for 30c.

A New Letter Tract.

We have just prepared a new letter tract, designed for Business Men and others, for short communications. Three pages contain, in print, a tersely written tract—Scripture versus Popular Misconceptions.

One page is ruled, commercial note size. It is on fine paper, nicely printed, and will be a quiet but most effective way of introducing Bible doctrine.

On orders of not less than one Ream (480 sheets), we will print the writer's name and address at the head of the ruled page. $5 a ream, postal or express charges pre-paid. Without the printed name and P. O. address, $4 a ream; $2 for a half ream; $1.25 for quarter ream; 25 sheets, 50c.

To Correspondents.

R. H. EVANS. He has not yet called. We shall be happy to do anything we can for him.....J. LACIAR. Forwarded the $10 to G. Thomson.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

H. P. Vorles; J. T. Ongley; O. J. Denison; M. Towsler; T. R. Way, 2.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

S A Price
A J Marsh
P A Smith
R H Bateman
J T Ongley
S Abbey
O W Place
Wm McLeod
B F Byars
A C Barnes
J M Snook
W Morphy
W M Bonham
L Z Lotsperch
I J Tuttle
W Kellaway
C C Marston 2
S B Mabey
Wm E Brown
G B Hurlbut
E Wakeman
A Bailey
O M Tanner
C C Stearns
J Yates
R Martin
A Sanders
J E Metzger
W L Turner
W C Hicks
J D Rogers
C Rymus
D O Hink
E P Goff
M J James
A Armour
J S Thomasson
H Zaremba
C Olsom
J Patrick
C M Gifford
N S Hemenway
A Hill
H McClintock
L Briggs
A G Russell
C Fox
J Colver
J W Bray
K S Penwell
S S Hatch
S J Hazlett
J S Duffett
A C Huetson
J L Ross
J DDillen
R W McKee
M A Tibbets
H Palmer
C T Russell
A Sipe
M S Reed
J T Ongley
S C Wellcome
R Tuttle
N Reid
H Lewis
S E Hawe
J M Foster
J M Hoffman
W O Hamilton
H H Hurlburt
W M Ware
F Johnson
H C Edwards
L Hemick
L Ormsby
H T Button
J H Whitmore
C F Forbes
J H Payton
A F Randell

Prospectus.

I am preparing an exposition of the great prophecy of Christ, uttered upon the Mount of Olives, and recorded in Mat. 24; Mark 13, and Luke 21. The general plan of the work is that followed by D. D. Buck, in "Our Lord's Great Prophecy." It is in two parts.

Part First embraces several introductory chapters on the Harmony [illegible] at Matthew, Mark, and Luke record the same [illegible] and presenting the plan of exposition.

Part Second contains the exposition, based upon the harmonized account of the three evangelists. It is the author's purpose to make the work as complete as its limits (about 225 pp.) will allow; and those who do not endorse the exposition, will find in it much valuable and interesting matter. Among other things, the remarkable phenomena of the past few years are described, especially those occurring in "The Black and Terrible Year, 1871," and which fulfill, in part, the prediction concerning "distress of nations, with perplexity."

The work will be published as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained. Let all who desire one or more copies subscribe immediately, and send me their P. O. Address. The price will not exceed seventy-five cents; it may be much less.

All orders should be addressed to
C. H. LEVERTON, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Marriages.

MOSER—BIDDLECOMB.—In Chesterfield, Mich., Oct. 19, 1872, by Eld. D. W. Fuller, Mr. Edward Moser and Miss Mary Biddlecomb; both of Mt. Clemens.

Obituary.

ALFORD.—Died, at his residence, in Nodaway Co., Mo., Sep. 5, 1872, Cornelius E. Alford; aged 56 years, 4 months, and 1 day.

Br. Alford was a leading member of the Highland church, a consistent and earnest Christian, and died fully in the faith of the near coming of the Savior to give life and immortality in his kingdom. The church has lost a valuable member, the community an esteemed and respected citizen. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, to whom, with the weeping wife and sorrowing brothers, I addressed words of comfort from the language of Jesus. "I am the resurrection and the life." D. O. HINK.

WALKER.—Emma Bell, infant daughter of Br. and Sr. Henry Walker, of Columbus, Kansas; fell asleep in Jesus, Saturday, Oct. 19, 1872.

Funeral at the Baptist chapel. Elder Lewis, the new pastor of the Baptist church, delivered an interesting discourse. ANNA SANFORD.

HOUTZE.—Died, in Troy Grove, LaSalle Co., Ill., Mrs. Sarah H. Philpot Houtze, wife of Dr. W. G. Houtze; aged 29.

Sr. Houtze's disease was a lingering one of two years and four months, being caused by an abcess. Her patience, amid extreme suffering and pain, was the "patience of hope," for Jesus sustained her, and her rest in him was perfect. She and her husband became interested in the Lord's coming over three years ago, and she was firm in the faith that she should sleep in Jesus until the resurrection, and then she should put on immortality. Jesus, as a Savior and Lifegiver, was precious to her, and she died in faith.

Sermon by the writer, from Rev. 21: 4. "And there shall be no more death." FRANK BURR.

Book Notices, Etc.

THE INQUIRER: Protestant or Catholic, Which?

The above is the title of a 46 page tract by I. C. Wellcome. It treats of the principles which underlie Roman Catholicism, the history of their introduction into the early church from pagan philosophy; presents the Scriptures and belief of the primitive church on those points, giving quotations in proof from history, and the fathers. The reformation under Luther is examined, the doctrine of the reformers with extracts is stated. The relapse of the Protestants to the Roman doctrines is developed, and tendency of the present-day Protestantism is shown to be clearly toward Roman Pagan Spiritism. The antidote is pointed out in the primitive doctrine of man's mortality. The quotations from ancient and modern authors are very valuable. Price, single 10c, per doz. 75c. For sale at THE TIMES office.

Notices, Etc.

Post Office Address.

Geo. W. Miller, Monticello, Minn.

Notice.—Kansas.

I intend to be with the churches and friends soon to labor as the Lord may direct. Those who wish me to call on them when I go or come, can write me at Amboy, Ill.; or Columbus, Kan., care of Br. Amos Sanford. My route will be by the K. C., B. & M. R. R., through S. Iowa and N.W. Mo. SILAS B. MABEY.

Notice.

I expect to leave Chicago for the Pacific coast some time in December next. My route will be via the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Burlington & Missouri, and the Union Pacific Railways. I shall be pleased to hear from any living near or upon this route who desire a visit from me, and as far as may be practicable I will comply with their requests. Write soon that I may make my arrangements.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Notice.

Dr. Leonard Tafel offers his services to clergymen and students of the ministry of any denomination in learning to read Hebrew. He will open a course of fifteen days, beginning on Nov. 11th, 1872, at his residence, No. 5 Hamilton Park, Staten Island, N. Y. During this course he will read with the students the thirty chapters of Genesis, comprised in No. 1, giving at the same time lessons in Grammar. He will give two lessons a day of one and a half hours each, devoting one hour to Translation and one-half hour to Grammar.

Students desiring to enter this course will please apply to Dr. Leonard Tafel, care A. J. Tafel, No. 148 Grand St., N. Y. Students in Philadelphia desiring such a course of instruction may apply to Rev. L. H. Tafel, No. 685 Arch St.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Squaw Grove, Nov. 3.
Galva, Nov. 9, as Br. Runquist may arrange.
Milroy, Nov. 10. C. [illegible]

White Rock, Ogle Co., [illegible] p. m., Nov. 10. Subject: The Gospel Hope.
Morn. and eve. at Elida. C. C. MARSTON.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

The next Annual Meeting of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference will be held at New Rutland; La Salle Co., commencing Wednesday, Dec. 11, and holding over the following Sabbath.
SILAS B. MABEY, Sec'y.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Dec. 2-10.
Ionia, Warren Co., Dec. 16-27, and longer if the interest demands. C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice
Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Lanark, Nov. 4, 5.
Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Elida, Nov. 8-10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.
C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Equality, Gallatin Co., as Br. Ashley may arrange, Thursday eve., Oct. 24, and continue until Nov. 2.

Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., Saturday eve., Nov. 2 and over Sunday.

Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.

Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Suday.

Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawver may arrange.
WM. McCULLOCK.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

MICHIGAN.

QUARTERLY MEETING NOTICE.

The next meeting of the Southern Michigan Quarterly Conference will be held at Woodbridge, commencing Nov. 14, and continue over Sunday. Those coming on the cars will leave the train at Reading. Teams will meet trains there on Friday to carry all who come to the meeting.
E. WAKEMAN, Sec'y pro tem.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The adjourned session of the first Q. M. of the Manchester district, Iowa, will commence Friday eve., Nov. 15, with the Elk Creek church, at the Ottsville S. H., in Elk Co. A cordial invitation is extended to every lover of Jesus within reach of this meeting, to be there. Let each church see that their delegate has his credentials, and let each church in the district forward the quarterly mission fund to the treasurer of this quarterly conference, in harmony with the resolution passed at our last annual meeting. And let us pray that this meeting be the best of the season. We shall expect to see our Evangelist at this meeting, and he is hereby cordially invited to be present. Let there be a general rally for God and his cause. MARTHA J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Plainview, Wabashaw Co., Saturday eve. Nov. 2, and Sunday, 10 a. m.

Viola, Olmstead Co., Stone S. H., 2½ and 7 p. m., Sunday, Nov. 2.

Alma City, Waseca Co., 7 p. m., Saturday, Nov. 9.

Freedom, Converse S. H., 10½ a. m., Sunday, Nov. 10.

Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2½ p. m., Sunday, Nov. 10. S. C. WELLCOME.

KANSAS.

Hillsdale, Friday eve. Nov. 1.
Columbus, Sabbath, Nov. 3.
Bero, Sabbath, Nov. 10, and onward as Br. Sanford and brethren may arrange.
S. B. MABEY.

MISSOURI.

Hopkins, Tuesday eve., Oct. 29.
Cedar Creek church, Wednesday eve., Oct. 30.
S. B. MABEY.

The fourth Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa A. C. Conference will be held with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co., commencing Friday, Nov. 8, and holding over Sunday. We look for a good representation from all the churches in the District.
H. BILLMIRE, Pres't.

The first Q. M. in district No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held with the Clear Creek church, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Dec. 13, and holding over Sunday. It is hoped that Elder Wm. McCulloch will be with us. Let there be a general rally of all our brethren and sisters, and let us begin our Conference year in good earnest.
I. F. ROSEBERRY, Sec'y.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

ARKANSAS.

I shall spend the month of November in Arkansas, in such places as the brethren there may deem best. Any who wish to correspond with me can address me at 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

The second Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Arkansas will be held in Flatwood, Izard Co., Nov. 20, and over the Sabbath. The churches will appoint their delegates in good season. And brethren isolated will please come and report the state of things in their region. Eld. J. V. Himes will be with us and help in the good work. Come brethren and sisters, let us have a grand rally for the truth.
S. ROSENBAUGH,
J. B. BROWN.

NEW YORK.

Marion, Oct. 29, 30.
Lockport, Nov. 3.
P. S. If any of the above conflict with other appointments, or should not be desirable, please notify me in time at South Creek, Bradford Co. Pa., by Oct. 16. I will visit other places in New York State, if desired, until Nov. 20
J. T. ONGLEY.

Advertisements.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 46c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1.60. By mail, $1.75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6, cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $8 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7.50. by express.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 484 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdeck, $2.50, Post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a re*ply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 15c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2.50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Goud. 460 pp. $1.25 by ma

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, [illegible] 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4.00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 85c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork. 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadduccean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d zen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, *Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 8c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 23) By O. R. Fassett. 8c.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for [illegible] the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 8, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $400, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Farm for Sale.—A fine Farm of 200 acres, in Central Wisconsin. Well situated, and worth $20 an acre. Address J. S. Ames, Kenosha, Wisconsin. [n11w4

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1872 Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent, and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St. New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following

REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding...50c
Morocco " 75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 426, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

Advent Christian Times.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.—NO. 14. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 5, 1872. WHOLE NO. 445.

Advent Christian Times.

The War in Heaven.

War in heaven? The conception has become obsolete, all but absurd, alike to our religions, our philosophies, our sentimentalities. And yet that Scripture, or, at least, the Revelation of St. John, asserts its existence, there can be no doubt. It may be that our highest reason, which is our moral sense, will, after all, coincide with the teaching of Scripture; may say, as long as there is evil, there mus be war; and may find comfort, amid the madness and sadness of the world, in the thought that above all the confused wars of men there is a war of God, wherein is no confusion, that Christ reigns and will reign till he has put all enemies under his feet.

Who, then, is the being whom St. John sees in the spiritual world appearing eternally as a warrior, with his garments stained with blood, the leader of armies, smiting the nations, ruling them with a rod of iron?

St. John tells us that he has one name which none knew save himself. But he tells us that he has another name which St. John did know; and that it is "the Word of God;" and he tells us, moreover, that he is called faithful and true. And who he is all Christian men are bound to know.

He it is who makes perpetual war, as King of kings and Lord of lords. But against what does he wage war? He never tells us that. If he be faithful and true, then he wages war against all things and beings which are unfaithful and false. He himself is full of chivalry, full of fidelity; and therefore, all which is base and treacherous is hateful in his eyes, and that which he hates he is both able and willing to destroy.

He it is who makes perpetual war. He makes war in righteousness. Therefore, all men and things which are unrighteous and unjust are on the opposite side to him, his enemies, and he will trample them under his feet. The only hope for them (and, indeed, for all mankind) is that he does make war in righteousness, and that he is faithful and true; that he is always just and fair; that he always keeps his word, and governs not according to caprice or fashion, but according to fixed and certain laws, which men observe and calculate on, and shape their conduct accordingly — save that Christ's law will not change for any soul in earth or heaven.

But within these honorable conditions he will, as often as he sees fit, smite the nations and rule them with a rod of iron, and tread the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

And, if any one should say, as they are likely enough to do, in these luxurious, unbelieving days, in which the once all-absorbing idea of the kingdom of God and of Christ has been degraded into a mere device of "saving" an individual soul here and another there. What words are these? —threatening, terrible, cruel? my answer is, the words are not mine. I did not put them into the Bible. I find them there. I find them, or their like, in the New Testament, as well as in the Old; the Gospels and Epistles as well in the Revelation of St. John. If any man does not like them, his quarrel must be not with me, but with the apostle of love, whose dying sermon—so the legend runs—was naught but "Little children, love one another," and who was likely to have as much tenderness and pity in his heart as any philanthropist or sentimentalist of modern days.

But the meek and gentle Jesus? My good reader, that the Lord was meek and gentle when on earth, and is, therefore, meek and gentle in heaven, from all eternities, to all eternities, there can be no doubt. "I am meek and lowly of heart" he said to himself. But with that meekness and lowliness there was in him on earth, and, therefore, there is in him in heaven, a capacity of burning indignation against all wrong and falsehood, especially against that worst form of falsehood, hypocrisy; and that worst form of hypocrisy, covetuousness, cloaking itself under the name of religion. For that he had no meek and gentle words; but ye serpents, ye generation of vipers! How shall ye escape the damnation of gehenna?

And because his character is perfect and eternal, because he is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, therefore we are bound to believe that he has now, and will have as long as evil exists, the same divine indignation, the same divine determination to cast out of his kingdom—which is simply the whole universe—all that offends and whomsoever loveth and maketh a lie.

To all which—so confused have our notions on this subject grown of late —I can conceive some really good person answering, with honest pain: But you cannot suppose that Christ would propagate the gospel by the sword, or wish Christians to do so.

My good friend, this matter has nothing to do with the propagation of the gospel, in the popular sense. It has nothing to do with converting heathens to Christianity. It has to do with that most awful, yet most wholesome divine government of the world, which is forever over all men, Christians or heathens, whether they know it or not, which rules the destiny of every nation, tribe, family, individual man, from the Tartar horde on the Siberian steppe, to the lonely miner in the mountains of the Far West, rewarding every man according to his worth, and extermination, wholesale and without discrimination, when the measure of their iniquity is full.

Christ's herald, in one most noble chapter of the Revelations, calls the world not even to repentance, but to inevitable doom. His angel, his messenger stands in the sun, the source of light and life, above this petty planet, its politics, its quarrels, its fashions, its notions of how the world ought to have been made and managed, and calls—to whom? To all the fowls which fly in the midst of heaven, come and gather yourselves together to the feast of the great God, that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that ride on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and slave, both small and great.

Both free and slave, both small and great—on the negro, it seems, as well as on the white man, on the democrat as well as on the despot, may fall the penalty of rebellion against the eternal law of God. And what a penalty! What those awful words may fully mean I know not and dare not surmise. But this I say, That the Bible would not have used such words, conveying so plain and terrible meaning to any one who has ever seen or heard of a battlefield, if he had really meant by them nothing like a battle-field at all.

It may be that those words have fulfilled themselves many a time and oft; in the fall of Jerusalem; in the convulsions of the Roman Empire during the first century after Christ; in the fall of the Roman Empire before the lances of the German tribes; in many another great war or national calamity in many a land since then. It may be, too, as some divines have held, that they will have their complete fulfillment in some war of all wars, some battle of all battles, in which all the powers of evil, whosoever loveth and maketh a lie, shall be arrayed against all the powers of good and those who fear God and keep his commandments, to fight it out, if the controversy can be settled by no reason, no persuasion; a battle in which the whole world will discover that even in the ultimate appeal to physical force the good are stronger than the bad, because they have moral force also on their side, because God and the laws of his whole universe are arrayed against those who transgress law and outrage reason.

The wisest of living Britons has said: "Infinite pity, yet infinite rigor of law. It is so that the universe is made." I should add: it is so that the universe must needs be made, because it is made by Christ, and its laws are the reflection of his character—pitiful because Christ is pitiful; rigorous because Christ is rigorous. So pitiful is Christ that he did not hesitate to be slain for men, that mankind through him might be saved. It is true, the old faith of our forefathers—and neither science nor philosophy has yet disproved it—the old faith that war and bloodshed, pestilence and famine, earthquake and tempest are each and all of them the servants of God, doing some awful yet necessary work for the final benefit of the whole human race. It may be difficult to believe this; at least, to believe it as those old seers believed it—to whom we owe our Bible, and, therefore, all our true civilization—they who cried from the depths of their reason, as well as of their faith: "When thy judgments, O Lord, are abroad in the earth, then shall the inhabitants of the world learn righteousness." But we must believe it, or else we shall be driven to believe in no God at all worth thinking of, and that will be worse for us than all the evil which has happened to us from our youth up until now.

I know but too well that most people find it very difficult, always have in every age and country found it most difficult to believe in such a God as Scripture sets forth—a God of boundless tenderness, and yet a God of boundless indignation. Men's notion of tenderness is too often a selfish dislike of seeing other people uncomfortable, because it makes them uncomfortable themselves. Their notion of indignation is too often a selfish desire of revenge against those who interfere with their comfort. And, therefore, they have no wholesome indignation against wrong and wrong doers, and a great deal of unwholesome tenderness for them. They are afraid of any one's being punished probably from a secret consciousness that they deserve punishment themselves. They are indulgent to the bad, severe upon the good. They hate and dread honest severity and stern exercise of lawful power; till it has been bitterly but truly said that public opinion will allow a man to do anything except his duty.

Now this is a humor which cannot last. It breeds weakness, anarchy, and, at last, ruin to society. And then the effeminate and luxurious, terrified for their money and their comfort, fly from an unwholesome tenderness to an unwholesome indignation; and, in a panic of selfish fury, become —as cowards are too apt to do—blindly and wantonly cruel, and those who fancied God too indulgent to punish his enemies are the first and the fiercest to punish their own.

Such are the majority of mankind; and such, I presume, they always have been. And their true civilizers—the men who have protected them from themselves and their own selfish passions, and saved them from time to time from falling into such gehenna as that in which the republics of Spanish America are now weltering—have been in every age the few who have had a clear understanding of the awfulness of duty, and a clear determination to do it, at all risks; who have known that a needful indignation against wrong-doing, a hearty hatred of falsehood and meanness, may co-exist, in the same breast with gentleness, forgiveness, tenderness to women and children, pity for the weak, the sick, the wounded, and courtesy to all mankind, even to their enemies. By the exercise of those virtues they have saved and raised the nations; because those virtues, as far as they go, are none other than the likeness of Christ, the maker and ruler of the world.

"Christian," says a great genius and a great divine,

> "If thou wouldst learn to love,
> Thou first must learn to hate."

And, if any answer, hate? Even God hateth nothing that he hath made, then the rejoinder is, And for that very reason he hates evil, because he has not made it, and it is ruinous to all that he has made.

Let every man go and do likewise. Let him hate what is wrong with all his heart and mind and soul and strength, for so only will he love God with all his heart, and mind and soul and strength. Let him say, day by day—aye, almost hour by hour—strengthen me, O Lord, to hate what thou hatest and to love what thou lovest, that so, when that dread day shall come, when every man shall receive the reward of the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or whether they be evil, he may have some decent answer to give to the awful question, "On whose side hast thou been in the battle of life? On the side of God and all good beings, or on the side of all bad spirits and bad men?"

How many a man will find himself in that day compelled to reply, with surprise and with something like shame and confusion of face: "I really do not know, I never thought about the matter. I never knew that there was any battle of life."

Never knew that there was any battle of life? And yet you were christened, and promised to fight manfully under Christ's banner, and to continue Christ's faithful soldier and servant to your life's end. Did it ever occur to you that such words might possibly have some meaning? And you used to sing hymns, too, during life about "Soldiers of Christ! arise, and put your armor on," and so forth. Did it ever occur to you that those words, too, might possibly have some meaning? What prophets, apostles, martyrs, and confessors meant by such words you should know well enough. They meant a life-and-death fight against evil in all its forms, wherever they met it. Did it ever occur to you that as long as the world is no better than it is there was still a battle of life, and that you, too, were meant to fight in it?

How many a man will answer: Yes, yes. But I thought those words meant having my soul saved, and going to heaven when I died.

And how did you expect to do that? By believing a few dogmas which you were informed were true, and leading a tolerable respectable life, without which you would not have been admitted into society? Your old forefathers—whether Episcopalian or Puritan —had a very different conception from that of the battle of life. Aye, not only they, but Cyrus and his old Persians were nearer to the kingdom of God than you, and had a clearer notion of the battle of life than you, when they said that not only the man who did a merciful and just deed, but he who drained a swamp, tilled a desert, made a little corner of the earth better than he found it, was fighting against Ahriman, the spirit of darkness and disorder, on the side of Ormuzd, the god of order and light; and that as he had taken his part in Ormuzd's battle he should share in Ormuzd's triumph.

Oh! be able, at least, to say in that day: Lord, I am no hero. I have been careless, cowardly, sometimes all but mutinous. Punishment I have deserved. I deny it not. But a traitor I have never been. A deserter I have never been. I have tried—miserably ill—to fight on thy side in thy battle against evil. I have tried to do the duty which lay nearest me, and to leave whatever thou didst commit to my charge a little better than I found it. I may not have succeeded. That I dare not say. But I, at least, have tried. Take the will for the deed, good Lord. Pardon my infinite shortcomings out of the boundless pity for human frailty. Accept the partial self-sacrifice which thou didst inspire, for the sake of the perfect self-sacrifice which thou didst offer on the cross. Strike not my unworthy name out of the roll-call of thy noble and victorious army, the blessed company of all faithful people; and let me, too, be found written in the book of life, even though I stand the lowest and the last upon the list.—C. Kingsley, in Independent.

THE charity which longs to publish itself ceases to be charity.

Maranatha.

The dew of the morning in brightness is gleaming,
The storms of the night are all gone,
The Day Star has merged his soft light in the streaming
Of glory that bursts from the Throne.

The power of the mighty forever is broken,
The hosts of the vanquished are stilled;
For the Lord hath remembered the word he had spoken,
And the might of his arm revealed.

As a tent in the tempest, Earth reeled an [illegible] shaken,
It trembled at the voice of its God,
The slumbering saints, in a moment awaken,
And come from their silent abode.

And the city of God, in its glory descending,
Cometh down to the children of men,
And the sheen of its splendor, still onward extending,
Reflects back the glory again.

Again on Earth's bosom is Paradise borne,
Its forfeited blessings restored,
And the hosts of the ransomed in triumph return,
And enter the joy of the Lord.

—Interior.

Association Minutes.

NORWOOD PARK, ILL., Oct. 15, 1872.

The eighth annual meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association convened as per notice and was called to order by the Vice President, Eld. D. R. Mansfield.

Prayer by Eld. H. G. McCullock.

In the absence of the Secretary on motion C. C. Marston was appointed Secretary pro tem.

On motion of A. E. Babcock, that a Business Committee of three be appointed by the chair, the following were named: A. E. Babcock, L. C. Collins and Wm. McCullock.

Adjourned 7 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

Association called to order by the President.

Prayer by Eld. J. R. Preston.

The Business Committee reported. On motion the report was received for consideration.

On motion of W. L. Himes that it be considered seriatim, the first item was read.

WHEREAS, At the annual meeting of the Association in September 1869, at DeKalb, Ill., the following amendment to the Constitution was adopted, to wit:

That article IV. be amended to read as follows:

ART. IV. Sec. 1. The membership of this Association shall consist of ministers of the gospel in good standin our State Conferences, sympathizing with the objects of the Association and co-operating therewith, and of delegates from the various churches connected with said Conferences.

Sec. 2. Churches having fifty members or less shall be entitled to one delegate; and churches with more than fifty members shall be entitled to an additional delegate for every additional twenty-five members; and

WHEREAS, It has been ascertained by consulting competent legal authority that this action was illegal, and can be in no sense binding upon the Association; therefore

Resolved, That said action is hereby annulled and declared nugatory; and the original fourth article of the Constitution, adopted at Buchanan, Mich., Dec. 13, 1864, has been and still is the only proper and legal basis and test of membership; and furthermore the action of the Board in calling the meetings of this Association held at Earl, Ill., in May, 1871, and in Chicago in December, 1871, and in Norwood Park, in October, 1872, upon the basis of the original system of membership is hereby sanctioned and approved. And, furthermore,

WHEREAS, The Association transacted business, such as electing officers, sanctioning their official conduct, and other things in due course of its affairs, under the aforesaid amendment to the Constitution, in good faith, believing it to be effectual, and binding; therefore

Resolved, That all such action, during the time said amendment was supposed to be in force, is hereby sanctioned and approved.

After considerable discussion this was passed 17 to 7.

On motion, after a fuller understanding of the Preambles and Resolutions, the vote was reconsidered, and they were then passed unanimously.

Second item read:

WHEREAS, The plan of membership originally adopted worked satisfactorily up to the time a change was proposed; and

WHEREAS, The introduction and agitation of schemes for a change of the basis of the membership of this Association have introduced discord and confusion in our affairs; and

WHEREAS, The advantages expected from such a change are by no means apparent; therefore

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that, for the present, the original system of membership is as satisfactory as any that can probably be devised.

On motion it be laid on the table, the question being called the motion was lost.

On motion the item be adopted. After a hearty discussion, it was laid on the table for further consideration.

Third item read:

WHEREAS, There are some portions of our Constitution that may be changed for the better; and

WHEREAS, Action upon these points seems impracticable at this time; therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of three persons be appointed to revise the Constitution, and present such amendments as they may deem proper for consideration at our next regular meeting.

On motion, this was laid on the table until the second item is disposed of.

Fourth item: Hearing report of Secretary.

The Secretary being absent, on motion W. L. Himes gave his report as Treasurer, together with some verbal statements as to the work done during the past year. Pending the consideration of which the Association adjourned till 9 o'clock the following morning.

Oct. 16, 1872.

Association met as per adjournment. After prayer and appropriate remarks by several brethren, the Association proceeded to business. Minutes of former meetings read and approved.

On motion Eld. J. V. Himes presented his report, as follows:

ELD. J. A. HIMES' REPORT

BRETHREN:—It is now more than eight years since we first met in the capacity of a Publishing Association. I had previously removed to the Western field, upon the invitation of some of the best laborers, and the oldest pioneers among the Adventists here. I did not come among you without a purpose, nor to work in a haphazard way. My plans which you understood (for I did nothing in an underhanded way) well, were

(1) to assist you in gathering the scattered elements, with such additions as our labors might secure, into permanent Scriptural organizations as churches and conferences;

(2) To disseminate the light on the time, and events, and doctrines connected with the second coming of our Lord and Savior, and thereby aid in making ready a people for that day;

(3) To effectually promote these objects by establishing an Advent press, from which should issue a weekly paper, with tracts, and books, such as would meet the demands of this portion of God's vineyard.

I received a cordial welcome from all who sympathized with these great objects, long cherished by many besides myself. These were ready to second my efforts; still in commencing the work of publishing, I had to take the responsibility upon myself. Few, really, had faith in the success of the enterprise, they had seen so many discouraging circumstances and failures in the same field. But I had full faith that the experiment, as many regarded it, of publishing a weekly paper, would prove a success; and although some held back, I made no provisions for a failure, when in December, 1863, I arranged for the publication of the first number of the Voice of the West, now the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES. The result fully justified my expectations. I was not left alone: but friends of the Advent truths, many of them my own personal friends, for my own sake, and for the sake of our Western Mission, rallied to the support of the infant paper. At first our subscription list was small in the West, by far the heaviest mail going toward the Atlantic. And many of these, who became patrons at first out of personal or missionary considerations, thereby insuring us success, remain readers of the paper to-day, taking it solely upon its own merits.

But this preponderance towards the East, in our subscription list, did not continue. The Western list has had a steady growth, and the bulk of our readers, are now West of New England, or, indeed, West of Ohio.

From the first, I entertained the idea of placing this paper in the hands of the Advent people whenever they should have attained sufficient faith in the success of the enterprise, to desire the change. Before the end of the first volume or year, this faith was manifested; and at a General Conference of the Western States, the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association sprung into existence. It was organized upon a financial basis, with individual memberships. To all, this then appeared the only practicable method; and after a full consideration of the entire subject, I am to-day doubtful whether we can do better than continue to work upon the original plan, with perhaps a few modifications.

We had no funds, nor business to sustain salaried officers for each department of our work, and as I had from the first readily assumed the burden of financial and other responsibilities that no one else would undertake, so now I was entrusted with various offices involving a continuance of the same. I received nominally a small salary, but for years, really, nothing at all. All I could do, and all I could give to build up this enterprise, was freely bestowed. Nothing could grieve me more deeply than the imputation of selfish aims and sordid motives which some have indulged and others have countenanced.

All, yes, far more than I dared hope for in the beginning of this enterprise, has been accomplished. With all our trials there has been a growth that has surprised the most sanguine among us. Friends and helpers have been raised up who have delighted to share with me the burdens I at first bore alone. Acting in their council, I have gradually developed plans for the future; and to some of them have been transferred at different times a portion of the cares and responsibilities I had borne alone. The increase of our Association business, and the demand for my personal efforts as a missionary in distant fields, combined with the removal of our office to a new and more central point, all demanded these changes.

From the time I moved West, I looked with interest to the period when our paper should be established in Chicago. Our weakness and poverty constrained us to seek a point where homes and the cost of living were less expensive than in the great city. Hence we located it in Buchanan, among kind friends and helpers in our work. But for years the friends of THE TIMES have been urging its removal to Chicago as soon as a practicable opening should be presented.

About one year ago my attention was called to a scheme of removal which after three or four months consideration, resulted, as you all know, in the long desired change. I consulted brethren of sound judgment, as I had opportunity, and with their advice, in accordance with my own convictions, our presses were removed to Norwood Park, and a business office was opened in Chicago; which action has been approved by your Board, and the brethren generally.

We are here under favorable conditions. We long ago passed beyond the bounds of experiment into the condition of a tempting success. Our book and tract department is well begun. Our supply of material for work is fair if not all we could wish. All that is needed is industry, liberality and unity to carry forward a great work in spreading the truth far and wide, that will surpass a hundred fold the expectations of the most sanguine among us, eight years ago. A wide and effectual door is opened to us. May God inspire us with the spirit of wisdom and of a sound mind to preserve our zeal and disposition to sacrifice, and more than all, our union in efforts to prepare ourselves and others for the judgment.

We have not been wishout trials. Every man, or set of men who accomplish anything will have opposers carrying open or concealed weapons. As you have met these so, have I; and as you have tried to do your duty, I have endeavored to do mine in the fear of God and love for his people. My family have stood with me in my work. Two of my sons gave their time to this cause until laid upon their dying beds. And a third son has been my chief dependance. He has been, as I believe, after many years of sickness, raised up by our Lord, to help in this work. God has given him a heart to love and serve the Advent cause from the highest moral considerations. He is now among our most vigorous writers and workers. His heart has been, and still is, in the cause. He has sympathised with, and stood by me in my trials, and in my absence from home had the charge of THE TIMES and the care of the business of the Association. How he has done his work, and upon what terms, you all know. What he has done can be best appreciated by those who from personal experience or observation, have become acquainted with the difficulties to be met and overcome, and the labor to be performed in such a position. What his future is to be I leave with him and his God. Of one thing I am sure: in whatever position Providence may place him, he will be efficient, true and faithful.

Finally, as to myself since our removal to Chicago, I have given to others some of the offices in your Association I had hitherto filled. Our plans for the future enlargement of our enterprise made it necessary that there should be more workers, and a division of labor among us. My work is more than ever in the field; and never were the demands upon my time more pressing. I do not now refer to the calls from organized churches near home, so much as to the "regions beyond," where scattered friends, or even brethren, single-handed, struggle alone for the truth. In all parts of the south, on the Pacific coast, in England and the Isles of the Sea, there are inviting fields for the pioneer. Among the invitations for a year past, that from California has been the most pressing, and for the last six months or more I have been shaping my affairs so that I might spend, should Providence open the door, a year or more in that State and Oregon. I expect, also, to carry out a long cherished purpose of visiting the Sandwich Islands, should God open the way, and plant the gospel of the kingdom there.

But I may not lay out future work too largely. My horizon at most, is a narrow one. Should the Master not come, my years admonish me that my time is short. Yet I can but turn my eyes to these great harvest fields, with the hope that I may be able to comply with some of the invitations to preach the gospel among them.

In view of these plans, my work in future for the Association will have to be done in other relations than those I have sustained. My interest will be the same. I will shrink no responsibility. I will do all in my power to aid you, except in the assumption of offices of trust in the future. But in all other ways I will give it my influence consistent with the objects above named. As in the past, I shall trust in the great Master of the vineyard for the means of support for myself and family. He will give me friends, and so long as I trust him, and serve him, I have his promise never to leave or forsake me.

And now in closing my official duties with the Association, which I organized and nursed in its infancy, and which has received my undivided support and sympathy to this hour, I thank you for your confidence in me, as expressed from year to year in these gatherings.

May heaven guide you in your counsels, and bless you in all your relations, both as individuals and in your associated action in the proclamation of the Advent faith. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

On motion that the report of Eld. J. V. Himes be accepted, O. S. Knapp moved to amend that so much as relates to his official business be accepted, which he finally withdrew, and the original motion for acceptance was passed, and the report ordered to be printed with the minutes of the meeting.

W. L. Himes, with a few remarks, stating the conditions upon which he could serve the Association, presented his resignation as Treasurer and Business Agent.

His resignation was accepted. D. R. Mansfield resigned as Vice President. His resignation was accepted.

On motion to appoint a Committee on Nomination of officers, the Chair appointed the following:

H. G. McCullock, O. S. Knapp, L. H. Davis, N. W. Spencer and L. P. Fox.

On motion the second item of the Business Committie's report was taken up, and afterwards was adopted unanimously.

On account of a misunderstanding on the part of some, on motion the last motion was reconsidered. On motion the list of shareholders was read.

Adjourned to the call of the Chair.

Oct. 16, 1:30 p. m.

On motion the second item of the Business Committee report was adopted, the vote standing 19 to 9.

Item third, as above, was then called for, which was adopted unanimously.

On motion that the Chair appoint the committee, and that he be a member of it, the Chair appointed W. L Himes and F. Burr.

The Nominating Committee being prepared to report submitted the following:

For President, D. Mathewson.
" Vice President, Wm. McCullock.
" Secretary, J. M. Snook.
" Treasurer, L. C. Rice.
" Auditor, O. S. Knapp.
" Business Agent, W. L. Himes.
" Publishing Committee, L. C. Collins, L. H. Davis, A. S. Calkins,
" Editorial Committee, A. W. Spencer, H. G. McCullock, Frank Burr.
" Editor of THE TIMES, Wm. Sheldon.

On motion the report was accepted, and the Association proceeded to ballot.

The Chair appointed Wm. McCullock and S. B. Mabey tellers.

The balloting resulted in electing almost unanimously the following officers:

President, D. Mathewson.
Vice President, D. R. Mansfield.
Secretary, J. M. Snook.
Treasurer, A. W. Tucker.
Auditor, S. C. Raymond.
Business Agent, W. L. Himes.
Publishing Committee, L. C. Collins, L. H. Davis, A. S. Calkins.
Editorial Committee, N. W. Spencer, H. G. McCulluck, A. E. Babcock.
Editor of THE TIMES, Wm. L. Himes.

Adjourned to 7 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

Minutes read and approved. Prayer by Eld. L. C. Collins. On motion of Eld. J. V. Himes, Eld. J. H. Whitmore was appointed as assistant Editor of The Times. Br. Whitmore objected and asked to be excused. On motion the whole subject was referred to the Board for final action.

On motion of Eld. Wm. L. Himes, the campmeeting fixtures, including "communion set," belonging to the Association, were loaned to the Northern Ill. Conference for its use until called for by the Association.

On motion, the Business Agent was instructed to correspond with Mr. Henry Constable, concerning the publishing of his two recently prepared works, the one on "Future Punishment," and the other on the "Intermediate State."

On motion, the report of the Treasurer, as read last evening, was accepted.

On motion the following resolution was adopted, by a rising vote, a few of the members present retaining their seats:

Whereas, Eld. J. V. Himes has resigned his position as Editor of The Advent Christian Times, therefore,

Resolved, That this Association hereby express to their retiring Editor, their hearty appreciation of his early, constant, faithful and successful efforts in conducting their paper, and accompany this expression with the earnest hope that his useful life may long be spared as a successful worker in the cause of our blessed Master.

The question of purchasing the building and lot now occupied by the Association, or any other suitable property in Norwood Park, was referéd to the Board.

The Association by vote approved of the action of the Business Agent and Board in moving the property of the Association from Buchanan, Mich., to Norwood Park, Ill.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the friends here for their kindness in entertaining us during our present sittings, they giving their time and labor.

Voted, that the expense of boarding the members present at this meeting, be paid out of the treasury.

Voted, that the remarks of the President in his closing speech be published with the minutes. [I would say that it was impossible to publish the impromptu speech of the President. It will suffice to say that it was a warm, hearty and enthusiastic expression of the sentiments of the entire meeting in reference to the present situation, and future prospects of the cause in the West. Sec'y, pro tem.]

Prayer by C. C. Marston.

On motion, adjourned, sine die.

C. C. Marston, Sec'y pro tem.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

I was detained from the meeting of the Association by sickness in my family and other circumstances I could not control. The following partial report was prepared, and has been sanctioned by some of the Board, though, owing to my absence, I was not able to present it at the Board meeting. I present it, therefore, to the readers of The Times as an informal report:

Dear Brethren:—We meet this year for the first time at the office of the Society since our Association was organized. And it is certainly, so far, a subject for mutual congratulation that the opportunity is thus afforded for the Association to inspect its own property and its management. We enjoy the privilege because of the removal of the office to a central point, easy of access from all directions; and as this removal, occurring since our last meeting, is by far the most important event in our history as a society, we may naturally give it the first place in our annual report.

It was known by most in attendance at our last meeting, that propositions had been made looking to a removal of offices to the vicinity of Chicago. A few had held it in sober consideration; but so many interests of both a public and private nature were involved, that the scheme did not appear fully practicable. But early the present year matters assumed a new form. The proprietors of the property we now occupy, made a new proposition, which included not only the free rental of our present office for a term of years, but also an exchange of the property in Buchanan, belonging to the Association, and those actively connected with it, for property in Norwood Park, and that too, upon advantageous terms.

Even then your agent did not act hastily. Brethren of sound judgment were consulted, and their advice considered. Pains were taken to secure the best possible terms for the Association in the trade. The office and lot in Buchannan were put in for $2,000; and the property received in exchange therefor, has since been sold for $2,250, partly in cash, and partly in notes bearing interest at seven per cent.

The expenses of such a removal have been, of course, considerable. Only partially met by the generous donations of a few friends. These have added to the debt of the Association. But we feel certain that this debt has been wisely incurred, and is more than counterbalanced by the advantages obtained in various ways. Indeed such universal satisfaction has been expressed at the change, that we do not deem it necessary to argue this point. A most desirable change of base of operations has been effected. It now only remains for the Association to take advantage of its favorable opportunities, and settle upon what is to be its policy for the future. Let us hope it may be embodied in the Scriptural adage—"The liberal soul deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he stand."

It is well known that efforts have been made to change the basis of the membership of our Association; and the scheme is still under consideration. It is a most unfortunate thing that the subject has ever been mooted in the form it has come before us. The proposed change which it was supposed could be easily effected, was found to be hampered with legal technicalities, arising from the original constitution of the Association. A vote was passed in good faith placing the Association in the hands of the churches. But it was discovered that this vote was illegal, and the Association fell again into the hands of the original membership. Legal advice was procured, a new scheme contrived, and partially carried out, but interrupted at our last meeting by a new proposition to "cut the Gordian knot" by a lease; that is, organize a new Association upon an entirely new plan, and then lease all the effects of this Association to the new society.

Not a few have expressed the opinion that things are well enough as they are. And the only real objection to the present system is, the accumulation of votes allowed to individuals. It has been suggested that an amendment to our constitution might be adopted, allowing only one vote to any individual who may hereafter become a member; provided, those who are now entitled to more than one vote, will transfer all their shares except one, to be held in trust by some persons appointed for that purpose. It is held that a larger attendance and more general interest in the business meetings of the Association can be obtained in this than in any other way. It is safe to presume that there will be opposition to this plan, or, indeed, any other, the majority might agree in.

Finally, some have felt that it would be better if the publishing office were in the hands of a private company or individuals. All these points should be candidly and temperately discussed. "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety." Let us consider all the facts and arguments in the case, and abide the decision of the majority.

Our weekly paper, the Advent Christian Times, has prospered under its present management. Its circulation is considerably larger than at our last meeting, though not so extensive as during the interval awakened by the discussion. Over five hundred subscribers were added to the list then, some of whom remain, while others have dropped off.

An attempt was made to reduce the subscription list to something like a pay-in-advance basis. Circulars were sent to all subscribers in arrears, requesting renewals. But it was found that so many had been affected by the disastrous fires of last year, and others by failure of crops, that it was deemed wise to postpone the general cutting off of delinquents from the list until after harvest this fall. We have purposed to send soon to all subscribers whose subscriptions have expired, a circular requesting a prompt renewal, and to discontinue the paper to all who do not in some way respond within one month after these circulars are sent out. In case of those desiring the paper but professing inability to pay, we have expected your consent to carry out a liberal policy.

As to the editorial conduct of The Times, we are prepared to commend it. Not that the editor has in no case made any mistakes; editors are human. And it is certain that an angel from heaven could not edit a paper to suit everybody. The difficulties of an editor are thus referred to by the Christian World:

> We can safely recommend a graduate of a newspaper office for almost any station in life, at least for all such as require a pretty good knowledge of the peculiarities and characteristics of the human family. A man who can preserve the serenity of his temper, the sweetness of a Christian disposition, and an unflagging perseverance amid all the obstacles and difficulties which newspaper publication presents, deserves to be ranked with Job for patience, Baxter, for goodness and sweetness, and the Iron Duke for nerve and power, and obstinate determination.

The Times is a thoroughly Advent paper, somewhat plain-spoken, but perhaps not always as much so as it should have been. But we will suggest that if the Association will arrange to provide more help in the office, thus relieving the burdens of a few, and giving more time for strictly editorial work, our paper may be so improved as to command even wider influence and a larger circulation than it now enjoys.

We must not forget that our paper is the life of our Association, and the life of our cause in the field. It must live if we would live; and it must not only live, but it must grow. And it can only grow by means of united, energetic work to introduce it in new and old fields. We owe much to some of our ministers, who have proved most efficient agents in both collecting from old subscribers and adding new names to the list. May we not hope that all will do more in this department, and the coming year see an unexampled growth in our circulation?

It may not be out of place to here call attention to some financial statistics, compiled something more than a year since, in regard to the cost of establishing newspapers:

The Advance, published at Chicago, in the interest of the Congregationalist, it is stated, sunk in the first four years of its existence $75,000 of its capital. It has abandoned the attempt to publish at $2.50 and now charges $3 a year.

The Presbyterian organ, the Interior, published in the same city, within less than two years of its existence, used up a capital of nearly $50,000.

The Baptist organ, the Standard, with a circulation of 15,000 copies weekly, and the subscription price at $2.50 a year, was not at the time of the fire self-sustaining, its publishers having to draw upon the profits of other branches of business to make up deficiencies in the income of the paper.

The Christian Standard, published in Cincinnati, Ohio, an organ of the Disciple Church in the West, with 12,000 subscribers, has cost its publishers more than 20,000 in excess of its income from subscriptions and advertisements, and is not yet able to meet the current expenses of publication. In this case the effort is made to furnish the paper at two dollars a year.

About one year after The Voice of the West was first issued at Buchanan, the Free Will Baptists commenced the publication of a weekly paper in Chicago. They had a capital of from four to five thousand dollars, a good line of advertising, and attained a circulation of 4,000 copies a week. Besides their original capital and their receipts from advertisements and subscriptions, they also received $12,000 in one donation from their General Conference. Within four years they sunk the whole of this, and the paper expired.

Let us glance for a moment at some of the statistics of our own concern. We find that about $16,000 has been received during the past eight years in the way of donations, besides the receipts from subscriptions to the Times and sales of books and tracts. The total liabilities of the Association to-day, are less than $5,000. Its assets are not less than $15,000. If our debts were all paid, the Association would be worth nearly $10,000. When it is remembered that besides the usual newspaper expenses, we have been subjected to a draft upon our income for the publication of books and tracts for sale at nominal prices, and largely for free distribution, which has cost us some years more than five hundred dollars, we think it may be fairly presumed that our business has been managed by capable and faithful hands. It is no discredit to our Agent that our Association has been placed upon its present basis, having, with all its benevolent work, sunk less than seven thousand dollars at the very worst, and a large portion of this sum has been sunk in spreading our views by means of tracts, books, and papers.

In the tract department we have not accomplished as much the past as in some other years. One (and the chief) reason is, that so much of our ready means was absorbed in the expenses of our removal. But the demand is unprecedented. Never was there such a call for Advent publications as now. And the difficulty in the case is, that in most instances, the call is for free distribution. Our field is a missionary ground. In older fields more tracts are bought by distributors, but here the distributors are mostly unable to buy, many of them making great sacrifices in other directions. Hence the burden, even to the postage, falls directly upon the Association.

We need new tracts, and new editions of old tracts. But we can no more make books and tracts without means than Israel could make brick without straw. We anticipate after the report of this meeting shall have gone out a hearty response from the brethren at large to whatever demand you shall put upon them. They are looking to you to say what should be done, and how and in whose hands this publishing interest should be conducted. Let us take steps to command their confidence, and tell them plainly the necessities of the case. There are already many inquiries, and it is our privilege to make many more. Our views, to use a homely illustration, are not epidemic but infectious—given by one to another. If we would have them spread widely, we must contrive the means for bringing the masses in contact with them. One tract has sometimes been the means of a revolution—a family, a neighborhood, a church. Let it not be our fault if any family in the land is without the true light of the gospel message.

John M. Snook.

Ignorance or Dishonesty.

What could induce a man of a sane mind and especially a man, who had spent a life time in N. America, to make and publish to the world a statement so wide of the truth as the following?

"It is affirmed that the original terms rendered soul, spirit, and ghost, literally signify wind, or breath; and that, therefore, when applied to man, they mean no more than the literal breath which leaves the boby at death."

The man who made this statement is the late Hiram Mattison, D. D., of Jersey City, N. J., and the people spoken of are the Adventists, or as the venerable Dr. styles them Annihilationists. And I venture to say that no reputable Adventist since the first one ever held any such view. So far as I have been able to ascertain they believe that both soul and spirit have a variety of meanings, and certainly none would be so foolish as to claim that when applied to man both mean simply and invariably the air we breathe. I believe there is such a thing as making an argument so heavy that it breaks down under its own weight. I think this one from Dr. Mattison will do to put in this class.

After making the above statement the Dr. proceeds to give some illustrations of the havoc such a position would make with the Scriptures by supplying "breath" for "soul" and "spirit" as follows:

> Lk. 12: 19: "And I will say to my BREATH, BREATH, thou hast much goods laid up for many years." 1 Thes. 5: 23: "And I pray God your whole spirit and BREATH and body be preserved blameless," etc. Heb. 6: 19: "Which hope we have as an anchor to the BREATH." Heb. 10: 39: "But we are.... of them that believe to the saving of the BREATH." James 5: 20: "Let him know that he which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a BREATH from death," etc. 2 Pet. 2: 8: "Lot, dwelling in Sodom, vexed his righteous BREATH from day to day." 8, 16: "The BREATH itself beareth witness with our BREATH that we are the children of God." 1 Cor. 2: 11: For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the BREATH of a man that is in him?" 1 Cor. 5: 5: "To deliver such a one unto Satan....that the BREATH may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." 1 Cor. 6: 20: "For ye are bought with a price; therefore, glorify God in your body and BREATH which are his." 2 Cor. 7: 1: "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and BREATH." Gal. 6: 18: "Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your BREATH. Amen."

And then he adds in a footnote:

"Nothing would justify the exhibition of the Scriptures in so ridiculous a light but a desire to explode one of the popular assumptions of the Annihilationists in the briefest possible space, by exposing the absurdity of their principles. If there be, therefore, a seeming want of reverence for the Scriptures in these illustrative examples, it is due to the false principles that we combat, and not to any unfairness or want of candor in the application. We have simply answered the Annihilationists according to their folly."

And again I ask in the name of reason and common varacity what could induce a man like Dr. Mattison to bear such false witness against his neighbor? Was it ignorance? We read "that a certain sin of ignorance God winked at;" did that mean such ignorance as Dr. M. must have been in if he ignorantly wrote the above things? If so then he'll pass on the plea of ignorance. But I have my serious doubts as to whether he could have been so ignorant as all that comes to.

Well then was it dishonesty? We are not allowed to pass in judgment upon the motives of other men; but it looks terribly as if the Doctor must have been a little unscrupulous with a grain or two of dishonesty or he could never have so misrepresented his brethren.

C. C. Marston.

Every dog must have his day, and so must the game of croquet, which has such a world-wide celebrity. In token of the coming end, the London Globe significantly asks;—"When croquet ceases to be an occasional pastime, and becomes the occupation of the day, week, month, and even year; is it not possible that the skill necessary to display a special grace, may be rather dearly bought by habitual side-stoop, a narrowed chest, curved spine, and unequal shoulders? The attitude in which croquet is played, is utterly destructive of all healthy development. A long walk, taken with open eyes, is worth all the croquet ever played with eyes glued to a lawn."

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 5, 1872.

SALUTATORY.

Having accepted the direct responsibility of the editorial management of THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES, I shall endeavor to perform the duties attaching to this position to the best of my ability. I will not occupy space with any merely formal remarks. The above pledge includes all I could say. My motive in assuming the burdens of editorial labor is a desire to be useful. I have no other ambition. Whether this hope is to be consummated, the future alone can tell. I earnestly request the prayers of all the readers of THE TIMES that our paper, animated by the spirit of the Great Master, may prosper and increase its circulation, influence and usefulness as never before.

WILLIAM L. HIMES.

A GREAT many who now rejoice in the hope of eternal life in Christ, and that ere long, received their first impressions or convictions from tracts. We have a question for each:

What have you done in order that others may have tracts?

WE learn that Br. A. F. Dugger is now in Aurora, Ill., in the care of Dr. A. Spaulding, with high hopes of restoration to health. We trust that Br. Dugger's temporal necessities will not be forgotten by those with whom he labored until he broke down, in Iowa and Missouri. His address is Aurora, care of A. Spalding, M. D. Let him be aided promptly.

A NEW denomination has sprung up in the western portion of Mercer and Boyle counties, Ky., which is styled "The Soul Sleepers." They maintain that the soul sleeps with the body, after death, until the Judgment day. They also hold that God is material, and that Christ was the first created being, and that baptism is essential to salvation. Rev. Mr. Terhune is the expounder of this doctrine, and has succeeded in converting 15 or 16 to his faith, and they are now engaged in building a new church about half way between Nevada and Harrodsburg. Quite a stir has been created in that neighborhood, and some persons who were members of the Christian and Presbyterian churches have left their own churches and gone over to the "Soul Sleepers."—N. Y. Observer.

PROF. A. N. ARNOLD is rather severe upon the Bible Union. In the course of some criticisms he remarks:

> Neither does the word "underworld" bear that stamp, i.e., "the comely style of current English." That there was need, in this last case, of improvement upon the common version, must be frankly confessed. The alternate use of the words "hell" and "the grave," to represent the Greek word Hades, was by no means satisfactory. But the substitution of a word which, while it cannot claim to be in any proper sense a translation of the word Hades, is not only conspicuously remote from current English, but directly suggestive of a false locality, was a very unhappy way of meeting an acknowledged difficulty.

We wish the learned Professor had gone a little further and suggested an English term or phrase that would be a translation of sheol or hades. We cannot see but that our Baptist friends are in a quandary. They have said too much about baptizo to go into the business of transferring or anglicizing words from the Greek; and, on the other hand, if they should translate the word, they could hardly escape the charge of favoring the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. Let us be kind; their position is a difficult one.

THE National Sunday School series of lessons by some means included the prophecy of Dan. ch. 2, which was assigned to Sunday, Oct. 27. Won't our readers please scan carefully the following notes on the lesson, taken from one of our exchanges:

> The legs of iron signified the Roman monarchy, it is generally supposed. It was when this strong kingdom was at its height that the Kingdom of Christ was set up. That kingdom was strong as iron, (v. 40,) it brake in pieces the Grecian empire, and afterwards destroyed the nation of the Jews. Toward the latter end of it, it grew very weak, branched into ten kingdoms, which were as toes to the feet. Some of these were weak as clay, others as strong as iron. This is signified by the feet of iron and clay.
>
> "The stone cut out without hands" represents the Kingdom of Christ, which was to be set up in the time of the Roman empire. As "cut out without hands" it was divine in its origin and establishment, not set up by human hands, not by ordinary means, not by "observation," but by the invisible, mighty Spirit. This was to "break it in pieces, and consume all these kingdoms, and stand forever." v. 44-45.

Are such things anything less than astounding? When the vision reads as plainly as language can make it that the stone smites the image upon its feet. Professedly Christian teachers brush the statement superciliously aside, and coolly affirm that the stone smote the image some centuries before "the feet" came into existence! Thus children are taught that the Bible does not mean what it says, and the foundation is laid for looseness of faith (because of want of understanding) and, in many cases, of infidelity.

THE LOVE OF GOD THE BEST INSURANCE.

Among the brightest jewels of promise that enrich the eighth of Romans, is the assurance that "All things work together for good to them that love God."

I. With two notable exceptions, the one implied the other expressed, the rule applies in all cases to all men everywhere.

(1) The implied exception is that the rule does not apply to those things against which we can guard by the exercise of reasonable diligence and care. God does not offer a premium for negligence and carelessness. He helps them who help themselves. To illustrate: Here is a Christian careless about his health. He is convinced that everything will work for his good no matter what he eats, or drinks, or wears. He seems to have no appreciation of the fact that "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." He works too much and sleeps too little; he exposes himself unnecessarily to the rain, the snow, the sleet. He pays no attention to the plainest laws of health, and when he reaps the inevitable results of such a course, in a broken constitution, in fever, or in consumption, can he truthfully say that all things have worked together for his good? Certainly not.

But take another case: Here is a man who loves God; a man who is careful of his health; one who believes that a sound mind requires a sound body; this man, in spite of his precautions, breathes in the malaria that prostrates him with a wasting fever. The affliction may be severe, but he has the assurance that it is for his good, and this assurance renders tolerable what would otherwise be almost unendurable. This implied exception has numerous applications; but let this one suffice as an illustration. The rule, therefore, with this exception, would be: "All things against which good men are unable to guard, work together for their good."

(2) The expressed exception applies to all who do not love God. The man who hates his brother has not the assurance that all things work together for his good. Whoever delights in vice and denies virtue; whoever assail the good and upholds the base; whoever loves the praise of men more than the praise of God, comes within the exception. To them the blessed consolation of the text cannot be administered. They are not insured in Heaven's company, whose watch-word, pledge, sign, and premium note are love to God. Nobody can be insured in this company whose treasure is not heaven.

II. The condition precedent — the love of God.

We should never doubt whether we love God. A man should never say "I hope I love God." He could not be brought to say "I hope I love my father and my brother." He knows whether he loves them or not, and he ought to be just as confident as to his love for his heavenly Father. The love of God is not a mysterious affection entirely different from the love of a brother. If we love goodness and good men; if we love to practice every virtue and to shun every vice; if we admire God's character and revere his name; if it is our highest pleasure and ambition to please him; if we are grateful to him not only for personal favors but for our relationship to him and his friendship to us, then may we confidently say we love him.

III. The assurance carries with it a present blessing.

Observe, the text does not read as many quote it: "All things shall work together for good," but "all things work"—in the present tense—"for good to them that love God." Most of the precious promises of Scripture have their fulfillment in the world to come. But this promise is being fulfilled every day. It has a present value. Paul says: "We know all things work together for good to them who love God." We are not left to conjecture, we know it. Blessed assurance! Precious promise! Every day of our lives we may claim it, every day we may feel safe, feel that we are insured against all positive evils, that nothing will happen to us except for our good. It is the privilege, the blessed privilege of all who love God to know that they are safe, and that no evil can befall them.

IV. The value of this assurance.

(1) It keeps us from repining. When seeming disaster, against which we could not provide, overtakes us; when the hand of affliction is laid heavily upon us, we are enabled to take refuge and find consolation in this promise, and, say, "The Lord doeth all things well."

(2) It brightens our hope. To feel, to know that our heavenly Father is now exercising for us, and for our good, a vigilance that never tires, and a watchfulness that never slumbers, is to give us the stronger reason for believing that he will, in the world to come, brighten our joys by admitting us into his presence where there is fullness of joy and pleasure forever more. What he is doing for us now we take to be but the earnest of what he will do for us hereafter.

(3) It softens all disappointments and lessens all losses. It enables us to trust the Lord for his grace and not to judge him by feeble sense. It makes us feel that the Lord is our Shepherd, and that we shall not want any good thing. It gives us a taste of the heavenly manna, of angels' food. We rise superior to pain and trouble, and disappointment. All these are for our good. We are already living in the outer court of the great King. Our citizenship is in heaven. Let us rejoice evermore.

J. H. W.

DR. BUCHNER ON BRAIN AND SOUL.

The New York Tribune of Oct. 29 gives a report of a lecture in that city by a German philosopher that will interest our readers by both its admissions, and its omissions to discern plain truths.

> Dr. Louis Buchner, the German metaphysician, delivered a lecture, last evening, at Liederkranz Hall, in Fourth-st., on the subject of "The Brain and the Soul." The speaker opened his lecture by speaking of Shakespeare as a materialist. He remarked that the great author spoke of all things in the light of nature moving onward to its material climax, and must be acknowledged to be the greatest writer of the world, because he was the greatest votary of Materialism. The lecturer then spoke of the older and newer views of the brain and soul. He said that throughout the ages—from the day when Cicero reasoned out the immortality of the soul—the thinking world had been making progress in its reasonings, as the scientific world had in its discoveries; and now it is known that the brain and soul, to be sound and healthful, must be in harmony. The speaker said that Spiritualism, Materialism, and the musical theory are harmonious, and that "isms" are not popular driftings toward, novelties, or superstitions, but the outgrowths of thought and culminations of reasoning, the attainments of the soul longing for some ethereal expressions such as can not take form in verbiage which stops in its flight: and the response is heard in the midnight hour in unexpressed longings, and under the noonday sun in unspoken hopes.
>
> The speaker then illustrated how this theory might be weakened by the employment of the law of conversation of power. He then spoke of spiritual and ethereal activity as brain functions, and, by a deviation to phrenology, showed that certain mental combinations and the size and formation of the brain in men and animals not only indicate to a large degree their efficiency and ability, but to the practiced eye reveal at sight the character and disposition. He spoke next of the importance of maintaining in their condition of primitive health the fibers and gray substance of the brain. He then discussed the effect of excesses in weakening the brain-power, and urged the necessity of regularity in eating, sleeping, and the recuperative processes of life in order to keep the brain in order. He then spoke of the influence of habits and the exercise of thought, and of the measurement and weight of the brain. He described the female brain, and passed to phrenology and the mental powers generally. In a critical and keen analysis he described anatomical separation between the soul and spirit, and gave his views in regard to the activity of the soul as a reflective mechanism. He then spoke of immortality as the goal of the soul. He closed by explaining the phenomena of spirit rappings as the peculiar revelation of spirits to certain persons purified on earth, and enabled to receive communications.

RECONSTRUCTION OF DOGMATIC THEOLOGY.

The San Francisco Post (Oct. 22), gives under the above caption the following minutes of a discourse in that city. Whatever the sermon may have been, the report is certainly both pungent and readable:

> Dr. Horatio Stebbins delivered a remarkable discourse, last Sunday evening, at his (Unitarian) church. The announced topic was the "Reconciliation of some Apparent or Assumed Contradictions in Religious Matters." The contradictions and the harmonies of "Natural and Supernatural" and "the world," or "business." "God" and "Man," were treated in philosophical vein and unimpeachable rhetoric, to the hour's edification or entertainment of the large audience. In the course of his lecture, the learned Doctor paid a brief and brilliant tribute to the late American Secretary, William H. Seward; introducing his thoughts concerning the deceased statesman to emphasize his statement of belief that this planet is to be the future eternal abode of man. The Doctor indicated, and, indeed, expressed his belief in the prevailing theory of Soul and Body, as separate and distinct entities, but held that the soul after its departure from the body hovers around this sublunary sphere, and does not depart to realms unknown, much less "beyond the bounds of time and space." So he regards the soul or conscious part of William H. Seward as sailing around this globe; the immaterial, indivisible, uncompounded, intangible, uninflatable, unreducible soul of Seward perambulating in etherial but earthly heights, looking down on the nations and peoples he recently visited while cooped up in the dusty carcass which is commonly called the mortal frame of man. The Doctor repudiated the orthodox idea of "Heaven," and boldly ridiculed Calvinistic diagram of "Hell." He squared the plan of creation with a dogmatic enunciation of Nature purified, exalted: Religion secularized; Man spiritualized; God humanized; and in the serene equipoise of his new and original intellectual balances he showed the theological errors of all past ages, and revealed the Truth as it is in Stebbins.

News from England.

FROM OUR ENGLISH CORRESPONDENT.

The Universe of this week comes out with the following ludicrous questions in one of its editorial paragraphs: "Are a man's teeth part of a man's person? Can a false set of teeth be seized for debt? And proceeds in the following strain: "These are the novel, delicate questions which have been referred for solution to the judicial wisdom of a French court of law. The other day an execution was put into the house of a man in Paris. The house was found to be poorly furnished by the official who came to "seize." Seeing nothing more valuable than a set of gold-mounted false teeth on the mantelpiece, he immediately entered them in his inventory. The insolvent protested, and after declaring that the teeth were sacred as part of his person, put them into his mouth. The sheriff's officer insisted that the teeth having been once in his possession it was a "contempt of court" to take them from him, and his threats forced the unfortunate debtor to take them out of his head and surrender them to the bailiff. If such a seizure as this should be held good in law, we may look forward to hearing of such cases as men and women having been made utterly helpless through a sudden deprivation of their crutches or wooden legs.

The novelty of the first question reminds me of similar ones asked by a Unitarian minister of our brother Geo. A. Brown, after a lecture delivered by him. Said minister arose and said: "Do you mean to say that my arm," (holding out his right arm,) "is a part of me? And this leg," (letting his hand drop on his leg,) "is a part of me?" Our brother quietly and certainly assured the minister that it was really so! But his eyes did not open to the fact. It could not be—O, dear, no,—certainly not! Fancy saying a man's arm or leg is a part of himself! They are only limbs of flesh extraneous and altogether independent of the proper "one," who uses them to please himself with! In order then the true "me" should have such unnecessary things as legs when it could get about without them? Reader, why don't you believe? O, you are incredulous! you are at a loss to know what makes up the man but these and his other parts. Remain so.

In a slashing article on the meeting of the "old Catholic" party at Cologne, a leading Catholic organ would have us believe that the canonized and less honored saints above, have begun to cry. Saints in glory are shedding tears! Their happiness is marred; their joy broken! Their songs are turned into wails! They quaff the cup of which militant mortals drink. But read it:

> THE CONCILIABULUM AT COLOGNE.
>
> The largest and wealthiest city of the Rhine, the Rome of the North as it was named in the middle ages, the capital of the three Kings—the Catholic Cologne,—has during the past week suffered a profanation and acquired a notoriety sufficient to draw tears from the eyes of its saints who are in glory.

But, pshaw! Glorified saints shedding tears is a wicked fallacy, and equal only to that other delusion which declares them in glory. They are both fictions alike.

Germany, as is well known, has shoveled the whole of the Jesuitical order into its political spade, and flung it over her boundaries for the wind of inclination to take where it may. But, having begun to clear her land, she does not intend to leave it half done. So, the other news, that reaches us by the last paper is, that a ministerial decision has been come to, by which educational authorities are prohibited from granting teaching licenses to Catholic priests, even though they have passed the necessary examination. The Catholic clergy are to be excluded altogether from public instruction. Surely, Catholicism has a poor prospect in Germany.

High churchism versus ritualism is greatly on the increase in England. Perhaps the extract appended may serve to give the readers of THE TIMES an idea of what is "sound church principle" with this religion:

> The following statistics speak well for the progress of sound church principles in this town, which it is to be hoped were duly appreciated by the numerous visitors (including many of the clergy) during the Congress of the British Association. Of the 27 churches in this and the adjoining parish of Hove, there is a weekly communion in 14, of which 8 have celebrations also on Saints' Days and at other times during the week; a surpliced choir in 16; the surplice in the pulpit in 13; the Eucharistic vestments and altar lights in 7; while on the other hand the irreverent custom of evening Communion prevails but in four! ! !

If we had not a painful sense of the self-deception which many of this order are practicing, we could well smile at the simplicity of men engaged in such child'splay and penning such twaddle. As it is, we can only pray for them, and for their enlightening; as we pity them and would have them saved.

Last night I had the pleasure of listening to a good sermon from Talbot Greaves, rector of the parish church at Weymouth. His text was Mat. 24:12. "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." His sermon was a telling argument (1) against infidels who deny that the Bible contains genuine philosophy, and say the predictions therein are the conjectures of sagacious men who judged from the past of the future and from existing circumstances of what should be. (2) A disquisition on the state of the world now, showing that the wickedness predicted in the text had already tided into the world; and (3) a warning against the abounding iniquity, and the failing love, with (4) an exhortation to look for Jesus. Among other very excellent things said by him were the following: "Judging from human anticipation such a state of things as that in the text would be most improbable. The wisdom of the world looked forward to better times as the last days. Philosophers, philanthropists, and poets sang of a moralized world, with iniquity restrained. Such a state of things was according to human thought. And if the prophecies in the Bible were but the mere conjectures of good men, how could they have expected days of such wickedness just before Christ came? Would they not have imagined that those dark clouds which came round the sun in its rising would have been drunk up long ere it reached its meridian; that the story of the cross would have melted all into submission, and thrown down every barrier? But prophecy said, instead of this wold drifting into calmer seas, it should yet be lifted with wilder storms than ever burst over it. It was contrary to human probability, therefore it was not human but divine.

He then noticed the predicted state of the world in the last days. And, secondly, its influence on the church.

1. The wickedness of the world is not phenomenal to this dispensation. The ages before had closed with the same fearful scenes. In the Noachian age the world was flooded with iniquity before it was flooded with water. And so the other ages. And the last before this—the Jewish—was eminently wicked; for Jesus called the Jews a generation of unbelievers. The world is as wicked to-day as the text said it should be. Commerce is corrupt to the very core. An honest man cannot make a fortune now. In order to compete with others he must adulterate or counterfeit his goods. He went into a large shop the other day. It was filled with new and beautiful machinery. What was it for? So to adulterate cotton that it might look like silk. And a Christian man was the owner and manufacturer. In social life what wickedness! A stream of moral filth ran through the alley. But it did not end there. In the highest ranks in society he was afraid there was secret intemperance and licentiousness that would not bear inspection. Political life is corrupt from end to end. The name of our Lord is not even mentioned in our houses of parliament as an authority. Proud and rebellious men there fight against God. They say: "Who are we that we should have a superior? Our lips are our own. And the gospel ministry is too weak to restrain the overflowings of iniquity which now rises over all its banks. The world is as bad to-day as when God came down to see the wickedness of man; when every imagination of the thoughts of his heart were only evil, and that continually. Man is as far as possible from God in the corruption of his nature, the rebellion of his will, and the darkness of his understanding. Don't dream of any improvement in the world; nor of any amelioration of human character. Redemption is truly needed.

2. The effect on the church. "The love of many shall wax cold." The church is not now to escape. As if a storm at sea should make itself felt in every quiet harbor, in every sheltered nook and corner, where safety was supposed to be. In the Greek the text is more expressive. The love of the many shall wax cold; that is, the mass, the multitude, the most. There will be some exceptions; but too few to give color or character to the age. The love wax cold? To whom? To God; to Christ; to Christians; to men; to truth. Nay, more. The heart, the faculty, the very power of love is to fail. The seat of the fire is to be chilled. It is love itself that shall wax cold. As a ship that goes out to the polar seas and draws near an iceberg feels the chill atmosphere so that some are frost-bitten and even frozen to death, so is it to the church as she comes in contact with the chill air of abounding wickedness. The parable of the ten virgins, is present truth. The Laodicean state of the church is come. And what is the result when the vital heat of Christianity fails; when love grows cold. A deadly paralysis seizes the body and mortification sets in. Work for Jesus is irksome; sacrifices for Jesus a burden. The activity and strength of the Christian is gone. Oh, let us pray more fervently that now iniquity abounds our love may not wax cold.

The practical lessons of the text are:

(1) The encouragement that Jesus foreknew the times. That he foresaw the abounding iniquity. It does not take him by surprise. And, having foreseen these days, he has provided special grace and help for his beloved church. He also gives us special promises, saying: "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." "To him that overcometh," etc.

(2) We are forewarned, and thus forearmed. We know what to expect. We know in the last days perils shall come. We are not therefore, discouraged. We see them to the coming of our Lord. Our salvation now is in looking unto Jesus; to be sanctified, quickened, and cheered. And our duty now is to pray that we might be able to keep ourselves in the love of God and the patient waiting for Jesus Christ, who shall come to put an end to these evil days.

Alabama.

THE TRUTH MAKING ITS WAY.

DEAR BROTHER:—About four years ago you were kind enough to give me your paper on the free list. I was much interested in its contents, so far as related to the second coming of Christ, and the signs of the times; but on immortality and the destiny of the wicked I dissented. I could not, on this account, recommend your paper or offer to procure subscribers to it, and thus pay for my copy. I was in too straitened circumstances to pay for it in money, so I thanked you for your kindness, and ordered the paper discontinued.

Since that time, I have investigated those other subjects, and am now fully with you, as I understand you, and the family of Second Adventists to teach. I need hardly tell you the result; that while I see a beauty in the scheme of redemption, and a consistency in all of its parts, never before observed, although I have been trying to preach the gospel thirty-seven years, according to the Baptist faith, yet now that I have nearly reached three score years, the people that I have always loved, yet love, and will love, now give me the cold shoulder, or rather seem to be elbowing me out of their Associations, for doing what a Presbytery of Baptists enjoined on me at my ordination, thirty years ago; viz. "Preach the Word."

God has honored this frail instrumentality in bringing others to a knowledge of the same blessed truths, while many are investigating and seeking more light. We want tracts. While the Association Repository, at Boston, have furnished us with many valuable helps, you will excuse me for asking a little help of you. I inclose an order for such as we need now. I refer you to Eld. W. Sheldon, who labored successfully with us last winter. Yours, in hope of eternal life through Christ, soon to be awarded.

J. J. SMITH.

Jackson Co., Ala.

Preachers.

Many do not comprehend what it is to be a preacher.—They go to church on Sunday, listen to the sermon, pronounce the minister an able speaker, and return home. Others listen with the critic's aspirations. The sermon is all out of joint, altogether too lengthy, many grammatical errors, and some theological fog. Still others listen and are disappointed. They expected something grand; a real volcanic eruption, or else a wonderful freshet of refreshing, but the preacher is altogether too young, only twenty-two. Jesus did not preach until he was thirty, and that is quite young enough, in their opinion, for any man to begin. Others are more genial. The preacher said many good things, lives a consistent life, and is really a father in Zion. But then he is too old to preach. (Jesus was crucified at thirty-three.)

Yet others listen and pray for the Father's blessing upon his unworthy child. They know that hours and days have been spent upon that discourse. They see him toiling all the day at manual labor, and well know that that midnight lamp shining from the parson's window lends its light for the preparation of the coming sermon. They know that there one sits whose vigor is taxed to the utmost for their instruction. They sympathize, and from a full heart breathe a prayer of earnest pleading for their preacher, which is answered in the conversion of souls from the thraldom of sin to the service of the true God. Do you pray for your preacher?

M. D. PEAVY.

The English Coal Famine.

A dispatch, printed in our last issue, states that orders have already been received at Baltimore for the purchase of coal for the English market, which indicates that there is little prospect at present of any abatement of the coal famine in that country. The latest English mails give anything but a cheerful account of the coal business. The dearth does not grow out of any exhaustion of the supply, but out of the miners' strikes, which have wrought serious consequences, not only in the extraordinary rise in the price of coal, but in the iron business, which intimately sympathizes with coal. The strike of the miners was followed by a strike of the iron-workers, and this was followed by a strike of the wives of both against the butchers, while the general public is indignant against the employers for raising the price of iron and coal, which the policy of their men rendered inevitable. The effects of the rise in England have been felt in France and Belgium, where the dealers have not only been selling at very remunerative prices, but have stepped in and taken away a part of the English iron trade, because they could undertake contracts at lower figures. The French dealers in coal have shrewdly taken advantage of the rise across the channel, and, giving as an excuse that the coal was all being sent to England, have raised the price from ten to twelve francs per ton for household purposes, while, in reality, the home production has not diminished, the importations are equal to former years, and the quantity in bond is unusually large. A correspondent of the London Daily News, who has been traveling through the coal districts, gives some interesting details of the condition of the miners, which led to the strikes and the subsequent rise in prices. He represents that, hitherto, the miner has been as much at the mercy of the employer as if he wore collar and chain. He is not a citizen, having neither municipal, parochial nor Parliamentary vote. He is dumb in every council. He lives in the pit village, near the mouth of the pit—must live there as there is no other place for him—and lives rent free, house accommodations being part of his wages, which makes the employer responsible for the manner in which he lives, and for the vice and squalidness which make the miner reckless of all the obligations he owes to society. The correspondent in question draws the following picture of the miners' hovels in the district of Durham:

> The walls inside are like those outside—fissured, honey-combed, rotting. The sky is visible through the bare sloping roof; there is not a cupboard in the place, nor the vestige of a scrap of furniture. In one corner, resting on four stones, is the door between the front and back room, which has been taken off its hinges, and, with the dirty bundles of rags upon it, is made to serve as bed for the family. There are six children, and a haggard, wretched mother; not one of the family is so clad as to comply with the rudimentary requirements of decency, nor is there a morsel of food in the place. We pass on up and down more close packed rows, back-to-back, of squalid, broken roofed hovels, whose walls are rotten and mouldering, whose floors are damp, and the wretchedness of whose interiors, spite of good furniture in many cases, is only exceeded by the abject misery and foul horrors of the exterior surroundings. The haggard women beset my companion as we pass, and pray to be removed into better houses. Have we come to see about repairs? "We canna live in our hoose, master!" God knows I do not wonder at it; who but pigs could? Home love, sobriety, domestic comfort, modesty, godliness,—is it not a bitter mockery to imagine the possibility of such things in holes and amid such surroundings at which a savage would shudder? The privies in Coxhoe one may reckon easily on his fingers. The night soil is cast upon the ground around the houses, first to saturate it with sewage, then to percolate into the adjoining beck, and finally to be drunk by the people of Durham. The solid garbage accumulates on the ash heaps; filth, fish bones, cabbage-blades and ashes make up the mounds which in some cases lean against the walls, never are many steps from the doors.

The coal proprietors assert that the present dearth is attributable to the miners' preference for coarse and sottish recreation, rather than for large and steady wages by continuous work, without stopping to consider that, if this be true, then they are directly responsible for it by neglecting the social elevation of the miners' condition. The remark of a squalid woman, in one of these hovels, to the correspondent from whom we have quoted, answers the assertion of the proprietors: "If we be treated like beastesses, then we acts like beastesses." The very strike of these miners shows the falsity of the assertion. It is a protest against this bad housing, and shows that the miner wants something better. The coal miners strike in England is the fierce, ungovernable revolution against wrong, which has grown out of every species of serfdom the world over, the assertion of independence, the craving for better things, and the determination to have them, which are the inevitable outgrowths of slavery. If, then, the coal and iron employers want to retain their business, and not find the United States filling their customers' orders for coal, and France and Belgium competing successfully with them in iron work, their course is plain enough to see. These old wrongs always right themselves, sometimes by the revolution of labor and prices, sometimes by the revolution of the sword and cannon. Labor and capital must find a common meeting-ground, and slavery is the poorest form of labor in which capital can invest.

With regard to the condition of the coal trade in this country, it can hardly be said that the presence of English orders in our markets is altogether pleasant. It is taken for granted, on all sides, that coal will be higher next season than this. The Iron World, of Pittsburg, Oct. 8, says: "The receipts of coal during the last week have been quite large, yet there are no stocks on hand worthy of mention, and coal may be considered scarce. The coal men are extremely and unwisely reticent, and will impart but little information as regards the receipts and shipments, and consequently we can only give a meager report." Louisville is threatened with a coal famine. The Ledger of that city says that the amount of coal which Louisville consumes during a year is about 9,000,000 bushels, and that there are not 50,000 bushels of coal in the city, including that in the yards and the 20,000 bushels in the boats on the river. The Ledger adds: "Unless something is done, and that speedily, it is feared the great factories and furnaces will have to suspend, for they cannot stand the present prices, and their supply is by no means as full as last year. It is a pity that we are so dependent upon foreign sources of supply, but it is our own fault." The facts which we have given above, the famine in England, the English orders in our market, the famine at Louisville, and the prospect for high prices ahead, intimately concern the public, for it is the public which must pay the piper.—Chicago Tribune.

The Times.

AT HOME.

„ „ „ Chicago is building a fire monument constructed mainly of old safes.

While the rite of baptism by immersion was being administered in the Baptist church at Evanston, Ill., last Sunday, the floor gave way under the crowded congregation, who were precipitated fourteen feet, into the basement. Two persons were injured seriously, but not fatally.

„ „ „ Commander Selfridge, of the United States Navy, who, in his survey three years ago of the Isthmus of Darien, found a route for a ship canal that would cost only $31,000,000, has undertaken a new expedition, in the belief that a still cheaper path can be chosen. The results of his explorations will be known in June.

„ „ „ Is America 'the promised land?' A letter to the General Land Office at Washington, state that a company has been formed in Europe for settling a colony of continental Jews in America. There are 8,000 families, 40,000 persons, and they want 250,000 acres of land. They are chiefly the persecuted Jews of Roumania.

„ „ „ The steamship Missouri sailed from New York to Havana, Oct. 17. An arrival from Nassau states that she was burned at sea in a gale, and that of all on board only twelve persons are known to be saved. Seventy-nine lives are believed to have been lost; among them the captain and all but five of the crew.

„ „ „ One of the most touching incidents of devotion the world has ever known was the last act in the life of John Walker, the fireman of one of the engines which came in collision on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad a week ago. He was caught between the foot-board and the hot wall of the engine's furnace, and from the horrible position it was impossible to extricate him. When he first realized the frightful death awaiting him he implored those around him to kill him at once, rather than to allow him to die slowly. Then in a moment becoming calm, with that perfect self renunciation with which life begins, he forgot his own agony, and with his dying hand wrote a farewell message to his wife, that she might know that his last thoughts were of her.

„ „ „ The Tribune of Monday morning says of this horse distemper: "It is probable that Chicago will experience less loss of time and less damage to business from the horse disease than any large city where the distemper prevails. If such shall prove to be the case, the reason for it may be found in the good judgment which prompted the immediate withdrawal of the horses from the streets. There has been no emergency of late where the old saw of "a stitch in time saves nine," can be applied with such good results. Added to the excellent foresight of our citizens the clear and beautiful weather of the past twenty-four hours, has greatly favored the existing condition of things in the stables, very few of which do not now contain subjects of the horse malady. The most carefully secluded animals have nearly all succumbed to the epidemic, and the visitation is general. Chicago must do without horses this week. Inquiry as to the condition of the animals first attacked develops the very encouraging fact that they have passed the crisis and are doing well. The disease is said to run its course in about ten days. From present showing, the number of convalescents will increase rapidly by the close of the present week, and careful use will presently bring our friend Equus back to his pristine usefulness.

ABROAD.

„ „ „ Vienna has 900,000 inhabitants.

„ „ „ Floods and a hurricane are among the latest of Italy's misfortunes. Cities and villages were submerged by the rise of the river Po. Relief is going forward to the sufferers.

„ „ „ A letter from St. Johns says, the potato crop of Newfoundland, to a great extent, is destroyed by blight, and that the cod fishery product will certainly not be more than two thirds of last year.

„ „ „ It may not seem to be specially notable that a serious conflict has arisen between the Canton of Geneva and the Roman Catholic church. But important and influential results have often grown out of such complications. At any rate, the Swiss Federal Government has already signified an intention of making the case of M. Mermillod an occasion for a general movement against the pretensions of the Holy See.

„ „ „ The late King Charles of Sweden, previous to his death, had on several occasions spoken to his attendants of death and the hereafter. In the poetic and elevated language which he used so well, he spoke to his friends of his ideas on the eternal life. The noble and touching manner of his death was altogether in keeping with the sentiments he so vividly expressed. What were his views we are not told. Probably he was an immaterialist.

„ „ „ The Prussian Cabinet has, finally, after a year of threatening and suspense, decided on withdrawing the State's share (some 12,000 thalers) of the Bishop of Ermland's temporalities, because that prelate, it is deemed, has violated his oath of allegiance to the government and the support of law. This, however, does not put an end to the conflict. Backed by Rome and French sympathy, the Bishop is strong and determined; and Prince Bismarck, supported by the Prussian and Imperial Governments, moves cautiously but resolutely. It is probable that Bavaria will strike the next blow. Thus the despoiling of the Papacy, predicted in Rev. 17, goes steadily on.

„ „ „ How are the mighty fallen! Even the sick man, the Sultan of Turkey, has snubbed the Pope, quite in the style of Bismarck. The election of an infallible patriarch by the Armenian Catholics of Turkey has been declared void by the Sultan, and a new election ordered. On May 13th, the Grand Vizier called the Armenian Catholics of the capital together, and informed them that the papal bull appointing the infallibist Hassun patriarch was not recognized by his imperial master. On the 19th of the same month an anti-infallibist was elected. His name is Phanes Kupelian, Archbishop of Diarbekir. It is expected that this election will be recognized by the Sultan, and the anti-infallibists put in possession of the Armenian Church property.—Methodist.

„ „ „ Another legitimate result of Rome's principles and practices. Judging from much conversation we recently have had with jurists, statisticians, professors and statesmen from all sections of the Italian realm, we take the following statement of the Kirchlicher-Anzeiger as a fair indication of the painful extreme to which religious despotism has driven the great majority of the more intelligent classes of Italy:

"ASSOCIATION OF SATAN'S DISCIPLES.

"Under the above name has been formed, in Palermo, a society whose aim is to combat religious fanaticism in any form or guise, promote liberty and tolerance, and actively use the press and school in preparing proof that God and religion are not necessary to enable a man to lead a moral life."

„ „ „ The interest manifested in the approaching trial of Marshal Bazaine, to be held at Versailles, is great. He is accused of not having done what might easily have been done for the defense of Metz, and for having surrendered it without a battle. The outside pressure will be for his conviction, the people being incensed against him with that fiery vigor which has cost so many men their lives. The defense will involve a vast range of testimony, and official information will be taken from the German archives. If Bazaine with the eye and judgment of a good soldier foresaw the utter impossibility of a successful resistance, and surrendered to save human life, he is certainly a martyr. If, on the other hand, he was really a traitor to his country, his treason is of such a depth that the justice of his condemnation cannot be questioned. His prospects are considered gloomy. The trial commences early in December.

The Nature of Man.

THE SOUL.

"Man became a living soul." Notice the fact. "Man" is "soul," and the "soul" is "man." Not that God made man's body and put into it a soul either immortal, or of any other kind. The general conception is that God creates souls in heaven, and puts them into the clayey tabernacles of all human creatures as fast and as soon as they are born; and that, on the occurrence of death, as the body decays and returns to dust, the soul survives and exists to all eternity. N. P. Willis, (I quote from "The Christian World,") thus sets forth this popular superstition in the address of "The Mother to her Child," or new-born infant:

They tell me thou art come from a far-off [illegible],
[illegible] my bosom; that those little arms,
[illegible] restlessness is like the spread of wings,
[illegible] with the memory of flights scarce o'er;
[illegible] through these fringed lids we see the soul
Steeped in the blue of its remembered home;
And while thou sleep'st, come messengers they say,
Whispering to thee—and 'tis then I see
Upon thy baby lips that smile of heaven.

And what is thy errand, my fair child?
Why away, wandering from a home of bliss,
To find thy way through darkness home again?
Wast thou an untried dweller in the sky?
Is there, betwixt the cherub that thou wert
The cherub and the angel thou may'st be,
A life's probation in this sadder world?
Art thou with memory of two things only,
Music and light, left upon earth astray,
And, by thy watchers, at the gate of heaven,
Looked for with fear and trembling?

God! who gavest
Into my guiding hands this wanderer,
To lead her through a world whose darkling path
I tread with steps so faltering—leave me not
To bring her to the gates of heaven alone!
I feel my feebleness. Let these stay on
The angels, who now visit her in dreams!
Bid them be near her pillow 'til in death
The closed eyes look upon thy face once more!
And let the light and music, which the world
Hails with sweet recognition, be to her
A voice to call her upward, and a lamp
To lead her steps to thee.

This is beautiful poetry, but only a vivid imagination picturing the popular idea, without the least truth or fact to build the fancied superstition upon; and all the blandishments that human affection, or skill of human language, or art create, cannot hide the deformity of the error most apparent to every reasoning mind.

This dual nature of man is untaught in the Scriptures, much less this fancied idea of created, pre-existent souls in heaven. Man is not possessed of two separate personalties; body and soul. The whole man is termed "living soul," not a mere fraction of him, in this passage (Gen. 2: 7.) A dead soul is a dead man, without "the breath of life" animating his being.

Adventists are often called "No-Soulists,"—"No-Soulists" in contempt and to bring them into disrepute as a set of ignoramuses; but they believe in a larger soul than their immaterialistic accusers, who make "the soul" to be so infinitesimal, as not to be able to be seen by either the microscope or telescope, and is intangible to the most delicate and acute touch, having neither exterior nor interior surface. They, and not we, are "no-soulists," and this will be the popular verdict in due time.

The term "soul" is applied to the whole person, frequently throughout the Scriptures: Gen. 46: 26, 27; Ex. 1: 5; Deut. 10: 22; Acts 27: 37. And this is the common and daily use of the term to this day. How common to say so many "souls" make up the number of the inhabitants of the city. So many "souls" perished in the fire, by railway or steamboat disaster, etc.

MAN A TRINITY.

If we would be still more critical and definite in man's analysis, we shall find him a trinity instead of a dual being; but no one part capable of existence as a separate personalty. Man, as a living being, is constituted of body, soul, and spirit. (1 Thes. 5: 23; Heb. 4: 12.) But it should be observed, that soul and spirit are compounded, or used interchangeably, or substituted one for the other. The original words are different, and the meaning of the words differ. The Hebrew word for "soul" is nephesh, and for "spirit," ruach. The Greek word for "soul" is psuche; and for "spirit," pneuma.

Some writers and divines endeavor to expose the ignorance of Adventists by substituting and using these words interchangeably, as though their meaning were the same; but only succeed in betraying their own ignorance, which is inexcusable. We will illustrate this by one out of a multitude of passages they make use of. "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own breath?" Thus substituting for "soul" breath, to bring ridicule upon us. But do not these "wise men" know that the Greek word in this passage is psuche, and can by no possible means be here translated "breath?" If they do not, they had better go to school again, or review their Greek in their studies before exposing their own ignorance. But suppose we retort by quoting a passage favoring their method of interpreting soul and spirit as one personality, thus: "I will say to my 'spirit,' 'Spirit,' thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." Do immortal, immaterial spirits subsist on material food and drink? "They who are in glass houses should not throw stones."

The "body" is the human organism, comprising the bones, muscles, and all the tissues and organs of the human structure, with the substance of the brain itself, which is the organ of thought.

The "soul" is the life of man, as it is the life of the animal, required in sacrifice as a substitute offering for the life of man, forfeited by sin. Hence, by natural trope, the blood is the soul, as it is in the blood the life is concealed. "For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls, (lives,) for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. ....For it is the life of all flesh." (Lev. 17: 11, 14.) Jesus was to "make his soul an offering for sin." "He hath poured out his soul unto death." (Is. 53.) Therefore, "he shed his blood," "gave his life a ransom," and "gave himself a ransom." "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission."

With this explanation the following Scripture is plain: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? [life.] Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? [life.]" (Mat. 16: 25, 26.) Dr. Adam Clarke, in his comment on the above Scripture, says: "On what authority many have translated the word psuche in v. 25, life, and in this verse [26,] soul, I know not; but I am certain it means life in both places. As translated in Luke, it reads, 'For what is a man advantaged if he gain the whole world and lose himself, or be a cast-away?' (Ch. 9: 25.) I have read this passage to hundreds who did not know that it was in the Bible; and one minister said to me, 'I have preached the gospel over twenty years, and I never knew that this passage was in the book!' Thousands are as ignorant still. If a man loses his 'life' he loses 'himself.' The loss of his life is the loss of his soul in two senses. The 'vapor' 'life' is gone! and the 'man' has perished in dust."

"Spirit," (ruach,) signifies to blow, breath, wind, air, etc. (Gen. 2: 7; 6: 17; 7: 15.) Sometimes it refers to the intelligence, (Job 32: 8, 9; 1 Cor. 2: 11,) as a mere attribute dependent upon organism, which, as a vapor, like our life and breath, vanishes with disease, injury, or destruction of the brain. "When shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit, (ruach) shall return unto God who gave it?" (Eccl. 12: 7.) All of man which is of dust returns on dissolution by death, to dust again; but that breath of life, breathed into man's nostrils, being not of dust, returns to the Giver of all life, but by no means as a conscious personality; for "the dead know not anything." "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." (Eccl. 9: 5, 10.) With man in ruins in the dust, his brain dissolved, both his life and his intelligence like a vapor, have disappeared.

There is a passage in Job, (ch. 27 3,) which reads: "All the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils," to which the translators have affixed the following note in the marginal reading: "That is, the breath which God gave him." Gen. 2: 7. Had they added the same note to Eccl. 12: 1, they would have done incalculable good in keeping human minds from forming their judgments that a part of man is immortal and survives the death of the body, and a thousand other errors as to the state of the departed dead.

Prof. Dodds says: "If mind is not an immortal substance or being, (and I use the terms life, mind or spirit, as one and the same thing,) but the result of an organized brain, then death is certainly the end of man, and human immortality is but a visionary dream! This is making mind to be the effect of an organized brain, even as motion is the effect of the mechanism of a watch. Destroy the mechanism of a watch and motion is gone. Destroy the organism of the brain, and mind is no more! Surely this is a contemplation of gloom as profound as the end is melancholy." (Immortality, pp. 39–41.)

Who is prepared to take the Professor's position, and hold it in the face of reason, Scripture, and scientific facts? And yet to this position every soul is driven who argues for man's immortality, if "life, mind, spirit, are one and the same thing," and that an "immortal substance," as he says, as I have quoted in another place: "I hold all life, whether animal or vegetable, to be a species of mind, and consequently immortal." Is not "mind the result—the effect of an organized brain?" If not, what necessity of the brain in the cranium of a man? What use for carrying about with us so much brain substance in the head? And is it not the destruction of the organism of the brain by disease, accident, or death, the destruction of the mind? Certainly it is in the case of disease and accident to the substance of the brain, and of course it follows that it is so in the destruction and death of the organism of the brain. Why ignore the fact patent to the understanding of every rational man who has not a "pet theory" to sustain?

Of course, this is a contemplation of gloom as profound as the end melancholy, but why deny the fact proven to us in every possible way in which it can be proven by observation and divine revelation? And then we are prepared to receive the gospel which reveals immortality and offers it as a "gift" to the faithful and deserving, "through our Lord, Jesus Christ," and by a resurrection from the dead.

Death is a dreadful calamity fallen upon our race because of sin. Death is no friend to us, nor is the devil, who murdered the human family by his first lie to them, and seeks to murder souls in the second death, by making them believe they have immortal spirits which cannot die, even though they "trust" not in the "living God who raiseth the dead." The grave is "the land of the enemy," and the prison-house of "darkness as darkness itself." But thanks be to God, a Redeemer has been provided, who, having triumphed himself over death, has "the keys of death and the grave," and will ransom his people from under the dominion of death and the grave, and from the power of Satan, and give them immortality in the new world of endless bliss, not to be "hurt of the second death." O. R. FASSETT.

Holiness.

Do we as a people believe in, and advocate the doctrine of holiness as the Scriptures have taught it? If I am not greatly mistaken, it is and has been a cardinal feature in all or nearly all the preaching and writings of those who are anxiously waiting and looking for the Lord; especially since we have learned that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, and that without holiness no one shall see him.

This has been the great burden of the true minister of the gospel of Christ. This is what has prompted so many to leave all for Christ, and go out and labor without pecuniary reward; to exhort and persuade men to renounce sin, and give all for Christ. And whoever of them has not done this, has not been faithful to his high calling, or has not comprehended the fullness of his commission, to go out into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. The gospel here comprehends the whole system by which mankind can be saved. It not only tells him the way or means by which he may be pardoned, but it likewise instructs him how, after giving all for Christ, to keep all upon the altar. It instructs him what manner of person he ought to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God. (2 Pet. 3: 11–12.)

This gospel informs him that with an holy calling he is called. (2 Tim. 1: 9.) It beseeches him by the mercies of God, to "present his body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is but a reasonable service." (Rom. 12: 1.) It also exhorts him "not to be conformed to this world, but to be transformed that he may prove what is that good and acceptable, and perfect will of God." (Rom. 12: 2.)

But when is this state of holiness to be obtained or enjoyed? Oh! for heavenly light to shine upon us, now, just now; and if we have been in darkness all our lives long upon this subject, may God grant to dispel the gloom, and let light divine from his holy oracle shine into our hearts. Thank God, the gospel of his Son disperses the gloom. By it I learned my sinfulness; by it I learned my responsibility to him; by it I discovered that he could not receive me unless I gave up all for him. What! give up your will, your stubborn will? Yes, my will must yield, or he cannot accept me; and I must say to-day, in all honesty to myself and to the truth, that it was among the first (although not the least) steps toward God, to yield my will. It was not after twenty years of Christian experience, or ten or twelve years labor in the gospel ministry. No. This was one of my first lessons from the word of God, and a faithful ministry.

And when this, with my own true condition was understood, I said, "Lord, I yield myself, my body, soul, and spirit; my all to thee I resign."

And what did I then and there receive? "Oh," says one, "that was only pardon for past sins." True, but is God pledged to forgive sins uncommitted? No, for there are no such sins. Sin is the transgression of the law, and for the transgression I am pardoned. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper. But whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." (Prov. 28: 13.) "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. (1 John 1: 9.)

What, then, did I get? Was it anything less than a rebel saved by grace? Was it anything less than being washed in the blood of the Lamb? Was it anything less than being made clean in that cleansing fountain? And would Jesus receive anything less than whole sacrifice? I trust he accepted the offering, and cleansed me from all unrighteousness. Was I made holy? If I did all he required of me, was I not made holy? If not, it is no fault of mine. But if I did do all, then may I not now present my body or flesh to God, holy and acceptable? Yes, unless I have "defiled the temple." Now, was I ever holy; was I ever acceptable to God? If so, and I do not now enjoy the blessing of holiness or sanctification, I ask, in all candor, if I am not in a backslidden state? I would judge thus of myself. But I close this article praying God that our whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Meanwhile, I may write a few short articles on this subject if the editor feels disposed to give them a place in the paper.

WM. MCCULLOCH.

The "Dog in the Yard."

When I wrote my personal experience I mentioned sin in the flesh as illustrated by a dangerous dog in the yard, and I am told that many do not understand my meaning.

I think I clearly expressed it as "sin in the flesh," and the "body of sin." I did not by any means refer to the phrenological arrangement of man, but rather to indwelling sin. Paul calls it also the "old man" and speaks of it as being bitterness, wrath, anger, malice, uncleanness, covetousness, etc. See Eph. 4: 25–32, and Col. 3: 5, 8. I did not mean combativeness, nor destructiveness, nor amativeness as phrenological developments, but to the power of Satan in using these and other propensities for sinful purposes. As long as sin is in the flesh it is natural for the propensities to respond to temptation, and to unite with Satan in seeking to overcome the man. This "old man" is to be "put off," not converted. The "dog in the yard" is to be killed and the dead carcass thrown away: not tamed and kept alive. The yard is to be cleaned out of all dogs of every kind, tame or ugly, and if anything be left let it be a lamb, the spirit of Jesus. "Beware of dogs." Here is a mistake some make. They think a tame dog a very nice animal, and keep one or more for pets. I refer to sin. A little worldliness, and pride, and covetousness as pet dogs, won't harm any one, especially if they are tame and submissive, and quiet. And men waste money in feeding them, and time in playing with them, and think them very harmless. But they do no good, are liable to run mad, and may bite to death at last.

"Beware of dogs."

In reference to my own case, I had always supposed that these sinful lusts were to remain in the flesh, and it was a mark of virtue in me to keep them subdued, and by the power of Christ's spirit to overcome them. This I was able to do generally, and some may say that they do not see any great difference in my actions since I was cleansed of sin in the flesh, from those of my former condition. This may be true to outward sight, but they know not the inward struggles I have endured nor how often I have grieved God's Spirit, and been almost totally discouraged. Some know something about it, but none but God and myself know it all. But now I am able to say by the grace of God I am delivered. The dogs, ugly, chained tamed, or otherwise are not there, The lamblike spirit of Jesus alone dwells there. Is this boasting? "My soul shall make her boast in the Lord: the humble shall hear thereof and be glad." (Ps. 34: 2.) "Not unto us, ord, not unto us, but unto thy e give glory." (Ps. 115: 1.)

he true issue at this time, if there ny issue at all, is, Can such a work lone? Can the flesh be cleansed hat there is no response to tempta- s? Can we "escape the corrup- that is in the world through lust?" no other issues that may be pre- ed, or criticisms that may be ren- d, or censorious remarks that may nade, turn any one aside from see- this one prominent point of the ation, i. e., freedom from sin in flesh. I think all can see this point all can easily investigate the Scrip- s upon it. And the means of be- ing free are also apparent in the iptures. "By grace are ye saved." nd now remember, the dog in the l is not to be tamed or converted, killed, and the dead carcass cast y. The "old man" is to be put off, the "new man," an entirely differ- creature, to be put on. Let me e by repeating once more, "beware logs." FRANK BURR.

Correspondence.

MY JOURNAL.

UESDAY, Oct. 22. Went to Har- d, Ill., with Eld. H. V. Reed and nded the funeral of his father-in- , Alvin Armstrong. He received truth under the preaching of Eld. n Howel, in Winthrop, Me., in 3. He has been a faithful and con- ent believer in the Lord's coming he fell on sleep, Oct. 19, in Har- d, where he lived, and was beloved, many years. "Light is sown for the hteous, and gladness for the up- ht in heart." He leaves a widow l several children, "who do not sor- v as those without hope." I spoke m Gen. 49: 33, upon death and the urrection, which is the patriarchal e. They looked for a heavenly ntry and city, in the new earth. ther Armstrong has our sympa- ies in this hour of trial.

Harvard is the town where we have offer of a fine lot of ground for a ninary. And it is time our people re waking up to the subject of ed- ation. We are to occupy till the vior comes; and there is no sub- t, aside from religion, more import- t than this. As a people, we have ne nothing to establish or sustain ucational interests.

THURSDAY, Oct. 24. I spent the y with Br. Claw and family, in nesville, Wis., and on Friday came Brodhead, and put up with Br. H. Moore, and also, visited Br. Button. d an excellent conversation with aged mother. She is seventy-six ars old, and has brought up a large mily of sons. Her husband was ken away when her children had ed of a father's care. "If I had em to bring up again," said she, "I ould do very differently, and train em up in a very different way. I n't correct the errors, which they ere taught in youth."

Her early views of religion, were uch like those of Adventists. She ard a funeral sermon once, when the inister told the people that the man d gone to glory in a "chariot of fire," e remarked to the people that she d not see the sense of preaching the neral of a man who had gone to ory! She loves Christian society, t is a little deaf and says "We old eople are neglected somewhat." She d heard much of me, and was very ad to see me, and hear me converse. cheered her heart. Old people and hildren are too much neglected. inisters should always take pains to eak to them, and make them happy.

SATURDAY, Oct. 26. Came to Janes- ille, but missed connections, and so iled to reach my appointment at Harvard. I shall enjoy rest from ulpit work to-morrow.

SABBATH, Oct. 27. Attended the Congregational church this a. m., Mr. Whiting, pastor. The organ is large, one of the best. The choir was well trained, and they sung in operatic style. The chants and hymns were sung in a way to make one feel he was in a Romanist meeting. They are preparing to go to Rome easily and with expedition. Alas for the ancient simplicity of the gospels. In opening the services, he read the account of God's covenant with Abraham of "circumcision," (as though that had anything to do with baptism,) and connected it with the ceremony of sprinkling, and then put a drop of water on the heads of two little girls, in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. This was not baptism. "He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved,"

He spoke from Rev. 3: 2. Admonition to "wake up." He illustrated and enforced this duty in different ways, and labored earnestly to wake up his people, a thing, he said, they much needed. They have a large and beautiful chapel. It was about one third filled, with serious and intelligent hearers. They have worshiped in this new temple three years. They have lost ground in this time, which, the pastor said, was not a hopeful sign for the future.

In the evening I attended service at the Baptist cathedral. It is superior to the Congregationalist house, and is a splendid affair. The audience did not half fill the house. The pastor, Mr Bateman, is an able speaker, but did not preach to-night. He put on one of the school-boys, who, if he does not know it, some one ought to tell him that he has missed his calling. He got out one new idea. That the death of the sinner was an active death!—and talked blindly of eternal sufferings. J. V. HIMES.

Backsliding from the Apostolic Faith.

"Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." (2 Pet. 3: 14.)

If eighteen hundred years ago it was lawful for God's servants to preach, exhort and talk of the second coming of our blessed King, even Jesus, why should it not be to-day? But, alas! how is it? We, almost two thousand years nearer that glorious event, if we presume to stand and proclaim the near coming of our Redeemer, what are the results? We are called fanatics, false prophets, "bothering our heads with something that does not concern us." But how comes it that the second coming of Christ does not concern us? If it was the hope of Paul, Timothy, Peter, Jude, and also the hope of all the prophets, why should it not be the hope of the children of God today? If they looked for that event as the time of their eternal deliverance, why should not we? There never has been any plan other than the coming of Jesus whereby we get our reward. If this be the case why is it the professed Christian of our day does not love hear of his coming?

1st. Because they do not love him as they should. If we have a friend gone away, one whom we love with all of our heart, can it be possible we do not love to learn and hear of his speedy return? I think not.

2nd. Because they are looking to another source for their redemption, and that none other than death. Go with me to meeting; hear their sermons; listen to their hymns, and tell me, (judging from their own words,) how much confidence they place in his coming as the time of their reward. Do they not tell us in their hymns, "Death is the gate to endless joys." Or again, "'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends to call us to his arms." Where, in all God's word has he said he would send by the hand of death for us? Most emphatically, nowhere has he said so. But he has said, the last enemy, (not friend,) that shall be destroyed is death.

May we all be ready for that glorious event. VIRGIL F. HUNT.

Meteor Seen at Rome.

PRIESTLY USE OF THE PHENOMENA.

THE people of Italy are expected to believe that there will speedily be tremendous manifestations of divine wrath about the unholy occupation of Rome by the Italian Government. The Almighty's vengance on account of the objection that the Italians have for the use of Rome as a nest of conspirators, is anticipated. It is understood that the only way in which the awful visitations of an enraged and sanguinary Deity can be avoided is to speedily restore the Pope to his temporal power. How can the Lord hold his hand when there are theaters in Sacred Rome in which the clerical character is ridiculed? In consequence of the obduracy of the Italian heart there are solemn warnings. Vesuvius has recently been agitated, and has thrown out a shower of ashes; and a London Times letter dated at Naples on the 12th, says:

"Many of the residents in Castellamare, moreover describe a remarkable and novel sound, as though the mountain were sinking in the sea. The observations were quite distinct, and yet agreed in their character—water was being drawn up and by the mountain. Externally, at various intervals, clouds of smoke or vapor have been ejected almost as voluminous as those I witnessed in April."

Suppose the bottom should drop out of Vesuvius, would not that prove that the King of Italy is a thief, and Pope a close prisoner in the Vatican? Certainly it would show that something dreadful was the matter. But the indications that Vesuvius is sucking up the sea, or sinking into it, which means the same thing, is not the most appalling of the Italian phenomena supposed to be connected with outrages upon the temporalities of the princely but spiritualized Pope. On Saturdy morning, August 31, a meteor as large as the moon was seen at Rome. It was white, had a wonderful smoky trail, and exploded with a grand and terrifying detonation. Father Secchi gives the following characteristics of the bolide as it was observed from Rome on the 31st of August, at fifteen minutes past 5 A. M.:

"Small and reddish at the beginning it moved slowly forward from south-southheast towards north northeast, increasing in light and volume, leaving a track like vapor of a dark color. When it arrived at a certain point it flamed brilliantly, and became almost as large as the moon, disappeared almost immediatly afterwards, leaving a long shaped cloud, which soon assumed a twisted form, like a immense serpent. A few minutes afterwards—that is, not more than four, according to various calculations—a violent detonation was heard, followed by two others, nearer and weaker. From the accounts gathered it results that the line traversed by the bolide was not in a vertical plain over Rome, but inclined towards the east."

The peasants who were abroad at the early hour of the appearance of the bolide, and for whose special edification, no doubt, the peculiar pyrotechnics were prepared, were fully persuaded that the end of the world was at hand. They had heard a great deal about the vengance of heaven,—and there it was, sure enough!—Cincinnati Commercial.

Newspaper Grumblers.

Grumbling about newspapers is as ancient as newspapers themselves. And, notwithstanding the multiplication of these modern conveniences, and the sleepless efforts of publishers to adapt their papers to every variety of taste, and every shade of sentiment affording, one might think, ample opportunity to readers to suit themselves perfectly—yet there is still perhaps as much grumbling about newspapers as there ever was.

We suppose it does not often occu to the grumblers that possibly they themselves may be at fault, may be unreasonable, may expect impossibilities, may be out of humor, may have a fit of indigestion or spleen, or may be stupid and unappreciative. It may never occur to them that the men who toil night and day to furnish them with the freshest news, and the greatest variety of information and entertainment, are mortal, and sometimes tire themselves, and get sleepy, and cross, and stupid, and forgetful, and careless; and need and desire, too, some consideration and even sympathy from those for whom they unceasingly work.

Fault-finding readers do not consider that everything that is made by human brains and hands must of necessity be imperfect however strong the desire and however earnest the effort may be to have it faultless. And, above all, they forget that a newspaper cannot be made for general circulation, and yet, in everything, exactly suit any one person. A thoroughly good, enterprising paper is like a really well spread dinner table. It contains variety as well as quantity; something for every taste, and enough of each kind to satisfy any reasonable apetite. It is not expected that any guest should eat of every dish provided. It is not supposed for a moment that every dish will be palatable to every guest or agree with one's digestion; but it is thought, and reasonably, too, that from the abundant bill of fare every guest can select enough of what will be digestible and agreeable to make a substantial and satisfactory meal.

Just so it is with every well-edited newspaper. No one man is expected to read everything in the paper, or to like everything if he reads it; but every man is expected to find enough that is good, and useful, and acceptable, and agreeable in the ample columns spread out before him, to be a full equivalent for what the paper cost him, and if he happens to find on the carte an article which offends his taste, or is in opposition to his views, he has just to let that alone, and leave it for another whom it will just suit, and for whose taste it was gotten up. In choosing his paper one should do just as he does in choosing his restaurant; he should select one whose general style suits him; and when his taste changes, or the paper deteriorates, he should change and try another; but never fret himself or vex his neighbors by grumbling and scolding about his paper, which, after all, is just about as necessary to his comfort as his meals. —Boston Traveler.

Manger Dogs.

"BEWARE of dogs," and especially of manger dogs. There are persons whose special forte seems to be meddle and mar. They cannot do much, but they can hinder a great deal. Their finger is in every pie, their spoon in every dish, and always and everywhere they hinder more than they help, and ruin if they cannot rule. Men who cannot preach will break a church in pieces rather than stand aside for those who can. Men who cannot write will claim to dictate who shall write, and how. Men who cannot lead sinners to Christ will stand in the path of earnest soul-winners, and hinder and cripple them in their labors. Men who have no heart or power to do mission work themselves will meddle and muddle with those who have both. Men who are too covetous to give their own money try to order and direct as to where and how all the money which others give shall be expended. Men who cannot rule their own houses well, seek to cotrol and manage churches, and interests, and labors, which they are totally unfitted to guide.

All this seems exceedingly strange. A man who would manage any worldly business must first learn it, and master it in its length and breadth; and unless he does this his oversight will be meddlesome and impertinent. And this is just the character of the oversight of these manger-dogs. They speak evil of the things they know not. They crowd themselves into places from which the law of fitness would forever bar them. Ignorance sits in judgment over learning, folly over wisdom, money over worth, and impudence over piety; and so men who can work are hindered by men who cannot, and men who are full of zeal, and love, and high resolve are cramped and choked, and held back by those who seek to hinder what the Lord never honored them with ability to perform.

Is there not a better way than this? Let the tools be given to those who can use them; and let manger-dogs lie in mangers if they will, and growl and starve over hay which they cannot eat, while others turn aside to paths which God appoints, to find blessings abounding, and rejoice in prosperity and success.—The Christian.

Hurrying to Death.

Very recently a distinguished professor in a Virginia University wanted to deposit a letter in the post-office on the other side of the railroad track. A locomotive was approaching; he thought he could cross before the ponderous engine could come along. He miscalculated the speed. In another moment he was a shapeless mass. Had he waited two minutes—half a minute, the train would have passed along, and he could have deposited his letter.

A young lady wished to show her friends how easily she could cross in front of a locomotive; she did cross, but her streaming dress caught in the passing wheel, drawing her back under its crushing weight.

One afternoon, about sundown, a young wife was looking out of the window of her beautiful country home for the return of her young husband from the city. For the six months of their married life just past they had been busily fixing up their country place; both were young, both were healthy; the husband was in business on his own account, with every prospect of increasing success. She saw him get out of the cars, and passed down the stairs to greet him at the door; but when she reached it, he was not there. She thought he was playing her a little trick; she called for him playfully, affectionately, but there was no answer; she saw a crowd of men approach the gate, open it, come up the path with her dead husband. He did alight from the cars, and safely stepped on the platform before the station. There was a train coming in an opposite direction; he thought he had plenty of time to cross in front of it, and did cross in front of it, except by one single inch; the wheel struck the heel of his boot, wheeled him round under the cars, and all was over; one minute longer, and he could have crossed with the locomotive behind him.

Limbs are broken, lives are lost every year, in any large city, by attempting to cross in front of a moving horse or vehicle; an infatuation seems to come across many under such circumstances, as if they were willing to risk limb and life itself to save one single sixty seconds.—Hall's Journal of Health.

A VERY hard-headed clapper in an old church tower professed the intensest distress because its bell was hopelesly cracked. Many people thought it a pitiable position, and wished the sad-hearted clapper a better bell. But just then the ghost of ancient Diogenes, the sage, floated in through the window, and whistled most angrily: "Master Clapper, cease your noise, and remember, in the first place, you cracked the bell; and, secondly, nobody would have known it had you not told them."

I have observed often that those who bemoan divisions in a church are they who make them; I have also observed sometimes that they who make them are most ready to publish the fact: I have observed another fact, viz. that all clappers are not of as good metal as the bell they crack.—R. A. Griffin.

SHALL we not all soon take lanterns, a la Diogenes, and go out at midday in search of an honest man? If we read the various newspapers, setting forth their various parties, creeds, opinions, and doctrines, we may well believe that the world is given over to a set of individuals for whom such mild terms as villains, blacklegs, swindlers, impostors, etc., would be delicate flattery. Politics have become so dirty that one is afraid to soil his hands with dabbling in the foul stream. Sharpers and swindlers are in high places of trust and authority. Social problems and questions are discussed in the most personal and abusive manner. Even religious doctrines have become so mixed that one is not quite sure whether black is realy black and white white, or whether all things are not one uncertain and indefinite gray!—Liberal Christian.

The Bible Class.

Death of Judas.

"And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed and went and hanged himself."—Mat. 27: 5.

"Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out. Acts 1: 18.

To reconcile these apparent contradictions, Mr. Granville Penn shows that the term used by Peter for burst asunder is elakese, a Greek first aorist, formed from the Latin word laqueo, by mere adoption........Those who have been in the southern countries of Europe, know that hanging is performed with a great length of cord, with which the criminal is precipitated from a high beam, and is thus violently laqueated, or snared in a noose midway. Now, Judas being a very corpulent man, according to the description of the ancient Christians, might, after throwing himself headlong, be caught midway in the noose, and a disruption of the bowels have ensued. Mr Penn notes that the Greek lakeo, properly signifies "to crack," or "make a noise;" but from Mr. Valpy's explanation of lakis, it does not, we think, simply mean "making a noise," but that noise which accompanies a burst or rent. Mr. V. adds, that lacero, "lacerate," is derived from this word. At all events, the two Evangelists are completely reconciled in sense.—From Dunbar & Barker's Greek Lexicon, p. 1147, Ext. by A. Armour.

Is. 57: 1, 2, is somewhat obscure in the common version. Dr. Delitzch translates the passage thus: "The righteous perisheth and no man taketh it to heart; and pious men are swept away without anyone considering that the righteous are swept away from misfortune. He entereth into peace; they rest upon their beds, whoever has walked straight before him."—Prophetic Times.

2 John 7, literally reads, "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not Jesus Christ coming in flesh. This is the deceiver and the anti-Christ.' A. A.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 5, 1872.

Business Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS. { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.

BUSINESS AGENT.
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

L C Collins J Sturges J I Dillier S Smith J B Hurd A J Young C L Ives G E Graves J Harrow J Brooks J A Smith S E Larphere M A Hill I Myers A E Babcock W McCulloch T L Scott N W Wait G W Miller W Main G Thomson R V Philip R Lester L C Collins W Ingmire C Benjamin J Brittons J Sturgis J Lowry P H Drake J Ball T J Morgan S R Long J Hudson A S Fuller J A Parr C K Gile R B Warren A Farrow A Collins A P Dugger W A Fran A Armour A P Dugger J M Snook A Bailey S C Wellcome J H Parsons D A Bradley A P Dugger C Crowell J Ridley W Morman E A Marsh A W Sibley R Tuttle J H Whitmore W Morphy

Books and Tracts by Mail.

R H Bateman N S Hemenway I Culver C Ostrom G Elliott V M Gray A Bailey W S Turner R W McKee J D Dillen S J Halslett E Gilford L Armsby A S Fuller A Farrow & D D Mitchell J S Nowlin H Welty T J Morgan R Lester J J Smith E G Hobbs C Fox P Young I Boddy H B Sevey

Marriages.

DE VOSS—COLLINS. In Waveland, Iowa, Oct. 29, 1872, by Eld. W. Morphy, Mr. Joseph W. DeVoss and Miss Edith C. Collins.

Obituary.

DICKINSON.—Died, at Grand Ledge, Mich., Oct. 29, Br. Lyman Dickinson, aged 80 years and 15 days.

Services at Grand Ledge by the writer, assisted by F. W. Minister. R. T.

BALDWIN.—Died Oct. 5, 1872, at her residence, Akron, Ohio, Mrs. Mary Baldwin; aged 67 years and 9 months.

She was a strong Second Adventist, and died in that faith. Her sickness was both lingering and distressing. She leaves six children to mourn her loss.

MARY J. MELVIN.

HILL.—Died, at Delavan, Wis., Miss Carrie Hill, aged 41 years and 7 months.

In early life she was seriously inclined, and even when but seven or eight years old, her thoughts were of a religious character, and she experienced much solicitude for her soul. It was not, however, until she was fourteen years of age that she saw herself a lost and helpless sinner, and embraced Jesus as her Savior. Her views of Christ as her Savior were most clear and vivid, and the love and labor which grew out of it was most earnest and fruitful. Every power she had she gave to Jesus. A few years after her conversion she became an invalid and remained so until her death. During long years she was a sufferer, and while thus passing through a furnace of no ordinary trial she developed a most beautiful Christian character. Her experiences were characterized by a tenderness and depth rarely seen among the people of God. She rested in Christ with an undoubting trust. Her faith was as nearly perfect as God's saints are ever permitted to enjoy. To this blessed rest in Christ, God brought her not only through physical sufferings, which at times were most intense, but also through her own thirst for righteousness and sanctifying influences of the spirit. For nine months previous to her death she was confined to her room and most of that time to her bed. Through all these days of suffering she never doubted her heavenly Father's love. Her will was perfectly sunk in that of God's.

She had a strong desire to live, and almost the last she did not expect to die. She thought her work not yet finished. God thought differently. She left the matter of life or death with her long-tried and trusted heavenly Father. To the last moment she retained this ardent desire for life here and yet kept it sweetly sunk in God's better will. Her experience constantly deepened. Her trust rested without a question on God's sure word of promise. She felt assured of her hope in Christ. Her end was most serene and beautiful. She fell asleep in Jesus. She lived and died, leaving behind her a great legacy of thought and Christian experience.

She was endowed with an intellect of unusual strength. She employed her pen when able to do so, and left many published articles of great beauty and worth. And yet, dowered with unusual intellectual gifts, she combined the simplicity and humility of a faithful follower of Christ. Living above the world she did what she could in the world. Dowered with rare gifts of heart and permitted the enjoyment of an unusual religious experience, she always remembered that all she was and had was the gift of sovereign and undeserved grace. She died giving up her spirit in faith and resignation to her heavenly Father.

She lies in the beautiful Spring Grove Cemetery at Delavan. She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting to hear the voice of the archangel and the trump of God to gather his saints to their promised reward—eternal life.

D. E. HALTEMAN.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Eld. Wm. Ingmire has removed from Lluckiaen to East Penfield, Monroe Co., N. Y. Churches in Central or Western New York, desiring his services may correspond—addressing him at the latter place.

Notice.

The church of Arena being in a great measure destitute of preaching in consequence of my protracted sickness, would be glad of a call from any of the preaching brethren that could make it convenient so to do. Arena is on the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien railroad, about 25 or 30 miles west of Madison. Any preachers on their way to or from Iowa, could give us a call. GEO. THOMSON, Pastor.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Galva, Nov. 9, as Br. Runquist may arrange.
Milroy, Nov. 10. C. W. SMITH.

White Rock, Ogle Co., Union chapel, 3 p. m., Nov. 10. Subject: The Gospel Hope.
Morn. and eve. at Elida. C. C. MARSTON.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

The next Annual Meeting of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference will be held at New Rutland, La Salle Co., commencing Wednesday, Dec. 11, and holding over the following Sabbath.
SILAS B. MABRY, Sec'y.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Dec. 2-10.
Ionia, Warren Co., Dec. 16-27, and longer if the interest demands. C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.
Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.
Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Forreston, Nov. 6, 7.
Elida, Nov. 8-10.
Byron, Ogle Co., Nov. 11.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.
C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.
Traveling brethren invited to call.
S. B. MABRY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.
Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 5, and over Sunday.
Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawyer may arrange.
WM. McCULLOCH.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Aug. 11, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Aug. 18, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Aurora, in the Arcadome Hall, on Broadway every Sunday, at 3 P. M. A. F. DROGER.

ARKANSAS.

I shall spend the month of November in Arkansas, in such places as the brethren there may deem best. Any who wish to correspond with me can address me at 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
JOSHUA V. HIMES.

The second Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Arkansas will be held in Flatwood, Izard Co., Nov. 30, and over the Sabbath. The churches will appoint their delegates in good season. And brethren isolated will please come and report the state of things in their region. Eld. J. V. Himes will be with us and help in the good work. Come brethren and sisters, let us have a grand rally for the truth.
S. ROSENBAUGH,
J. B. BROWN.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Beaver, Beaver Co., Nov. 24.
Ogle, Butler Co., Nov. 25, 26.
Muncy, Lycoming Co., Nov. 28, 29.
Quaker hill, 2:30 P. M., Nov. 30, and Sunday, at 11 A. M., Dec. 1.
Warrensville, eve., Dec. 1.
Warrensville, to answer questions asked, by Eld. Krouse, and J. R. Stead, evenings Dec. 2 and 3.
Canton, Bradford Co., Dec. 4-6.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., eve. Dec. 7 and over Sunday.
East Troy, Bradford Co., Dec. 6, 10.
South Creek, Dec. 11. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

MICHIGAN.

QUARTERLY MEETING NOTICE.

The next meeting of the Southern Michigan Quarterly Conference will be held at Woodbridge, commencing Nov. 14, and continue over Sunday. Those coming on the cars will leave the train at Reading. Teams will meet trains there on Friday to carry all who come to the meeting.
E. WAKEMAN, Sec'y pro tem.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

The Q. M. of the First District of S. W. Iowa and N. W. Missouri, will be held at Waveland, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, Dec. 6, and over Sabbath. Elds. D. O. Hink and D. Q. Kent expect to be with us. WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

Clinton, Clinton Co., Nov. 19-28. Let the friends in all the region come in and help us in this meeting, in Jesus' name. C. C. MARSTON.

The next Q. M. of the Deep Creek District of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa will be held with the church, at Deep Creek, Clinton Co., commencing Thursday eve., Dec 21, and continues over Sunday. Come brethren and sisters, and let as many of us be there as can, and we will have a good time. Now let us make our arrangements to be on hand, to work for God and perishing souls. God will bless us if we do our duty. Come one, come all. A general invitation is given to other districts. Come, brethren, and help us. Those coming by railroad will please call on Br. C. W. Patchen, Delmar Junction, about six miles south of Maquoketa.
R. B. DUTTON, Pres.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Greeley, Sabbath, Nov. 10. Elk Creek, as Br. Lewis may arrange, Friday eve., Nov., 22, and over the following Sabbath. J. RIDLEY.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.
Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.
Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JANES.

The adjourned session of the first Q. M. of the Manchester district, Iowa, will commence Friday eve., Nov. 15, with the Elk Creek church, at the Ottsville S. H., in Elk Co. A cordial invitation is extended to every lover of Jesus within reach of this meeting, to be there. Let each church see that their delegate has his credentials, and let each church in the district forward the quarterly mission fund to the treasurer of this quarterly conference, in harmony with the resolution passed at our last annual meeting. And let us pray that this meeting be the best of the season. We shall expect to see our Evangelist at this meeting, and he is hereby cordially invited to be present. Let there be a general rally for God and his cause. MARTHA J. JANES, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Alma City, Waseca Co., 7 p. m., Saturday, Nov. 9.
Freedom, Converse S. H., 10½ a. m., Sunday, Nov. 10.
Medo, Blue Earth Co., Goodwin S. H., 2½ p. m., Sunday, Nov. 10. S. C. WELLCOME.

Kasota, Lasuer Co., our town S. H., Saturday eve., Nov. 16, and Sunday, at 10:30 a. m., and 7 p. m.
Kasota, Turriten S. H., Sunday, Nov. 17, 2:30 p. m.
Madelia, Wattonwon Co. Br. Winters and others may arrange. Saturday eve., Nov. 23 and over the Sabbath.
Shelbyville, Blue Earth Co., Brown S. H., Saturday eve., Nov. 30.
Allen S. H., Dec. 1, 10:30 a. m., and 2:30 and 7 p. m. S. C. WELLCOME.

KANSAS.

Bero, Sabbath, Nov. 10, and onward as Br. Sanford and brethren may arrange.
S. B. MABRY.

MISSOURI.

The fourth Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa A. C. Conference will be held with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co., commencing Friday, Nov. 8, and holding over Sunday. We look for a good representation from all the churches in the District.
H. BILLMIRE, Pres't.

The first Q. M. in district No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held with the Clear Creek church, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Dec. 13, and holding over Sunday. It is hoped that Elder Wm. McCulloch will be with us. Let there be a general rally of all our brethren and sisters, and let us begin our Conference year in good earnest.
I. F. ROSEBERRY, Sec'y.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Brackut or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

To all whom it may concern: Whereas, Br. Adams, of Delton, is traveling with my Tent this summer, all who wish a meeting of that order in their vicinity should write to him at Augusta, Eau Claire Co. Wis., Care of T. W. Richards. He is an able minister of the word and the Tent is just the thing to pitch in all our little villages. Such a meeting costs but little, yet will do much good. Let all who want such a meeting write at once, so he can arrange. P. W. HOUGH.

NEW YORK.

The Southern District New York Conference will hold its first Q. M. at Honeoye, Ontario Co., commencing Friday, Dec. 6, and continuing over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, we cordially invite you. Come with hearts filled with the spirit. Come with a determination to work for Jesus. Come praying that God's blessing may rest upon this meeting.
H. H. BROWN, Sec'y.

The Lord willing, the first Q. M. of the Eastern District of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held with the church in Conquest, commencing Friday eve., Dec 13 and holding over Sunday. It is earnestly hoped there will be a general rally of all the forces in the district to this first district meeting. Come in the name of the Lord for the hour of his judgment hasteth greatly. Let us strengthen our hands and press the battle a little longer while yet we may. Each church should take the quarterly collections early and all come to help "after a Godly sort." Pray for this meeting. W. E. BROWN, Sec'y.
M. R. MILLS, Pres't.

Advertisements.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 40c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1.50. By mail, $1.75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6 cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7.50. by express.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 454 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2.50. Post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c. post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 12c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth. $2; leather 2.50.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Hond. 460 pp. $1.25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4.00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 60c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 25.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1.50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4.00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors.

Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.
IRON WORLD PUB. Co.
—437. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 8, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $400, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Farm for Sale.—A fine Farm of 200 acres, in Central Wisconsin. Well situated, and worth $40 an acre. Address J. S. Ames, Kenosha, Wisconsin.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity. Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding.......50c
Morocco "........75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.
This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.
For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT, Box 426, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

A BOOK FOR NOTHING!

Send a new subscriber to THE TIMES for one year, with the money, and we will send you a copy of

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT,
FREE!

This book takes up the fancied 144 Contradictions of the Bible, which Infidels array against the book, and shows that they are

Extravagant, Sophistical,
Unreasonable, Jesuitical,
Fallacious, Untenable,
Puerile, Ill-judged,
Senseless, Drivelling,
Silly, Vapid,
Absurd, Illogical.

The work the book proposes is not only done, but well done.

PRICE—FIFTY CENTS.

☞ Remember a copy is sent FREE for a new subscriber to THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Or for 25c. to an old subscriber renewing his subscription.

JAPeterson
146 Frost st
18—13

Advent Christian Times.

LIBRARY COPY AURORA COLLEGE

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.—NO. 15. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 12, 1872. WHOLE NO. 446

Advent Christian Times.

Evil Judgment.

There is a vague and general knowledge prevalent as to what is Christian duty on the subject of judging men; but it is one of those things in which the temptation to do wrong comes to us from so many sides, in which the example is so bad, and in which sympathy and invitation so work together to produce mischief, that we need line upon line and precept upon precept, in this matter.

By the command, "Judge not, that ye be not judged," we are not to understand that our Savior meant to forbid the formation of all judgments of other persons' conduct and character. He gave us implicit rules for doing it, as where he says "Ye shall know them by their fruits," thus making it a duty to judge all persons according to the appropriate fruits of their life.

There are many situations in which judging is a duty. For example, the judge upon his bench must, in official solemnity, form judgments of men's character and conduct. The teacher must discriminate between his pupils, and form judgments of what they are, and whether their conduct is good or bad. It is his very business to shape character, and therefore to take into consideration its faults and excellencies, its defects and possibilities. Still more eminently is it a parent's duty.

Moreover, in our intercourse with man it is important to our protection for us to discriminate between men. It is no violation either of the letter or of the spirit of Scripture, if you dwell with a man who is a brawler, to think that he is a brawler; or, if you see a man that is a drunkard, to think that he is a drunkard; or if your experience has shown a man to be a liar, to think that he is a liar. You must take men for what they are. If you made no distinction between the just and the unjust, the true and the false, great injustice would be done to the just and the true.

It is not, then, a rational, conscientious, benevolent judgment of man that our Master marks for reprobation. Let us look, therefore, a little, at what is exceptionable.

First, it is, I think, a great fault for us to be unnecessarily concerned with other peoples' characters and business. There is an invasion of the privacy of other people which honor, to say nothing of Christianity, should withold us from. Every person has a right, not only to his own inward self, but also to a certain outward liberty which none of us ought to invade.

The habit of thinking a good deal about other people, of pondering their goings and comings, of concerning yourself about them anyhow, is not a good habit. Oftentimes there is no particular sin in it, but it stands connected with so many temptations that if a person carelessly begins to roam through peoples' words and deeds and conduct, he will almost inevitably be led to do more than that.

It is asked, "Is it not a good thing to analyze character?" Yes, it is. "Is it not a good thing to analyze other people's characters?" Historic characters, it is. "Is it not a good thing to analyze the characters of the people with whom you live?" That depends upon what you do it for. If you do it for amusement, no. If you do it for an assured Christian purpose, it may not be wrong. But it is dangerous under any circumstances—especially if you have imagination and mirthfulness. It is much better that one should be concerned with other things than his fellow-men in these respects.

In the next place, the spirit of the New Testament of the Master is one that should make us exceedingly careful of being susceptible to the evil in persons.

There are two classes of persons (with many intermediate classes, of course), one of whom will tell you, on leaving a company, every discrepancy, every unnatural thing, every inharmonious occurrence, that took place in that company. Every little weakness, and every disagreeable thing, was spied.

On the other hand, there are persons who, on withdrawing themselves from a company so demean themselves that for aught that you can learn from them you think they had been where there was nothing but sunshine and peace. They seem to have seen the bright side, the pleasureable traits, the amiable things. Now, which of these dispositions is the Christian one?

I think every person should look upon all human beings as having dignity and sanctity, by reason of their relations to the eternal God, and that he shall feel that His thoughts move around about them. Every man should be sacred to you, just as a man brought before a judge, clothed with the solemnities of an oath to adjudicate with the utmost intergrity and rectitude, should be sacred to the judge. Your fellow-men should be sacred not merely to your tongue, but they should be sacred to your thoughts; and you should hold yourself accountable to God and to yourself for the most scrupulous honor in judging people, even in your own unuttered privacy of meditation.

Let us look, now, at some of the dispositions that one must have in order to be in the habit of looking at and speaking of persons on the dark side. I think that where persons are in this habit, they usually begin thoughtlessness, and do not really stop to think what the effect will be on themselves or others. It is pleasant to talk about people. They furnish an unfailing topic, because men fill the world, and the phases of human nature are endless.

At length there creeps in a subtle flattery of pride. Persons have a fancy that because they are acute to detect in people shades of weakness or fault, they have a keen insight; and there comes to be a latent gratulation upon their capacity to delineate character.

If a person have mirthfulness, he is very apt to indulge in serving up his fellow men. Nothing will afford you so much amusement as your fellow men. At church there is scarcely a bonnet that has not some droll cant, and scarcely a person that does not get up and sit down in some queer way, and you go home and say, "Did you see?" There is no malice in it. But you will find out, before you have indulged in this practice long, if you are cautious and self-examining, that the habit of holding people up sometimes in a false and sometimes in a true light, for criticism and ridicule, cannot but take away the sensibility and honor and Christian delicacy of your own mind.

It cannot be long before that which begins in this way becomes a serious habit established in the mind. Persons who have indulged in this habit grow up, and go into active life, and begin to be the subjects more or less of misfortune, and they become tried and embittered; and now comes a fearful change. For while we may, in youth, in health, and in the more amiable moods, indulge in talking about others without thinking of its mischievous effect. When we have come to be subject to misfortune, and our own spirits have become a little soured, we begin to have more or less malignity. The habit then takes on a form which is a great deal more exceptionable; and it is very hard to separate between the heedless, half-amiable ridiculing of men in our youth, and those bitter thrusts that we now make at them. In the first place, we lower our own self-respect and so lower our own affections for men. I do not think it possible for us to be in the habit of lowering people in our own thoughts, and yet treat them with Christian tenderness and a Christian honor. "Honor all men," we are told. There is a certain respect and reverence due from every human being, to every human being; and it is incompatible with this spirit of detraction, even in its mildest form.

In the next place, as I have already intimated, this practice of talking about people's faults is destroying that spirit of Christian charity in yourself which ought to be the keynote and very characteristic element in your life. It is exactly the opposite of a positive doing good to men, of seeking to please your fellow men to edification, of living one for another, and of bearing one another's burdens. The commands of Christ are that we should hide each other's faults; that we should shield each other; that we should succor each other; that we should help each other as true yoke fellows.

But you may ask, "Can the habit be overcome? If so, what are the rules for overcoming it? In the first place, it seems to me you should go to God's word, and search out its teaching on this subject. There is a great deal in the Bible about this; and you ought just to find out what it is, and then make up your mind that by the grace of God you will endeavor to do what the Scripture enjoins. These are the preliminary steps. Then you should adopt this simple rule: "I will never speak evil of any person because it is true, even if it be true; I will never speak evil of any person unless there is some distinct and proper end to be gained by it."

In the next place, when you find uncharitable thoughts beginning to rise in your mind; when you find yourself inclined to feast on your neighbor's faults, instantly turn the bad inclination into prayer. Pray for them. Offer them before God. You will find that this will check the wrong spirit in you, and sweeten your mind.

A great many of those who listen to me are young, and are just entering into life; and these admonitory remarks are specially applicable to them; but I take it that there is not one person here who does not need to be cautioned and guarded on this subject. It is one of those things about which you need to hear often. Take care to be just toward men even in your thoughts. Take care to remember that a most solemn Christian duty rests upon you to think kindly of them, and to do them good, both by your thoughts and by your words.—H. W. Beecher.

Spiritism.

We have received from a friend an article, cut from a Spiritualist paper, so full of indecent and blasphemous utterances against ministers and the church of Christ, that we cannot soil our pages with it; but it is high time that the unsuspecting friends and defenders of the foul delusion should have their eyes opened to the rank infidelity and fetid immorality which inheres in it. It is itself an uncleanness which the Bible everywhere condemns, and which no one can indulge without sin; and its tendencies are everywhere and without exception to mischief and infamy.

Dr. William B. Potter, of Trenton, N. J., himself a leading medium, published a pamphlet on the subject in June, 1866, in which, after "fifteen years' critical study of spiritual literature, an extensive aquaintance with the leading Spiritualists, and a patient, systematic, and thorough investigation of the manifestations for many years," he undertakes to tell "from actual knowledge" exactly what Spiritualism is. In this pamphlet he speaks of these spirit-communications as "full of the wildest fancies, and the most absurd and contradictory teachings," and specifies particularly its continual tendency, both theoretically and practically, to set aside all the laws of marriage and good morals. That no one may charge us with misrepresentation, we quote his own words:

"Among the innumerable follies of which Spiritualists have been guilty, the greatest is following the advice of Free-lovers, libertines, and low spirits in refusing to disfellowship the persistently vicious, when it is a notorious fact that many mediums are practicing the most detestable tricky, deceit, fraud, and falsehood, and that leading teachers, noted mediums, and popular speakers have deserted companions, obtained divorces, gone off with affinities, or practiced promiscuous intercourses to get spiritual elements, or to impart vital magnetism for the cure of diseases. Hundreds of families have been broken up, and many affectionate wives deserted by affinity-seeking husbands; many once devoted wives have been seduced, and left their husbands and tender, helpless children, to follow some higher attraction; many well-disposed, but simple-minded, girls have been deluded by affinity notions, and led off by affinity hunters, to be deserted in a few months with blasted reputations, or led to deeds still more dark and criminal to hide their shame. Yet, in the face of all this, at the National Convention of Spiritualists at Chicago, called to consider the question of a National Organization, the only plan approved by its committee, especially provided, that no charge should ever be entertained against any member, and that any person, without any regard to moral character, might become a member."

The same writer, in the same publication, speaks of "much immorality and licentiousness among Spiritualists," and undertakes to account for it as "mainly due to three things: 1st. The teachings of seducing spirits, [what other kind has Spiritualism to do with?] who have constantly and persistently, in every possible way, from the gentlest and most covert, to the boldest and most reckless, assailed the binding force of marriage bonds. Nearly every case of affinity, folly, or free-love crime, from first to last has been approved, if not planned by spirits. 2d. The magnetism of low, selfish, sensual, deceitful spirits [of which class all these communicating demons are], tends to develop the same traits in mediums subject to their influence. The downward course of many mediums is owing to this cause. 3d. Sensual, deceitful spirits, naturally seek mediums of like character, whom they aid and incite to practice the most debasing and detestable trickery, deceit, and sensuality. The private history of many mediums, if made public, would astound and disgust."

We do not wonder that a system with such a record should take special pleasure in villifying ministers of the gospel and the church, and in railing out against all laws of Scriptural morality. But we do wonder that sane men and women, who pretend to fear and love God and his truth, should find it in their hearts to give heed or countenance to such impious debauchery and abomination. Let none of our readers touch the unclean thing.—Prophetic Times.

The Worst Enemies of American Institutions.

From an article in the New York Observer, by Bishop Cleveland Coxe:

In 1569 the Duke of Alva excited an insurrection in England, and it was evidently his design to deal with England as with Llanders. At the same time Pope Pius V. excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, absolved all her subjects from their allegiance, and thus armed a host of fanatics with a privilege to assassinate her; while it was made the duty of every papist in England to conspire to dethrone her and to destroy the Goverument. This did Pope Pius, on the express ground that he had received power from the Most High to be "supreme over all nations, to root out and to pull down, to destroy, to build, and to plant." And this supremacy, let Americans reflect, is now claimed by Pius IX. and by every Jesuit in behalf of any Pope.

Is it any marvel that stringent laws were made at such a time to protect England against the crusade that was threatened, and which, had it been successful, would have equaled in horrors that of Simon de Martfort against the Albigenses? Let us reflect that the language of Pope Pius V. was not meant to be rhetorical, but legislative. He armed Papal Europe against every Protestant State—"to pluck up, to root out, and to destroy." The massacre of the Huguenots in France was not an isolated example: it was only part of plan of universal extermination. Witness the Marian persecution through which England had just passed; witness the Spanish Inquisition; witness the Duke of Alva's fury in the low countries—exiling 100,000 men executing 18,000, and kindling a war that raged for 70 years.

Queen Elizabeth never spent a day on her throne free from the peril of assassination. Philip II. offered a reward for the destruction of William of Nassau, and Gerard killed him, in his own house, in 1584, under the instigation of a Jesuit. The gunpowder plot, in 1605, which might have succeeded, was but the culmination of all the intrigues of the former reign; and if it had succeeded the Massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day would have been dwarfed by the horrors that would have followed. In France, Henry III. and Henry IV. both perished by the hands of Romish priests; and if even Romish sovereigns could not be spared when their policy failed to gratify the Jesuits, what wonder that Reforming princes were forced to fight with fire—to use a little severity against conflagrations of cruelty?

"But all that is changed." I refer to the late Syllabus of Pius IX., which claims the right to employ force whenever it can be employed to uphold the supreme authority of the Pope over all nations and kindoms. In 1864, Cardinal Consalir, as papal Secratary of State, announced that "the essence of the Roman Catholic religion is intolerance." Even the amiable old Pius IX. will go to his grave loaded with the blood of Perugia and Bologna, and culpable beyond all peradventure, in the taking off of Cardinal d'Andre, if not deliberate murderer.

To endow Romish schools and churches is to organize evil. Where the papists lack these institutions, they drift into common schools; they become citizens; they become Americans. You build them a church and it is a fortress of warfare upon all the surrounding country.

The Doers of the Word.

I sing the Doers of the Word,
 The flower of human kind,
Who hear the summons of the Lord,
 And quick their girdles bind.
They wait not for the bridal day,
 When forth to battle led;
They leave behind the faint to pray.
 The dead to bury the dead.

I sing the Doers of the Word,
 Whom angel wings have fanned,
And filled with love and joy unheard
 To scatter through the land,
Where hunger cries and shivering winds
 Wail round the slattered door,
Their wailing step an entrance finds
 To bless the helpless poor.

The Doers of the Word I sing,
 Who with a generous heart
Their sacrifice to Duty bring,
 And well perform their part;
Nor parley they with weak excuse,
 Nor at their lot repine,
But give, and say, This Heaven may use,
 For it is Heaven's, not mine.

Ye dreamers wild! eschew the trance
 Which fond illusion weaves,
And spurn the idle thought that chance
 Will bring you golden sheaves.
But when the loud alarm is rung,
 To action prompt be stirred,
And wrestle strong to rank among
 The Doers of the Word.

—Sel.

Is Man Immortal?

(Concluded.)

There is no history in the world so ancient as the Bible, nor is there any which gives us so early an account of things. The Old Testament begins at the creation of the world, brings us into acquaintance with our first parents, informs us of their state of innocence, their sin against God, and their expulsion from Paradise; it recounts the first generation of men and their multiplied iniquities which provoked God to destroy them with a flood. Then it treats of the character, circumstances, and conduct of Noah and Abraham, and of their families after the flood, enlarging most upon the household of Jacob or Israel, the grandson of Abraham, who, at the invitation of his son Joseph, went down with his family to dwell in Egypt, where they were afterward enslaved by Pharoah. The history proceeds to the deliverance of the Israelites out of Egyptian bondage and their call to be a peculiar people to God. It rehearses the laws and statutes which were given them, together with their sins and punishments while they were in the wilderness traveling to the land of Canaan which God had promised them.

Then there follows an account of their conquest of the land of Canaan under the leadership of Joshua; their government by judges several hundred years, and after that there is a narrative of the reign of their first four kings, viz., Saul, David, Solomon, and Rehoboam. In his days the nation was divided into two kingdoms, Israel and Judah. There also will be found the records of the governments of these two distinct kingdoms, under a long succession of their own kings, till both nations were carried into captivity by the kings of Assyria. After this the sacred history relates the return of many of them, (especially the tribes of Judah and Benjamin) unto their own land, the rebuilding of Jerusalem, and the temple of God, and the settlement of their affairs of church and state, by Ezra and Nehemiah, which is the end of the historical part of the Old Testament. During all this time there is an account given of the several prophets and messengers which were sent from God on especial occasions to reveal his mind and will to men; and there is also a longer and more particular narrative of the lives and transactions of some extraordinary persons, some of which are much interwoven with the series of the history, but there are others which seem to stand separate and distinct; such as the story of Job, a rich man of the east; Jonah, a prophet in Israel, and Esther, queen of Persia. But, strange to say, not one of these patriarchs, prophets, judges, priests, or kings tell us that man is immortal. Their history covers a time of almost four thousand years, and not a single man amongst them for so long a time says so much as "There is a something in man that lives on when the human is dead."

Now, is it any wonder that Eld. Braden, and others like him, should say that these men knew but little compared with theologians of our day? But, whether they knew anything or not, they got over one difficulty that our orthodox friends have failed to do as yet, and that is, they have not endorsed the lie; the story of which is found in Gen. ch. 3.

Why should orthodoxy want to stick to that falsehood? Is it because of its venerable age? That is a poor excuse. But whatever their excuse may be, they are determined to be wedded to it. Hear some of the sayings of either party:

Inspiration: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven." (Jno. 3: 13.)

"For David is not ascended into the heavens." (Acts 2: 32.)

Orthodoxy: I can imagine when a man dies suddenly, one of the first emotions he experiences in the next world will be surprise. He looks about him. Oh, that glory! How resplendent yon throne! He listens to harps of gold, and he can scarcely believe it true. I, the chief of sinners, and yet in heaven! Oh, what everlasting joy! (Spurgeon's Sermons, p. 311.)

Inspiration: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." (Ps. 146: 4.)

"For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thanks." (Ps. 6: 5.)

I'll praise my Maker with my breath,
And when my voice is lost in death
Praise shall my nobler powers employ.
—WATTS.

"God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." (Ps. 49: 15.)

"The souls of believers at death do immediately pass into glory. (Meth. and Presb. Catechism.)

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." (Mat. 5: 5.)

Beyond the bounds of time and space,
The saints secure abode.—WATTS.

"Thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." (Rev. 5: 10.)

"A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky."

"The soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ez. 18: 4, 20.)

Up to the court where angels dwell,
 I mount triumphant there;
Or devils plunge it down to hell,
 In infinite despair.—WATTS.

"But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume, into smoke shall they consume away." (Ps. 37: 20.)

"When the poor soul shall find itself in the hands of angry fiends, it shall seem in that first moment as though it had been athirst for a thousand years. [Wonder how he knew.] What will be his surprise! And, am I, he will say, really here? I was in the streets of London but a moment ago; I was singing a song but an instant, and here am I in hell!" (Spurgeon's Sermons, No. 369, p. 312.)

"As smoke is driven away, so drive them away; as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God." (Ps. 68: 2.)

"God is, therefore, himself, present in hell to see the punishment of those rebels against his government, that it may be adequate to the infinity of their guilt; his fiery indignation kindles and his incensed fury feeds the flame of their torment, while his powerful presence and operation maintains their being and renders all their powers most acutely sensible, thus setting the keenest edge upon their pain and making it cut most intolerably deep. He will exert all his divine attributes to make them as wretched throughout eternity as the capacity of their nature will admit." (Benson, Methodist Commentator.)

"The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy." (Ps. 145: 20.)

"Oh, miserable state of the damned! In it they utter as many blasphemies against God as the happy souls in heaven shout hallelujahs to his praise!" (Am. Tract Soc'y, No. 277.)

"For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything; neither have they any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten."

"When a holy man ceases to live among his fellows, his soul becomes an inhabitant of another world, and is joined to the spirits of just men made perfect. (Adam Clarke.)

"What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?"

"Our pious friends that have died are now happy. God is still their God. A father, or mother, or sister, or friend that may have left us here, is there—there in perfect felicity. (A. Barnes.)

"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." (Gen. 2:7.)

"That human nature has two essential constituent parts, as is manifest from the history of Moses: the body formed out of pre-existent matter, the earth; and a living soul breathed into the body by an inspiration from God." (R. Watson.)

"He will keep the feet of his saints and the wicked shall be silent in darkness; for by strength shall no man prevail." (1 Sam. 2: 9.)

"O, no; they will do no such thing as be silent in darkness, but make all noise possible; for the rendering of "silent in darkness" in my hearing by one of Chicago's D. Ds., was, that it meant "weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth." (Dr. Goodspeed.)

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Paul.)

"The penalty of the law is death—a severance from the source of spiritual life and happiness, a breaking up of all harmony between God and the creature. Our Savior suffered the penalty of the law for his people." (Landis p. 202.)

Before orthodoxy claims that man is immortal it certainly ought to clear up a great many passages that teach man's mortality. It is of no use to point us to the mount of transfiguration, the thief on the cross, etc., for if we go to the mount of transfiguration what do we find there? It has been inferred, (1) That the kingdom of God was set up in the days of the apostles; and (2) That Moses was present in a spiritual nature, with Christ on the mount, and therefore, that the dead are conscious. But let it be remembered that Moses died as a punishment for his transgression, because he trespassed against the Lord among the children of Israel at the waters of Meribah Kadesh, in the wilderness of Sin. And although he was desirous of entering into the Promised Land, and petitioned "Let me go over and see the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain and Lebanon;" yet the Lord suffered him not to enter there, but only to see it and die on Mount Nebo, outside the promised inheritance. But the mount of transfiguration was within the land.

See Deut. 3: 23–29; 4: 21, 22; 33: 49–52; 34: 1–10; Num. 20: 12, 24, 26; Ps. 106: 32, 33. All of these refer to the death of Moses as a punishment; for the Lord was wroth with him, and would not hear him, and said unto him, Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter. Get thee up into the top of Pisgah and behold it with thine eyes; for thou shalt not go over this Jordan. Moses told the people the Lord was angry with him for their sakes.

Now let popular theologians answer a few questions: If the heaven to which men and women are sent now-a-days at the death of what is termed the body be so much more glorious than was old Canaan, will they tell us why Moses did not rather choose to die on Mount Nebo and go immediately to this more glorious heaven, than to pray so fervently that he might enter into and live in old Canaan? If the popular theory is true, then his death was the gate to glory. Why was the exchange of old Canaan for glory and earth for heaven said by God himself to be a punishment to Moses for his trespass, and why was Moses so loth to make the exchange? Is not this clear proof that the man Moses, as a whole, as a unit, died on Mount Nebo, and he will remain there until the sounding of the trump of God. He will then hear and live again. But to-day the man Moses sleeps in unconscious sleep.

Is it not a fact that if good men go to heaven at death then God took Moses to heaven to punish him for his trespass? And if so, why not take every transgressor there as a punishment for his transgression? This he would have to do or his ways are not equal.

Jeremiah says: "A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation and weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted because they were not. Thus saith the Lord: Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy." (Jer. 31:15, 16.)

This is a prophecy of the slaughter under Herod, (Mat. 2: 19.) If popular theology is true, (and it cannot but admit that children go to heaven when they die,) heaven is the land of the enemy. The prophet does not tell us those children were in heaven, but he does tell us they are in "the land of the enemy." Instead of presenting present glory in heaven, as a minister did here a few days ago, saying, "My friends, your babe is now in heaven;" as the reason for desisting from weeping, he pointed to the resurrection "when they shall come again from the land of the enemy."

Daniel did not believe that the saint who had died had been delivered; he looked for the future deliverance of every one written in the book, when Michael should stand up. He did not believe the saints were in heaven but asleep in the dust of the earth.

Why did David, (Ps. 102: 24,) say, "O, my God, take me not away in the midst of my days." For he must have esteemed it far better for him to go to heaven than to live longer upon earth if he had believed in the now current philosophy; especially when he knew what a hard lot his had been, what with Saul hunting him up and down to take his life, and the anxiety he must have all his life.

Epaphroditus was sick, and nigh unto death, "but God had mercy on him," and healed him. If death is the gate to glory, will some one tell me what kind of "mercy" it was that God showed him when he shut the gate to heaven and kept him out by healing him? Which will we believe, consistent Scripture or inconsistent doctrine of men?

J. SMITH.

Difficulties.

In reading the writings of brethren on the subject of sanctification, I am thrown into difficulty with their positions, from which if they can extricate me I shall be glad, for if I have not the truth on this subject I certainly wish to get it. First, then, we are told of a state of grace or favor entered into at conversion, or a pardon of all our sins, and we receiving the evidence of our acceptance with God in the gift of the Holy Spirit which sheds abroad the love of God in our hearts. This is called "justification." But the person is yet unsanctified; there is another step to be taken; our bodies must yet be cleansed from "indwelling sin." Here comes some of my difficulties. "Indwelling sin" to be cleansed out of a man who has been forgiven of all his sins and accepted of God and got evidence of the acceptance and who has not backslidden nor departed from his first love!

Here let me inquire what is sin? I will let the Word answer: (1 Jno. 3: 4,) "Sin is the transgression of the law." Or, in other words, an act of disobedience; a work or deed done. This must be in one of two ways, physical or mental. Now, has the pardoned believer, who has confessed and forsaken his sins, any more of them "indwelling" or dwelling within him unless he first go back "like the sow that was cleansed to her wallowing in the mire?" How is this? You see my difficulty.

Again, we are told if we have a constant warfare to keep ourselves from sin, it is like preventing a dog from biting by keeping him chained; he could bite, and would, but the chain prevents him. We are exhorted to kill the dog and then our trouble with him ceases. Chains are no longer needed. This is said to represent our state when sanctified. Now, here again, I am in difficulty. This dog cannot be made to represent a desire to commit acts of disobedience or sin, for no child of God desires to disobey or do wrong. This they cannot find within them. But they do find not only a possibility but a liability to sin or do wrong when tempted. This, then, must be the dog which must be "chained." Now, I ask, can this dog be killed? Remember, a dead dog not only will not bite, but he cannot. Now, do brethren wish to convey the idea that when sanctified we cannot sin; and that this state is not only attainable but must be enjoyed to be ready to meet our soon-coming Lord? What else can we understand from the positions taken?

Is it possible for us to get where we cannot sin? We may opiate the dog by the Lord's help, so that he may act as if lifeless; yet brethren, for the Lord's sake, and your own eternal interests, don't take off the chain. Think of the hundreds who did do it a few years ago in Vermont and New Hampshire! It may have began in the spirit, but it ended in the flesh. Satan persuaded them the dog was dead; they took off this chain; they could not sin. Then came the tidal wave of holy kissing, holy rolling, and spiritual wifery, with all its damning influences which have not been fully removed to this day.

I always supposed Paul was sanctified; yet he did not get his body so dead but that it caused him great labor to keep it under (i.e., chained) lest after preaching to others he should himself be cast away; and on another occasion he had a thorn put in his flesh, lest he should get too holy in his own estimation. Was the dog dead or only chained? Brethren, you see some of my difficulties (I have others) with your positions, and my fears for the results. Can any of you clear them away, and insure me that my fears are needless?

I do not doubt but the chain is left far too long in many cases, and may be wonderfully shortened by a new consecration and a renewing in the spirit of our minds. Let us take out every link possible, for the shorter the chain the less the trouble with the dog. Nevertheless, beware of dogs!

O. D. GIBSON.

Sanctification Through the Truth.

The Savior prayed, "Sanctify men through the truth, thy word is truth." This is the way, the old path, the good way. Sanctification may mean either consecration or purification, I use it in the latter sense, and understand that sanctification or purity, considered as a personal characteristic, is to be obtained through truth known, received and obeyed. Thus the disciples of old became "clean, through the word," and "purified their souls in obeying the truth." And th[illegible] sanctifying truth is not any one particular truth, but "Thy word is truth."

All truth, and err[illegible] when received into the mind by [illegible] exerts an influence corresponding [illegible] own nature. It produc[illegible], furnishes motives, and [illegible] action. The part of the Spi[illegible] sanctification is to present God's tru[illegible] the mind, to show the things of Christ.

If feeling is produced, and action stimulated aside from truth,—no new truth being perceived, or forgotten truth recalled,—it cannot be that sanctification which is through truth.

Two inferences follow from the fact that sanctification is through the truth. It is partial; and it is progressive. It is partial because here we know in part, and conformity to God's will cannot be greater than our knowledge of that will. Yet some claim perfection who ignore or oppose God's truth.

Sanctification is progressive, as we grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Savior. We must go on, adding to faith, fortitude, knowledge, self-control, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and love; working out our own salvation from sin, with fear and trembling, while God works in us to will and to do his good pleasure. This is sanctification,—not feeling "God I thank thee I am not as other men."—not desiring "Let me die the death of the righteous," but willing and doing God's will, not ours; and this is perfect in proportion to our knowledge of God and his truth.

Before a man can be a Christian he must yield himself to God as a servant to obey him; the will is the first thing, while the Savior says "ye will not," the man is unsaved, unconverted. Believing in Jesus as the propitiation for his sins, with the heart, he is saved, converted, is in Christ a new creature, and as a member of his body, has in Christ his head, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption, though in other truths he may only see men as trees, or be in total darkness, or, worse still, in error. As he goes on, abiding in Christ, he will come to know the way of the Lord more perfectly, and with each new development of truth, comes a corresponding duty, and as the day, so is strength given. So we go from strength unto strength, till each one in Zion appeareth before God. The Lord hasten it in his time.

A. ARMOUR.

The World.

A CONCLUSION FROM FACT AND SCRIPTURE.

In thoughts looking to the future there are two things between which it is well to distinguish, and these are what we speak of commonly as the earth and the world.

In common talk they are frequently spoken of as one and the same, but there is a difference.

The planet earth is simply the body of solid, fluid, and gaseous matter, with its varied surface of continents and seas, and over whose crust of coal, and soil and stones, the philosophers and geologists hold their controversies.

The world, on the other hand, means the people; the intelligent, rational, and soul existence which at any period dwells on the planet; the people who, through the fall of the first Adam, became subject to death, but through the righteousness of the second are entitled to life and glory; the people, who have God's own revelation to see and understand all this; who have consciences to judge between the right and the wrong, and who themselves will be judged righteously by the Savior who redeemed them, in the day of God's unchangeable appointment.

Understanding the world in this sense, there are three things which, briefly considered, are solemn for our thought.

First, will there be such a world of people on this planet earth, when in the counsels of God the Savior returns to judge?

This question may be definitely answered by the Word of God. It is the doctrine of the Scriptures that there will be a world, and as such the doctrine of the church.

St. Paul says, speaking of some, and it might happen to be himself among the number, "We shall not all sleep."

He also speaks of those who are to remain and be alive on this earth when the Judge comes. And every member who is true to his church, says with as much heart as he says anything else of the church's doctrine, I believe that Jesus Christ is coming to judge the quick, i.e., the living.

The second inquiry is simply this, Will the world, i.e., the people, be better, more virtuous, believing, and spiritual than they now are when the Judge comes?

When opinions differ on such a question as this, even among the wise and good, in their views upon Scripture, then we must revert to facts themselves.

If we revert to facts, and decide for the future upon the present and the past, there will be little, indeed, to show us that the world will become more spiritual and believing than it now is.

What are the facts? For eighteen centuries of gospel light and privilege, for eighteen centuries of preaching and teaching, for eighteen centuries of the wealth and blessings with which men have been favored, how little has been the return made to God spiritually as the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Out of the millions of Israel, how many in that time have gone to a Savior's fold! Out of the nations, how many have been anxious, by their labors to get them there? How much, in that time, has been done for the benighted Pagan in sending them missionaries with the bread of life? and how much of pure goodness has been retained in those places where the gospel had the least interrupted course in bringing in the fruits of righteousness?

These are solemn thought for the last dispensation of grace. They are questions which, if truthfully answered, will surely give us but little hope for a better state of things to be brought about by the world.

It has advanced, we know, in civilization. Civilization has brought men more in contact with each other. It has changed habits, and manners, and sentiments, and tastes. But civilization is not virtue, purity, or spirituality.

Men died virtuous and faithful before our boasted progress, and they could still leave the world in peace and in favor with God if our present civilization were to dwindle away and cease altogether among us.

No, facts are truthful monitors; and if the gloss and polish with which civilization has invested our tastes, and manners, and modes of life were removed, there would be little to be gathered in proportion to what would be of the fruits of virtue and faith.

The third inquiry is this, Will the world become worse before the Judge comes?

Speaking upon this question in a general way, we may answer in the negative. Reason and fact together will plainly show us that if the world became worse by a further development of wickedness, infidelity, and crime, law itself would become powerless, and it might well be doubted if nations and society generally could be held together secure in property and life.

Generally speaking, then, the world can become but little worse, except perhaps it might be in a further development of any existing evil.

Of the existence of the most formidable evils now among us we have abundant proof. In the midst of the streets of wealth and civilization vice hides under modesty and affability, and goes forward with unblushing tread. Policy and self-seeking interest ignore to a fearful extent both friendship and love; while dress, and pleasures, and revellings have become the gods of sin that the multitudes worship and adore.

It is useless to say more. Thus the world will go on from day to day in its usual course until people are brought to know from the presence among them of Christ himself, that there is a God that judgeth the earth. For "as the days of Noe were, so shall the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark; and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; and so shall also the coming of the son of man be."

If, then, there is to be a world of people when the Savior returns to judge, if, then this world is likely to become no better, then our conclusion drawn is simply this, that at any moment the Savior might come in his power and glory to judge both the quick and the dead.

Therefore has he told us to "watch and be ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—Prophetic Times.

Biogenesis.

Biogenesis assumes that all life, vegetable and animal, proceeds from living germ or protoplast, hence their motto, "Omme vivum ex vivo." Abiogenesis supposes life to proceed from a protoplast also, through physical causes, but not from a living germ. In our endeavour to elucidate these two theories, we shall try and be as little scientific as possible—but cannot avoid being so altogether—in order that their relation to hades may appear.

First, if life proceed from life, as the Biogenesis hypothesis affirms, then life must be an immaterial entity, and thus constitute what is popularly known as the soul; hence those who believe this hypothesis may be called psychopannichists, as they believe in the soul being in a conscious state between death and resurrection.

The following may serve to show, logically and physically, the result of such a theory. For example, if the living germ of a dog be an immaterial entity[1], what becomes of this vital principle, or soul, when the dog dies? Does it go to hades? or does it assume some different form of life, as, according to Biogenesis, it cannot perish? If so, the Buddhists' doctrine of the transmigration of souls, the Papists' dogma of purgatory, the Spiritualists' in their communications with the spirit-world, as it is called, and last, but not least, Darwin's hypothesis of "Natural evolution," must be true, as he supposes, that "God breathed life into a few forms or into one," and consequently, by the process of "Natural evolution," the ascidian, the lowest form of life, became a fish, then a reptile, by and by a mammel, and in process of time a man!

Well, then, accordingto this hypothesis the living germ of a mollusk may become the protoplast of a whale, and the latter that of some higher development of animal life—perhaps in hades! If so, the idea expressed in the "Rainbow," June 1st, 1871, p. 268. may be correct, as it is therein stated that some of these entities or spirits in hades may be "improving," otherwise developing, consequently Darwin's theory of "Natural evolution," or development, and this one of "improving," in hades, must be philosophic, if not Scriptural! Thus we see that the Biogenesis hypothesis harmonises with that of Buddhism, Popery, Mariolotry, and Darwinism! Here we have life proceeding from a dead germ (dust), and it is a physiological fact that life and consciousness depend upon organization with circulatory apparatus. This will be better understood by considering the two sorts of physical life, namely, the organic and animal. For example, when the organs of organic life are healthy, their action is without consciousness, but the action of the animal apparatus is to produce consciousness. The office of the first is to maintain existence—that of the latter, the production of a conscious state. When the brain reposes, as in sleep, were the heart to cease acting, death would inevitably be the result, as in syncope. Consciousness does not belong to the organic; it belongs to the animal-life, and as animal-life ceases at death, it is difficult to conceive how consciousness can exist between death and resurrection, as Sheol is the land "of forgetfulness."—Psalms 88: 12.

"To every act of consciousness belongs a determinate act of molecular arrangement of the brain, that every thought or feeling has its physical corelative in that organ;' therefore, if there be consciousness in hades, the living brain of man, with all its wonderful molecular activities, must be there, and not dead and corrupt in sheol or the grave!

Many of those who believe in a conscious intermediate state believe also in man as a tripartite being—i.e., possessed of body, soul, and spirit, and consequently infer that, because he has a spirit, he cannot die. For instance, in an article "What is man?" the writer (in the Rainbow) says, "Man indeed survives the death of the body, but this is solely in virtue of his tripartite constitution, and the still-abiding union of the pneuma with the psuche." So that, according to this, Paul's doctrine of a resurrection to eternal life does not depend upon a resurrection, but "the still-abiding union of the pneuma with the psuche;" at least, we submit the writer's hypothesis favors such a theory.

The philosophy of the heathen Socrates had more Christianity in it than this, as the following from "Phœdo" will show:—

"'Then have we not agreed that life is the opposite of death?"

"'Yes.'

"'And consequently, according to analogy with all other things, life must spring from death. Then from him who has died there arises life and the living.'

"'Well, then, O Cebes,' said Socrates, 'thus it is that the living proceeds from the dead, not less surely than that living persons die.'

"'Therefore, if things did not thus go round in circles from opposite to opposite, but went forward in a straight course, from one state to the opposite, without ever coming back to the first, there would then soon be an end of all existence.'

* * * * *

"'And if, O dear Cebes, this were the case, and that every living thing died, and that the dead never returned to life, then the consequence must necessarily be that at last everything would end in death, and nothing would be left alive.'

"'I think O Socrates, thou sayest what is true.'

"'It is so, indeed, O Cebes, in every point of view. We do not delude ourselves, but in truth, there must be a resurrection—a return from death to life.'" [Italics are mine.]

Thus we see a heathen philosopher, who firmly believed in the natural immortality of the soul, by the force of reason, become convinced of the Gospel truth, life from death, by and through a resurrection, notwithstanding his belief in "the still-abiding union of the pneuma with the psuche."

Had eternal life by Jesus Christ been revealed to this great man, Socrates would have scorned to believe in a hades of conscious spirits, as it was the lack of revelation that stimulated his gigantic intellect "to examine the question whether the souls of dead men live in hades or not." But being debarred of this, his mind became filled with the ideas of a Pagan hades, yet he acknowledged to his friend Cebes "that to make man believe that the soul after death exists, and retains power and thought, requires not a little faith."

In fact, the vital principle of philosophy, and, unfortunately, of theology too, is just the same as the pneuma of Galen, after Chrysippus, the psuche of Plato, or the phusis of Pythagoras, who borrowed it from the Egyptians, and they in their turn from the Brahmins, with their elementary fire or soul of the world, a portion of which—a divinæ particula auræ—was supposed to be imparted to every living creature, and constitutes its proper life. Therefore, this entity of a vital principle hypothesis, rest on, not only a heathen but a pantheistic dogma.

Immortality is the gift of God, and does not rest upon the flimsy foundation of a human spirit becoming a never-dying entity, but in the cheering declaration that "this mortal shall put on immortality."

So much for the Biogenesis.—Hugh Hastings, M. D., London.

Why is it?

Why is it that our prayer meetings are always good? Every one feels refreshed when they leave the house of prayer; every saint rejoices, and their hope sheds a purer radiance upon their souls as they thread their way from heaven's altar to their labor and toil. Even the unconverted love to linger about the sacred place, while ever and anon their lips move in the song of praise to God, exalting him by song whom they forsake by action. And then every professor seems so willing to do, and, above all, so determined to prove faithful till Jesus comes. No time is lost. Every one presents to the throne of grace. One rises as soon as another stops; none speak long, but all speak from the heart. Every testimony has the genuine ring. There are sobs and tears sometimes, but always just right to leave serious reflections. Often broken sentences, stops, and pauses, yet each carries its token of a heart too full for utterance. Every face bears the stamp of brotherly love. Indeed, we [illegible]ll of one family, all inspired b[illegible] all brothers and sisters [illegible] is it that all long for [illegible] hou[illegible] prayer and praise? Why [illegible] reluctant to remain away when compelled by necessity? Why so p[illegible]pt to do duty when present and [illegible] when absent? And finally, why so humiliated if we ever neglect our duty when present?

Beloved, God is there in power. His love fills the hearts of his dear saints. All are workers. There are no drones in the flock. His sheep are guided by an unerring shepherd. Green pastures are just before them. Throughout eternity they will live in the land he has promised, and in peace.

M. D. PEAVY.

The Gates of Hell.

Matt. 16: The gates of hell shall not prevail against the church.

St. Frances of Rome lived a very holy life. Many times she saw with her eyes her Angel Guardian at her side. It pleased the Almighty God to let her see many wonderful things. One afternoon the Angel Gabriel came to take her to see hell. She went with him and saw that terrible place. Let us follow her footsteps, that we may see in spirit the wonderful things which she saw. Our journey is through the deep dark places under the earth. Now we will set off. We pass through hundreds and hundreds of miles of darkness. Now we are coming near the terrible place. See, there are the gates of hell! When St. Frances came to the gates of hell, she read on them these words written in letters of fire—"This is hell, where there is neither rest, nor consolation, nor hope." "Look then, at those tremendous gates in front of you. How large they are. Measure, if you can, the length and breadth, the hight and depth of the terrible gates. Is. 5. "Therefore hath hell opened her mouth without any bound. Their strong ones and their people, and their glorious ones go down into it."

See also the vast thickness, the tremendous strength of those gates. In a prison on earth there are not, perhaps, more than two or three hundred prisoners. Still the gates of a prison are made most strong with iron, and with bars, and with bolts, and with locks, for fear the prisoners should break down the gates and get away. Do not wonder then, at the immense strength of the gates of hell. In hell there are not two or three hundred prisoners only. Millions on millions are shut up there. They are tormented with the most frightful pains. These dreadful pains make them furious. Their fury gives them strength, such as we never saw. We read of a man who had the fury of hell in him. He was so strong that he could easily break in pieces great chains of iron. Mark 5. The vast multitudes in hell, strong in their fury and despair, rush forward like the waves of the sea. They dash themselves up against the gates of hell to break them in pieces. This is the reason why these gates are so strong. No hand of man could make such gates. Jesus Christ said that the gates of hell should not prevail against his Church, because in hell there is nothing stronger than its gates.—From a tract by Rev. J. Furnis.

Ministerial Power.

THE clergy are too ready to rely upon everything, rather than on the substantial claims of their message. One party take to gay dresses, banners, and processions, another to penny readings, political lectures, and concerts. They change from one thing to another, day by day, and the result is only a weary waste of their own time, and the creation of a certain amount of social feeling which might equally be produced without the supernatural aid of the church and religion. Religious truths, if they are what they are believed to be, can not need all this trivial machinery to recommend them; and religious convictions, which are to be of any value, must be produced and sustained by more simple and permanent means. If we may judge by the history of the church, both in early and modern times, a man of truly religious feeling needs nothing but a room and a Bible to bring about the greatest results. The one thing essential is not new plans and daily changes, but a belief in the power of the permanent truth of the Christian religion, and a devotion to these alone. The personal example and the public teaching of religion are the only necessary instruments of a clergyman, and, in our opinion, the less he is diverted from these to novel devices and elastic webs the better.—London Times.

---

[1] The two Hebrew words nephesh and neshamah in the Bible translated soul, life, and breath, are equally applied to animals and men—e. g., Gen. 1: 21, 24, 30; 2: 19; Deut. 20: 16; Jos. 10: 40; 11: 11.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, November 12, 1872.

THE GREAT FIRE IN BOSTON.

As we go to press we learn that Boston has been visited by a calamity similar to that which Chicago suffered a year and a month ago. On Saturday evening a fire broke out on Summer St., near Kingston, which spread rapidly, fanned by a gale of wind until it swept over an era bounded by Summer, Washington and State Sts. and the water of the Harbor—one of the wealthiest tracts in the country, including the heaviest dry goods houses, and nearly all the hide and leather houses, besides the wool and other business warehouses.

The loss is roughly computed at $100,000,000. It may be more, but it is to be hoped the total will prove to be less.

Blowing up of buildings was freely resorted to in order to prevent the spread of the flames, in some cases with success, while in others the flames leaped over the gaps made. The Old South church was saved, also the new Post Office. Fortunately for families the fire did not extend into any portion largely occupied for dwelling houses. About 500 families are homeless, however.

It became necessary to call out the militia to preserve order and keep plunderers in check. As the Post Office was burned we fear Br. Hastings Tract Repository was also consumed, as it was separated from that building by only a very narrow street. Next week we can tell our readers more about it, and we hope they will be prepared to help make up whatever loss he may have endured.

Men's hearts may well fail them for fear and for looking after the things coming upon the earth. Calamity follows calamity, yet men do not learn to fear God nor work righteousness. A few more such conflagration may, at least, convince them of the possibility that Peter's prophecy may yet be literally fulfilled.

RATIONALISM, ITS CAUSE AND CURE.

Nothing is more common than to hear preachers rail at rationalism and deplore the rapid spread of infidelity. It is very rare, however, that one of these inveighers against unbelief states the cause of the evil which he deplores. Occasionally, however, these dogmatists are compelled to listen to a little wholesome truth which they are at liberty to apply as an illustration of cause and effect. Mr. Lecky's "History of the Rise and Influence of Ritualism in Europe," is one of the most deeply interesting and ably written books of this century. Beginning with the different systems of philosophy xisting at the Christian era, he describes, in the clearest manner, the progress of Christians, both Catholic and Protestant, and their influence morally, religiously, socially, and politically until the present time. The dogmatic teachings of a cruel and superstitious priesthood, so different from the loving precepts of our Savior, first aroused the opposition which, through the centuries, has never entirely ceased, and which is now known as Rationalism.

The root of the great upas tree of a false theory was planted when the unholy alliance was formed in the present century between philosophy and Christianity. Philosophy furnished its poison in the Platonic doctrine of the soul; and Christianity, accepting that, furnished the doctrine of everlasting punishmet, and the result of this amalgamation of truth and error, is the fearful doctrine of endless misery. The history of religious wars and persecutions is intimately connected with this baleful dogma. They were never known until this doctrine had become a prominent tenet in religious belief. The doctrine that it was justifiable to repress heresy by physical force, may also be clearly traced to the same merciless doctrine as its efficient cause.

Finally, when heretics became numerous, the same principle ripened into the masterpiece of the devil, the Inquisition, which, with its attendant horrors of the torture chamber and dungeon, the rack and the stake, has furnished the darkest pages in the history of Christianity. All this time it is difficult for us to understand how men like Tertullian, Pope Innocent III., and Loyola could be so cruel while they pretended to be followers of him who wept over the anticipated miseries of the Jews, and whose tender and compassionate heart caused him to go about constantly doing good.

But, after all, these men are less to be blamed than the system which made them what they were. They are but illustrations of the great truth that the most cruel men have been those who thought that God would punish his enemies with endless and most excruciating torments, and that they best imitated divine justice by inflicting upon heretics the most exquisite torture that their ingenuity could devise.

PURE RELIGION.

Pure religion, according to the apostle James, consists in doing good and being unworldly. These are his words: "Pure religion and undefiled before God [and] the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world," As God is the personification of goodness, to do good and be good is to be god-like. Pure religion, then, is inseparable from goodness and identical with it. In the great judgment scene, as pictured by our Savior, the blessed on the right hand are welcomed as inheritors of the kingdom, and the reason assigned by the great Judge is that they had fed, clothed, and visited his needy brethren; in other words, they are welcomed because they have lived useful lives, and done good in the name of the Master. The King will not say well done except to those who have done well.

Peter learned the important lesson that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is acceptable to him. This great and glorious doctrine is opposed to all sham religion, to all bigotry, to all sectarian or ecclesiastical monopolies. "I will show you my faith by my works," should be the expressed determination of every Christian. Christianity is not an inductive system of philosophy. It has not so much to do with theories as with practices. The questions what have you done? and what are you now? rather than what have you believed? and what do you believe now? will be judgment questions, the answers to which will determine our future destiny. The devils believe and tremble. Simple belief, a mere assent to the truth without correspondent action is not sufficient. It is well to remember, "that in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything nor uncircumcision, but faith which worketh by love."

The Pharisees had a great deal of religion and were puffed up with spiritual pride. They deemed themselves holier than other people, not because they lived better lives, but simply because they were Jews and observed with rigid exactness the literal requirements of the law, while they every day violated its spirit. Pure religion causes its possessor to be benevolent and gentle to the weak and defenceless, to the orphan and to the widow. Our Lord said to the Pharisee: "Ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers, therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation." To enter the kingdom of heaven our righteousness must exceed that of the Pharisee. When a man does a good deed none but bigots will stop to inquire what his church or creed are before they express their commendation of the act. No doctrine is good for anything that does not make men better. "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God." J. H. W.

Editor's Drawer.

In this department we shall consider such questions as may be answered briefly and suggestively. Topics requiring elaborate examination, or extended discussion may not be entertained.

H. A. M.—We think Mat. 18: 10 is best explained by Heb. 1: 14. Angels are "ministering spirits:" and certainly the children, of whom it is said 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven,' will receive their ministrations.

Z. McE.—Rom. 5: 13-17 is parenthetical. If you read vv. 12 and 18 successively, omitting vv. 13-17 it will help you to a correct understanding of the passage. All men sinned in Adam, all died in him. That is to say, as Levi was in the loins of Abraham, and paid tithes when the latter met Melchisedeck, so the whole race were in Adam, and their fate, to a certain extent, depended upon his actions. All came under condemnation of death through him: all will receive life through Christ. This rule is universal, as Paul proves by citing the fact that death reigned over all human beings, infants and adults, those with or under law, like Adam, and those who had never heard of, or could not even comprehend any law of God. Death reigned over all alike. The second Adam secures a justification unto life as universal as the condemnation to death had been. Whether this restored life be eternal depends upon the character of the individual.

J. M. C.—We know of no reason, doctrinal or critical, for supposing Mat. 28: 19 to be an interpolation. Neither do we see any ground for trine immersion in the text. We are 'buried with Christ in baptism'—only one burial: but it was 'in the name' of the Father, Son and Spirit. The time that has been spent in trying to root this verse out of the Bible might have been employed to better purpose. If we commence removing passages that are used unlawfully by schismatics and others, where should we stop? Better allow it as it stands, and then show that trine-immersionists have no claims upon it.

J. S.—Mat. 12: 43-45 can hardly be made clearer by explanation. It is a parable, setting forth the course of the Jewish people. The illustration is a man who has been a demoniac, or possessed by a demon. The demon is cast out; but the man makes no provision against his return. Seeing this the demon, with seven companions returns and takes possession. What did he gain by being dispossessed? Nothing; he is now the worse for it. The Jews were in a bad enough condition previous to the coming of John and the Savior. For a while there was promise of better things. But they rejected the Messiah, and that their 'last state' is worse than all that preceded needs no testimony: it is a patent fact. Some, however, think they will have another 'state' after the 'last' one. We think not.

J. H. B.—The best comment upon Lk. 1: 32, 33 that we know of is found in Dan. 7: 13, 14. The latter passage is more comprehensive than the former, but includes it as the less includes the greater. There cannot be two distinct eternal kingdoms upon the same territory. Luke mentions a kingdom which shall have 'no end.' Daniel one 'that shall not pass away;' the Son of man is king of both. The identity seems to be thus established beyond dispute. Hence we conclude that the text will be fulfilled in the resurrection and restitution state.

Sin in the Flesh.

A boy, passing through a wood, saw something which, in the dim light, looked like a tiger. After he had tremblingly advanced a few steps, he saw the frightful thing was only a bush. So I fear that dim light and indistinct vision have distorted this Scriptural phrase to the bewilderment of some.

What is sin? "Sin is the transgression of the law" Then it is not a substance, element, or principle in the soft, subcutaneous part of the human body; it is not a feeling of the body as pain, nor an emotion of the mind like grief. It is action, transgressing God's law, in thought, or word, or deed. The sin, the fault, the guilt belongs to the personality, the I, and is not confined to any one part of man; the hand that takes, the mouth that eats forbidden fruit, are but instruments, moved by the will power of the man; they are not sinful and he innocent, all the parts of the man are involved in the guilt.

What is the flesh? Flesh is a very common word in the Bible, it sometimes is used literally, but very often figuratively, signifying animals, mankind, kindred, depraved humanity, and the law of ordinances.

Some seem to understand "sin in flesh" to be something in their beef, hence some have resorted to semi-starvation as a means of holiness, and I have read of one who drove nails through his feet and one hand, thus "crucifying the flesh." Are we going back to Rome?

"Sin in the flesh" means something. It is quoted from Rom. 8: 3, "For what the law [of fleshly ordinances] could not do [it could not bring justification] in that it was weak [it furnished no motive power] through the flesh, God, [did what the law failed to do,] sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, [man,] and for sin [a sin-offering,] condemned sin in the flesh."

God condemned and punished sin in mankind when his Son, the Word made flesh, was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities. Christ, by fulfilling the law in our nature, showed that obedience was possible, sin was not a necessity, and thus condemned sin—the transgression of law, in flesh—mankind, "That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after [kata, according to the mind of] the flesh, but after [kata] the Spirit."

A. Armour.

Take Heed!

To what. To yourselves, and to the doctrine. Take heed lest ye fall. Take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief. "And we have the more sure the prophetic word; to which ye do well that ye take heed."

Edward Bicherstetih says one verse in every thirty of the N. T. relates to the second coming of the Lord. Mr. Brooks, D. D. says if he had included allusions, the proportion would have been higher: 320 verses out of 7959, or nearly one in twenty-four.

The relative importance of a doctrine may be judged of by the prominence given it in the sacred pages. Yet the doctrine of the second advent, and its advocates, are looked upon with contempt, generally, by professing Christians.

It is said the doctrine has been abused and so have all other doctrines, and the remedy is not in neglect, but in careful study and exposition. Reckless predictions have been as often made by spiritualizing Millenarians—of the fall of Popery and the conversion of the world in 1866, for example—as by the literalists. But Popery flourishes, and there are more heathen now than in Paul's day.

Another objection is that the study of prophecy is useless, if not dangerous. Exclude prophecy from the Bible and it becomes meaningless. The first promise was prophecy. Abel's faith, Enoch's preaching, the Jewish ritual—all were prophetic; much of the history, many Psalms, and from Isaiah to Malachi are prophetic, so was John the Baptist's ministry. So were Christ's discourses, largely. So are the epistles in a great measure, and the last book is almost wholly prophecy. All we know of the resurrection or the heavenly state we owe to prophecy, and the unfulfilled promises are nothing else.

Infidelity is in the pulpit and pew. Ministers know nothing of it, they say they "give their attention to subjects of more practical importance." Was the prophecy of the deluge of no practical importance to the Jewish church? Peter says we do well to take heed to the prophetic word. Even the most difficult book—Revelation—has a special blessing for those who read and hear the word of its prophecy."

The above is a synopsis of the first part of a tract, No. 9, of the "Scriptural Publication Society," Yarmouth, Me. The second part is on "The Great Image," by the same author, J. H. Brooks, D. D.

The image of Dan. 2, may be called the alphabet of prophecy, and is well treated here, being full on "the stone," and the "smiting." Both form a 12 pp. tract. Price $1 a 100. 25c a dozen. Sold at The Times office, and by I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Those who wish a tract on prophecy containing the above and other facts, which to many will be startling, should send for "The Light of Prophecy." A Reader.

The Seventh of Romans.

Some difficulty has been felt in "getting out of the seventh into the eigth;" the difficulty ought to be in getting out of the fifth and sixth into the seventh. Let us look back to ch. 5: 1, "justified by faith we have peace with God;" 6: 2. "Dead to sin;" "freed from sin;" 14, "Sin shall not have dominion over you;" 18, "Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."

One great object of this epistle is to teach justification by faith, in opposition to the Judaizing teachers. Therefore he writes in some places more especially to the Jews who formed part of the church at Rome. See ch. 2: 1, 17, 28; 3: 1; 4: 1; and the first verse of this 7th chapter, "I speak to them that know the law." And he tells them "ye are become dead to the law," v. 4; and, consequently, "we are delivered from the law," v. 6. Then, v. 7, he begins to contrast the law and the gospel, and in order to do this without giving offence to the Jews, he himself personifies a Jew-man under the law, not by any means a Christian under the gospel. By the law he is taught his duty, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," but the law does not tell him that "God so loved the world." The law does not bring the might motive which produces that love which is the fulfilling of the law, as the gospel does; so the poor man under the law is in a sad state, his intellect and conscience approve the perfect, but he loves not to put it in practice. "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from this dead body? I thank God [he will] through Jesus Christ our Lord." Thus, the law is a "schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith." (Gal. 3: 24.) So we come back to ch. 5: 1, "Being justified by faith." Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (ch. 10: 4), and there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." (8: 1.)

To say that the man in the 7th of Romans is a Christian, and if we are in the same state we are not Christians. Be not deceived, being justified by faith we have peace with God, and the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us. A. Armour.

Abiogenesis.

The doctrine of Abiogenesis seems more in harmony with Scripture, as upon no other theory, in our opinion, can Paul's statement of the doctrine of the resurrection be explained, viz., "That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die."

Here is life proceeded from death. This theory is, however, but little acknowledged, as the hackneyed instances of the wheat grains germinating when placed in the soil, &c., after having been for a thousand years in an Egyptian Mummy, and also the seed cast into the earth producing a living bud, &c., are constantly quoted to prove the opposite. These instances, we affirm, do not by any means favor the theory of an immaterial entity or vital principle still existing in the seeds, as, had these seeds been allowed to remain in the mummy, they never would have exhibited any signs of life, but remained absolutely dead throughout all eternity!

How did they come to life? Simply because the faith of man acting upon the promise of God, placed them under those circumstances in which God has assured us he will add the blessing. God, in the germination of plants, as well as in the generation of animals, works by means. The soil, the air, the sun, and rain are the means by which an Omnipotent God brings life out of death in the vegetable kingdom, but without these vivifying influences there would be eternal death in the seed!

"In the eye of the animal body is just as much the product of molecular force, as the stalk and the ear of corn, or as the crystal of salt or sugar. It is the compounding in the organic world of forces belonging equally to the inorganic world that constitute the mystery of vitality." (Tyndall's "Fragments of Science," p. 118, 400)

Physiologically speaking, death in either man, vegetable, or animal is but a change in the molecules of the primary cells or protoplast, which change leads to corruption; but when this deranged and disintegrated molecular death is restored to i's specific original existence, life is reproduced—in fact, a resurrection.

In the scientific, religious, and political worlds, disorganization generally precedes consolidation, as there must be disintegration before the building up process begins. "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it," (Ezek. 16: 27,) is not only true respecting the ending of this Gentile dispensation, and the ushering in of "life from the dead" in Christ's glorious kingdom, but is also an axiom in science and history.

Disease—e. g., in man or animals—is death or disorganization at work, in changing their molecular constitution, and the office of medicine is to arrest this death process, by administering remedies calculated to bring back to their original state these disturbed and disarranged molecules and thus produce health out of this partial death. "Similia Similibus Curantur," is an axiom in both medicine and theology, were it understood. In the seed of vegetables, however, there is total death—i. e., the molecules of their cell existence are so changed that they put forth no power, but are quiet in death. Let, however, the stimulus of the air, earth, and sun act upon them, and the result will be—unless the cells are putrid, the work of death thus far advanced—that each cell will again be placed in its proper position for renewed and vivified energy, and the result will be life from death, as it is a scientific fact that life cells are self-forming, self-producing, and self regulating.

"The properties of living matter, just as much as the properties of crystaline matter, are dependent upon the number, kind, and mode of collocation of the atoms and molecules entering into its composition."

There is no reason for a belief in the existence of a special "vital force," than there is for a similar belief in the existence of a special "crystaline force"

"All are but parts of one stupendous whole,
Whose body nature is, and God the soul."

Pope also uttered a scientific truth when he wrote—

"See dying vegetables life sustain,
See life disolving vegetable again,
All forms that perish other forms supply,
By turns we catch the vital breath and die."

The complete drying of an organ produces its death, yet the rotifero and the vibrio of wheat revive when they are moistened with water. Was there a vital principle or a soul still existing in these dried and disorganized animals? If so, what was its "intermediate state" between its death and resurrection? Would psychopannichists maintain, it was in hades, waiting its union with the body?

Natural life is sustained by the air we breathe and the food we consume. Are these living entities? Physiology replies, No! as it is out of dead matter, not living, that the digestive process elaborates blood, muscle, bone, &c.

Food, if left to itself, would putrefy, but when acted upon by the gastric juice, &c., becomes the very pabulum of life, thus eliminating life from corruptible food.

An objection, however, may be raised to this, inasmuch as carnivorous animals consume living creatures for food. True, but we must remember that ere the chemistry of digestion begins its work the animal is dead in the stomach, if not crushed previously to death in the jaws of the devourer, still thus producing life from death.

What materialism, our readers will perhaps exclaim! If so, we cannot help it, as our belief is founded, not upon mere fossilised creeds, but on stubborn facts, and our every-day experience proves our faith correct, as so long as we see the mind or intellect influenced by the state of the brain, we can come to no other conclusion, but that consciousness depends upon the brain, and is not an independent entity. Do we not daily witness the fact that disease dulls the intellect—brain fever produces delirium, pressure on the brain causes paralysis and death; concussion of of the brain produces unconsciousness; the intellect and consciousness of a child increas as the brain grows, and a thousand other physiological facts which might readily be adduced, all testifying that life and consciousness depend upon the brain, and not upon an immortal spirit; for how could an immortal spirit be rendered mortal and unconscious by a knock on a man's head?

Though we believe that life is produced by the due position, &c., of cells in a protoplast, we by no means think that even a Huxley, a Tyndall, &c., with all their knowledge of protoplasm, will ever involve a dog from a cell, or Darwin a man from a baboon, as God has given to each cell its plastic and formative properties by which it must act, and beyond which it cannot go, just as He has set bounds to the sea and limits to the plants, so every seed must have "its own body." "Therefore, after the way which ye call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets: and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

In speaking thus, we are by no means advocating spontaneous generation, as we believe, after much thought, experiment, and study, such a thing to be a physical impossibility.

All we contend for is, that seeds, &c., in a state of what is called death, but not putrefaction, by being placed in circumstances calculated to change the nature and position of their molecules, will exhibit life, God having endowed them with this physical property, but not with a deathless entity. Paul was, therefore, scientifically right when he said, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die."

It will thus be evident that a living principle is not necessary for the production of life, as "God is the fountain of life," and "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." "Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead?"

Thus it will be "in the resurrection of the just," as "this mortal shall put immortality," and "death shall be swallowed up of life." 2. Cor. 5; 1-8.

Therefore, unless God puts forth revivifying powers, in resurrection, the dead have virtually perished, notwithstanding that deathless entity of philosophy and theology, of Paul teaches the cardinal truth, that unless God had raised Christ from the dead—NOT OUT OF HADES—those "that have fallen asleep in Jesus are perished," (apolonto.)

As the doctrine of the resurrection does not, therefore, rest upon the principle of a deathless state in hades any more than a living germ is necessary for the production of vegetable life, we cannot divine the utility of a conscious intermediate state, as it would not be an enviable position, nor consistent with the moral government of a God of Love to keep conscious souls in hades "dreaming, sleeping, insane, sorrowing, in torments," &c., through ages of ages! as Mr. White states in "Rainbow," Vol. 8., p. 268.

Scripture speaks of "the resurrection of the dead," not of the body. "The resurrection of the body," is a phrase used in what is called the "Apostle's Creed," and has become so incorporated into the faith of Christendom that it is considered as Scripture truth, but notwithstanding, the words are nowhere to be found in Scripture, as the Apostles believed in "the resurrection of the dead," and consequently used invariably the word nekron, dead, not soma, body. This is an instance of the manner in which the creeds of councils have corrupted the faith of Christendom. Believing in the resurrection of the body, instead of the dead, has done much towards the belief of a conscious spirit in hades, as men naturally infer that if the body rise, surely the spirit must join it, forgetting that it is raised a spiritual body incorruptible, not by any means, as we have already said, identical with the natural or soulish body laid in the grave, as "God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed its own body:" "for the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself, first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." (Mark 4: 28.)

John says, "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice." If in the grave, or sheol, they are dead! We hear nothing here of conscious spirits in hades! John ignores them altogether, because he did not believe in such "Will-o'-the-wisps." He says "the dead,"—not conscious, wide-awake spirits in hades—shall hear his voice, and live, just as the dead earth "hears the voice of spring, and flourishes green again."

The 8th Paraphrase, 12th ver., of the church of Scotland utters the truth, though its adherents ignore the idea of an unconscious state between death and resurrection, when it says—

"And man, when laid in lonesome grave,
Shall sleep in death's dark gloom,
Until the eternal morning wakes
The slumberers of the tomb."

How inconsistent to sing thus, and believe the contrary! But this is nothing strange to those who have studied the theology of our hymns. "I am the resurrection and life," says Christ; and believing this, we say "Amen." "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly," to wake thy sleeping saints, translate, with them (1. Thes. 4: 17) thy living ones, and thus fill the earth and skies with new or resurrection life.—Hugh Hastings. M. D., London.

The Office not the Man.

One of the Roman Catholic newspapers of this city has made a nice discrimination on the question of the Pope's infallibility. It makes the following innocent avowal:

"We have never yet predicted infallibility of any mortal man. We do not believe the Pope is personally infallible, or infallible as a man, nor does any Catholic so believe. The Supreme Pontiff is ex officio infallible in teaching the Universal church, but by the super-human and super-natural assistance of the Holy Ghost, as Peter and the rest of the apostles were infallible in revealing the truth by the inspiration of the same Holy Ghost. The infallibility comes from God, not from his own powers as a mortal man, and is attached, so to speak, to the office, not to the person of the Pontiff."

Which reminds us of a little story. One of the Bishops of this same infallible church swore very roundly at his servant, who offended him, when the servant mildly asked—

"Does a Bishop swear?"

"I did not swear as a Bishop, but as a man," said the prelate.

"Yes, yes," replied the servant, "but when the devil gets the man for swearing, where will the Bishop go?"

CHEERFUL PEOPLE.—God bless the cheerful people—man, woman or child, old or young, illiterate or educated, handsome or homely. Over and above every other social trait stands cheerfulness. What the sun is to nature—what God is to the stricken heart which knows how to lean upon him—are cheerful persons in the house and by the wayside. They go unobtrusively, unconsciously, about their silent mission, brightening up society around them, with the happiness beaming from their faces. We love to sit near them; we love the nature of their eye, the tone of their voice. Little children find them out, oh! so quickly, amid the densest crowd, and passing by the knitted brow and compressed lip, glide near, and lay a confiding little hand on their knee, lift their clear young eyes to those loving faces.

The Times.

AT HOME.

* * * The Hoosic Tunnel is 125 feet longer than it was Oct. 1.

* * * Gen. Meade, commander of the Union army at Gettysburg, is dead.

* * * Not much has been said of late about Cuban affairs, but the rebellion there is still in progress, and, apparently, as far from suppression as ever.

* * * The fossil remains of an immense mammoth were recently unearthed near Millbrook, Ont. One of the teeth measured twenty inches in circumference.

* * * An apostate and backsliding Mormon organization has been formed in Salt Lake, called the Utah Liberating League. It is rapidly taking strong hold on the people, and is directed against the powers of the priesthood of the Mormon church.

* * * The General Election is over, and everybody, without distinction of party, is heartily glad of it. The tide of vituperation, slander and lying will now ebb for a time. Gen. Grant is elected President by an unexampled popular majority, and has about five-sixths of the electorial votes.

* * * Recent advices confirm the report of the loss of the steamer Missouri, by fire at sea on Oct. 22. Fire was discovered in the fire room, and, although every effort was made by the officers and crew to check its progress, in twenty minutes it was beyond all control. Boats were launched, but owing to the heavy sea at the time were all swamped but one, and that contained but few persons.

* * * Boston is horrified over a terrible tragedy. Workmen discovered two barrels floating down the Charles river, which upon being opened were found to contain a human body cut in pieces and carefully packed in the straw. The clothing indicated the victim was a man in good circumstances; on a portion of the body was found a gold watch and chain. The only wound on the body was a small flesh bruise on the face. The whole is enveloped in mystery, and greatly agitates quiet Boston.

* * * The epidemic among horses is still spreading South and West. It everywhere hinders or puts an entire stop to business. In Chicago oxen are largely employed for heavy teaming, while men and boys draw light wagons. We saw a one horse wagon the other day with a steer harnessed in the thills, the harness being that usualy worn by a horse, except the bridle. In place of this the reins were attached to a stick fastened to the animal's horns. Some think the disease has about run its course, and the horses will soon be able to work, while others entertain the gloomiest apprehensions, and imagine that the diseased animals cannot be safely worked before spring. We learn that in Western New York cows have been attacked with the same disorder, in some cases resulting fatally. Similar reports concerning swine and other domestic animals reach us from other quarters.

ABROAD.

* * * Important discoveries have been made by the American polar expedition. A section formerly supposed to consist of islands in the Polar Sea has been found to be the main land.

* * * A general conference of Jews is in session in Berlin. The delegates of Roumania have laid before it the condition of their people in the principalities. They propose to petition the Roumanian Chamber for full civil and political privileges, and state that the proposition of emigrating en masse to America has been abandoned.

* * * Advices from Italy of Nov. 1, states that the river Po continues to rise and the inundation spreading. Families flying, and those who escape are starving on house tops and in the trees, where they have taken refuge. The streams are filled with the carcasses of cattle and wrecks of houses and barns. The town of Reggio, fourteen miles from Modena, has almost entirely disappeared beneath the flood.

* * * Rheims is added to the French towns which have been freed, by the prompt payment of the successive installments of the indemnity, from the presence of a foreign garrison. Prussia is diminishing her force in French territory in proportion to the diminution of the indemnity. Frenchmen have displayed a patriotic alacrity in liquidating this Prussian bill of damages. Two hundred million francs will be paid this week, and at the end of the year only two milliards will remain unpaid.

* * * Norway can legitimately claim the latest triumph in Arctic explorations. Captain Nils Johnson, who sailed from Fromsoe, Norway, on the 8th of May last, has rediscovered the open Polar Sea, and has accomplished still more in locating the lands to the east of Spitzbergen, which has puzzled the geographers and map makers for two hundred years or more. He finds these lands, which were supposed to consist of three islands separated by channels, to be a broad stretch of ground, low in places, but continuous. The atmospheric conditions, from the facts reported by Captain Johnson, are very different from what they have been commonly supposed to be. In the Open Polar Sea, and all around the coast of the terra incognitia, he failed to meet with any icebergs, and nowhere was ice to be seen except from the summit of the hills. Dr. Augustus Peterman, of Gotha, who makes the report of what Captain Johnson has already communicated, holds that the immense longitudinal piles of driftwood, which were discovered along the coast, are confirmatory of the supposed current conditions of the Arctic ocean. Captain Johnson reports birds, seals, and reindeers in great numbers.

* * * The denationalization of Alsace and Lorraine, under the German regulations, is pursued after the most rigid fashion. Not an announcement is permitted in the street of Strasburg if it be in the French language. All the police regulations and the names of streets are posted in German, though a large mass of the people are unable to read them in this form. The rule in regard to emigration, making all males under twenty-one years of age follow the decision of their families, and prescribing the usual term of military service in case their families should decide to remain, has had the effect of driving out many small land owners, whose industry and capital in the aggregate would have contributed materially to the revenues of Germany, had they remained. Descriptions of the scenes along the road leading into France contain many sad pictures of national devotion and domestic suffering. The action of the German authorities, however, will be extenuated by those who recall the fact that Louis XIV. denationalized German Alsace and Lorraine in a much fiercer manner. The French language, dress, customs, and religion were then enforced upon the Germans in more despotic ways than the German government have adopted in retaliation. The saddest reflection is that, in both cases, the same people of Alsace and Lorraine are made to suffer in this strife of nations to get even.

* * * Nothing could be more suggestive of the marvelous changes that are taking place in Prussia, the stronghold of German feudalism, than the appeal of the Crown to the people against the unprogressive spirit of the Junkerdom. It shows that the tendency of the times is irresistibly toward constitutional, if not toward republican freedom. Who could have expected, ten years ago, to see Bismarck, the pet of the reactionaries and doctrinaries, in the character of a popular champion? The bill which has caused the crisis is a formidable blow, perhaps the most formidable that could have been leveled at the power of the landed gentry, whose local influence was almost as great as the influence of the Lord of the manor is in the southern districts of England. Few statesmen have possessed so happy a tact in doing always the right thing at the right moment. The new nationality needs to be placed upon the sure basis of independence and freedom. The people must be made to love their land, and have no excuse to leave it in search of more attractive homes. The emigration epidemic, which now carries off the flower of German manhood, must be stopped at any cost, and what remedy could be more effective than liberal antidotes? Hence Bismarck follows up his armed consolidation of the nation by every conceivable reform. "Iron and blood" have had their day, and in place of it we have improvement in the land tenure, labor conferences, industrial and other measures conducive to popular prosperity and content. Ex.

Obituary.

CHAPLIN.—Died, near Pierceton, Indiana, October 24, 1872, Sarah, wife of Eld. S. A. Chaplin, in the glorious hope of immortality through a resurrection of the dead at the coming of Christ, and of the eternal enjoyment of the "world to come."

The deceased was born in Spencer, Tioga Co., N. Y., April 12, 1802. When 17 years of age she gave her heart to God, and became a devoted follower of Christ. Sep. 28, 1834 she was united in marriage to S. A. Chaplin, in Lawrence Co., Tenn. In Feb. 1836, she came with her husband to make a home in the then unbroken forests of Northern Indiana. In 1841 the glad tidings of Jesus' soon-coming reached her ears, and found a ready response in her heart. She labored in loneliness often, that her husband might go and proclaim the coming of the "holy and just One." Like many others, she hoped to see the Lord's Christ without tasting death. She had a presentiment of her death, often quoting the words, "I shall die and not live." When she approached the dark river her confidence in her Redeemer was unshaken. When far down in the waves of the cold stream, whose icy currents were freezing the warm pulsations of her heart, and stifling her utterance, she raised her feeble voice in echoing back to us, as we stood upon the strand of the turbid waters that were closing over the loved form of wife and mother, the words of him who mingled tears with weeping sisters upon a tomb in Bethany that had closed over the form of a beloved brother and a friend: "I am the Resurrection and the Life."

"And heard the sough of Jordan's wave,"

Again, and again, we heard these words, till the feeble cadences were lost in the surges of the death stream. She saw the shining tracks that the footsteps of One made who crossed from Calvary 1800 years ago, and felt the sweet assurance "Because he lives we shall live also." As I looked down, in all the bitterness of grief, through the glass in the lid of her coffin upon her pale and placid countenance, and realized that all the wealth of her pure affections had been mine: how sweet the thought, "She sleeps in Jesus!" Though left a lone pilgrim, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth," and I hope in my flesh to see God.

S. A. CHAPLIN.

THORNTON.—In Geneva, Mich., Oct. 26, 1872, Alice J. Thornton aged 14.

She leaves parents and a large number of friends, mourning, but not without hope. The glorious Life giver has conquered death, and brought to our vision a world of fadeless bloom, where daughters and parents live to die no more.

Words of comfort by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 22.

J. P. MORSE.

ANDERSON.—Died, at Arena, Wis., Oct. 14, John Anderson, in the 81st year of his age.

He rests in hope of a blessed immortality by a resurrection from the dead. Services by the writer, from Heb. 11: 13.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

PEAVEY.—Died, at Arena, Wis., Oct. 17, Sr. Laura Peavey, in the 18th year of her age.

She leaves her parents, brothers and sisters to mourn her absence. But the "blessed hope" is their consolation. She sleeps in Jesus, and "God will bring her with him."

Services at grave by Br. Meigs. Sermon by writer, from Gal. 6: 7, 8.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

The Christian Life.

Is your Lamp Burning?

Say, is your lamp burning, my brother?
I pray you look quickly, and see,
For if it were burning, then surely
Some beams would fall bright upon me.

Straight, straight is the road, but I falter,
And oft I fall out by the way;
Then lift your lamp higher, my brother,
Lest I should make fatal delay.

There are many and many around you,
Who follow wherever you go;
If you thought that they walked in the shadow,
Your lamp would burn brighter, I know.

Upon the dark mountains they stumble,
They are bruised on the rocks, and they lie
With their white, pleading faces turned upward,
To the clouds and the pitiful sky.

There is many a lamp that is lighted,
We behold them anear and afar;
But not many among them, my brother,
Shine steadily on like a star

I think, were they trimmed night and morning,
They would never burn down or go out,
Though from the four quarters of heaven,
The winds were all blowing about.

If once, all the lamps that are lighted,
Would steadily blaze in a line,
Wide over the land and the ocean,
What a girdle of glory would shine!

How all the dark places would brighten,
How the mists would roll up and away;
How the earth would laugh out in her gladness
To hail the millennial day!

Say, is your lamp burning, my brother?
I pray you look quickly, and see,
For if it were burning, then surely,
Some beams would fall bright upon me.

How Long Have You Resisted the Holy Spirit?—This question speaks to your conscience, dear reader. You alone can answer it; you alone can tell when you first began to realize the solemn truth that you are a sinner, and that you need the blood of Christ to be sprinkled upon your guilty soul. Perhaps you can hardly say when your religious impressions first commenced; the time is so distant in the past that years must be numbered and your thoughts carried back to the sunny hours of childhood. God has striven with you a long while, and you will not be subdued. He has called you again and again, but it has all been in vain. You have fought against him with all your energy. It has cost you a struggle to maintain the warfare. You have found it a hard matter to resist the Holy Spirit, and if you are lost you will have suffered severely in procuring your perdition.

A Cheerful Home.

A single bitter word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day. One surly glance casts a gloom over the household; while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and weariest hours. Like unexpected flowers which spring up along our path, full of freshness, fragrance, and beauty, so do kind words and gentle acts, and sweet dispositions make glad the home where peace and blessing dwell. No matter how humble the abode, if it be thus garnished with grace and sweetened with kindness and smiles, the heart will turn longingly toward it from all tumults of the world; and home, if it be never so homely, will be the dearest spot beneath the circuit of the sun.

And the influences of home perpetuate themselves. The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughter long after her head is pillowed in the dust of death; and fatherly kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons who come to wear his mantle and to fill his place; while, on the other hand, from an unhappy, misgoverened, and disordered homes go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable and perpetuate the sourness and sadness, the contentions and strifes, and railings which have made their own early lives so wretched and distorted.

Toward the cheerful home the children gather " as clouds and as doves to their windows," while from the home which is the abode of discontent, and strife, and trouble, they fly forth as vultures to rend their prey.

The class of men that disturb, and disorder, and distress the world are not those born and nurtured amid the hallowed influences of Christian homes; but rather those whose early life has been a scene of trouble and vexation —who have started wrong in the pilgrimage, and whose course is one of disaster to themselves and trouble to those around them.—Friends' Intelligencer.

If God were to hold in his right hand all truth, and in his left the everlasting active desire for truth, though veiled up in eternal error, and were to bid me choose, I would humbly grasp his left, praying. "Almighty Father grant me this gift, ABSOLUTE TRUTH, is for THEE alone."—Anon.

Correspondence.

From Our English Correspondent.

The Fortunes of the Truth in England —What does Dr. Cuyler believe? —A Clergyman at Work.—The Divorce Court,—The Jesuits.

Amid the fluctuating fortunes of the truth in this world, we may say that while in a measure its truths in England have been very marked, yet on account of the prevalence of tradition, superstition and priestcraft, its progress has been much retarded. The great facts of human mortality with eternal life through Christ alone; and all the other and kindred varieties that we hold as a people, as you well know, have been lost—or nearly so—for centuries. Instead of this the proud boast of the immortality of the soul has gained almost universal credence. To-day that doctrine has lost its security—the security of silence—and is being searched to the bottom. Hundreds of investigators have come to the decision that it is a bogus dogma faith, and altogether of the devil and his progeny. Thinking and sympathizing with this class and desiring the enlightenment and salvation of others, Eld George A. Brown, of New Bedford, Mass., and your correspondent, left the States for England a few weeks since, to spend some months in this country in preaching the word of life. Last Sunday we commenced services in the Belle Vued Assembly Rooms, Wymouth. In the afternoon the congregation numbered a few over twenty; but in the evening some over sixty persons attended. We tried to assure the people we were their friends, and our only desire was to do them good, and believe that we were enabled to succeed. We are doing it for the Lord. We are not sustained by any guaranteed friends; but our Lord has said, "Go ye into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right that will I give thee," and we have commenced this work believing in his promise. The people in England who hold the truth are mostly poor. It is quite as much as they can do—and more too—to pay for halls. Therefore the support of the laborer must come from without. But we are encouraged to hope in our Lord that while we serve him and his church "night and day, without ceasing," he will provide for all our temporal necessities by inclining the hearts of those who love him to care for us.

Sunday's meetings were really encouraging. The field promises great things, and our hearts are cheered. Our motto is, "Go forward!" We mean aggression. We want to do something for the praise of the Holy name under which we are sheltered, and any letters of advice, counsel, sympathy, exhortation, help, etc. ,sent to W. Kellaway, 26 St. Thomas Street, Weymouth, England, will be both acceptable and refreshing.

Dr. Cuyler's writings have made him famous in the whole world. He is considered thoroughly evangelical and soundly orthodox. What does the Dr. believe concerning the dead? The question is not mine, but has been mooted in the Christian World, by a party who signs himself "H. H." Now it is well known that this eminent man, with many others equally noted and learned, rejects the idea of consciousness in the intermediate state. But I will give you the letter as it is—it so neatly exposes the inconsistencies of the doctor and others like him.

Here it is:

SILENT LAND.

In the article, "An hour with Thomas Carlysle," by Rev. Dr. Cuyler, in your last issue, when speaking of Mr. Carlyle's deceased wife, Dr. Cuyler says, "She has passed away to the 'silent land,'" and as this is his definition of sheol, hades, or the grave, one, I presume, may suppose that Dr. Cuyler belives, as David did, that the "state of death is one of unconsciousness." As if it be a "silent land," it cannot possibly be a gehenna (hell), or heaven of bliss, as in the one case there is no silence in hell, it being full of "groans and hollow moans," and heaven, in the other case, is full of praise and songs; therfore we infer that Dr. Cuyler had in his mind, when he called death "the silent land," David's description thereof in Ps. 115: 17, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." It would be interesting to know if this be the good doctor's opinion.

H. H.

Good works are the fruit of good faith. They are doubtless rare. Few know what "good works" are. Some think providing articles for festivals, building grand and expensive edifices "for the worship of God," etc., are "good works," in the Bible sense of the phrase. But I have yet to learn of the goodness of the latter. The "work" below I call "good," and it certainly does one good to read the following paragraph, which appeared in a high-toned paper:

A few days ago a clergyman of South London, calling on a poor woman who obtained a living by mangling, found her in some distress because she had no one to do her work while she went round to her customers. Acting on a generous impulse, he laid hold of the handle, and turned away manfully for some hours, until the work that had to be done was accomplished.

Probably the clergyman referred to received much physical benefit in his labor of love, besides the approval of his conscience, and the favorable smile of his God.

If men and women were not wicked and inconsistent in their affections, we should not read such a report as this just made in England respecting divorces:

Some idea of the business in the Divorce Court may be formed when the stamps on proceedings in one year, just made up, amounted to £3,219 6s. 6d.' This money was paid for stamps alone. Surely reformation is needed in social life.

The expulsion of the Jesuits from Germany and Russia has been completed, and we hear many of them have found a temporary asylum in Belgium. Gentlemen have given up their castles to them, and they are now quietly ensconced on the borders of the German fatherland. But their eye is on poor priest-ridden Ireland, and if things should come to the worst with them on the continent they expect to fall back into Erin. The stir has called out many articles on their history and principles in the religious organs of the country; but the second one by J. Hiles Hitchen, which is printed in the Christian World, will pay for the most careful perusal. It is lengthy, but of such importance and interest that our long selection will be readily excused.

JESUIT HISTORY AND PRINCIPLES.

Their Principles.—The "Society of Jesus" consists of four classes of persons—the Professed, the Coadjutors, the Scholars, and the Novices. All these grades are under the absolute control of one whom they denominate their General. Should any young man, above the age of fourteen, desire to enter the order, he must apply for admission to the class of Novices. Prior to his reception a most minute investigation is made into the youth's position in life, possessions, prospects, acquirements, and disposition. Should the examinations prove satisfactory, he is admitted as a Novice, which position he holds for two years. During that time he is under strict surveillance, and is expected to disclose at the Confessional the dearest secret of his heart and life. He undergoes daily instructions, being specially taught to submit his own will and inclinations always in all things to his superior; that if he have any patrimony, to consecrate that entirely to the church. Should the two years of his novitiate be passed acceptably he is admitted to the rank of Scholar, which position he must retain at least two years. Those two years must be spent in self-examination, meditation, confessions and prayers. He must wait on the sick and dying in hospitals; must discharge the most menial duties of the religious house in which he is placed; must spend at least one month in begging from door to door, and occupy himself some time in teaching and preaching. At the end of the period he is admitted to the rank of Coadjutor, and ultimately, in not less than one year, he attains the position of Professor, when he must take the four vows—viz., of perfect obedience, voluntary poverty, perpetual chastity, and absolute submission to the Pope. We will make an extract from the oath of secresy and submission, that the reader may the better see by what vows the Jesuit fraternity are bound. In the presence of members of the society, and just prior to the partaking of the sacrament, the candidate says—"I, A. B., now in the presence of Almighty God, the blessid Virgin Mary, the blessed Michael the Archangel, the blessed St. John the Baptist, the holy apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, and the saints and secret hosts of heaven, and to you, my ghostly father, do declare from my heart, without mental reservation, that his holiness, the Pope is Christ's Vicar-General, and is the true and only head of the Catholic or universal church throughout the earth; and that by the virtue of the keys of binding and loosing given to his holiness by my Savior Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical kings, princes, states, commonwealths, and governments, all being illegal without his sacred confirmation. and that they may be safely destroyed; therefore to the utmost of my power I shall and will defend this doctrine, and his holiness, rights and customs, against all usurpers of the heretical (or Protestant) authority whatsoever; especially against the now pretended authority and church of England, and all adherents, in regard that they and she be usurpal and heretical, opposing the sacred mother church of Rome....I do further declare that I will help, assist, and advise all or any of his holiness' agents in any place wherever I shall be in England, Scotland, and Ireland, or in any other territory or kingdom I shall come to, and do my utmost to exterpate the heretical Protestants' doctrine, and to destroy all their pretended powers, regal or otherwise. I do further promise and declare that I am dispensed with to assume any religion heretical for the propagation of the mother church's interests, to keep secret and private all their agents' counsels from time to time as they intrust me, and not to divulge directly or indirectly, by word, writing, or circumstances whatever." The part the Jesuit is bound to play is thus clearly indicated, and the past history of the society will show how faithfully the members have striven to fulfill their vows. Still fuller is the insight we secure into their private workings, by the document entitled, "Secreta Monita Societ tis Jesu," or "The Secret Instructions of the Society of Jesus," which was found in the Jesuit College in Paderborn, in Westphalia, when Christian, Duke of Brunswick, took possession of the place. The manuscript copy is preserved in the Library of the British Museum. It should be noted that, in the preface of the "Secreta Monita" it is advised that none of the Novices should be instructed in the contents, and, it is added, "Great care must be taken that they do not fall into the hands of strangers, because they would put an improper construction upon them out of envy to our order. But, should it so happen (which God forbid), then let them deny that these are the sentiments of the society, confirming this by members they know to be ignorant of them."

We have not room to give one tithe of the contents of these "Secret Instructions," but, dipping into them cursorily, we find the following:—"In order to render themselves pleasing to the inhabitants of the place, they are to explain that the object of the society is to apply its efforts as much for the good of others as for themselves; therefore they must undertake the humblest offices in the hospitals, visit the sick, afflicted, and prisoners, and hear confessions promptly and indiscriminately, in order that the most influential inhabitants of the place may admire them because of their extraordinary charity they bear to all," "As much money as possible is to be obtained from widows, by constantly setting before them our necessities." "Princes, and persons of distinction everywhere, must by all mens be so managed, that the society may have their ear, and this would easily secure their hearts; and let it be observed, that ecclesiastical persons gain a great footing in the favor of princes and noblemen by winking at their vices." "One chief point will be to remove, little by little, such servants as have not an understanding with our society, and to get in others recommended by persons depending upon us; for by these means we shall have intimate knowledge of all that passes in the family." "Wherever the members reside, they must secure the physician friendly to us, and let him be recommended to the sick, that he, in turn, praising the order above all others, may have us called into the wealthy, and especially to the dying." "Let wives who complain of the vices and ill-tempers of their husbands, be instructed secretly to abstract money, that by making an offering thereof to God, they might expiate the crimes of their sinful helpmates, and secure a pardon for them." "The difficulty being greater to draw the sons of nobles, persons of distinction, and senators, while under their parent's roof, because of training them for their own situations, persuade them, by our friends rather than ourselves, to send them to remote universities, where our members teach, in order that they may be more securely and easily won over, first transmitting to our professors their rank and station." "The greatest discretion must be used in convincing kings and princes, that the Catholic faith cannot (in the present state of things) be maintained without the civil power, for by these means our members will get into favor with those high in office and be admitted into their secret councils." "We shall derive no small advantage from secretly and skillfully fomenting the animosities that arise among the great, in order to reduce their strength." "Let unanimity characterise our members, even in the smallest matters, because by this, whatever confusion arises in the world, we must necessarily strengthen and maintain our ground."

Such are fair samples of the directions given to the Jesuits in the prosecution of their work—directions which, it will be remembered, they are to appear ignorant of, and, indeed openly deny that they exist among them should they be charged therewith. It would only be consistent, therefore, with his position and vows for any Jesuit who may read this paper to solemnly declare these statements to be all false, whilst at the very moment he may have a copy of the "Secret Instructions" in his portmanteau. The transactions and tactics of the Jesuits within the last ten years alone show how carefully they have followed their "Secret Instructions" both in spirit and letter. In our next we will glance at their doctrines and principles, as taught by the Jesuit authors.

The Pope is sensibly aware of the loss of the "eternal city." He feels it. For the correspondent of the Daily News, writing from Rome, made date Sept. 23, 1872, says:

The second anniversary of the occupation of Rome was celebrated by the Romans with manifestations of joy. Early in the morning the cannon awakened the people, and the Pope, in addressing several thousand of the faithful, said:—"I cannot refrain from saying that those cannon which I heard this morning between four and five caused me great pain. Certainly they might have done without them, for they are unworthy of victors who possess the slightest notion of generosity toward the vanquished."

The Catholic papers are very much incensed by the celebration, and the broadest words of the Thesaurus are picked out to strike the revolutionists with. An extract or two will throw light on what I mean:

We have just pased the second anniversary of the Piedmontese armed occupation of the Pontificial States. Will any "regenerated" Italian favor us with a list of the benefits he or his country has received at the hands of the usurper and administrators? The sacrilegious secularization of the religious house is causing more trouble to the Florentine government than Venosta ever dreamt of. Are they going to discover once more that besides committing a crime they have fallen into a blunder? The Riforma publishes a characteristic letter from the hero of Montana and addressed to his "Dear Stefanoni," in which we meet with the following sentence: "If Italy had a proper sort of government the priests would be employed with their spades in their hands in draining the Pontine marshes." Did it ever occur to this vaporing enthusiast in the worst of causes to take up the spade himself and try for once to do something, which however impracticable would at least not be hurtful to his unhappy country? But men of the Garibaldi class never mean work—their whole occupation is demolition." [See Rev. 17: 16.]

The "leader" on the same subject in paper of a week later opens with se softer sentences:—

'Victor Emmanuel has again quit- l what, by a kind of sarcasm we pose, his friends are pleased to call capital. In other words, the sac- gious usurper has fled from the city the Pope-King."

t closes with these words:

'Should Ratazzi be minister of the ·ending new cabinet, two things l follow—the wholesale suppression the religious orders and war with ance. Oriflame and cry, Dennis ntjoye, to which we say with Du- s "Marry and amen, and in a most py hour." France has a long ac- unt to settle with Italy, even laying le the church's quarrel.

m H. G. McCullock.

A SAD STORY.

We were the witness of a sad occur- ce here, day before yesterday. Mr. nnison, of Chicago, had advertised send up his balloon from the fair und, Friday afternoon. It being te a sight, I with my family, went see the occasion. The balloon was sted with hot air. When it was rly full it took fire at the top. In mean time men at the bottom were usting the ropes and fastening them the basket, when, all at once (the er being burned at the top which d it down, up it soared into the air. e man, an Irishman, somehow got ght in the ropes around his feet, managed to throw himself into basket, when up in the air some ee hundred feet—men, ballon and all went together. All eyes were ned to the burning balloon, and ost breathless the multitude waited result. One moment the man ld be seen clinging to the ropes, next with terrible velocity he was ing to the earth, and next a bruised bleeding corpse he lay, within ten ts of where he started. The burn- balloon passing almost over our ds, lodged near the old campground burned to ashes, and the multi- e turned silently and sadly away. ho was to blame? if anyone, I do know. But it was one of the sad- things I ever witnessed, to see a n fall, at least three hundred feet, the solid earth. Not a vestage of remained, not a breath was drawn, a muscle moved after he struck the und. Simply a bruised and man- d mass.

Thank God, that when the saints go it will be with the chariots of Isra- and the horsemen thereof, and rist will have so much more attrac- power than the earth that there be no danger of falling. If we it will be into the arms of the at Shepherd, and mourners will go about the streets.

om R. B. Dutton, Linn Co., Iowa.

I am not so lonely here as I was, for, the help of the good Lord, we have anized a little church of eight mbers, six of them heads of fami- and all working members. Praise Lord! While we are waiting and king for Jesus to come to gather his els, we beg an interest in the pray- of all God's children; and now ile we live and look let us work, so t when Jesus comes we need not live l look but look and live forever, with redeemed of all ages. Glory to d for the prospect that is before us! us is coming! Who will be ready?

hristianity or Heathenism, Which?

Much is daily said about the won- ful facilities which the mechanical provements of the age are giving to ristianity for increasing its influence extending its boundaries. The r-lengthening lines of railroad are ging the nations together. The ntless steamers plying between the ts of every ocean and river are mak- the most distant continents neigh- s. The telegraph which is netting r the globe is sending a common ill of intelligence and sympathy ogh every part of the human family. ersity in opinion, in custom, in re- on itself is likely to fade away un- this law of soliditary which is rul- the world.

Christian men look at all this wonder- movement in a very hopeful way. ey believe that they see in it a fulfill- nt of the great prophecies looking the sure conversion of the world to rist. Whether they are right in so wing the matter or not we do not inquire.

But there certainly is another side to this subject, and we do well in regarding it. There is evil as well as good in the world, and the former is about as active in propagating as is the latter. Railroads, steamers and telegraphs are as free to transport the false as they are the true. Systems of wrong can move to and fro with as great speed as can systems of good. If with wonderful dispatch Christianity can place its missionaries in New Zealand or Hindostan, with the same celerity the heathenism in those lands can send its representatives to every centre of our Christianity. The rail-cars and the steamers return to us as easily as they go from us. And they do not come back empty. They are freighted heavily with the heathen of every land and creed. These foreign missionaries are working in Christian England and America for the propagation of their false religions with something of the same effect with which our Christian missionaries are working to set up the true religion in foregin coutries. If we are building chapels in Pekin, the Chinamen are building Joss houses in San Francisco: If England is establishing her Christian civilization in Calcutta and Bangalore, unconverted Hindoos are pactising their heathen faith in London. Said the Archbishop of Canterbury in a recent speech: "Go to Her Majesty's levee, or the Lord Mayor's banquett, or walk even through the streets, and what do you see? A cavalcade of some six carriages bearing the burmese ambassadors, absolutely heathen, who have come to do their homage to the greatness of England in the centre of England. Go to the Temple, where the familiar sight of our barristers with their peculiar costume used to be the the only thing we saw, and we find some sixty Hindoos members of the Temple, or Lincoln's Inn, still remaining Hindoos and heathens in the centre of civilization." Dr. Taits went on to mention other particulars showing how near men in the metopolis of England are brought to heathenism; "so near," he affirmed, "that unless they take some steps for converting the heathen, the heathen will be converting them." That this is no imaginary thing is proved by the facts that the philosophy taught in the great seminaries of learning in England has already been affected by Eastern ideas; that men of note in England are outspoken in their admiration of heathen systems of pilosophy and religion. How is it in this country may be seen in the fact that our literature as represented by some of our popular writers and thinkers is getting to be pretty thoroughly saturated with Brahminical ideas and sentiments.

We have written enough to show that the great movements of the age are not necessarily or exclusively in the interests of Christianity. The mighty inventions and discoveries of science, the wide diffusion of knowledge over the earth, the breaking down of national prejudices and religious bigotries, the growing community of interest and feeling between races and peoples—in these things are found facilities and opportunities for the evil as well as for the good to extend its power. This fact should be more thoughtfully considered than it has been. And it should lead Christian men to renewed effort, consecration and prayer in this great warfare with sin.

We have no doubt as to the final issue of the conflict. There is to be a mightier devotion on the part of Christianity than the world has yet seen. There is to be a vastly larger giving on the part of Christians, of themselves and their wealth, than these centuries have witnessed. There is pressing need that a new stadium in the history of the church, its enthusiasm, its self-sacrificing love, should begin just now. With this and the grace of God to crown it Christianity will keep pace with every movement of the age, turning every success of science into a victory for itself.—Watchman and Reflector.

Truth will ever be unpalatable to those who are determined not to relinquish error, but can never give offence to the honest plain-dealing remonstrances of a friend differ as widely from the rancor of an enemy, as the friendly probe of a physician from the the dagger of an assassin.

A loving heat and pleasant countenance are commodities which a man should never fail to take home with him. They will best season his food and soften his pillow. It were a great thing for a man that his wife and children could truly say of him, "He never brought a frown or unhappiness across his threshhold."

On earth we have nothing to do with success or with its results, but only being true to God and for God; for it is sincerity and not success which is the sweet savor before God.—Robertson.

Conference Minutes

WISCONSIN.

WESTERN DISTRICT, Q. M.

The adjourned Q. M. at Big Creek, Sauk Co., was held Oct. 18–20. It was characterized by the best order in the exercises, spirituality in devotion, brotherly kindness in acts, and was productive of good. One confessed Christ, seven joined the church, and a good feeling prevailed. The great drawback we had on our joy was, (as St. Paul said on another occasion) we did not see our Br. Thomson there, and knowing the cause it made us sad.

One most pleasing feature in the meeting, and one perhaps that added to its sweetness I will mention: The Methodist minister loves the cause of God and truth more than party or self. When he first came there he talked union, and he acted it out. The consequence was they love each other and worship together and had a revival last winter, and the converts love and talk the truth. I may say the congregation was one. Their minister took part with me in preachieg and helped in breaking of bread, together with most of his members. It was a beautiful sight and God approved of it. Praise his holy name for it. I would say that this condition would prevail everywhere if sectarian bars were done away.

P. W. Hough.

MICHIGAN.

EASTERN DISTRICT, Q. M.

The first Q. M. of this year was held with the church at Almont, commencing Thursday, Oct. 3.

The new meeting house, finished except plastering, was then opened for the first service in it, and found to be quite comfortable.

The attendance of preaching brethren was quite small—only four being present in all; Brs. Wright, Morgan, Drummond, and the pastor of the church. Br. Mackie was reported sick of a fever—reasonably excused. I do not know how to excuse the others.

The general attendance of hearers was very good, especially on Saturday and Sunday. A goodly number of brethren and sisters from Lapur, Elk, Speake, Crockway Center, Columbus, Riley, and Berville were present, evidently filled with the good Spirit, so that the best of feeling was manifest throughout, and the testimonies showed that it was good to be there.

Only one session of conference was held, there being very little "business" to do. Geo. Wright was chosen chairman, and John H. Gaton secretary, and "To whom it may concern," would hereby say, he wants instructions, and the records of the conference.

License to preach was granted to Br. Francis Morgan, of Lapur.

Reports from the churches represented were interesting, and quite encouraging generally.

There were also several calls for help—same old truth. "The harvest truly plenteous, but the laborers are few." Why are they so few?

The time and place of next Q. M. was neglected, but will probably be at Brockway Center—time will be published hereafter.

The last hour of the quarterly feast, Sunday eve., was spent at the Lord's table, and it was a time of refreshing. The moments were rich in blessing as we looked at Jesus, in the emblems, looking through them back to the cross, and forward to the crown. Next morning we parted, hoping soon to meet in the home of the redeemed, and sit down at the table, the Lord being with us. May that day hasten. Till then we would occupy, and "be as men that wait for one Lord." Amen.

John H. Gaton, Sec'y.

ILLINOIS.

DEKALB DISTRICT.

The Conference convened in DeKalb, according to appointment, was one of the best we have ever had. Preachers present: E. H. Burington, L. H. Davis, A. F. Dugger, N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, A. Kingsley, Sr. M. S. Mansfield, H. G. McCullock.

The first question presented was, How can we obtain a better interest among ourselves? Several brethren made interesting remarks on this subject, and all concluded it could be obtained only by consecrating ourselves wholly to God and the cause. At this point an interresting letter was read from Eld. Cairns, of Missouri, formerly of this place.

The following resolution was read and adopted:

Resolved, That we, as ministers and laity will engage the coming year to labor for a deeper toned piety, and a full consecration to God following, peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man can see the Lord, presenting our bodies a living sacrifice, wholly acceptable to God, which is our reasonable service.

Many valuable hints were given to the preachers, by father Kingsly, among them this:

"When I began to preach, I thought it must go like a storm, like a whirlwind; but I soon found out it was better to talk to men than to hollow at them."

The conference adjourned to meet at the call of the Board.

Preaching by Brn. Dugger, Davis, Smith and Sr. Mansfield. Sunday eve every place was occupied, and many were standing, to listen to Sr. Mansfield's sermon on the resurrection, concluding with the beautiful song—"Jerusalem the Golchen." It seems as though the arrangements were of such a character, that all who have any reverence for the word of God must believe. Yet sectarian walls shut out the blessed truth, that though a man die yet shall he live again, and a creed-bound church refused the crowning truth of God's plan of redemption.

We trust the church was made better by this meeting. We know our own hearts were encouraged.

H. G. McCullock, Sec'y.

IOWA.

MANCHESTER DISTRICT.

We met as per appointment at the Six Mile Grove S. H., Bremer Co., Iowa. Upon consultation it was thought best to adjourn and call another session, this being entirely new ground, and so far from the churches in the District, that but a few, comparatively, of the members were present.

We were disappointed in not seeing our evangelist there, and in not having the tent, as we anticipated, but the good Lord was with us, and we had a blessed good time waiting upon him. Br. Wilber was with us, but unable to preach; also Br. Lamphere, consequently the preaching devolved on Mr. Jones and myself. The interest to hear was good, and increased from first to last.

We close by commemorating the sufferings of our Lord. It was good to be there. Praise the Lord.

M. J. Jones.

MAINE.

TWENTIETH ANNUAL MEETING.

Oct. 8, 1872 was a very rainy day. We had appointed to meet in conference in Bath, but only Eld. John Ridley arrived, direct from Iowa, and preached to the few who assembled in the evening. 9th, several brethren arrived, and the Lord gave us a special blessing, cheering and strengthening all present. The president then called the meeting to business, when the officers for the coming year were elected. Eld. C. Goud, President. Eld. F. A. Baker, Vice President. Eld. I. C. Wellcome, Secretary. Eld. W. H. Mitchell, Treasurer. Elds. R. R. York, J. A. Libby and Jesse Gay, Executive Board. I. C. Wellcome, F. A. Baker, D. W. Griffin, E. M. Haggett, Jared Whitman, Tent and Mission Board. I. C. Wellcome, Tract and Mission Agent. Elds. W. H. Mitchell, F. A. Baker, J. A. Libby, Committee on Ordinations. Adjourned.

10th, met at nine a. m. After prayer the subject of tract distribution and mission work was discussed, and the use of money for the work. The agent was instructed by conference to issue a circular suitable for subscriptions, and to appoint sub-agents throughout the State to solicit subscriptions and membership of our mission society for mission and tract work.

The case of T. P. S. Hampson was called up, and the following action taken:

Whereas, it is known that T. P. S. Hampson, of Biddeford, has left the State under circumstances which develop the fact that he is not worthy of the Christian name. Therefore,

Resolved, that we withdraw our fellowship from him, and instruct the secretary to erase his name from our records.

The following paper was read and adopted:

Whereas, our beloved, faithful brother, Elder Thomas Smith, of Bangor, has been laid by from service for more than a year, and through infirmities of age is suffering in weakness and fast sinking to death, we wish to express our sympathy for him and his faithful wife, and to solicit the attention of those who have this world's goods. Although he enjoys the hope of Jesus' speedy coming to give him eternal life, he has no income, and but small means to sustain them during their mortal life. We therefore commend their case to the Christian charity of all our brethren, trusting that they will not allow them to suffer for the necessities of life.

The tent and mission committee report. We found that most of the ministry in Maine were so occupied in preaching in their respective fields, while some were much engaged in their various trades to earn an honest support, or to add to their property, they could not be persuaded to travel with the tent. The tent was called for by brethren in Casco, and was pitched there three days in July. Excellent meetings were enjoyed, and several believers baptized. Brn. Whitman, Gay, and Wellcome did the preaching. The tent was pitched and occupied on the camp-ground during the campmeeting at Mechanics Falls, and was very serviceable for large meetings, and to lodge strangers. Many excellent meetings were enjoyed in it. It was pitched in Oxford in Sept., and meetings held ten days, during which we had four rain storms. Br. and Sr. Taylor held a tent meeting in this place last year, and the good results are seen. A good company of believers and workers has, by the blessing of God, been raised up by that effort, followed up by the labors of Brn. Whitman, Libby, Gay, and others. We found them looking for the Lord, and ready to work for the salvation of others. Our meetings were well attended. The Lord blessed our effort and awakened new interest, greatly strengthened believers, and made deep impression on the hearts of others. Some members of the Methodist church were in constant attendance, and worked with us confessing new light and benefits by our meetings. Others heard us candidly, and will be more interested in their Bibles, and be benefited by what they heard. I. C. Wellcome, A. W. K. P. and Stephen Taylor did the preaching. The expenses of each meeting were met, and we have no financial report to make. I. C. Wellcome, Chairman of Committee. Report accepted.

Tracts and mission reports. The agent had bought tracts $30; received of F. A. Baker, tracts, $50; received of Sidney Hall, tracts, $20; total, $100. Distributed tracts to the amount of 60.50: tracts now in hand, $39.50; due the agent on 1871 account, $28.79; paid for tracts this year $30; paid two express bills on tracts, $2.75; total, $61.03. Collected on commission membership, $29.55: the Treasurer reports in hand, $19.38; total, $48.93; due the agent, $12.10. Collections on mission memberships are—at Auburn $1.25, Bangor $1, Bath $11,50, Buckfield 50c. Hartford $2 30, Kennebunk $5, Livermore $1, Lewiston $1, Sumner $3, Topsham $2, Yarmouth $1. Total, $29.55, Treasurer's report. Received money collected by Eld. J. A. Libby, $6; Sr. Morse, Portland, $9.88; Sr. Merrill, Hollis, $3.50,—$19.38. Total receipts of agents and Treasurer, $48 93.

11th. Friday a. m. After prayer, the Secretary read an interesting letter from Eld. L. F. Cole, now settled in Oneida, Ill., in which was a request for dismission from this conference to join the A. C. Conference of Northern Illinois.

Eld J. Ridley being about to move to Manchester, Iowa, also requested to be dismissed to join the Iowa A. C. Conference. On those requests the conference took action thus:

Resolved, That Brn. L. F. Cole and John Ridley be dismissed from this conference, and that we herein recommend them to our brethren in the West as faithful and reliable ministers of the gospel of Christ.

The Secretary read a letter from the R. I. and Eastern Conn. A. C. Conference, commending Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Bonny Eagle, who has moved into Maine, and desires to join our conference. Brn. G. W. Howard, of Lovell, and G. F. Haines, of Biddeford, were also proposed for membership, and the above three were received by a unanimous vote.

Advice to churches. Believing it to be injurious to the cause of Christ in this State for churches to countenance the labors of ministers who use their influence to sustain factions and side issues, therefore,

Resolved, that we recommend such churches to give no countenance to such preachers as presist in such a course. Adopted.

Campmeeting committee report. The chairman made a verbal report, stating that they had improved the ground and stable, and built a boarding house at Mechanics Falls, incurring some two hundred and twenty dollars expense, which was met by the contributions at the late meeting. They had held the largest, most interesting, and best meeting this year they had ever held, and believe it would result in much good. There were circumstances which indicate to them that it was not best to hold a campmeeting in Pittsfield this year, and they had refrained. Yet it was thought advisable for the interest of the brethren and cause East to sustain a campmeeting among them, and they purpose, if time continues, to hold one next year at Pittsfield or vicinity.

Ordaining Speakers. The subject of indiscreet action of ministers who ordain men as preachers without consulting their brethren in the ministry came up, and was freely discussed. Some curious cases were related, and the general opinion was that Paul's counsel was good—"Lay hands suddenly on no man." All agreed that there is no necessity of ordaining men not called of God to the ministry, nor of ordaining such as are, until there is good proof of that fact. Let there be wise action.

Tobacco. The following was discussed and voted: Inasmuch as we know that the habitual use of tobacco is injurious to the physical, mental and moral powers of man, is obnoxious to many, offensive to good society, opposed to cleanliness "of the flesh and spirit," extravagant in expenditure, wasteful of the Lord's money, and destructive to christian influence; therefore we affectionately and earnestly entreat our brethren and sisters to refrain from using it. We, as a people, have made high professions as of advanced positions in Bible knowledge, self-denial, and personal sacrifices, above all other sects; how then, if we do not seek to reform in this matter, shall we construe the fact that our Methodist and Free Baptist brethren in the late conferences, have passed strong resolutions against the use of tobacco, refusing to hereafter receive any more ministers into their conferences who persist in using it. Are they not far in advance of us in this effort for reform?

Free Masonry. A telling resolution was read on masonry, and discussed, which let some daylight in upon this "work of darkness." It did not pass, but it gave relief. Conference passed a vote of thanks to the brethren and friends at Bath for their kindness to us. It was voted to publish this report in the World's Crisis and in the Advent Christian Times.

Afternoon and evenings were devoted to preaching and exhortation, and were seasons of deep interest. Brn. Ridley, Mitchell, Gay and Wellcome preached. We all felt that our work is of the greatest importance, and is soon to close by the coming of our glorious Lord, to give eternal life and rest to his church.

I. C. Wellcome, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 12, 1872

Business Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

H W Button S A Hill A J Young B Savage G E Garnes A Wilson N : Miller I Boddy S C Wellcome J Kern O R Fassett J H Mills T Gale F J Groat J S Chambers S P Whitney J Raymond P Hitchcock L A Shears A P Lorton W J Griffin R Ruch J Smith S A Chaplin N A Soule

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper

E A Lake I C Wellcome W McCulloch P W Hough A P Lorton P Hitchcock H L Sheperd L A Shears S W Bird S B Mabey H Remley F J Groat C H Williams F Platts D Mathewson J M Stouffer G Irwin S P Whitney P Smith P Gale I Sisson E M Nutt H L Soule J H Mills M Briggs N J Sude H W Baxton C A Miller J P Allen R Ruch O D Gibson W J Lambert J P Flory J Raymond G Howard W J Griffin L H Davis H W B Hilton J A Hollin W P Baker G S Baker W C Hicks C M Shepard M S Reed E C Andrus T C Birkett J C Stoddard M A Tibbetts L S Littlejohn.

Book Notices, Etc.

SPARKLING RUBIES!—A choice collection of new Sunday School music. By Asa Hull and H. Sanders Price 35 Cents.

It would seem that Messrs. Hull and Sanders must be wide-awake Sabbath School men. They show, at any rate, a good appreciation of the needs of the work, and as all Singing Books, like smoke jacks, "wear out in time," and new ones are often needed, this may be safely commended as among the best. There are many excellent collections, but none, perhaps, offer a brighter promise than the little book mentioned above, which was compiled by men of practised hand, and contains a very "shining" set of gems of song.

Published by Oliver Ditson & Co., 277 Washington Street, Boston.

We have received a copy of a late sermon by Br. Fassett, printed in tract form. The subject is 'The Call to Faith and Repentance,' with the Promises. We expect to give it to our readers by and by.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Eld. Wm. Ingmire has removed from Llackisen to East Penfield, Monroe Co., N. Y. Churches in Central or Western New York, desiring his services may correspond—addressing him at the latter place.

Notice

The church of Arena being in a great measure destitute of preaching in consequence of my protracted sickness, would be glad of a call from any of the preaching brethren that could make it convenient so to do. Arena is on the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien railroad, about 25 or 30 miles west of Madison. Any preachers on their way to or from Iowa, could give us a call. GEO. THOMSON, Pastor.

Notice.

TOUR TO ARK.—Br. Lawton got already with his fine horses for Ark., and we were to go as advertised, but the epizootic among the horses put a stop to our purpose. And so our friends will be disappointed. But we hope to come yet, if the Lord opens the way, at a later day. J. V. H.

Notice.

A good opening in Eastern Michigan for a young minister can be had, to supply three churches, and preach in other places as the Lord opens the door. Who will respond soon? For particulars address

John M. Snook, Jackson, Mich.

Or W. C. Hicks, Caro, Michigan.

Notice.—Northern Michigan.

I am arranging to spend most of my time in the field this winter. Churches and isolated brethren in Northern Michigan can correspond with me at Sylvester, Mecosta Co., Mich. E. B. SCOTT.

Notice.

Brethren in Kansas who wish my labors can address me immediately, at Columbus, Cherokee Co., care of Amos Sanford, until further notice. S. B. MABEY.

Notice.

To my Brethren of like precious faith:

Having for some time felt the necessity of a tent in the proclamation of the glorious truths which we advocate, and finding the results so good with the Wayne Co. N. Y. tent, I have therefore come to the conclusion to make an appeal to my brethren and sisters in Christ having the ability and desiring to do what they can towards scattering the glorious message of our soon-returning King in those regions where it has not been promulgated, to aid us in procuring a tent. For the past year I have been preaching where our faith was a novelty, yet strong men and women have been led to acknowledge that we certainly had the truth of the Bible. We have but a little while to work, let us therefore work while day lasts.

There are various ways to work in the vineyard of the Lord, and we are all called upon to be workers, not idlers. The reward is to the doers, some can preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, others can write, and some can scatter tracts and books, others can, of the means which the Lord hath put in their hands as stewards, help the cause by giving with simplicity.

Those who are willing to assist us in raising the necessary funds for the aforesaid object, to-wit.: $300, can send in their pledges to me at Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa., the same to be paid by the 1st of May next provided enough is pledged. Pledges can be sent to THE TIMES office. I should be glad to hear from my brethren and sisters soon, so as to give the order for the tent this winter.

I hope the blessing of God will rest upon the enterprise, and upon those that take stock in the same.

Yours in the truth, JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Marriages.

WRIGHT CLARK In Montfort, Wis., Nov. 2, 1872, by Eld. P. Hitchcock, Mr. Nelson Wright, of Fennimore, and Marietta Clark, of Marion.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Preaching in Hall in Stanley's Block, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Dec. 2-10.
Ionia, Warren Co., Dec. 16-27, and longer if the interest demands. C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Nov. 12.
Ackerson's S. H., Nov. 13.
Amboy, Nov. 17.
C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian Chapel in DeKalb, every Sunday at 10½ a. m. and 7½ p. m. Prayer Services Thursday eve.

Traveling brethren invited to call.

S. B. MABEY.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Saratoga Springs, Union Co., Nov. 4, as Brn. Hindman and Peringer may arrange. Probably stay three evenings.

Jonesboro, Brick chapel, as Br. Childs shall arrange, Nov. 8, and over Suday.

Cobden, Monday eve., Nov. 12 and continue a few evenings as Br. Lawyer may arrange.

WM. MCCULLOCK.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Aurora, in the Arcadome Hall, on Broadway every sunday, at 3 P. M. A. F. DUGGER.

ARKANSAS.

The second Annual Meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Arkansas will be held in Flatwood, Izard Co., Nov. 30, and over the Sabbath. The churches will appoint their delegates in good season. And brethren isolated will please come and report the state of things in their region. Eld. J. V. Himes will be with us and help in the good work. Come brethren and sisters, let us have a grand rally for the truth.

S. ROSEBRAUGH,
J. B. BROWN.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Beaver, Beaver Co., Nov. 24.
Ogle, Butler Co., Nov. 25, 26.
Muncy, Lycoming Co., Nov. 28, 29.
Quaker hill, 2:30 P. M., Nov. 30, and Sunday, at 11 A. M., Dec. 1.
Warrensville, eve., Dec. 1.
Warrensville, to answer questions asked, by Eld. Krouse, and J. R. Stead, evenings Dec. 2 and 3.
Canton, Bradford Co., Dec. 4-6.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., eve. Dec. 7 and over Sunday
East Troy, Bradford Co., Dec. 6, 10.
South Creek, Dec. 11. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

The next Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y. will be held at North Bingham, United States S. H., Potter Co., Pa., commencing eve., Dec. 13. Let each church send their delegates, and we hope to see all the ministers that belong to the Conference. A general invitation is extended.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

QUARTERLY MEETING NOTICE.

The next meeting of the Southern Michigan Quarterly Conference will be held at Woodbridge, commencing Nov. 14, and continue over Sunday. Those coming on the cars will leave the train at Reading. Teams will meet trains there on Friday to carry all who come to the meeting.

E. WAKEMAN, Sec'y pro tem.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of the Michigan Conference with the church at Hesperia, Friday eve, Nov. 29, and over Sunday.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

The Q. M. of the First District of S. W. Iowa and N. W. Missouri, will be held at Waveland, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, Dec. 6, and over Sabbath. Elds. D. O. Hink and D. Q. Kent expect to be with us. WM. MURPHY, Sec'y.

Clinton, Clinton Co., Nov. 19-28. Let the friends in all the region come in and help us in this meeting, in Jesus' name. C. C. MARSTON.

I will attend the Conference at Elkport.

I. ADRIAN.

The second Q. M. of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at New Hartford, commencing Friday eve., Dec. 13, and continuing over Sunday. All are invited to attend.

N. F. EGGLESTON, Sec'y.

The next Q. M. of the Deep Creek District of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa will be held with the church, at Deep Creek, Clinton Co., commencing Thursday eve., Dec 21, and continues over Sunday. Come brethren and sisters, and let as many of us be there as can, and we will have a good time. Now let us make our arrangements to be on hand, to work for God and perishing souls. God will bless us if we do our duty. Come one, come all. A general invitation is given to other districts. Come, brethren, and help us. Those coming by railroad will please call on Br. C. W. Pitcher, Delmar Junction, about six miles south of Maquoketa.

R. B. DUTTON, Pres.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.

J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Greeley, Sabbath, Nov. 10. Elk Creek, as Br. Lewis may arrange. Friday eve., Nov., 22, and over the following Sabbath. J. RIDLEY.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.

Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.

Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JAMES.

The adjourned session of the first Q. M. of the Manchester district, Iowa, will commence Friday eve., Nov. 15, with the Elk Creek church, at the Otisville S. H., in Elk Co. A cordial invitation is extended to every lover of Jesus within reach of this meeting, to be there. Let each church see that their delegate has his credentials, and let each church in the district forward the quarterly mission fund to the treasurer of this quarterly conference, in harmony with the resolution passed at our last annual meeting. And let us pray that this meeting be the best of the season. We shall expect to see our Evangelist at this meeting, and he is hereby cordially invited to be present. Let there be a general rally for God and his cause. MARTHA J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Kasota, Lasuer Co., our town S. H., Saturday eve., Nov. 16, and Sunday, at 10:30 a. m., and 7 p. m.

Kasota, Turriten S. H., Sunday, Nov. 17, 2:30 p. m.

Madelia, Wattonwon Co. Br. Winters and others may arrange. Saturday eve., Nov. 23 and over the Sabbath

Shelbyville, Blue Earth Co., Brown S. H., Saturday eve., Nov. 30.

Allen S. H., Dec. 1, 10:30 a. m., and 2:30 and 7 p. m. S. C. WELLCOME.

MISSOURI.

The fourth Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa A. C. Conference will be held with the Philadelphia church, in Saline Co., commencing Friday, Nov. 8, and holding over Sunday. We look for a good representation from all the churches in the District.

H. BILLMIRE, Pres't.

The first Q. M. in district No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held with the Clear Creek church, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Dec. 13, and holding over Sunday. It is hoped that Elder Wm. McCulloch will be with us. Let there be a general rally of all our brethren and sisters, and let us begin our Conference year in good earnest.

I. F. ROSEBERRY, Sec'y.

I will, if possible, meet the brethren in the above conference. WM. MCCULLOCH.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bienny St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 35, St. Joseph St.

WISCONSIN.

The second Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Monticello, Green Co., commencing Friday eve., Dec. 13, and holding over Lord's Day. The several churches in the district are requested to send delegates, and all the preaching brethren are earnestly solicited to attend as there may be important business to come before the meeting.

Brethren, turn out. Come one, come all. Come praying, expecting a good time in the Lord and we shall have it. GEORGE HOWARD.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

The house of worship called the house of prayer, in Mendora, will be dedicated to the worship of God, Dec. 6. Services to commence at 11 a. m. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to preach the Word. The meeting will be continued four days. All are invited to attend. Let earnest prayer be offered by the church that God may pour out his spirit on the occasion, and sinners be converted and wanderers reclaimed.

P. W. HOUGH.

NEW YORK.

The Southern District New York Conference will hold its first Q. M. at Honeoye, Ontario Co., commencing Friday, Dec. 6, and continuing over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, we cordially invite you. Come with hearts filled with the spirit. Come with a determination, to work for Jesus. Come praying that God's blessing may rest upon this meeting.

H. H. BROWN, Sec'y.

The Lord willing, the first Q. M. of the Eastern District of the N. Y. A. C. Conference will be held with the church in Conquest, commencing Friday eve., Dec 13 and holding over Sunday. It is earnestly hoped there will be a general rally of all the forces in the district to this first district meeting. Come in the name of the Lord for the hour of his judgment hasteth greatly. Let us strengthen our hands and press the battle a little longer while yet we may. Each church should take the quarterly collections early and all come to help "after a Godly sort." Pray for this meeting. W. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

M. R. MILES, Pres't.

INDIANA.

Bush S. H. Wed. Nov. 16.
Potato Creek, C. H., 11 a. m., Nov. 17.
Bethel S. H., eve., Nov. 17.
Red S. H., eve., Nov. 23.
Stingley S. H., 11 a. m., Nov. 24.
Linden, eve., Nov. 24. E. C. ANDRUS.

MASSACHUSETTS.

There will be a conference at the Second Advent Chapel in Worcester, Mass., commencing Monday, Dec. 16, at 2:30 p. m., and continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this meeting will be to mutually consider the evidence in regard to the time of the Lord's coming, and the duties which devolve upon God's people in view of the nearness of "that day." It is especially hoped and very earnestly desired that the dear preaching brethren near and far, whether identified with 1873, '85, or with no definite time, may come, and co-operate in this interesting and important work.

A general invitation is hereby extended to all lovers of Jesus and his appearing. Come filled with the Spirit to labor for God and the good of the perishing.

The church in Worcester extend a cordial greeting and welcome.

W. W. Buxton, S. Ayers, W. M. Hall, E. G. Higgins, A. Streeter, Committee.

Advertisements.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged. $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes. by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 45c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgement of Smith's larger work. Leather $6, cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 484 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a re*ply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 30c. post-paid.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenome*na of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 10c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 436 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of York, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF PAUL; showing it to have been neither ... nor Sadduceean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 25.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1.50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4.00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors.

Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.

IRON WORLD PUB. Co
—437. Pittsburgh, Pa

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Farm for Sale.—A fine Farm of 200 acres, in Central Wisconsin Well situated, and worth $60 an acre. Address J. S. Ames, Kenosha, Wisconsin. [all w4

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Women's Christian Associati $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1 Splendid premiums for 1872 Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

POCKET HYMN BOOK
With Music.
COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.
"Hymns of the Morning"
Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:
Cloth Binding..50c
Mo'occo " 75c
Sent postage free on receipt of price.
TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT, Box 426, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

GERMAN TRACTS
On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1008 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

Western Interests

See p.127.

#

Dr. John Cumming

LIBRARY AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 16. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 19, 1872. WHOLE NO. 447

Advent Christian Times.

The Call to Faith and Repentance with the Promises.

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price..... Incline your ear and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." (Is. 55: 1–3.)

The words of the Lord are choice words. They are "as apples of gold in pictures of silver." "Every word of God is pure and true from the beginning." They are "As silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven time." And not "one jot or tittle" will fail of fulfillment. "Forever, O God, thy word is settled in heaven."

What confidence and assurance, and ground for faith does this give? What comfort of hope? And how adapted are the words of the Lord to our natures, conditions, and circumstances, under the fall? Cold must be that heart, and hard as adamant, that cannot be warmed into life, and broken into tenderness and love, by their sweet and divine power. Such is the character of the words of the text above. How beautiful! How precious!

Let us consider
1. Whose words are these?
2. To whom addressed?
3. And what their true import?

I. Whose words are these?

They are the words of the Lord. Though written by the prophet they are not his words but the Lord's, dictated by the Holy Spirit.

We wholly repudiate the idea and rationalistic doctrine, that the Scriptures were written by the inspiration of human genius and wisdom alone. That they contain mere human knowledge, sagacity, prescience, and reason. But we believe with the apostles: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." (2 Tim. 3:16.) "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1:21.)

No man, not even the prophet, could pronounce the words above as his own words without blasphemy, or assuming the prerogative of God. Therefore they are the words of the Lord through the medium of the prophet to the world of mankind. We should approach the Bible as we do no other book. We should read its sacred pages with that reverence and awe that we do not any other volume in the world, considering that God is speaking to us in the words there recorded. And we should hear God's ministers who "preach the word," as God's ambassadors sent to us with a divine message from above, and "Receive it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God."

There is great responsibility here both on the part of the minister and the people who hear him. Every true minister of the gospel is "unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish; to the one the savor of death unto death; and to the other a savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?" (2 Cor. 2: 15–16.) "He that receiveth you receiveth me," says Jesus.

This prophet was "sawn asunder" "for the word of his testimony;" and thousands have been martyred for the word of God which they held and proclaimed to an unbelieving world; and what an account will the world have to give in the day of final judgment, for their treatment and ill-usage of God's chosen messengers? There should be used great care, and righteous discrimination here, and distinguish between true and false ministers, and teachers. There are impostors abroad. There are those who "make void the word of God by their traditions"—substitute the doctrines of men for the word of God—"Corrupt the word," and "handle the word of God deceitfully." "And no marvel, for Satan himself, is transformed into an angel of light."

The people should accquaint themselves with the Bible, so as to know when one preaches the word of God or otherwise "fables," as did the Bereans in the apostles' day. It is recorded of them "these were more noble than those of Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so." (Acts 17: 11.) If this was done in our day, there would be less imposition carried on under the form of "sensational discourses," and more Bible truth preached from the professed Evangelical pulpits.

2. To whom are these words addressed?

First, and primarily, to Israel after the flesh, for to them were entrusted the Oracles of God until the promised Messiah came. And, second, to the whole world, wherever the Bible is circulated and the gospel is preached, and to each individual of the nations, tribes and tongues.

The great commission given by our Lord was, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mk. 16: 16.)

All, then, "every creature," who has the Scriptures in possession, or access to them, or the privilege of hearing the gospel, is personally addressed by the Lord in the words of the text.

You, yourself, dear reader, consider, I beseech you, this fact.

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."

Ye who are thirsting for riches, wealth, gold and silver; for place, power, honor, pleasure and happiness; and long life to enjoy these vain, fleeting, transitory, and unsatisfying earthly goods. And oh, what a thirsting, famishing, restless multitude this world exhibits!

"Ho! All ye hungry, starving souls,
  That feed upon the wind,
And vainly strive with earthly toys
  To fill an empty mind:
Eternal wisdom hath prepared
  A soul-reviving feast,
And bids your longing appetites
  The rich provision taste."

"In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying: If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." (John 7: 37.) And Jesus said to the woman at the well. "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink, thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water." (John 4: 10.)

These invitations of mercy [illegible] all in every age. "Whosoever will, let him come."

"Every creature," sinners, the lost, and those needing saving mercy, are invited to come to the "fountain of living waters," that they may live and not perish.

"Incline your ear."

Bend thine ear in the attitude of an earnest listener, to catch every word uttered by Jehovah. "He that hath an ear, let him hear." All have ears, but some have none to hear what the Lord saith who made the ear. And the time has come when thousands "turn away their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables." (2 Tim. 4:3, 4.)

God speaks in love, but still with authority. A member of a family may speak to another member, but it is not like the voice of the Father of the household. When he speaks it may be in love, yet it is with authority. A fellow citizen may speak to another, but it is not like that of the king or ruler of the people. When he commands, the subject must obey at his peril. So God is our Father. He should be heard. God is a great King. His command must be heeded, at one's peril of loss of life and salvation everlastingly. This language from above comes to us in all the love and with all the authority of the great God our Maker. "Incline your ear, and come unto me." How come? And what hear? He says: "Wash ye, make ye clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow."

"Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. (Is. 1: 16, 18.)

And says Jesus: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." (Mat. 11: 28, 29.)

"Come, cast your burden on the Lord,
And bear a song away."

3. What is the true import of the promises affixed to this call to faith, and repentance, and obedience?

"Your soul shall live."

The soul, then, is in danger. Danger of death! Notwithstanding the doctrine of heathen philosophy, and of Plato, that, "All souls are immortal," affirm otherwise. The Lord says: "All souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine. The soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezk. 18: 4, 20.) And as "no man can keep alive his own soul," God will not fail to execute the threatened judgment on the unrepentant sinner. And Jesus forewarns all to "fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." (Mat. 10:28.)

"Your soul shall live;" is equivalent to you, yourself shall live. "For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be a castaway?" (Lk. 9: 25.)

Hence Jesus gives promise: "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day." (John 6:39, 40, 54.)

To his sheep he gives promise of "Everlasting life." (John 10.) And such is the record of God. (1 John 5: 10, 12.)

"And I will make an everlasting covenant with you."

This refers to the covenant of his grace in Christ Jesus our Lord, by which there is promised to those who enter into it, an "Eternal inheritance" and "eternal life" to enjoy it. (Heb. 9: 15; Titus 1:2.)

This covenant is for all coming time and eternity; and God declares to those with whom he makes it, "I will be your God, and you shall be my people." And inasmuch as "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living," those who die must live again, to keep his covenant with them. Therefore "to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord, both of the dead and living;' and he will "raise them up at the last day," and "give unto them eternal life," and "eternal inheritance."

God will enter into, and make no other covenant with you, dear reader, than the Everlasting Covenant." And you must covenant to be his for all future time, and all future eternity.

(To be concluded.)

O. R. Fassett.

#

Dr. Cumming of London.

For several years past Dr. John Cumming has not attracted as much attention among American visitors to London as he once did. Other stars have arisen—in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, in Surrey Chapel and elsewhere. Dr. Cumming is not what he was twenty years ago—the most popular preacher in the British Metropolis. His books then sold by tens of thousands. In some of them he indulged in prophetic speculations which are now laughed at; newspapers have made him the target of not a little irreverent wit.

But in spite of jibes and jeers, in spite of work enough to have finished one of those clerical conies "who are a feeble folk," John Cumming still lives. He lives too as a power in mighty London. After forty years of city toil and excitements, he lives in hale and vigorous strength. So remarkable is his physical stamina that he has never lost a Sabbath-preaching through sickness in all his life! So much for a sturdy Scotch constitution, and the genial English air in which men can bear exhausting brain-work more easily and more continuously than in the intenser atmosphere of America.

Dr. Cumming came from Scotland to great roaring London, a youth fresh from college. He was invited to take charge of the small and poverty-stricken "National Scotch church" in obscure Crown Court. In the neighborhood were half a dozen theatres, and the famous Covent Garden Market. It was an unpromising field, and the elders told him that he might have all the income from the pew rents—which then amounted to the prodigious sum of five hundred dollars a year!

The brave young Scotchman laid hold of the tough task with a stout heart, and at the end of eight years he had doubled both his congregation and his salary. In 1840 his people improved the plain gloomy building and introduced [illegible] although one pragmatical [illegible] tested that the gas would explode, and that he would stay away from church rather than be blown up. Since that time the pastor has been "blown up" pretty often by newspaper critics, but both building and minister survive to this day.

Although Crown Court is a dingy back street, Dr. Cumming has succeeded in attracting to his church more of the aristocratic folks of London than have attended any other Presbyterian church in existence. The carriages of the nobility are constantly seen on Sabbath mornings before its humble doorway. The Duke of Norfolk (a convert from Romanism), the Duchess of Wellington, Earl and Lady Ducie and many other titled characters have been regular attendants upon Dr. Cumming's ministry. A friend of mine once told me that he saw Lord Palmerston, Earl Russell and the Duke of Argyle sitting and listening with attention to the smooth and silvery flow of Dr. Cumming's extempore discourse. (It is extempore in its language, although the preacher manages to hide a little "brief" with the heads of his discourse inside of the small Bible which he holds constantly in his hand.) Ten years ago I heard a sweet evangelical sermon—full of unction—from "iron John" as the Catholics used to call him. The aisles were crowded. After the tender sermon came the administration of the Lord's supper. I found myself in the same pew with two other communicants. One of them was a plain laboring woman; the other was the beautiful Duchess of Sutherland, who ranks next in social eminence to the royal family.

Before such a congregation Dr. Cumming has held his own for fort years! On the last Sabbath of September he delivered his fortieth anniversary discourse, in which he told the remarkable story of a long unbroken success in winning souls to the Lord Jesus Christ. As he drew near to the end of his beautiful narrative he said:

"At the conclusion of 'these fort years,' I find the most just and expressive vehicle of all my feelings in the 103 Psalm, so often sung at our communion table, and so likely to be unforgotten where the redeemed around the throne sing 'the song of Moses and the Lamb.' I have visited the sick and the dying in the most miserable homes under every type of disease. I have seen member after member of this church departing in succession to the church above, giving consolation to them and gaining good to myself. I have seen children's grief and gladness; a mother's parting kiss and a father's last embrace; all that brightened or dimmed the eyes—all that convulsed or tranquilized the soul. I have seen the drunkard, and listened patiently to his raging carousals. But I have never given up the hope of seeing the worst come under the sacred influence that transforms what it touches."

Such ministers as Dr. Cumming are rare in our great cities. But few are able to withstand the presure on the nervous system so long, and to maintain their popular hold so firmly amid constant competitions. Let others account for Dr. Cumming's success as they may, I am inclined to attribute it to good health, a good temper, good study, a good voice and style of composition, a good Bible theology, and great good sense in "minding his own business." That "business" has been to preach the gospel and win men to the Savior.—T. L. Cuyler, N. Y. Evangelist.

Where boasting ends true dignity begins.

My Wish.

That I may trust in him
For every need;
Content that all is well
If he but lead.

That gloomy doubts and fears
Be swept away,
Until I see his face
In perfect day.

That he will plainly show
A work for me,
E'en though he deem it best
A cross to be.

And that when I at last
The cross lay down
I may from his own hand
Receive a crown.

—Watchman and Reflector.

Man.

What is man that thou art mindful of him or the Son of man that thou visiteth him?

Well: if man was naturally an immortal, we could account for the mindfulness and visiting interest of the Almighty, without considering a plan of redemption. Then, and in such case the Psalmist's inquiry would have no poetical and spiritual inflection. What is man? Can we come down to the simple prose in a response? Man is an organized being, composed of flesh, bone and blood, a nervous and a muscular system. "Oh! that is horrid materialism." I know it is materialism, but wherefore "horrid?" Is it any more repulsive than the declaration that man is dust—formed of the "dust of the ground?" God has vitalized this organization, and made man to live. Let him withold the "vital spark," the principle of life, and there is a dead man. "No: the man, the real man, escapes from the clayey tenement, and mounts on wings of ether to airless regions, or sinks into the hot atmosphere of hell." This is the pleasing teaching of orthodox Christianity. And this is put in contrast with the simple, plain, reasonable declarations of the Word of God, as to the nature and destiny of man.

The more I hear these statements, or the more frequently I restate them myself, or paper or in my mind, the more am I shocked by the devil's favorite falsehood, which I have quoted. It is no marvel to me that men are not converted; that rich and self-indulgent sinners sit unmoved from their complacency, year after year, in their cushioned pews. The marvel is that there are any conversions under the orthodox preaching; for where the theory of eternal torment is well considered, it forces a belief in the doctrines of restorationism. And so we find Henry Ward Beecher's paper applauding the ordination of a restorationist, avowed and earnest. There is no dependance on Christ for the second and better life; it is to be one continuous existence to all eternity. And here is the Bible exhausting the phrascology of its original languages, to say, and pronounce and reiterate the opposite; to teach man that he is of the earth earthy, and shall be utterly resolved to ashes if he do not repent, and accept the Lord Jesus as his life-giver. A.

Sanctification.

Sanctification and holiness in the Bible are synonyms, and are interchangeably used. The word does not occur in the Old Testament. (Smith's Bible Dict.) But in the New Testament the Greek "hagiasmos" is translated holiness as well as sanctification. In 1 Cor. 1: 30; 1 Thes. 4: 3, 4; 2 Thes. 2:13; and 1 Pet. 1: 2, it is translated sanctification. Elsewhere it is rendered holiness, as in Rom. 6:19, 22; 1 Thes. 4: 7; 1 Tim. 2: 15; Heb. 12: 14. Hence we see that divine authority inseparably unites sanctification and holiness. The verb to sanctify is the usual translation of the Heb. 'kadesh. Gen. 2: 3; Ex. 13: 2; Ex. 19: 10, 14, 22, 23, &c.; and the Greek hagiazo, Mat. 23: 17, 19; John 10: 36; 17:17,19, rendered to sanctify. It is also translated to hallow and to the holy. (Smith's Bible Dict., p. 968.)

Thus we see by the shortest compend that Bible sanctification is holiness and embraces purity and "perfect love," also meekness and all the Christian graces, and above all charity, the spirit of Christ, and also the love of God to the world, in quality if not in quantity; so that having it we shall be very humble, bear all things, believe all things, "Suffer long and be kind," "Think no evil," work no ill to our neighbors; "Rejoice not in iniquity but rejoice in the truth;" love friend and foe, and love God with all the heart.

But we can only arrive at an approximation to entire sanctification or holiness in this life, at the best. With all our ignorance and impotency, and deformity and pollution of mortality, we shall fall far below the only perfect model that ever appeared on earth, the divine Son of God. Still, we should make our motto excelsior in the Christian life, until "immortality is swallowed up of life. We ought to consecrate all that we have and are to God, and then invoke the divine co-operation to "sanctify us wholly, and preserve us blameless until the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." A. BAILEY.

God's Promises to Abraham.

After God commanded Abraham (then called Abram) to leave his country, and his kindred, and his father's house, and go to a land that he would show him, he made unto him certain promises. The first promise was made at the time that the command was given: "I will make of thee a great nation." (Gen. 12: 2.)

And after Abraham had left his country, and had come into the land of Canaan, as the Lord commanded, and was still without seed, the Lord makes the same promise to him again, and said; "Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them; and he said unto him, so shall thy seed be. And he believed the Lord; and it was counted to him for righteousness." (Gen. 15:5, 6.) And after Abraham had been some time in the land, and was getting old, the Lord reaffirms the same promise, and tells him how it shall be brought about, saying, "Thy name shall no more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee.... As for Sarai, thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her; yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her....And Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac." (Gen. 17: 9–19.)

This promise has been fulfilled. Isaac has been born, and "many nations" have sprung from Abraham. This is the promise spoken of by Paul—"And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise." (Heb. 6: 15.) And not only was the promise fulfilled in Isaac, but in us also if we are the Lord's; for "we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." (Gal. 4:28.)

Now what benefit is it to us to be "children of promise," or to be Christ's ("for if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed,") if there is no other promise to Abraham but that of being the father of an innumerable seed? But is there nothing promised to Abraham which he, with all that become his children by faith in Christ, is to receive in the future? I believe there is, praise the Lord. There is a glorious promise yet unfulfilled; for after the promise that we have been considering was fulfilled we read—"These all, having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise." (Heb. 11:39.) Here we find an unfilled promise. What is it?

Why is it that so little is said or known about this glorious promise? First, because men have followed the teachings of an apostate church, that has "darkened counsel," and so spiritualized everything that the word of God has been made void "through her tradition." Second, because the command of Christ to "search the Scriptures" has not been obeyed. The promises of God have not been examined separately.

We have noticed the first promise, which is of but little importance to us, if there is nothing more promised to Abraham; but if there is a promise to Abraham and his seed which is not fulfilled, then it is of much importance that we be Abraham's seed. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." But before we notice this promise, which is not yet fulfilled, we will notice another which has been fulfilled, promised to or through Abraham.

Turning to the history of Abraham after he had left his father's house, and had come to the land of Canaan, we read, "And Abraham passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh.... And the Lord appeared unto Abraham, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land." (Gen. 12: 6, 7.) Now Abraham was not mentioned in this promise; but it was "unto thy seed." Neither does he tell him when they shall receive it, nor how long they shall possess it, nor how much is included in "this land;" nothing except the naked promise, "Unto thy seed will I give this land." But as we follow Abraham in his sojournings, we find that God makes the same promise again, and also how much is included in "this land," and when it is to be received. "And he said unto Abraham, know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; and afterward shall they come out with great substance. And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age. But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again......The same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates; the Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims, and the Amorites, and the Canaanitse, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites." (Gen. 15.)

Here we are informed (1) How much is included in "this land;" viz., that which lies between the two rivers mentioned, and possessed by these ten tribes. (2) That they are to come into possession after four hundred years. And the Lord told Moses how long they should possess it, and that was as long as they would "do his commandments;" but if they refuse to obey his law, then the Lord said, "Ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it." (Deut. 28: 63.)

This promise was fulfilled, according to the testimony of the Lord, when they came into the land of Canaan, after their wanderings in the wilderness; for when Moses had finished his journeyings with the Children of Israel, "he went up to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the Lord showed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan, and all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the utmost sea, and the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees, unto Zoar. And the Lord said unto him, This is the land which I swear unto Abraham, saying, I will give it unto thy seed." (Deut. 34: 1–4.) And the people in the days of Nehemiah so understood the promise, and while standing before the Lord said—"Thou art the Lord the God, who didst choose Abram and gave him the name of Abraham, and foundest his heart faithful before thee, and madest a covenant with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites; to give it, I say, to his seed, and hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous." (Neh. 9: 7, 8.) Oh! how plain are the promises of God when explained by the word of truth.

Now if we turn to the word of God, we may find the promise that has buoyed up the church in ages past, and for which Moses was willing to suffer affliction; for he claimed the promise by faith in Christ.

After Lot had left Abraham, and had gone down to the plain of Jordan, the Lord said to Abraham, "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and look southward, and eastward, and westward; for all the land which thou seest to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, forever.... Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." (Gen. 13: 14–17.)

The Lord mentioned this promise again the same day that he made the promise to Abraham's family, and the day that he promised him a seed, saying, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it." (Gen. 15: 7.) How unlike the promise to the family of Abraham is this great and glorious promise! That, as we have shown, was a temporal one; this is an eternal one — an "everlasting possession." That was to his seed, the Israelites; this, Paul tells us, is to him and "his seed as of one,....which is Christ." (Gal. 3: 3, 16.) "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed." (Verse 29.) That promise was the land of the ten tribes, between the two rivers; but this is all the land that he could see from the four quarters of the earth. And Paul, an inspired commentator, when speaking of this promise, says that it was "that he should be heir of the world."

Has this been fulfilled? The Bible says it has not. Will we believe the Bible? Then if it has not been fulfilled, will it ever be? Most certainly. "God is not slack concerning his promise," "and what he has promised that he is able also to perform."

Let us now examine the proof that the promise has not been fulfilled, that all may be plain.

(1) One of the proofs that God gave to Abraham that he would fulfill this promise was—"Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age."

(2) When Sarah died, Abraham said to the sons of Heth, "I am a stranger and a sojourner with you," and he bought of them the field of Ephron and the cave that was therein for a burying place. And Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the same cave. (Gen. 23, and 25: 9.)

(3) Stephen, just before his death, when speaking of this promise, said—"And he gave him [Abraham] none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." (Acts 7:5.)

(4) His "seed, which is Christ," did not get the land, for when a certain scribe came and said unto him, "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest," Jesus said unto him, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." (Mat. 8: 19,20.) He lived as a stranger and pilgrim here and when at last he gave up his life, he did not receive of the Father a burying place, but Joseph, a rich man, begged his body and laid it in his own new tomb. And many of Christ's people, who are heirs of the same promise, can say—

"No foot of land do I possess,
No cottage in this wilderness."

Nevertheless God has promised, and his promises never fail. We may die, and like Abraham be buried, but we believe with him that God is able to raise us "up again from the dead." And though the earth may reel to and fro like a drunken man, and be removed like a cottage, and though it may be shaken "once more," as the Scriptures say, yet the things which cannot be shaken will remain. God's promise cannot be shaken—"The earth abideth forever." (Eccl. 1: 4.) And though in the fires of the last day "the heaven [atmosphere] shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also," still with Peter we look for a "new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The curse shall be removed and the earth shall be "more beauteous than at first;" for God has declared, "Behold, I make all things new." (Rev. 21:8.) Not all new things, but "all things new." The earth made new; the New Jerusalem resting majestically upon it; Christ reigning King of kings, and Lord of lords; the glory of God filling the earth, as the waves fill the sea. Abraham and all the faithful ones, (for such are blessed with faithful Abraham) will have been raised from their dusty beds to immortal life, and receive the fulfillment of God's promise, "The land for an everlasting possession." Sin with its long train of evils will be past. Death, the "last enemy," and "him that had the power of death, that is the devil," will be destroyed; and there shall be no more curse. Glorious prospect! No wonder Moses esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt when he expected such a glorious possession as this for his reward.

Shall I be there? Reader, will you be there? Let us abide in Christ, and be led by his Spirit, that we may be his; "for if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—J. Ridley, in Crisis.

"I Show You a Mystery."

Behold, I show you a mystery—not a mystery in the sense in which we ordinarily use that term—not a thing obscure, perplexing, hard to be understood, but a mystery in the sense in which the word is so often used in the New Testament, a thing that had previously been kept secret, that lay hidden from human eyes, which man could not have discovered, but which God has been pleased to reveal. Such is the information which Paul here gives as to the world's last day. That information he neither received from man, nor could it have been gotten otherwise than by direct revelation from God. He only, the author of that future, can tell us what the future is to be. What and how much about that Judgment Day we are now to know, it lies with him wholly to decide, for not a single ray of light can fall upon that event but what comes immediately from himself. And looking at the kind and amount of the information that it has pleased him to reveal to us in the holy Scriptures, we are struck with the absence of anything like extended or detailed description. Of all the topics within the range of revelation, none could have presented more materials for exciting and gratifying the wonder and curiosity of mankind. Imposture could have found no difficulty in framing a full length picture out of these materials, enthusiasm could scarcely have escaped the attempt to do so. The passages in the Bible, however, are but few in which anything like a detailed description of the incidents of the Judgment Day is given us. Of the great fact itself, that the Lord has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom he hath ordained, we are frequently and and earnestly reminded. But of the mode or outer circumstances of the event comparatively little is revealed. Nearly all that is told us in the Scriptures is comprised in four passages: Mat. 25: 31–46; 1 Thes. 4: 13, 18; Rev. 20: 11, 14; 2 Pet. 3,—a chapter to which we are inclined to attach the greater importance, as it is so purely didactical in its character, so devoid of all figures and symbols, the introduction of which, into the language of the prophetic Scriptures, makes them necessarily, as they are designedly, so obscure.

One leading feature of the great day of reckoning—the one, perhaps, more than any other pressed upon our regard in Holy Writ—shall be its suddenness, unexpectedness, the world's unpreparedness for it. It is to come as a thief in the night. It is to take the world by surprise. One cannot help often fancying to what a sharp, abrupt, and awful close the busy movements of the busy world shall then be brought! The day before its last shall see them all going on as usual. Over one-half the globe its inhabitants shall be eating and drinking, buying and selling, marrying and giving in marriage; the merchant in the market place calculating his gains; the scholar at his desk poring over the ancient page; the reapers in the field plying their harvest task. And there in the quiet churchyard a group shall have gathered round the last grave, the coffin shall have been lowered down into it, and the grave-digger have grasped the shovel to cover up the dead. Over the other half of the globe its inhabitants shall have laid themselves down to rest; and the merchant shall be dreaming there of the gains that to-morrow's sales are to realize; and the politician shall be dreaming of the measure that to-morrow, in the senate-house, he is to propose, of the oration that to-morrow he is to deliver; and bright visions of many happy days to come shall be haunting many a youthful slumberer's fancy; and the ball-room and the banquet-room shall have hung out there glittering lights, and spread their inviting tables, and the smile and the dance, and the jovial song shall all be there.

Just then, without a herald sent, or note of warning given, the Son of man shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God. That trumpet-call of heaven shall span at once the globe, and be heard the same moment at either pole. At its summons the million sleepers of the earth shall all start up from their last repose, their dreamings of earthly to-morrows all cut short. A shivering terror, like that which filled Belshazzar's hall, shall run through the ball-room and the banquet room, and the jest halt uttered, the song half sung, they shall stare upon one another there in pale affright. In the busy market-place the buyer shall forget the price he offered—the seller the price he asked. At his desk the pen shall drop from the writer's hand. The reapers shall fling gathered sheaves from their hands. And in that quiet churchyard that group around the grave shall be convulsed with wonder, as the coffin bursts and the dead man springs to life and stands up by their side.

For that trumpet-call of heaven shall do more than waken all the sleeping and arrest all the living inhabitants of the globe. It shall go where sound never went before—it shall do what sound never did. It shall pierce the stony monument; it shall penetrate the grassy mound—far down through many a fathom of the ebbing waters shall it make its way—over the deep bed of ocean shall it roll—and the sea shall give up at once the dead that are in it, and the earth the dead that are there. And all the dead, small and great, shall arise. And in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, by the forthgoing of one fiat of the Omnipotent, over all the vast congregation of the living with which that still vaster congregation of the dead is to mingle—over all the bodies of the living a change shall pass that shall make them like to those new bodies of the raised. And all shall be caught up together in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, temporarily uplifted above those fires by which the world that now is, and all these its present works are to be burnt up. And the vast company as it rises from the earth shall meet another, perhaps vaster company descending from the skies. For he who shall that day come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, shall come with all his holy angels with him: and there too shall be those angels that kept not their first estate, and who had been reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day; heaven, earth, hell—coming thus for once together—that out of that intervening earth, heaven and hell might gather all that each could claim as its own, and then with a contrast heightened by that the meeting part forever.—Dr. Hanna.

I Believe in the Resurrection of the Body and the Life Everlasting.

One of the most precious concessions which Christ's religion makes to human love is embodied in the article of a Christian's belief. We love our friend in a body. How dear that form! Those eyes, those lips, that hair, over which the grave has closed—how sacred! How vain to say to us, "your beloved is a spirit—a bright essence gone to mingle with the great sea of spirits life!" Alas! how cold and vague to the mourning heart is all this! I want to see him again; I want again the eye, the smile, the voice, the SELF—warm, winning, living. A pure spirit, abstract, distant, will never content me; it will not be my friend." But Christ promises us that in that immortal life not alone the soul and spirit, but the body of our friend. He consecrates our earthly love by promising to restore it to us by and by, glowing with freshness and stamped with the seal of immortality.

To the old Christian church of the first ages, how dear was this belief! When they saw the bodily form racked, torn, mutilated, trampled by wild beasts, burned to ashes and scattered to the winds, still they said in triumph, we believe in the resurrection of the body; we shall have them again and hold them to our hearts, our own, our beloved ones. We shall see those same eyes shining into ours; those same hands shall clasp ours; there shall be the old, familiar voice, the well-known smile. It shall be our own and no other—restored to us, far beyond death, immortal in God's kingdom.

Even in St. Paul's time, there were doubters and philosophers who said: "How can this be? How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" And St. Paul answers: "That which thou sowest is not quickened except it die, and thou sowest not the body that shall be, but bare grain." That is, this body you bury is a seed, which goes back to earth, but there is a vital in it out of which God shall raise the new body, fresh and immortal, and "God shall give to every seed its own body."

The lily that you lay in the dark earth to-day, in its pure beauty, shall decay and pass away, but another lily shall spring from it that shall never fade. In the resurrection the oak shall arise an oak, and the lily a lily, and the violet a violet, "to every seed his own body."

This preservation of human identity, even to the restoration of that bodily form, is a proof of the intense value set upon love by a God of love. It is as if he said to us: "I must make you pass through a terrible experience, a dreary, inexpressible sorrow; but trust me, it shall be only for a moment. This apparent death of your dear ones is not real death. I will give them back to you better, brighter, more perfect than before, and in a world where there is no shadow of death to be feared. You shall have them, hold them, clasp them to your heart, a thousand times dearer for the great experience through which you have passed."

Many confuse themselves in thinking how and with what body this will be. Will our friend who has died with silver hair come forth thus? Will he be as we knew him in youth? Will our little one have the fair curls and starry eyes of infancy? Here, as St. Paul says there is a mystery. All we know is, there is a mysterious something called personal identity that remains about our friend through all the changes of life. The old wife fondly holds her husband's hand and remembers when his white hair was black as the raven's wing, when his step was firm and his voice was ringing; and he remembers when her hair was golden and her cheeks like roses; and yet both of them feel that this is the same. They knew each other in youth, they know each other now, and yet nothing could be more utterly different than their bodily appearance in youth and now. So, when they meet each other in the immortal home, in the new body made like unto Christ's glorious body, there will still be that inexpressible something that constitutes personal identity; they will know each other for the same. The mother sits to day with fond content and holds the hand of her son, full of the life and vigor of manhood, and she doubts not that this is actually the same who once in snowy cap and long robe lay helpless in her arms. She has seen the infant, the rollicking, curly-headed child, the school-boy, and now the full grown man, and yet identity has remained unbroken through all these changes. Her son never has seemed strange or unfamiliar. So, in our immortal reunion in the world beyond death, we may believe that with the great and beautiful changes which will pass upon us will yet remain that beautiful familiarity, the sweet consciousness of identity.

This doctrine of the resurrection of the body has, in some degree, faded from the consciousness of the Christian church. St. Paul always spoke of that as the consummation of bliss, the grand, central point of the believer's hope. "I press forward," he says, "if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead!" and he announces that the final triumph will be when this is accomplished. "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written. Death is swallowed up in victory. O Death! where is thy sting? O grave! where is thy victory?"

What a gift to this life is such a promise! How often we say, "If I only could be young again! if I only could live life over!" "Well, you shall live life over. Your physical life—all that is worth keeping—shall be restored to you in a purer and brighter form, fitted for immortal wear and progress. Your friends shall be restored, familiar, dear, free from earthly defect, but with all the sweet memories and innocent identities of earth. "Gather up the fragments that remain that nothing be lost," the Master said, even over a basket of bread. It is said by philosophers that no particle of matter is ever lost, but all goes into new forms in God's economy. Much more shall no throb of love, no tenderness of the heart, no yearning of human affection, be cast by as worthless. All shall be had in memory, and all shall be restored fresh and bright. And this is what we Christians mean every Sunday when we say, "I believe in the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting." —H. B. Stowe, in Christian Union.

Jelly-fish.

I cut the following from a Scotch newspaper:

The literary editor of the Boston Globe writes: "We have a vivid remembrance of a day with Agassiz at Nahant, when he brought in a very large supply of jelly-fish, the capture of his morning ventures in his boat. The creatures, to the naked eye, seemed to be merely organized water; to the microscope they displayed wonderful characteristics of organization, movement, and individuality. A kind of will and mind seemed to be stirring in the liquid mass. "Agassiz" we said, "is there not soul there?" "Certainly," he replied; "and immortal soul!"

It looks like a joke, and yet it may have been a serious statement. In all animate existence there is more or less of will and mind. Mind, we are orthodoxly told, is the product of the immortal soul. Then, perhaps Agassiz was serious, and there may be immortal jelly-fish souls in a heavenly ocean!

And so it would follow that all animate creation have their immortal part as well as man, and in the happy hunting grounds the spirit indian may yet chase the spirit-deer, with spirit-dogs swifter than the wind; and the spirit deer and dogs may be infested with spirit-fleas and spirit lice, for is there not a kind of will and mind there? And is not mind the product of the soul? And is not the soul immortal?

There is surely an error somewhere.

A. ARMORE.

Hops—Revelings.

The other evening while driving a little social chat with a physician and his lady whose residence is but a few steps from mine, I was forcibly impressed, painfully impressed with the generic, radical identity of modern "hops" and the ancient "revelings" (komoi). It was about nine o'clock. Observing on street more stir of pedestrians and carriages than is usual at that hour of the evening, I asked what it all meant. "The hop, the hop," was the reply; "it commences at ten o'clock, at the ——— house." "It is given by the young gentlemen and is intended to embrace the ages between twelve and eighteen years." The physician's wife, who is a church member, remarked in addition, with a manifest sense of chagrin: "I believe that, with three exceptions, the whole committee of invitation are members of the different churches."

What a spectacle to men and angels! Youth of both sexes, many of whom had been dedicated to God in infancy (as it is called), thus let loose for the night! The following dawn, announcing that the king of day was girding himself for his diurnal task, witnessed some of the night-worn revelers returning home from their nocturnal "hopping." What a contrast between their jaded frames and the health inspiring aspect of nature!

If in condemnation of this sort of doings nothing else could be named than the time at which they occur, this, it seems to me, should lead every parent to keep his child from them. What, as I pillow my head for slumber, can my sleep be sweet, my rest peaceful, when I have just sent my child, even with "respectable" company, to kill the hours of the night at a hop! The result of such violations of the laws of health is hardly to be compared with the moral effects. The heart grows sick at the reflection that professing Christians are not only countenancing but taking the lead in such revelings. Oh, may the blessed Spirit of God infuse into the churches more spirituality! Then will those who profess to be risen with Christ seek more and more the things that are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. Then will the prayermeeting be a more delightful place for the lambs of the fold than these demoralizing hops.—Meth. Recorder.

Do You Wish Your Church to Prosper?

1. Let your church-house always be neat, and as comfortable as possible.

2. Attend, so far as you can, all the meetings of the church.

3. Have a good Sunday School meeting every Sunday, and let all the members who attend church, take part in the school.

4. Let every member pray for the pastor daily.

5. Provide promply for all the wants of your pastor—pay his salary monthly, or quarterly, in advance.

6. Let the salary be large enough to support him comfortably. (The laborer is worthy of his hire.)

7. If you have anything "nice," "rare, or fresh," divide with your pastor. These little things show your affection for him, and, when delicately given, make a fine impression upon his heart, as well as upon his stomach.

8. If you have no "delicacies," send a ham, a sack of flour, a bag of meal, a bucket of butter—anything in this line will be gratefully received, if given in the proper spirit and manner.

9. Always speak well of your pastor, if you say any thing about him—never underrate or speak disparingly of him.

10. Never put down your head, when he preaches doctrinal sermons, but look him straight in the face.

11. Exercise a prompt Scriptural discipline, withdrawing from every brother that walks disorderly.

12. Attend promtly to the wants of the poor of the church.

13. Let every member give something every week to spread the gospel.

14. Pray daily for the presence of the Holy Spirit.

Are not these few things simple, and easy to be perfomed? The church that lives thus, will surely prosper.

A GOOD brother, whose Methodism was of the melancholy type, unconsciously fell into the habit of sighing and groaning wherever he went. He could scarcely utter a sentence without an "ah," or an "oh," or some unspellable sound of sadness and distress. Stopping, one evening, with a cheerful farmer for a nigth's lodging, he supplemented almost every topic of conversation by a groan and a sigh, and, by his solemnity of habit, excited the sympathies of his host. The farmer was not a religious man, but generous and polite, and studied to make his guest comfortable, anticipating his wants, and giving him the best his home afforded. After making every effort to please his guest, setting before him the best his table afforded, and entertaining him in his most courteous manner, he felt concered with reference to the expression of sorrow and pain which the pious brother continued to vent in gloom and groan in solemn sighing. At last, out of pure sympathy and brotherly kindness the farmer remarked to his would-be melancholy guest, "Excuse me, my dear sir, but really, it seems to me that your religion does n't agree with you."

A certain dignity becomes the Christian and a seriousness withal; but, too often, the cause of Christ is misrepresented and made repellant by mere habits which are indulged, without thought and without grace. We like a ringing Amen once in a while, a hearty response of words with meaning, enthusiasm, zeal and all that; but these growling noises which come of habit are not the exponents of the Christianity of peace, and joy, and love.—Meth. Recorder.

THE flint and the steel lay side by side in the tinder-box. The flint complained to the steel of his constant violence whenever he desired a spark. Said he: "Could you not devise some way to secure your end less unkind. You should remember I do nor profit, in the least by the transaction. Pray consent never to strike me again.' The steel was all amiability. In a gush of generous sentiment he faithfully promised to mend his manners 'Tis true, he never again used violence, and it is also true the flint never gave another spark. Some natures need collisions. They need the severities of satire and rebuke in order to develope their resources. A "thou art-the-man!" has evoked the spark of self-knowledge, and even penitence, when all the honeyed phrases in the world would have been altogether impotent. But it will be as well to remember that all men are not steels, and that all men are not flints.—R. A. Griffin.

NEVER complain that a preacher is dull unless you can put your hand on your vest and solemnly declare that you did not overeat at breakfast that morning. The most wide-awake preaching can not hold his own against Sabbath gluttony.

How often must we say to our churches in debt or in difficulty, and hoping to escape by placing some gilded bait in the pulpit to allure loose fish into the pews, you are sacrificing the very object for which churches exist to your scheme of financial redemption! Let your church go into the sheriff's hands sooner than seek to save it at the cost of all spiritual fidelity. You mock at the solemn truth of religion, at the sacred function of the preacher of Christ, at the value of all truth, and at the dignity of human reason and the significance of conscience, when you take any means to draw people into your churches, except the legitimate ones—intelligence, piety, trained faculties and religious worth in the pulpit. If to those you can add tact, contagious speech, agreeable manners, so much the better. But when you seek these last, first and only, and take all the rest for granted; nay, when stable character, substantial piety, sound sense are the last things you painstakingly look for, you show that you are not worthy to be called churches of Christ or religious bodies. Let churches which can be saved only by the tinsel and glitter they have in the pulpit go to ruin, and the sooner the better! They are only a sort of Sunday circus, where piebald horses snort and caper, and get it called religion. We want none of them.—Liberal Christian.

DURING the progress of a revival in New Hampshiere, some time since, an intelligent and popular man, sitting in his place of buisness, reasoned thus. 'This religion is either Divine or human its origin. If it is Divine, I ought to know it, and to experience its power. Doubtless God could tell me if he would. Possibly if I were a sincere inquirer, he would. There is no possibility of loss and gain is probable. I'll inquire; but whom shall I ask? Why not ask God himself? Sure enough! I will ask him now in prayer." He did so honestly, and is now a sincere disciple, with an experience of Jesus' love to tell of, and to rejoice in. Christ fulfills his promise to-day: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." Whosoever doeth my will shall know of the doctrine, whether I be sent of God, or whether I come of myself.—Zion's Herald.

IN view of the discussion of the damnatory clause in the Athanasian Creed, the Spectator remarks concerning the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, who has recently made some astounding discovery or other: "The Right Reverend Bench would, we fear, almost prefer to be damned under a creed as old as the seventh century to being saved under one of later date. But the world in general is not so obsequious to dates."—Liberal Christian.

A LUTHERAN church in want of a minister gave notice that, having been surfeited with eloquence, they are ready to be content with the pure milk of the Word. This is highly gratifying. We hope they will not change their minds, and that others will catch the impulse. Rhetoric is good, but truth is better. And we fear there are other churches which are suffering from too much of what some people call eloquence.

COWORKERS in Christ, be content to sow little seeds for him; be paitent to wait a long time for their growing; be strong to endure much opposition; be hopeful, expecting divine fruitage. These are the chief lessons of the parables of the seed and the sower.

DIFFERENCES of opinion give me but little concern; but it is a real pleasure to be brought into communication with any one who is in earnest, and who really looks to God's will as his standard of right and wrong, and judges of actions according to their greater or less conformity.—Dr. Arnold.

SCANDAL ought to be regarded, like piracy, as the common enemy of mankind. Truly polite ears will not listen to it, for it naturally belongs to that low life in which Mrs. Grundy's family originated.

OF all acts of cowardice, the meanest is that which leads us to abandon a good cause because it is weak, and join a bad cause because it is strong.

IF doing what is to be done be made the first business, and success a secondary consideration—is not this the way to exalt virtue?—Confucius.

IT is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after your own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 19, 1872.

A QUESTION for everybody: Do I owe the printer for the paper I am reading

Those who cannot say 'No' to this interrogation should take immediate steps to enable them to answer in the negative.

WE recently suggested the propriety of doubling our subscription list. Among those who have responded is Br. S. C. Wellcome, who sends us thirty dollars for old and new subscribers in Minnesota. Others are helping. Let all take hold in earnest, and what a glorious result will follow? Thirty dollars from each of a hundred ministers would place a generous amount in our depleted treasury.

OF all the excuses for stopping a good newspaper the plea of 'hard times' is the poorest. If it is hard times, you need the paper all the more in your family to cheer and encourage its members, old and young. You need your paper! If it is hard times, lop off some luxury; dispense with something else, but keep your paper, for your own sake and the sake of your family.

A LATE San Francisco daily paper says Br. Fassett is lecturing upon prophecy in that city. It says:

> To-morrow evening the Elder will commence a series of lectures on the world's great conquerors, Cyrus, Alexander, etc. Eld. Fassett is a scholar, and a ready and impressive speaker. His efforts are not to be confounded with those of the Sabbatarian Adventists, who see visions. Those who attend will, judging from the substance of his former lectures on prophecy, be well repaid for their attendance.

A GOOD deal is said in these days about pardon for past sins." Does God ever pardon any other kind of sin? Romanists claim a delegated power to forgive future, uncommited sins. Can it be that any Protestants are coming upon the same ground? Won't those who mystify matters by talking about 'forgiveness of past sins,' tell us if they mean to convey the inference that sins in the future may be forgiven in advance? Or do they mean that one who is sanctified cannot commit sin in the future?

THE Advance truly says of prophetic interpretation:

> Another fault has been the lack of consistency, giving in different places so many different meanings to the same prophetic symbol, thus introducing into the Scriptures confusion. However numerous and various the holy men who wrote, they all were moved by the selfsame Spirit. With the diversity there is unity in a divine method.

—Neglect of this important rule has led to all sorts of absurdities, and is the very life of the Napoleonistic and 'the Alarm Bell' school of interpreters.

BR. BOWMAN in a report of his late visit North says:

> Nothing impressed me more favorably, in mixing among the Advent brethren, than their attention to and mode of conducting family worship. As a general rule, the head of the family reads a portion of Scripture, then leads in prayer. When he closes, then the wife prays and the children one after the other, in an audible and impressive manner, closing with the youngest child, however tender in years. I always felt a heavenly influence in the house on these blessed occasions. May they be increasingly kept up until Jesus comes, so that whole families may go up to meet him in the air.

AN exchange says that the Rev. George K. Jackson, of Leavenworth, Kansas, who was twice refused ordination on account of his unsoundness on the subject of eternal punishment, has finally been ordained by a council of Congregational ministers in his own church at Leavenworth. Among the articles of this belief, as expressed in his own words are the following: 'Those lost souls who have never turned to God for life and salvation, must remain lost, though it be forever, until saved by Christ, they bow in penitence and faith before their Lord. I believe that there will be opportunity for repentance in the future to all who die in impenitence, and hope that all will ultimately embrace it; yet I cannot affirm that all or any will do so. I do not deny the eternal punishment of the finally impenitent. I do not affirm the ultimate salvation of all. I simply affirm my belief that the door of mercy will be open in the future for the return of lost souls.'

IN noticing a late publication by Dodd & Mead, called 'Second Advéntism in the Light of Jewish History' the Advance says (italics ours):

> The writer thinks that, 'like the Jews who have so long been looking in a wrong direction for the promised Messiah, the men who are daily expecting the literal personal coming of Christ, are looking for an event long since numbered with things of the past,' as he has undertaken to show. He speaks of the 'coming' of Christ as a 'catastrophe,' and believes that our Lord spoke to his disciples of three catastrophes: the first, the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus; the second, the nearly total destruction of the Jewish nation, which occurred about seventy years after the first catastrophe; the third is the general judgment at the end of the world. But while this book is worth reading as forming a part of the literature of a subject which is yet to attract more than ever the earnest attention of Bible students we suspect that our readers will still hold to the belief that the glorious "appearing" of our Savior was to be something better than a mere 'catastrophe.'

OF an article in the last Methodist Quarterly from the pen of Rev. W. S. Edwards of Baltimore, on the "Future Condition of the Wicked, Zion's Herald says:

> The argument is, as it should be, to produce conviction, purely Scriptural. Philosophy and ethics are employed, not to prove, but to confirm the author's conclusion, which is, that the wicked in the future will constitute a distinct class, under retribution, in untold and remediless sufferings. God does not lose the character of a Father when he, as a Magistrate, inflicts punishment upon the individual for the good of the whole, with no feeling of malice or personal revenge. We regret that the writer makes the gratuitous admission that it is absurd to believe in a literal lake of fire and brimstone; for an absurdity can be predicated only of a logical contradiction, or of something inconsistent with reason, or opposed to manifest truth. A literal hell is no more absurd than a literal heaven. It may be wise to accept the language of Jesus, descriptive of the torments of hell as figurative, but it is not absurd to believe that it is to be understood literally, after the resurrection of the wicked.

—That is a comforting thought for the saints in glory—'the untold and remediless sufferings' of the damned are for 'the good of' the saved. Eternal misery is essential to eternal bliss! Is not the fierce dogma sufficiently horrible, without adding this fearful thought?

BR. HASTINGS' LOSS.

Our fears expressed last week are more than realized; Br. Hastings' establishmen proved an almost total loss. In a brief note he says:

> The Scriptural Tract Repository, 19 Lindall St., Boston, is burned up. Loss total. No insurance but God's providence; no refuge but the Everlasting Arms.
>
> The Christian and Little Christian will be issued promply if the Lord will. Temporary office, No. 30 Hanover Street.

—We trust Br. Hastings will be generously remembered. Let every reader of The Christian double their subscription for the current year,and those who can do more than this, "give as the Lord has prospered them."

Our New England Correspondent gives us some details of the fire that will be in place here, and greatly interest all our readers. He says:

> The conflagration showed no partiality toward any publishing houses that came within reach of its fiery embrace, but destroying the houses of religious and political papeer alike, without regard to sect or party. The respective buildings of the Pilot, devoted to the interests of Romanism, the Banner of Light, the leading Spiritist journal in the country, the Transcript, one of the most influential of the Boston dailies, and last, what will cause most pain and sorrow among your readers to know, the Scriptural Tract Repository, the birthplace of the Christian, which finds it way to so many houses, were all reduced to ashes. This latter was in the rear of the postoffice, and as early as nine o'clock Saturday night the inmates began to make preparations for their departure, and at about two a. m.,those that remained were ordered away, as preparations were being made to blow up the entire block, which was done soon after, when the devouring flames swept through the ruins, completing the work of destruction, and there to-day are the ashes of the paper that was designed to carry comfort and cheer to thousands who have learned to love the emanations from that spot. There too lies the press from which have issued so many thousand pages of wholesome doctrine, carrying comfort to the Christian and convictions of sin to the sinner. There too, in molten mass, is all that remains of the valuable collection of stereotype plates, on which were saved for supposed future use, the result of months of unremitted study and pious meditation.
>
> The inmates saved, I have been informed, the account books, and also the subscription list of the Christian, together with a portion of Br. Hastings' library. On Saturday he went to Concord, N. H., to fill an appointment; but Sunday morning the news reached there that Boston was on fire, and as a train was made up at noon, for that city, he returned only to find that which had cost him years of toil and care and anxiety, reduced to utter destruction. Upon being spoken to in regard to his loss, he replied in his own peculiar way, with the words of Paul, "We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out." He has secured an office at No. 30 Hanover St., and I am informed that the Christian will again be issued as soon as possible.
>
> The light of the fire was seen from a very great distance, from Springfield and Portsmouth, N. H., and from sea at a distance of ninety miles. Multitudes have been attracted to the city, and it was probably never so crowded before. We have been terribly reminded that "Riches make themselves wings and fly away as an eagle towards heaven." Still I doubt if the multitude seek any more enduring riches than what they have just lost. We are again reminded that "Here we have no continuing city." But instead of profiting by the lesson, the majority will probably endeavor to make the present one more enduring, neglecting to seek the heavenly, which is to come.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Pennsylvania is like to have a tent for the proclamation of the Gospel of the kingdom. We heartily endorse Br. Ongley's proposition, to be found under the head of "Notices."——We hear Br. W. McCulloch is having a good time at Equality, Ill. Three have been baptised, and the work is onward. Br. McCullock expects to attend the N. W. Mo. Conference at Clear Creek.——Br. S. B. Mahey is in Kansas, meeting a kind reception, with high hopes of successful labor.——Br. Mathewson baptised one at Union Mills, Ind., on Sunday week.——Br. W. C. Hicks writes that he will 'soon be able to take the field again, all the time. I now preach every Sunday, and work through the week.' We need all Br. H.'s time.——Br. John M. Snook has removed to Jackson, Mich., which will be his P. O. Address for the present. His health is not yet sufficiently restored to admit of his preaching; but the cause of truth lies as near his heart as ever.

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

EDITOR OF THE TIMES. We have (Nov. 11), just been greatly edified in this city by a course of lectures on prophecy, delivered by Eld O. R. Fassett. Many new things were brought forth by comparison of Scripture with Scripture, and Scripture with profane history. And the old ground was gone over with the discrimination of an original observer and thinker—a Christian student.——The Seventh Day people have spread a tent in some part of the city, and Mrs. White and her husband are advertised to appear nightly. Those who heard the clear and conclusive lectures of Eld. Fassett will not be easily moved to schism.——The coming of Eld J. V. Himes to this coast, appears to be expected with much interest and hope. S.

Ame de Boue,

A soul of mud! Strange caption I admit, but the fact is, that it is not so far from truth as some suppose. The immaterialist cries out in astonishment when the Bible is presented concerning man's nature, and, for want of an argument on his side of the question, endeavors to appear more wise than all others, and, (forgetting that etiquette requires him to speak a language common to those present) cries out in French—"Ame de boue?" i. e. [What!] a soul of mud! Well, let us see? "The Lord God formed man of dust of the ground," and he "became a living soul." Now although you are greatly astonished, you have stated almost exactly what God states concerning man. The human soul is earthy. "The first man is of the earth earthy." (1 Cor. 15: 47.) Being earthy it is destructible. That this statement is correct, may be seen from Josh. 10: 34, 35. "And from Lachish Joshua passed unto Eglon, and all Israel with him; and they encamped against it, and fought against it: und they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed that day."

Oh! horror! cries the immaterialist "The soul cannot be destroyed by human agency. It is immortal, and will live as long as God lives." Now if this is true, it is proper to state it, and to stand by the truth in relation to it. But where is the proof? It is not found in the oracles of God. When Hazor was taken by Joshua, "They smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword utterly destroying them." (Josh. 11: 11.) The terms die, perish, and their equivalents, are used relative to the soul. Would God talk so of that which is immortal or imperishable? I cannot believe that he would; and I am very sure that he never has. He has, however, said that "the soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezk. 18: 4.) Please remember that this quotation is from the inspired Record, and must be true; and it is the SOUL that sinneth that shall die.

Mr. Webster says of the word die: "To pass from an animate to a lifeless state; to cease to live; to suffer a total and irreparable loss of action of the vital functions; to become dead; to decease; to expire. To expire; decease; perish; vanish;" Here we have the full value of the word die. Then why should w go around, or attempt to get beyond a fact so plainly stated and so easy to comprehend? Why throw dust over our heads simply to obscure our own vision? Why not sit down meekly and be taught of God what we are, and what the nature of such souls as we are is? He speaks plainly. His words are true and faithful. The most natural use of his words is evidently the sense in which he would have us receive them. For myself I desire always to have that humility which will enable me to sit down at Jesus' feet and confess that I am in reality only an "Ame de boue,"—a poor creature; still, rejoicing in the hope to which he has elevated me, and believing that my treasure of life is in him in whom is hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge; and, that he is my glory, and the joy of my song; that he is my wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. And, that this side of him, beyond, or without him, I have no hope of life, no idea of joy or blessedness, and, that the hope I have of all these is founded upon his word, which declares that though I die I shall live again; and, if faithful, have an inheritance that is incorruptible.

Then let us not be ashamed of our hope, though the wise of this world cry out in irony against us. Jesus says: "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor." Let us count most the honor that comes from God only, and seek to be found of him in peace, without spot, at the appearing of our blessed Lord. NUMEN LUMEN.

From California.

When I last wrote you I was in Vallejo. Before we left we had an interesting case. As our prayer meeting was in progress, a lady came in and took a back seat, and as there was so much of the Spirit of God in the meeting, she was struck under conviction, and fell upon her knees, where she remained for a long time, crying for mercy. My wife stepped back to her seat and knelt by her side,pointing her to Jesus, then arose and brought her forward, and we all knelt together and lifted our hearts up to God in faith. She prayed, and then then arose and confessed Christ, and the Lord blessed her,and she left the house with smiling face and glad heart. This reminded us of old times, when sinners felt the power of God that made them cry for mercy. The Vallejo church has so much of God's holy religion and truth among them, that when backsliders or sinners come in they have to acknowledge that God is amongst them of a truth. This church was organized a year and a half ago, and there has been a reformation among them ever since, and will be, so long as the church lives so God can work through them.

While on our way to Stockton, we met an intelligent lady, and in conversation I told her the Lord was soon coming. She replied, "If Jesus knew his business he would never come to come to this earth again!" Said she was a Universalist, her father was one, and the best man she ever knew. Her husband died in that faith. As I pressed the Bible truth hard, she left the room —would not hear a word of Jesus' coming.

Took cars for Milton, the end of the road, where we hired a man to take us some six miles back into the country, expecting to find a place to hold meetings, as we were sent for this purpose: but were disappointed, as there was no opening. Returned to town and stopped at the hotel over night, praying for direction what to do next. In the morning concluded to take stage for "Big Tree Grove," some forty miles, thinking we might never be as near it again, and also that we might find some towns on the way where we could stop and hold meetings. We rode twenty-five miles that day, over the worst road I ever found yet. Over the mountains; a very rocky road, and the stage bounding along at full speed, for these mountain drivers dash on at full trot regardless of roads. The dust rolled up in clouds, so that we could not see the horses at times. We were alone in the coach, and bounded from one side to the other, holding on by main strength, and were glad when we reached the camp where we stopped for the night.

And what shall I say about the wonderful trees of that "Grove!" It more than compensated us for all the hardships of the journey. There are ninety-two trees in this grove, and fifteen hundred in a grove six miles south, the the largest in the known world. They are from three hundred and fifty to four hundred feet high, thirty-three feet in diameter, and from seventy to nine-two feet in circumference. It took five men twenty-five days to cut the largest one down. The stump is some fifteen high, and there is a house built over it, the stump making the floor, on which thirty-two couples dance at a time. I meant to have preached on that stump, but the season for visitors was over. I talked with those that were there, leaving tracts and papers.

Oh, the wonderful works of God! Those wonderful trees linking us with the past some three thousand years. Empires have arisen and fallen, nations have passed away,cities have flourished in pride and grandeur and are buried in the dust, Jesus was born, suffered, died, rose, and ascended, and hundreds of years have rolled on since then, and still tdey live, fresh and green. How overwhelming the thought! And they will live till Jesus comes back again to this earth to make all things new. We stopped one night, thanking God for this privilege, then took stage back to Angel's Camp, a mining town, which we marked on our way up. Stopped over Sunday; spoke in the evening in the Methodist church. A good congregation of attentive listeners. Much freedom in presenting the evidences of the Lord's second coming and the necessity for it. Sold books, scattered tracts and papers, visited the Sunday School, and took part. Found some Christian people who received us gladly. Have sent two copies of THE TIMES to that town, and pray God to water the seed sown.

The following Lord's Day preached at Milpetas, eight miles from home. Had a good congregation and good interest. A few days at home and then to Vallejo again, on last Lord's Day, where I preached twice with much help of the Spirit, and baptized six happy souls who went on their way rejoicing,

On Tuesday I came to this place, secured the Episcopal church and commenced meetings last evening with a large congregation. I continue through this week. Br. Fassett joins us next week, and the week following I go to Rockville, an adjoining town, when Br. Fassett comes on and lectures for a week, on the chart, the Lord willing. It is a glorious work, preaching the last great truth, of Jesus' soon coming. The Lord help us to give the trump a certain sound, and to be faithful unto the end. D. D. & M. S. REED.

Christ the Savior of the World.

SCRIPTURAL QUOTATIONS.

"Who is this that cometh from Edom th dyed garments from Bozrah; this it is glorious in his apparel, travel- in the greatness of his strength; hat speak in righteousness mighty save. Behold it is the lamb of God, ich taketh away the sin of the world. r behold, I bring you good tidings great joy, which shall be to all peo-. For unto you is born this day in city of David, a Savior, which is rist the Lord, and he shall save his ple from their sins. For the blood Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all . And he is the propitiation for sins, and not for ours only, but al- for the sins of the whole world. d we know this is indeed the Christ, Savior of the world. For God nmendeth his love toward us, in t, while we were yet sinners Christ l for us. For if, when we were sin-s, we were reconciled to God by death of his Son, much more, be reconciled, we shall be saved by life. Wherefore as by one man entered into the world, and death sin, so death passed upon all men, that all have sinned. Therefore as the offence of one, judgment came all men to condemnation; even so, the righteousness of one, the free gift ne upon all men unto justification of . For as by one man's disobedience ny were made sinners, so by the dience of one shall many be made teous. For as in Adam all die, n so in Christ shall all be made ve, but every man in his own order. Christ is our Savior who will have men to be saved, and come into wledge of the truth. For there is one d and one Mediator between God l men, the man Christ Jesus, who re himself a ransom for all, to be tified in due time. God having de known unto us the mystery of will, according to his good pleas-, which he hath purposed in him-f; that in the dispensation of the lness of times, he might gather to-her in one, all things in Christ, both ich are in heaven, and which are on th, even in him. That at the name Jesus every knee shall bow, of things heaven, and things in the earth, and ngs under the earth, and that every gue shall confess that Jesus Christ Lord, to the glory of God the Father; o is the Savior of all men, especially those that believe. For God sent his Son into the world to condemn world, but that the world through n might be saved. For the Son of n is come to seek and to save that ich was lost. For the Son of man not come to destroy men's lives, but save them. Neither is there salva-n in any other, for there is no other me given under heaven among men, ereby we must be saved. For the ce of God that bringeth salvation all men hath appeared. For by ace are ye saved, through faith, not works, lest any man should boast. d I, if I be lifted up from the earth, ll draw all men unto me. And all sh shall see the salvation of God. d they shall teach no more every n his neighbor, and every man his other, saying know the Lord; for ey shall all know me, from the least of em unto the greatest of them, saith e Lord; for I will forgive their iquity and I will remember their s no more. Therefore, look unto , and be ye saved, all the ends of e earth; for I am God, and there is ne else." J. R. C.

What Next?

There is a grim sort of consolation the fact that if we are just now suf-ring from a combination of calami-es, such as great fires, the horse dis-se, a stringent money market, heavy xes, and various social disorders, we re not alone in our misery. All the owers of evil and forces of disaster eem to be let loose at once in Europe, and with a fury which is almost sufficient to make one believe that Satan has been unchained, and is coming on his thousand years of [illegible]. The cable dispatches in on[illegible] present a catalogue of horr[illegible]e bare enumeration of which [illegible]ug to make the reader a settle[illegible] hypochondriac. First, a terrible storm sweeps along the English coast, wrecking everything within its reach, and involving a sad loss of life. The same gale ravaged the Prussian coast. If the damage to shipping was less severe, it was only because merchantmen are not so numerous as on the English coast. What it failed to do on the sea, however, it more than accomplished on shore. The ancient and quaint old town of Stralsund, which has borne the brunt of nearly all the old German wars, which was besieged by Wallenstein in 1628, bombarded in 1678, and nearly destroyed by Frederic William, the great Elector of Brandenburg, and captured again after desperate struggles, in 1715 and 1807, seems to have come in for more than its share of this terrible natural convulsion. Twelve vessels were sunk in the shallows of its harbor. The whole town was inundated, and then, to add to the general horror, a great fire broke out, destroying many of the largest warehouses and other buildings, as well as many lives. Those in the interior have fared little better. For several days, an unusually severe rain and snow storm has prevailed in eastern Germany, prostrating the telegraph wires in every direction, and doing wide spread damage by flooding the country. Lubec, the famous commercial city of Germany, close by Hamburg, and the former meeting place of the Hanseatic League, has suffered like Stralsund, and all its principal buildings are under water. The coal mines of Staffordshire add a melancholy item to the general tidings of disaster, one of them being suddenly inundated, while the miners were at work, twenty-two of them perished miserably. The South Sea Islands furnish the last and most fearful story of all, in which "man's inhumanity to man" dwarfs all the desolation by fire and storm. An English vessel was on a kidnapping expedition among the islands. The unsuspecting natives were decoyed along side the vessel, when their canoes were smashed. The wretched victims were fished out of the water and thrust into the hold of the vessel. They fought for their liberty, and, to secure it, set fire to the vessel, and then the captain and crew commenced firing into them indiscriminately. The next morning the hatches were removed, seventy were found either dead or wounded, and the wounded and dead were thrown overboard together. It is hard to believe that human nature can be guilty of such atrocious crimes, but one man in the crowd of barbarous wretches has had conscience enough to turn Queen's evidence, and it is to be hoped that the latest development of English barbarity not only will meet with the most inexorable administration of English justice, but will serve to help on the movement already commenced in England to punish and prevent kidnapping into slavery, and enlist the co-operation of other European nations in the good work.

The inevitable question which will occur to every reader as he peruses this dismal list of horrors is: "What next?" What calamity or combination of calamities is to come to-day or to-morrow? What fresh evils have the revengeful fates in store for the world, already groaning under its heavy burdens? Just as the great wars were over and all the nations of the earth were settled peacefully down to industrial and commercial pursuits, and the two leading powers had set a joyful example to the rest by settling their disputes amicably, all the powers of fire, air, and water seem to be let loose, with no restraint upon their capabilities for mischief. Earthquakes swallow up the cities of the plain. The pestilence set forth upon its devastating march, and not even the dumb beasts escape its influences. Volcanoes rain storms of fire upon the villages below, and consume them. Vast and terrible conflagrations lay low great cities and forests in a night. Whirlwinds destroy rural villages and the labors of the husbandman, floods submerge the accumulations of the merchants, and gales sweep the coasts of their shipping. The lightning in its wrath spares neither the Escurial, with its buried kings, nor the remotest country hamlet. There is only one consolation attaching to this general havoc, and that is, we are gradually becoming accustomed to it, and may soon be able to endure it, and, perhaps, enjoy it with a certain degree of philosophy. At present, however, the world is as pitiable as poor old Lear, out on the barred heath, with nothing to protect him from the pitiless storms. The only advice that seems worth offering is, that, as we cannot take any possible precautions against these little eccentricities of nature, it is the part of wisdom to recognize the disagreeable necessity of the situation; to expect the worst and thereby escape disappointment if the worst should happen; to eat three meals a day as usual; to pay as many taxes as possible, or, at least, as may be necessary to preserve respect for that estimable person, the tax-gatherer; to get married if you are not, and to stay married if you are, and trust to some natural phenomenon, if you have no other reliance, for the wherewithal to pay the bills; to be sober, discreet, and virtuous, that you may sleep well; to be contented with everything and surprised at nothing. That is about the philosophy of the situation as it would appear to a man up a tree. At the same time, this will hardly prevent that elevated individual from asking the inevitable question: "What next?" —Chicago Tribune.

The Times.

AT HOME.

The Boston Fire

ACCOUNT OF EYE WITNESSES.
A MERCHANT'S STORY.

Isaac Fenno, another passenger, was, before the fire, the proprietor of a large wholesale clothing house on Washington St. His establishment was sacrificed and his loss amounts to at least $200,000. Mr. Fenno's story was clear and contained much of interest. He said, in part:

I was aroused about 10:30 Saturday night, while preparing to retire, by a neighbor, who informed me that there was a large fire down town. Though apprehending no danger of the destruction of my store, yet the lurid light in the heavens was undoubted evidence that the conflagration was one of unusual magnitude. I immediately proceeded to the spot, and there witnessed a scene which I believe was never surpassed in any of the great fires that have ever occurred. The night was a splendid one for a fire. The moon shone brightly, though now it was paled by the glare below, and the sky was perfectly cloudless. The wind was very light though the moving air evidently fed the flames. But instead of driving the fire in one direction it rather aided its progress towards all points of the compass. Directly in the teeth of the wind the flames ate their way. Solid granite and hard marble could not stay them: stone cracked and crumbled and iron shutters actually curled up like so many shavings. The fire would catch hold of a block of granite structures and one after another they would be consumed, the ruined walls crushing down as their support was destroyed. In less than an hour the entire block would be leveled to the ground. I went to my store, and found that every one in the neighborhood, like myself, had not the slightest apprehension of danger, the fire then being several blocks away. Dozens of massive buildings stood between my place and the fire, and the wind was blowing in an opposite direction. But the fire drew nearer and nearer, and soon after midnight the flames crossed the street and worked their way towards my store. Before the column of flame, firemen worked with a will, and merchants and their clerks were throwing water upon the roofs of their stores. Almost before we were aware of it, our store was blazing, and we retired in good order from the conflict. I never saw before so terrible an occasion, where such extreme order was preserved. The military, police, and firemen were perfectly organized, and they labored with one accord, as allies in battle, and spent their strength to the best possible advantage. Sunday morning dawned, and thousands of persons flocked to the blackened spot. Newspaper extras were sold up town in enormous numbers, and the sole topic of conversation was the conflagration. The street car travel was not interrupted at all. The remarkable coolness and resignation with which merchants looked upon the scene was something beyond the comprehension of an outsider. Clerks and working girls also gathered, and nearly all accepted the situation without a murmur. I saw no scenes of distress or suffering, for with the exception of a few tenement houses there were no dwellings destroyed. The streets that were devastated are completely blocked up, and no one is allowed to venture among the ruins. The thieves were hard at work and I saw many persons commit robberies right before the eyes of the crowd, and no effort was made to stop them. This morning I stood in Washington street, at the outskirts of the burnt district and could look plainly out upon the harbor, something that has not been done in years. As we left the city the smoke over head could be seen plainly until we were miles away.

A COMMERCIAL MAN'S NARRATIVE.

E. O. Tufts of the firm of E. O. Tufts & Co., commission merchants, Nos. 83 and 85, Worth street, in this city, and of No. 34 Franklin street, Boston, was an eye witness of the fire. His statement is as follows: I arrived in Boston between 12 and 1 o'clock last Sunday morning, when the fire was at its height. After 1 o'clock a. m. I went to Franklin street, and found nearly all the street destroyed. I learned that the fire began at Kingston and Summer streets, and was said to have originated in the upper story of the building occupied by Tibbitts, Baldwin & Co., dry goods jobbers. Some little time elapsed (it was stated) before the fire engines arrived, so that the flames got well under way. The cause of any delay in regard to the arrival of the fire engines I do not know, but I think with the assistance they had, the firemen did the best they could. The fire, during Saturday night and early on Sunday morning, spread fearfully, destroying the most prosperous part of the city. All the principal buildings in Summer street, Winthrop place, Arch, Devonshire, and Franklin streets, most of Congress and Pearl streets, and all of the best part of the city leading to the water from Kingston to State streets, were destroyed. The amount of property destroyed I cannot state as a certainty, but as far as I know from statements made by friends, I should judge the loss in raw material, in manufactured merchandise, buildings, etc., would reach upwards of $100,000,000. The many personal losses were sad ones. By what seems almost miraculous the old and new post office buildings were saved. The magnificent blocks owned by Jas. M. Beebe, and many other fine structures of granite owned by the Harvard College, Sear's, and other estates were all totally destroyed early on Sunday morning. Many valuable buildings were blown up to stay the progress of the flames, such as Simmon's Block in Water street, occupied by Rice, Kendall & Co. The section of the fire was under military rule, and many lives were saved by the military. Most of the churches closed on Sunday. I witnessed many scenes I never shall forget. I think for the magnitude the loss of life was very slight. The accidents of a serious nature happened principally to the firemen. In many instances where firms attempted to save stocks, many lives were lost, the employes being smothered by the flames. It is said that Weeks, Potter & Co.'s wholesale drug-store and at Tuttle's shoe store, in Washington street, lives were lost in this way. Through the exertions of the firemen the Western side of Washington street was saved. This prevented the destruction of many prominent edifices in the locality of the fire. The people of Boston seemed full of pluck, and not at all disheartened at the calamity. The city was full of thieves, and the amount of stealing done I think was unprecedented. The streets were filled with people carrying off silks, carpets, and other goods.

A LAWYER'S EXPERIENCE.

A prominent Boston lawyer, who arrived in this city last evening from the scenes of the fire, thus, in effect, described what he witnessed up to the time of his departure:

I went to church at Boston Highlands in the morning while the fire was at its hight. Dr. Putnam, the pastor, delivered an extemporaneous address to his very limited congregation upon the nature and use of the terrible calamity by which our splendid city was overwhelmed. I then accompanied Dr. Putnam to the city, and saw the fire from every point of view. On the ground where Old Fort Hill once stood were piles of merchandise, and here and there forlorn women and children sat near the remains of their household goods. Carts and carriages of every kind were conveying goods away from danger. I saw a valuable painting mounted on a fire engine. The sun seemed to be partly eclipsed. The flames rose to a great hight in the air. The fire ate its way against the wind toward the heart of the city, while at the same time the wind drove it in an opposite direction down to the water. It was at last stopped just before it reached the central and wealthiest part of the city.

There were enormous crowds of people in all the streets. The flames broke out again about midnight, but were speedily subdued.

A gentleman told me that while the flames were raging at night he could see to read ordinary type three miles from the city. I think that a careful estimate will show a loss of real estate of about $15,000,000, of which a large proportion is probably insured.

The loss of personal property is not so easily calculated, as many stocks were much reduced and much has been saved. I do not think that this loss will exceed $50,000,000, thus making the total loss of the fire $65,000,000, which, while it may embarrass temporarily many business men and several institutions, will inflict no serious blow upon the rising fortunes and splendid business prospects of the city. In the midst of the day's excitement and stirring scenes, and while the fate of the city was uncertain, many prominent citizens met in the City Hall, and committees were appointed to take measures for the relief of sufferers. There is not the slightest interruption of the business of any railroad, except the Hartford and Erie.

ABROAD.

- - - Investigations near the Sandwich Islands have proved that coral aggregates at the rate of seventeen feet in a century, instead of a few inches in that time, according to accepted scientific estimates.

- - - On October 23d, Mr. Bancroft, the representative of the United States at Berlin, telegraphed to the Secretary of State in Washington that the Emperor William had decided the question submitted to him, under the provisions of the treaty of Washington, in regard to the San Juan boundary. The essential point of that decision was directly against the view of Great Britain, inasmuch as it decreed that "the claim of the United States is most in accordance with the true interpretation of the Treaty of June 15, 1846." The language of the treaty which was supposed to have settled the question of the San Juan boundary—even then a matter of thirty years' dispute—ran as follows: "From a certain point on the 49th parallel of North Latitude it was stipulated that 'the line of boundary between the territories of Her Britannic Majesty and those of the United States shall be continued westward along the said 49th parallel to the middle of the channel which separates the Continent from Vancouver's Island, and thence southerly, through the middle of the said channel and of Luca Straits, to the Pacific Ocean."

The dispute, which has just been decided after a further interval of twenty-six years, was in regard to the interpretation of the word "channel." On the settlement of the dispute depended the possession of the island and harbor of San Juan, and the key, in a military sense, to the coasts of Vancouver's Island and British Columbia. A channel, known as the Canal de Haro, separated San Juan from Vancouver's Island. Another channel, known as Rosario Straits, lay on the east or opposite side of San Juan, and divided it, together with the group of small islands on that side, from the American Continent. The British government claimed that Rosario Straits formed the channel referred to in 1846, and that consequently San Juan and its adjoining Islands were British possessions. The American government claimed that the Canal de Haro was the channel indicated, and that consequently San Juan comes within the boundary line of the United States. The decision in favor of the latter view has been productive of a good deal of rather severe comment in the London press, that is, if we may trust the the indications of their spirit sent by cable. There is no doubt that the possibility of an adverse decision was regarded in Great Britain with no little solicitude. Now that it has come, it does not appear that grumbling will mend the matter, as the reference to the Emperor of Germany was absolutely final. It is perhaps fortunate, however, for the temper of both nations that the International difficulties between them are now pretty well cleared off.—Scot. Am. Journal.

Marriages.

WOOD—MATTS. In Paoli, Wis., Nov. 6, 1872, at the bride's father's, by Eld. E. P. Graves, Mr. Edwin P. Wood, of Prescott, Mass., and Miss Mary C. Matts, of Paoli.

HOUSE—WHEELER. In Baraboo, Wis., Nov. 6, 1872, by Eld. E. P. Graves, Mr. Frederick House of Delton, and Miss Mary Wheeler, of Lodi.

CAFNER—GLOVER. In Fairfield, Wis., April 14, 1872, by Eld. E. P. Graves, Mr. W. H. Cafner and Miss L. F. Glover; both of Fairfield.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.—Northern Michigan.

I am arranging to spend most of my time in the field this winter. Churches and isolated brethren in Northern Michigan can correspond with me at Sylvester, Mecosta Co., Mich. E. B. Scott.

Notice.

A good opening in Eastern Michigan for a young minister can be had, to supply three churches, and preach in other places as the Lord opens the door. Who will respond soon? For particulars address

John M. Snook, Jackson, Mich.
Or W. C. Hicks, Caro, Michigan.

Notice.

The church of Arena being in a great measure destitute of preaching in consequence of my protracted sickness, would be glad of a call from any of the preaching brethren that could make it convenient so to do. Arena is on the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien railroad, about 26 or 30 miles west of Madison. Any preachers on their way to or from Iowa, could give us a call. Geo. Thomson, Pastor.

Personal.

We, the Church at Almer, Tuscola Co., Michigan, in that our beloved pastor, Eld. W. C. Hicks, is about to go into other fields of labor as the Lord calls him, wish to publicly express our sorrow in parting with him and his family. He has our prayers that our heavenly Father's blessing may attend him in all his future labors. We also recommend him him as an efficient, faithful, and earnest worker in the blessed cause we love. And we have unbounded confidence in his integrity and Christian character.

D. W. Macomber, Elder.
H. W. Cook, Deacon.
By order of the Church. Elory Dupaul, Clerk.

Treasurer's Report.

An account of the receipts and expenditures of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, from Dec. 1, 1871, to Sept. 30, 1872:

RECEIVED.

Cash on hand	$ 835 63
For A. C. Times	4909 11
" Books, Tracts, etc.	1878 20
" Accounts	1176 41
From Loans	2465 99
" Various Donations	1172 97
" Real Estate	628 80
" Job Work	191 73
" Ten's	231 00
" Interests	22 00
	$13,942.56

PAID OUT.

For Printing Paper	$2967 57
" Type Setting, Press Work, etc.	2724 22
" Expense Acc't (see Times)	1490 45
" New Press	884 50
" Repayment of Loan	1789 15
" W. L. Himes' Services	407 84
" Electrotypes and Print'g Mate'l.	648 70
" Books, Tracts, and other Mdse on sale	447 46
" Postage	332 35
" Ten's	294 76
" E. D. Mansfield's Services	311 00
" Help in Office	148 66
" Interest	60 00
Cash on hand	703 62
	$13,942.56

William L. Himes, Treasurer.

I have examined the accounts of the Treasurer and find them properly vouched and correct.

S. C. Raymond, Auditor.

The Christian Life.

Don't Crowd.

Don't crowd, the world is broad enough
For you as well as me,
The doors of art are open wide—
The realms of thought are free.
In all earth's places you are right
To choose the best you can—
Providing that you do not try
To crowd some other man.

Don't crowd good feelings from your heart,
By fostering all that's bad,
But give to virtue every room—
The best that may be had;
By each day's record such a one
That you may well be proud;
Give each his right, give each his room,
And never try to crowd.

—Charles Dickens.

"'Tis Better Far to Rule by Love than Fear."

A few days ago as I was passing through one of the streets of New York, a sudden rush and chase attracted my attention, and I looked up just in time to see a running, frightened boy, about ten years of age, grabbed by an excited, savage-looking man, who held him fast in his clutch. The passers-by gathered around and hid this father and son—for so they proved to be—from my view; but the screams of the boy and the loud, angry words of the father, "I'll put you in the asylum. I'll teach you to run away," rang loud and fierce above the heads of all.

The angry man soon broke through the crowd, dragging the struggling child after him across the street, and on and out of sight.

"A pretty father, that!" exclaimed a gentleman, as he turned from the scene and went his way.

How my heart ached for that child; but there was no one to help, and he was probably taken again to his home and beaten by the brute who called him son. Will it be strange if that child grows up to hate and abuse his father when age or poverty brings him into his power; or to repeat this kind of training upon his own children, if he ever has any?

In contrast to the above was another scene which came before me as I sat at my window looking out upon the passers-by. It was near night, the rain had been falling, and the sidewalks were wet and slippery, and many people were hurrying on homewards. Soon two little girls, bearing a loaf of bread in a basket between them, came in sight. They were plainly dressed in calico, the elder wearing a coarse straw bonnet tied under her chin, the other a sunbonnet, which flared just enough to show a few stray locks of flaxen hair, which every gust of wind swept across the loving blue eyes beneath.

Now and then the larger child, with her face all aglow with love, bent to gaze beneath the little bonnet, and to leave one, two, or three kisses upon the little mouth upturned to receive them; and so with a few love-pats upon the back, and an occasional peep under the bonnet, the basket and bread were borne on, and the children were gone. The scene was like a glimpse into Paradise when love and innocence went hand in hand, and wrath and discord had no being.

It is easy to imagine the kind of home that sheltered these little ones, and the kind of mother that cherishes them. Poverty is no excuse for the neglect and abuse which are often found in the dwellings of the poor. A little child is quick to see and resent an injustice; and the hateful feelings it calls forth leave a scar upon the heart which neither time nor death can wholly efface.—Ill. Chr. Weekly.

Domestic Ethics.

The artificial tone of modern life has introduced an artificial standard into domestic ethics. Very rare is the family whose sliding scale of duties, especially for the young folks, is radically healthy and rational; whose system of obligation and merit, reward and punishment, is not sadly conventional, and modeled for the most part on a mere regard for the personal and material convenience of the family. The consequence is that little, and in themselves unimportant things, get raised factitiously to the rank of grave moral virtues or faults; really important tendencies or phenomena get neglected or winked out of sight. The worst of it is that the very outcroppings of youthful temperament, which are the most normal and promising, if rightly directed, are often most apt to get nipped in the bud and parentally clapper-clawed because they interfere with the convenience of older people. Baby Anna—restless, prying, merry, delightful little midget!—is at this moment busily occupied in hauling out all my papers from a drawer of my desk, and presently, her curiosity satisfied in this direction, will give a tug at books, or tablecloth, or something which will make wreck of my writing apparatus, and illustrate Hood's idea of "the source of the Niger" with a spilt inkstand on the parlor carpet. If I am a blockhead, I shall scold and perhaps punish the evil doer. Good sense will bid me wipe up the spot, and pick up the papers, thankful and cheerful for the strong vitality which fills all the little limbs with happy life, and for the active, observant temperament which, God willing, shall some day make her a blessing to her children, her dependents, her readers, or her fellow-laborers in all good works. Neddie has just come home with shockingly muddy boots gained in racing "cross lots" on the way from school, and a woful rent in his trousers from shinnying up the apple tree in the front yard. Mamma's neat soul is outraged at the one, and the parental pocket aches at the thought of the "V" needed to make good the other. But what shall we care about boots and trousers when the full-grown lad is winning honor and doing his duty on Western plains tracing iron arteries through the heart of the continent, or seeing God's wonders face to face on the dizzy crest of the Sierras?

On the other hand, how much of petty vanity, or meanness, or sensuality, or trickery, or malice, or sloth, either gets entirely passed over in the little people's training, or assumes some shape so pleasing to the parental heart as to win actual praise and reward. And how often do we find others—how often are we ourselves—wise enough to take absolute standpoints and broad views, and praise or punish according to that which is really good or hurtful for the youngster's nature, and not merely for our own pitiful comfort, vanity, or convenience.—Scribner's Monthly.

Correspondence.

From our English Correspondent.

Promulgation of the Truth—An Eccentric Notice—The Scotch and the Lord's Day—Romish Unity a Myth—War Omens, and Church Decrease and Declension against the World's Conversion.

The work of the Lord still progresses in our hands. We are planting the principles of the Kingdom in the hearts of men. Yesterday, according to announcement, witness was given in the fear and love of God to the excellency of the knowledge of Christ and Christ Jesus himself. The day was wet and gloomy, so that but few attended; but we had something good for those that were present and they received it with profound attention. "The best of all is, God is with us." These words from the dying Wesley are a special truth in our circumstances. We have not yet secured the masses. We have not had much to encourage us as far as outward sense can discern, and yet we are unusually hopeful and buoyant. We expect mercies from the God of heaven. And so we labor on. Much satisfaction was expressed yesterday by Christians who attended. One remarked that gospel was better than theology—making reference to the false science of God that obtains among men hearing and support. We introduced last night for the first time an American hymn "We'll stand the storm," and it was sung in a burst of joy—it seemed to bring your correspondent very near to the joy eternal which Jesus will give us at his reappearance from heaven. This week we are to give a course of lectures on Prophecy.

The call is sounding from near and far: "Come over and help us." From Pulham, Sherborne, Yevil, Chard, and all the neighborhood, it is waxing louder and louder. But we find "God hath chosen the poor of this world;" yet he will doubtless "supply our lack" as we go forth trusting in him. He has revived us in spirit. He has made our faces brass. He has made our hands ready to every good word and deed. He has opened our mouths. And he shall be praised. If any of the brethren have friends in England to whom they would like to have books sent, if they will send us their address we will serve in the matter. Our address is 26 St. Thomas Street, Weymouth. (Geo. A. Brown, or Wm. Kellaway.)

A Yorkshire invitation recently posted on a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, reads like this:

"Wanted, on Sabbath evening, September 15, at six o'clock p. m., all persons who believe they are entirely given up to the devil, likewise all drunkards, swearers, liars, Sabbath-breakers, dog-fighters, scamps, scoundrels, vagabonds, rascals, rogues, or any man or woman possessed of a devil, to hear J. M., Esq., of ——, who is a sinner saved by grace, preach. Subject: 'Jesus Christ casting out a devil.'"

This is good enough if we except the "Esquire."

The Scotch are proverbial for their reverence of the Lord's Day. And we have clipped a fact that will support the proverb:

At a meeting of the Free Presbytery of Kirkaldy on the 25th ult., one of the ministers stated that the running of a Sunday excursion steamer between that town and Leith had been abandoned by the owner for want of patronage, and that the Sunday sailing steamers of the Clyde were so unpopular among the large mass of the people that during week days passengers could hardly be got to go on board them. The Sunday boat was, he added, generally designated the "Sabbath breaker."

Romanists are always talking about the unity of the church. They point at Protestantism and Dissenters and refer to it in terms of immoderate contempt, gloating over its dissensions. But every intelligent Papist knows that Romish unity is a myth! In particular places you will see churches cowered by fear into a servile uniformity; but to say there is a union or a unity in its pale, in the true sense of those terms, is to be guilty of a lie. There is no doubt that the Romish church adapts and accommodates its creed to the prejudices of those whom it seeks to convert. "The unity of the faith" is nothing but a "blinder." A late writer has let some light in on this point, in correspondence with the editor of the Church Times. He says:

ROMAN UNITY.

Sir—One of the means used by ultramontane controversalists in their never-ceasing attempts to induce Anglicans to desert from the church of their baptism is the promise of peace within the church of Rome, "within her pale," they say, "is the most absolute unity—unity in faith, unity in doctrine, and unity in ritual." You have, sir, too often, and too ably exposed the fallacy of this statement to require any further comment on it, but still the following will I think show a little that in Roman countries abroad this perfect unity (although no doubt longed for) is little realized.

A few days ago an Austrian General of my acquaintance, a gentleman well known in the best society in Vienna, in whose word and honor I can implicitly trust, seeing me reading the Church Times, on my telling him it was an ecclesiastical journal exclaimed "How do you, then, take an interest in ecclesiastical affairs? In England you have no trouble such as we have, now-a-days one knows not what to believe and what not to believe, the clergy all disagree, and what one confessor says, another denies, all is trouble and confusion." I have quoted my friend's words and not my own ideas on the subject; he spoke as a Roman Catholic, a religiously-minded man who attended to his duties, and he assures that his sentiments are those of nearly all the educated classes in south Germany, who care about religion at all. He is in no way connected with the Alt-catholic movement and knows little about it. You see my friend knows nothing about the ecclesiastical state of England, but his accidental evidence regarding that in his own country does not quite coincide with the statements of English ultramontanes.

As I am writing on this subject I might as well say one word as to the "perfect unity in ritual." I do not profess to be an authority on the subject, but I know of no less than twelve different Liturgies each with its own ritual and ceremonies now existing within the pale of the Latin church, and I dare say there are more; to say nothing of local rites, and additions tacked on to the Roman Liturgy, and these controversialists quite ignore the fact that the church was strongest when diversity of ritual was at its height.

As to "unity of faith," this in distinction to "unity of doctrine," seems to imply unity in all matters of belief. I fail myself to see how this perfect unity can exist as long as any "matters of mere pious opinion continue," of course I know, and thank God that beyond the "faith once delivered to the saints" matters of pious opinion have ever been allowed by the church to exist, but surely as the Roman Catholic church does not legislate on all points, and say how much, as well as how little those in her pale must believe, she cannot claim to have this absolute "unity of faith."

E. F. K. F.

It is hard to believe anything that comes from the Romish priesthood, when we know that it fosters societies that are especially trained to lie for the benefit of the church. Its history is garbled and jesuitical. Its whole system is composed of fables, idolatry, superstition and hypocrisy.

Is the world being pacified? Are its deadly hates being slain? Is the ruffled brow of anger smoothed of its wrinkles? Are men becoming a holy brotherhood? Is the earth being converted to Christ? Is the serenity of heaven succeeding the turmoil and passions of men? But some say so. We cite against such the production of a new instrument of destruction, the trial of which was "highly satisfactory." The secular papers tell us that a "cannon which can be fired thirty times a minute was tried last week at Asnieres. The results were, it is said, highly satisfactory."

Does this read like peace? What a deadly weapon! A discharge every other second! God only knows what destruction its missiles will cause. Another fact is that a cannon has been made to throw a ball of six hundred pounds for several miles. If these ordinance speak the soft footfalls of approaching universal peace, as the world expects it, then I am deceived. Add to these "omens of peace,"—do not be offended at the derisiveness of the sentence, rather be ashamed of the false expectation—this other little one, that

"The total number of men actually under arms at the present moment in European and Asiatic Russia is 1,173,879."

So much for cannon and men. Now for the "small arms." And concerning these we read that "the German forces are being armed with a new and very deadly rifle, capable of killing twenty-six men a minute." And this means peace, does it? Avaunt such absurdity! Peace will only come at the heels of him who is the "Prince of Peace."

We have shown one side of the picture, the improbability of the "world's peace," even from reason, putting aside for a moment all those Bible passages which make such a state of affairs an impossibility. We now turn to the other side and ask, What progress are the Christianizing bodies—said to be the "leaven," and truly they are the "leaven" more often than the "salt" of the earth—making in this age? Are they winning a conquering way? Are the masses going over to them and their Master? Happily, statistics are just at hand, enabling me to speak with a positiveness on this point. "Autumnal meetings" have just been held in England, and the following are presented as a summary of the reports in the Rock:

According to statements made at a public meeting, in connection with the Baptist Union Conference at Manchester, the prospects of the Methodist body are anything but encouraging. Mr. Glover, of Bristol, said that not only had there been no increase in membership among the Baptists, but they had fallen off to the number of 10,644. The Methodists had lost 24,- members, the Free Church Methodists 620, and the Primitive Methodists also reported a decrease. The only denom inations which he knew to have pr gressed were the United Presbyterian and the English Presbyterians, bu their advance was only one per cen He gave a very gloomy picture of th condition of the Baptist ministry "So long," said he, "as the lot of man a Baptist minister is starvation an criticism, instead of comfort and r spect, they might expect to see wha they saw last year—one out of ever six giving up his charge."

And a correspondent of the Englis Independent says:

There is something wrong som where in our religious organization and it is small consolation for us t know that other denominations are i a similar condition. Our Bapti friends appear to be drowning, Spu geon alone making anything like hea way. At Bristol the other day I foun that a mine had exploded in the stronghold, and Regent Park is ver quiet. Wesleyanism rejoices in ne chapels but mourns over dead soul The worldly wisdom of the good folk is standing them in good stead, a their money bags fill; but, like t saints of old, with the gratification their hearts' desires has come leanne into their souls. And so it appears round. Even the sweating Primitiv seem to toil all night for nothing, an the Evangelical Episcopalians are lo ing ground everywhere.

The Cause in Northern New York.

I write concerning the state of o Master's cause in this mission fiel that others in like situation may stimulated to greater action in savi mortal souls. This mission has, God's assistance and blessing, a considerable selfdenial, been, thus fa made selfsustaining; and although n efforts have not been marked wi great success, we have a few Noah Lots, Marthas, and Marys, in an isola ed condition, that honor God and h cause of truth as the fruit of our l bors. I have kindled no fires wi fabulous trash, or animal magnetis but have in my weakness dispense "the law of the Lord, which is perfe converting the soul." Thank God few have thus been converted and a to-day rejoicing "in the faith on delivered to the saints."

I am alone in this northern regio trying to disseminate the light God's prophetic word relative to t speedy coming of Christ, and all t great and important truths hing upon the same, which make us a di tinct and despised people. My pat way, in some respects, has been thorn Often in tribulations and persecution but the great peace and joy unspea able, resulting from perfect obedien to, and acceptance with God, ha been my consolation, and have rich compensated for all the trials endure For the past few months much of n time has been spent in new fields, and I have reason to thank God for t good results in each place. The int est to hear was excellent, and so few souls were brought to a savi knowledge of the truth. We w locked out of the churches, and h to preach in school houses and hal and the clergy were very hostile, a when sheltered in their own barrack freely anathamtaizing and grossly m representing. But the Lord gave grace and patience to meekly open t gospel battery, in demonstration the Spirit and power.

Sometimes our place of worship w not large enough to accommodate who came. In Constableville, Lew Co., one preacher and his wife to special pains to visit the people of th place, just previous to my coming, a told them to beware of the infid whose mission was to break churches. But this only made the more anxious to hear. The congreg tion was excellent, and after labori nearly a week, the meetings closed Sunday evening, when the concour of people was so great as to fill o hall, stairway and sidewalk, whi many went away for want of roo At the same time the persecutor d coursed to three small seats full. O soul requested prayers, and one clas leader received the truths presente while many were intellectually convinced, and we hope the sword of t Spirit may ultimately reach the hearts. In the south part of Watso Lewis, Co., the interest is excellen Four adults have starred in the "hig way of holiness." To God be all th glory.

thren, my pathway is continually
g brighter. I find the peace ows like a river, and the spirit rist is mine by an understand-
, and obedience to the gospel.
advance and rise in the Chrisurse. This is what I call the r life." Oh, may God help us be entirely consecrated, that we uthfully exclaim with the poet.

My all to Christ is given,
My talent, time and voice;
Myself, my reputation,
The lone way is my choice."

hren and sisters be faithful. En-little longer and salvation shall rs; and as you bow at the Fathone, to offer the tribute of remember your unworthy broth-hrist. C. H. Williams.
Martinsburg, N. Y.
s please copy.

Western Interests.

ern men have Western sympa-
nd very naturally look with tion upon the prosperity of the the West. For some months re has been a feeling prevalent re was something unsettled or g in our Western Association.
our people know why the posi-
of former years is not felt.
eeting and Secretary's report a source of satisfation to most eaders. The basis of our Asn seems to be satisfactory to a ajority of our people. But to perfect satisfaction to all, the was referred to a competent ee, who will consult the wish-l Western Adventists, and re-cordingly. So we have new d our prospect of success is

WESTERN MEN.

g those that have been raised e West to spread the tidings of oming, embracing also Eastern have Western sympathies are Himes and his son William, ve for long years given ALL to e of truth, and its promulgathe great field. Father Himes, of our readers know, has been in this blessed work for more quarter of a century, and still o is "Onward!" Two of his e fallen at his side, yet he has ered. And now, while the of The Times are enjoying n firesides with plenty of all art could wish, he, for the ke, hath not where to lay his ever all my blood was stirred when I last looked upon the eran, and heard him say, " It es not help us we shall sink."
ith a confidence and resolution of remark, he exclaimed, " But does help, and we shall go into gdom." And our new editor, to be out of sight—too modest sh his own name as editor of MES—is among the truly faith-he West. Brethren, cheer him ur letters of confidence, and n with your prayers, and your ications for the paper, and do im feel that he is left alone.
West is blessed with many othble men. Illinois gives us D.
field, one of God's own men;
gifted wife, whose palmiest ave been given to the Advent
Then there are William and McCulloch, Calkins, Spencer,
, and many others. Wisconsin long with its strong men, Shelomson, Hough, and many oth-innesota follows with Collins, and their co-adjutors, who carry s to many hearts as they dee glad-tidings of redemption at Iowa has also champions for ith, Chandler, Buck, J-nd many more who lov
ng of our Lord Jesus C.
, ~~[illegible]~~ badly broken,
s ~~from its veins~~ giant men—nd Andrus. These men have through the storm, and their visible in the healthy young ho are coming on the stage, labors will bless the people of their State. They are also aided by a powerful Eastern element in the person of Br. D. Mathewson. Michigan does not refuse her host, Snook, Wright, Bower, Babcock, Paton, and others stand up to say that this blessed truth shall sound across the entire peninsular. Ohio's infant Conference joins the strain that gladdens all the West. New York State holds a man whose name is a household word in families throughout the West—James Herman Whitmore. ~~Those who have not been~~ favored with a personal acquaintance, have been blessed in reading from his pen "The Bible Doctrine of Immortality."

Now, while the great Head of the Church has favored us with men like these, and with a message so precious, and a press so efficient, shall we be weak, or indulge a mental sluggishness or physical inactivity? Western men should feel a lifting up, a bouyancy consistent with Western vivacity and continue to labor unitedly till the Master comes.

If we believe what we preach, if we are honest in our ministrations, let the consistency of our actions declare it. "The Lord is at hand." No theme is of greater interest. Nothing else is so much calculated to stir up the people to seek the Lord. The very thought—the hour of his judgment is come—is sufficient to rouse all our energies, and call us out from worldly considerations to gather a people to meet the Lord when he comes. A recital of what the Lord has done for his people often serves to call us to renewed activity in his service. Let us "exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching."

J. R. Preston.

From Mary A. Tibbetts.

Adventists have been accused of having no spiritual influence in our meetings, that our views of Bible truth simply consist in theorizing the people, and not in making them any better. I, however, think very differently. We had, as we think, some very valuable additions to our numbers in our late meeting, and perhaps I cannot better convince my brethren and sisters of this fact than by making some extracts from a long and interesting letter written to me by one of our new converts. It filled us all with emotions of joy, and I think it will others to hear it. He begins thus:

Vernon, Ind., Oct. 20.

"To the brethren and sisters at Volga:

I feel so happy and joyful, that I cannot forbear to take this earliest opportunity of writing to you all, and telling you my mind. There has such a change come over the spirit of my dreams, that I can hardly realize my present situation. I only know that I am much happier, and more contented, than I was before paying you a visit, and attending the glorious meeting at your place. I came to your place with no idea of joining the church, or casting in my lot with you, in fact I was considerably prejudiced against your belief. I thought you were deluded, and had made up my mind not to fall into the same error or delusion, that you were in. But I have changed my mind concerning the doctrine you hold and preach. My eyes have been opened to see the truth, and I now feel like blessing God, for having led me to your meetings, and for awakening me to a sense of duty and danger, and for giving me grace and strength to take the first step toward the kingdom. I should have been glad to have been with you to-day, in your social meeting, and there more fully express my gratitude to God and my fellow men, for the light that has come to me. I am very ignorant and blind yet, but a ray of light has dawned upon me which has set me to thinking, and aroused a spirit of investigation upon the all important subject of what I am, and whither I am tending. I heard more about man and the destiny of man, during the past week, than I had ever heard in my life before. And the subjects were presented in a new light, and so plain and pleasing a manner, that I could not help but embrace the Doctor's views of Bible truth. I thank God for raising up such a man as he is, to be the instrument in God's hand of showing me and many others the way of truth; and no doubt he will have many stars in his diadem, in the kingdom of glory. I almost envy the Doctor his rare gifts, and if I were gifted as he is, I would go and preach the gospel. But if I cannot do [illegible] things, I can do small things. I can "be [illegible]eper in the house of my God," and [illegible]r than to "dwell in the tents of wi[illegible] I have made up my mind to do wh[illegible] spread the knowledge of the truth in the world, and though I cannot speak or write anything that would throw light on the sacred page, I can at least distribute tracts and books written by men who can and do throw light on the all-important subject of man's life and destiny, and whenever a word of mine may be of profit, I shall not hold my peace. I am naturally very timid and reserved, afraid of being ridiculed; but now I want to break down the barriers of timidity and false shame, and go straight forward in my course of duty, and never minding or caring for the scoffs or frowns of the world, knowing that when I receive the crown, it will shine all the brighter, because I have borne the cross. I do not think that I am now entirely safe, that there is nothing for me to do. No, no. I consider that I ought to work all the harder because I came into the vineyard of the Lord "at the eleventh hour," and have not borne the heat and burden of the day, as some of my co-laborers have done. I must now try to make amends for my past neglect and slothfulness, as far as it is in my power so to do. I must try to do the best I can and leave the rest to God. I shall talk about this glorious subject wherever it is suitable to do so, and if I am scoffed at, I will try to bear it meekly. If I can be a help to anyone it will afford me much pleasure. I am full of the one great subject, and I think it is worthy of our whole attention.

Yours in the blessed hope."

George Reiler.

From Isaac Adrian.

For the encouragement of the scattered flock I wish to say, my effort with the tent at Monticello, Iowa, was not in vain. Opposition gave way before the power of truth, and m[illegible] good resulted from the meetin[illegible] tent stood in the city ten days [illegible] anyone staying in it nights. W[illegible]ired to bed feeling that all was safe. The people were kind and respectful with the exception of a few who claimed to be sanctified ones; and they put me in mind of a scene witnessed 1837 years ago, when our Lord was teaching in an ancient city, and the publicans and sinners assembled to hear; it was a perfect picture of that ancient holiness that hated the appearing of Messiah.

The citizens came to me and requested the meetings continued, but my time was filled. I shall visit them again at an early day if time permits. I came to Clarksville, Butler Co., the 10th. Dr. Tichenee obtained a chapel for a meeting in which I preached two sermons. By this time the minister (M. E.) was seized with an uncommon spirit of prayer, and when I announced the meeting for the next evening, he told me he should have a prayer meeting on the occasion. As I did not wish to stand in the way of his praying, I asked if we could not get another house, and was offered the Christian Union house at once. The change was a good one. The trustees of the Christian house proved themselves Christian gentlemen. The meeting increased in interest and resulted in good. A church was formed of fifteen members, mostly heads of families. One was baptized, and I trust the work will not stop here.

I came to Boylan's Grove the 28th. I found a man with the Seventh-day hobby trying to get up division among the brethren. This is no new proceeding of theirs. It has ever been their practice to get in among our churches and distract those looking for the Lord; and as soon as they get any hold and build a church we are not allowed to preach in it. They are very kind, and call us brethren, until we refuse to receive their Sabbath, and then it is "Mister," and "Sir," and the like.

Brethren, I feel the assurance in my heart we are coming to land. A grand and awful crisis is but a step in the future. Every chain of prophecy converges to a point, and that culminating point is but a little in advance of us. But a few days more of sorrow and wo, when, in obedience to the fiat of Jehovah, this dreary, sin-polluted world will stand forth a deathless world and take its place among the brightest orbs of heaven! The morning stars will once more sing together and all the sons of God shout aloud for joy! This new-born world will soon burst upon our view! Oh, that beautiful world! A gem in an ocean of glory—indescribable glory—unspeakable glory! I see thy glory-lit heavens, thy ever-blooming landscape, thy sparkling, crystal river, gliding in the midst of the trees of life! Shall I ever enjoy thee? Shall I breathe thy unpoisoned atmosphere and tread thy lovely fields? Shall I drink of that crystal river that flows from the throne of God? Shall I take the fruit from life's ever-bearing tree, and walk those streets of crystal gold? Shall I worship in this holy home? This, the hope of which has charmed the good of all ages, and given strength to the martyr as he kissed the heated chain!

Oh, how I wish I had never sinned! How sorry I am. How little good I have ever done. O, Jesus, I need thy cleansing blood! Oh, Christ, thou art mine and I am thine! This is my love. Give me your hand, dear, struggling saint, and help me to endure. The sea is rough; the waves run high—arise near the shore. If I have shipped a wave and almost sunk, the Master bailed out my craft, and it is still afloat. Praise God! I feel his love this moment in my heart!

A Robust Church.

When doubts are expressed in reference to the forming of new organizations for Christian work the test question should be: Will the proposed society call into exercise undeveloped talent? Will some persons be led to work who cannot easily accommodate themselves to existing methods and agencies? Will more be done by this addition to the instruments of the church?

We believe that many associations are proved necessary by just this touchstone. They furnish an opportunity and methods adapted to various workers, and serve to engage in active effort many who cannot be as useful in the general affairs of the church. An association is one of the extensor muscles of the ecclesiastical body, and ought, like every other muscle, to be fully developed by regular exercise. Any part not thus developed is a dead weight supported in semi-vitality at the expense of the rest. A robust church is one fully organized in every good word and work.—Sel.

Speaking Cross.—You gain nothing by a harsh word. What if that boy broke the pitcher, or put his elbow through the glass; do you mend either by applying harsh epithets to him? Does it make him more careful in future? Does he love you better? Hark, he is murmuring. What says the boy? "I am glad of it; I don't care how much I break." He talks thus to be even with his master. It is very wrong in him, we know, but it is human nature, and the example has been set before him by you. Say to the careless boy, "I am sorry; you must be more careful in future," and what will be his reply? "It was an accident, and I will be more careful." He will never break another pitcher or glass if he can help it, and he will respect and love you a thousand times more than when you flew into a rage and swore vengance on his head. Remember this, ye who get angry and rave at a trifle.

Never be discouraged because goo things get on slowly here; and never fail to do daily that good which lies next your hand.

To restore a common-place truth to its first uncommon lustre, you need only translate it into action. But to do this, you must have reflected on its truth.—Coleridge

Our Young Folks.

What Do You Say Boys?

Suppose hereafter you do as the cadets do at West Point—make your own beds every morning till you can do it better than your own mother can. And girls, do you learn to harness a horse till you can do it as quickly as your brother. And boys, learn how to make bread; and girls, learn how to sharpen a knife, and whittle, and drive nails without splitting the board; and boys, learn how to hem towels, run stocking heels, and patch your trousers; and girls, learn how to grease boots and wagon wheels, to lay shingles, and ease the doors when they stick. Keep your eyes and ears wide open. Learn to do all sorts of work; and my word for it, you will grow hearty and plump, handsome and happy.—T. K. Beecher, in the Advance,

Nannies' Lesson.

"Why Nannie! don't do so, dear. See what a dust your stamping the carpet is raising. What ails you?" and kind-hearted Lizzie Herbert went over to her little sister's side as she sat there among her scattered school-books adding "Are you sick?—won't you tell me?"

But naugty Nannie only flung her Latin Grammer from her and answered,

"Let me alone."

Lizzie turned away and tried to bear the sound of kicking feet. At last she spoke again, pleasantly—

"Nannie, you are too old to behave so. Besides, mother has lain down, very tired, and will be disturbed. I wish you wouldn't make a noise."

"I know mamma has lain down, for I have been in there. Leave the room if you don't like it, Miss Herbert," snapped Nannie still kicking.

Lizzie got up sternly, just as Nannie's foot, attempting to send her Philosophy across the room, upset a slender stand supporting a costly vase, which was broken into a thousand pieces.

That frightened her for a moment, no more.

"I don't care; you made me do it," following Lizzie's eyes as they rested on the shattered ornament. "If you hadn't plagued me, I shouldn't. Mother won't say anything."

"Mother thought a great deal of that vase," said her sister sorrowfully. "It was given her by a friend now dead. You had best go at once and tell her."

"No, I won't. Let me alone, I tell you. You make me almost hate you."

"Hate is a strong word, Nannie," somebody said, and before the astonished child could say a word, her older sister Hortense laid a firm hand on her shoulder and forcibly walked her up stairs to her own room.

Bidding her stay there until she could behave herself, she shut the door and went away. Nannie flung herself into the nearest chair with such a face that Aunt Alice stopped sewing to inquire,

"Won't you come and tell me your trouble, darling?"

The child complied, her anger having vented itself; sat down and rested her head on the woman's shoulder.

"O, it is the same old story, antie," she said. 'Everything has gone wrong with me to-day, somehow. I've failed in almost every study at school; and then I've been disappointed. I wanted Lou Barry to stay with me to-night, but mother won't let me. She says she doesn't want me to go with her, but I like her.

"Poor little girl!" said Aunt Alice smoothing the tumbled hair. "And now ar'n't you willing to do as mother says?"

"I suppose I shall have to," muttered Nannie. "Only she lets Lizzie have company, and I like Lou just as well as Lizzie likes Carrie Bean."

"Perhaps. But your mother knows best. My dear," auntie continued, "I remember being in just your position myself. I had a severe lesson; if you will bathe your face and smooth your hair I will tell you about it."

Nannie did as she was requested. She had often wondered at the gentle sadness of their companion, and why she so rarely smiled. Now perhaps she was to have the mystery explained. When she was ready, Aunt Alice began softly—

"When I was about your age, Nannie, my mother took me from the little red schoolhouse under the hill and placed me in a large boarding-school, within walking distance from my home. There I chose Bessie Wright as my most intimate friend. As she could only go home in vacations, I asked my mother's permission to bring her home with me sometimes, to remain over night. But once when I wanted Bessie, it happened that my mother had a sick headache and said no.

"I cried and fretted, and finally went to school leaving all the work for my sick mother to do. I determined to be very naughty. I asked Bessie and another girl home to stay with me. At four o'clock we went. I wondered why my mother did not come to meet me as usual. A neighbor came to the sittingroom and requested us to be quiet, for, she said, my mother was very sick. With a heavy heart I took the girls to the kitchen and gave them some supper, but I could not eat. I gave them my bed, and lay with my little sister, listening to my mother's groans. So the night passed. When morning came the girls returned to school, but I stayed at home, for my mother had lost her reason, and, they said, would never be any better. As for Bessie and her friend, they made light of the solemn style of entertainment I gave them, and never once came to offer me sympathy or comfort. So the terrible days went by. In bitterness of heart I prayed my mother to look upon me once more and say I was forgiven. But she never knew her wayward child, and one morning they told me she was dead."

"After the funeral my father put me out to board, and I lived a lonely, wretched life until the time when your sister Hortense was laid, a tiny infant, in my arms and your parents offered me this home. I am happier now, yet never to my dying day can I forget my last sinful act to my dear mother."

Aunt Alice, after a moment's silence, rose and went away. Nannie, too, rose slowly, put on a neat wrapper, and went down stairs with sober looks. She carefully brushed up the bits of the broken vase, then sought Lizzie and proffered a kiss of reconciliation, which was gladly accepted. After that she stole into her mother's chamber; when she came out her blue eyes were dewy with tears. From that day Nannie was changed to a quiet, polite and helpful child. She became a sunbeam in the house; Aunt Alice held the key to the secret.

Years after, when Nannie lost that dear mother and was left with the little one to the care of Aunt Alice, Hortense and Lizzie having gone to new homes and new loves, it was a sunny memory that the last words of her dying mother were—"God bless my precious Nannie, ever as ever she has blessed me."
—Christian Era.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO. TUESDAY, November 19, 1872

Business Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent three months on trial for 35c.

The officers of the Association are as follows:

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD.
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.

BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

The Interleaved Bible.

A pressure of cares has delayed the publication of this Bible. We hope to get it out within a month.

Accounts Due.

There is a large sum due on Book Accounts, in sums varying from one to fifty dollars and upwards. Prompt payment will greatly relieve our finances. It is only a little for each one; but the aggregate is a large amount.

Some to whom we sent 'Statements of Account' last summer have never made any reply at all. We want to hear from you, and soon. These many little items make up a heavy burden for us to carry. 'Let every one bear their own burden,' and our own will be very much lighter.

Renew Your Subscriptions.

We are sending notices to all our subscribers whose time expires this year. In some cases we receive remittances after these notices are prepared and forwarded to the postoffice. If any receive notices after they have sent in their renewals, they can keep the "return envelope" for another occasion.

We have waited patiently upon hundreds of our subscribers for months, and, in some cases two years or more. We trust now every one will promptly remit for past dues, and for six months or a year in advance.

To Correspondents.

A. FARROW. We received those minutes, but have not had time to review them as yet.... E. CHENEY Received papers Thank you....J. LOWRY. Both letters received. Thanks. Greatly obliged also for the portrait....MRS. J. F. BISHOP. The sum sent is sufficient. Will send bill with the rest.....S. F. B. We can get no clue to your name or P. O. Address. Your suggestions may be well, but they exceed our means. We will furnish the Rainbow at $2.25 a year. .....I. E. MILLER. The package came safely, last week. Many thanks. ...A. T. Yes, we are aware that no pains are spared to break us down. Some will be turned away, but the Lord will raise up friends for us, and in good time provide means for our work. "God's mills grind slow," says the old proverb. His children can afford to wait ...W. RILEY. Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.

Notice.

Eld. Wm. Ingmire has removed from Lischlaen to East Penfield, Monroe Co., N. Y. Churches in Central or Western New York, desiring his services may correspond—addressing him at the latter place.

Housework.

A good woman, middle-aged prefered, able to do general housework, including cooking, can hear of a place where good wages will be paid, by addressing at once.

Wm. L. Himes, Norwood Park, Ill.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

C E Barnes C C Marston (2) G Howard C B Douglass J R Preston L Record S A Persons J Reed J N Potter J G Rogers F Willcox R W Hall S A Martin F K Way J Lowry A Armour S B Mabey D W Fike E B Gard J E Dexham O N Whitford W Buchanan N Jewett C D Lewis W Hodgman W R Taylor S C Wellcome A J Mason W J Burrell J Blackhall E G Armstrong N W Chandler J W Ross J M Montgomery A M Babcock L Kennedy B Cutman R Phinney J Lowry A C B Graham C R Weaver D Mann A Clark G J Clifford E McCormick Ann Fisher J N Williams W Riley W Kidney C Constance E Gifford L S Rand A J Fox J Wallace C B Sherman W Leader J Lowry E C Bronaugh A Sanford [illegible] Williams A M Foster W C Hicks J Gildersleeve J D Goodrich J H Berry S W Owen E T Harding Z Bailey M E Allen W Hobbs E F Houghton E D Scott C L Mitchell C H Williams H M Benson S M Lamb R B Augur J Hedrick L Kerr N W Spencer M M Norton J L Campbell E C Barnaby L Davis C E Darrow E Wadsworth J H Paton E B Scott S Hubbard C A Rue-[illegible] J M Blanchard W Lindsey L C Tipple W McCulloch M B Rutherford G E Little G R Fassett D D Reed J H Mowrey L H Shepard C Libby M L Morgan R C Rathbun A N Betts M Fox M J Liddell S C Abbott F A Miller C C Marston W J Pierce F H Jackman J E Andrus A E Rathbun J Anderson J L Carpenter J W Taylor W Erwin S E Doolittle D H Emery O N Whitford H N Butler W P Barr G B Pike F W Huff J E Preston P Cannon N A Hitchcock R Mann A G Deeben M Goldthwait S W Hiller J Fosdick J F Bishop T Sanborn E C Andrus G W Lepley J Brown J Boyd H P Daniels R R Starks C C Tucker G W Swinford A Schutt N H Young F I Newberry E D Allen H Cone A F Dugger B King A Sanford S H H Tilley W S Peyton E N Miller A P Bump M W Coolles F W Simmons E H Bassett L F Cole D Young A Lockhart J W White W Magill W B Brainard M Kendrick O H Pillsbury T P Applegate J Kellis S Williams L Town C Richardson A M Dunham J M Snook B Van Olinda J Leon

Books and Tracts by Mail.

J C Stoddard M A Tibbits N C Hitchcock J E Denham.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Hall in Stanley's Block, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Amboy, preaching the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2½ and 7 p. m., in the Lutheran chapel. C. C. MARSTON, Pastor

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Dec. 2-10.
Ionia, Warren Co., Dec. 16-27, and longer if the interest demands. C. C. MARSTON.

Antioch, Age-to-come Chapel, eve., Nov. 24.
Rochelle, Shockley's Hall, eve., Nov. 26.
A. F. DUGGER.

Jericho Church, 2:30 p. m., Sabbath, Nov. 17.
Squaw Grove, 11 a. m., Sabbath, Dec. 1.
Eagle S. H., 3 p. m. same day.
C. W. SMITH.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice
Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4 and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

The Northern Illinois A. C. Conference will hold their next annual session at New Rutland, LaSalle Co., commencing Wednesday, December 11, 1772, and holding over the following Sabbath. Ministers, members, and delegates are earnestly requested to attend. Churches will send their yearly reports by delegates or by letter. Let there be a general rally. N. W. SPENCER, Pres.
SILAS B. MABEY, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Beaver, Beaver Co., Nov. 24.
Ogle, Butler Co., Nov. 25, 26.
Muncy, Lycoming Co., Nov. 28, 29.
Quaker hill, 2:30 P. M., Nov. 30, and Sunday, at 11 A. M., Dec. 1.
Warrensville, eve., Dec. 1.
Warrensville, to answer questions asked, by Eld. Krouse, and J. R. Stead, evenings Dec. 2 and 3.
Canton, Bradford Co., Dec. 4-6.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., eve. Dec. 7 and over Sunday
East Troy, Bradford Co., Dec. 6, 10.
South Creek, Dec. 11. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

The next Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern N. Y. will be held at North Bingham, United States S. H., Potter Co., Pa., commencing eve., Dec. 13. Let each church send their delegates, and we hope to see all the ministers that belong to the Conference. A general invitation is extended.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

At a preliminary meeting held at the Advent Christian Hall, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden Streets, in answer to a call for all interested in the truths relating to the second advent of our Lord and Savior, the following resolution was passed by a unanimous vote.

Believing the time to be short with a great work before us in preparing people for the soon coming judgment, and believing that all our efforts should be brought into harmonious action for the spreading of light by the distribution of tracts, preaching of the Word, and by other gospel means; therefore, resolved that we extend a call to all the preachers, churches, and others, living in the eastern part of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, who love the appearing of our Lord and Savior, to meet in conference, commencing Thursday eve., Nov. 28, and continue over the following Sabbath, Dec. 1, at the Advent Christian Hall, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia, for the purpose of organizing a conference embracing the above named territory.

Elder Wm. Ashman, H. K. Flagg, of Mass., H. Taylor, A. C. Jayne, of Moorstown, N. J., L. Reimer, C. Ellis, of Camden, N. J., F. Davis, H. Stetler, W. Hall, J. King, A. Atwood, J. Smith, H. Hutman, W. Reinboth, A. Waterson.
EDWIN KING, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN.

There will be a special session of the Michigan Advent Christian Conference at Jackson, Mich., commencing Wednesday, Dec. 4, 1872, at 10 a. m. A full attendance is desired as business of the utmost importance will come before the body.

In behalf of the Board, GEO. WRIGHT, Sec'y.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of the Michigan Conference with the church at Hesperia, Friday eve, Nov. 29, and over Sunday.
E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

The Q. M. of the First District of S. W. Iowa and N. W. Missouri, will be held at Waveland, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, Dec. 6, and over Sabbath. Elds. D. O. Hink and D. Q. Kent expect to be with us. WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

Clinton, Clinton Co., Nov. 19-28. Let the friends in all the region come in and help us in this meeting, in Jesus' name. C. C. MARSTON.

I will attend the Conference at Elkport.
I. ADRIAN.

Brooks, Adams Co., Dec. 8. A. F. DUGGER.

Ridgeway, Winneshiek Co., Saturday eve., and over Sunday, Nov. 30, and Dec. 1. Three services on Sunday. Preaching by Elds. P. Milton and Wm. Chapman, (late Baptist minister of Vernon Springs.) All are invited.

The second Q. M. of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at New Hartford, commencing Friday eve., Dec. 13, and continuing over Sunday. All are invited to attend.
N. F. EGGLESTON, Sec'y.

The next Q. M. of the Deep Creek District of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa will be held with the church, at Deep Creek, Clinton Co., commencing Thursday eve., Dec 21, and continues over Sunday. Come brethren and sisters, and let as many of us be there as can, and we will have a good time. Now let us make our arrangements to be on hand, to work for God and perishing souls. God will bless us if we do our duty. Come one, come all. A general invitation is given to other districts. Come, brethren, and help us. Those coming by railroad will please call on Br. C. W. Pitcher, Delmar Junction, about six miles south of Maquoketa.
R. B. DUTTON, Pres.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Greeley, Sabbath, Nov. 10. Elk Creek, as Br. Lewis may arrange. Friday eve., Nov., 22, and over the following Sabbath. J. RIDLEY.

County Corners, 3 p. m. August 4, and once in two weeks.
Cox Creek, Alderson S. H. ten a. m. Ross S. H. 3 p. m. August 11, and once in four weeks.
Elk Creek S. H. 11 a. m. Otis S. H. 7 p. m. August 25, and once in four weeks until further notice. H. H. & M. J. JANES.

The adjourned session of the first Q. M. of the Manchester district, Iowa, will commence Friday eve., Nov. 15, with the Elk Creek church, at the Otisville S. H., in Elk Co. A cordial invitation is extended to every lover of Jesus within reach of this meeting, to be there. Let each church see that their delegate has his credentials, and let each church in the district forward the quarterly mission fund to the treasurer of this quarterly conference, in harmony with the resolution passed at our last annual meeting. And let us pray that this meeting be the best of the season. We shall expect to see our Evangelist at this meeting, and he is hereby cordially invited to be present. Let there be a general rally for God and his cause. MARTHA J. JANES, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

